Preface

This volume contains the general laws of a permanent nature enacted by the General Assembly through the 2007 Regular Session and 1st Extra Session that are within Chapters 1B through 8B, and brings to date the annotations included therein.

A majority of the Session Laws are made effective upon becoming law, but a few provide for stated effective dates. If the Session Law makes no provision for an effective date, the law becomes effective under G.S. 120-20 "from and after 60 days after the adjournment of the session" in which passed.

A ready reference index is included at the back of this volume. This index is intended to give the user a quick reference to larger bodies of statutes within this volume only. For detailed research on any subject, both within this volume and the General Statutes as a whole, see the General Index to the General Statutes.

Beginning with formal opinions issued by the North Carolina Attorney General on July 1, 1969, selected opinions which construe a specific statute are cited in the annotations to that statute. For a copy of an opinion or of its headnotes, write the Attorney General, P.O. Box 629, Raleigh, N.C. 27602.

This recompiled volume has been prepared and published under the supervision of the Department of Justice of the State of North Carolina. The members of the North Carolina Bar are requested to communicate any suggestions they may have for improving the General Statutes to the Department, or to LexisNexis, Charlottesville, Virginia.

ARTICLE 1.

Uniform Contribution Among Tort-Feasors Act.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in this Article, where two or more persons become jointly or severally liable in tort for the same injury to person or property or for the same wrongful death, there is a right of contribution among them even though judgment has not been recovered against all or any of them.

(b) The right of contribution exists only in favor of a tort-feasor who has paid more than his pro rata share of the common liability, and his total recovery is limited to the amount paid by him in excess of his pro rata share. No tort-feasor is compelled to make contribution beyond his own pro rata share of the entire liability.

(c) There is no right of contribution in favor of any tort-feasor who has intentionally caused or contributed to the injury or wrongful death.

(d) A tort-feasor who enters into a settlement with a claimant is not entitled to recover contribution from another tort-feasor whose liability for the injury or wrongful death has not been extinguished nor in respect to any amount paid in a settlement which is in excess of what was reasonable.

(e) A liability insurer, who by payment has discharged in full or in part the liability of a tort-feasor and has thereby discharged in full its obligation as insurer, succeeds to the tort-feasor's right of contribution to the extent of the amount it has paid in excess of the tort-feasor's pro rata share of the common liability. This provision does not limit or impair any right of subrogation arising from any other relationship.

(f) This Article does not impair any right of indemnity under existing law. Where one tort-feasor is entitled to indemnity from another, the right of the indemnity obligee is for indemnity and not contribution, and the indemnity obligor is not entitled to contribution from the obligee for any portion of his indemnity obligation.

(g) This Article shall not apply to breaches of trust or of other fiduciary obligation.

(h) The provisions of this Article shall apply to tort claims against the State. However, in such cases, the same rules governing liability and the limits of liability shall apply to the State and its agencies as in cases heard before the Industrial Commission. The State's share in such cases shall not exceed the pro rata share based upon the maximum amount of liability under the Tort Claims Act.

(i) The provisions of this Article shall apply to the injury or death of an employee of any common carrier by rail which is subject to the provisions of Chapter 2 of Title 45 of the United States Code (45 U.S.C. § 51 et seq.) or G.S. 62-242 where such injury or death is caused by the joint or concurring negligence of such common carrier by rail and any other person or persons. In any such instance, the following will apply:

(1) Where liability is imposed or sought to be imposed only on such common carrier by rail, the railroad is entitled to contribution from any other such person or persons;
(2) Where liability is imposed or sought to be imposed only on a person or persons other than a common carrier by rail, such other person or persons are entitled to contribution from the railroad;
(3) Where liability is imposed or sought to be imposed on both a common carrier by rail and any other person or persons, damages shall be determined as provided in Chapter 2 of Title 45 of the United States Code (45 U.S.C. § 51 et seq.) or G.S. 62-242 whichever controls the claim. (1967, c. 847, s. 1; 1975, c. 587, s. 2; 1979, c. 620.)

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Decisions under Prior Law.

I. IN GENERAL.

Chapter Inapplicable in Contract Actions. — By its terms, this Chapter applies only in tort actions, not contract actions. Duke Univ. v. St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co., 95 N.C. App. 663, 384 S.E.2d 36 (1989).

It is the intent of draftsmen of uniform acts that as much as possible they be given uniform interpretation among those states where they are in force. Battle v. Clanton, 27 N.C. App. 616, 220 S.E.2d 97 (1975), cert. denied, 289 N.C. 613, 223 S.E.2d 391 (1976).

Article Applies Specifically to Liability for Injury or Wrongful Death. — This Article specifically refers to liability for injury or wrongful death. Simmons v. Wilder, 6 N.C. App. 179, 169 S.E.2d 480 (1969).

And Contemplates Encouragement of Settlements. — This Article contemplates that settlements are to be encouraged. Wheeler v. Denton, 9 N.C. App. 167, 175 S.E.2d 769 (1970).

This statute provides a new right of action wholly distinct from common-law right of indemnity. Ingram v. Smith, 16 N.C. App. 147, 191 S.E.2d 390, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 195 (1972).

But it does not affect the common-law right of indemnity arising from primary-secondary liability. Ingram v. Smith, 16 N.C. App. 147, 191 S.E.2d 390, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 195 (1972).

Irrespective of whether this Chapter codifies the right to indemnification as it does the right to contribution, there exists in North Carolina a common law right to indemnification of a passively negligent tort-feasor from an actively negligent tort-feasor. Teachy v. Coble Dairies, Inc., 306 N.C. 324, 293 S.E.2d 182 (1982).

The rights of contribution and indemnity are mutually inconsistent; the former assumes joint fault, the latter only derivative fault. Ingram v. Smith, 16 N.C. App. 147, 191 S.E.2d 390, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 195 (1972).

Person who takes the position that he is free of negligence is not entitled to contribution. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Weeks-Allen Motor Co., 18 N.C. App. 689, 198 S.E.2d 88 (1973).

The right to contribution is statutory and is applicable only between joint tort-feasors. Roseboro Ford, Inc. v. Bass, 77 N.C. App. 363, 335 S.E.2d 214 (1985).

No Right to Contribution from One Not a Joint Tort-Feasor. — Where the party from whom contribution is sought is not a tort-feasor and not jointly liable, there is no right to contribution. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Weeks-Allen Motor Co., 18 N.C. App. 689, 198 S.E.2d 88 (1973).

There is no right to contribution from one who is not a joint tort-feasor. Holland v. Edgerton, 85 N.C. App. 567, 355 S.E.2d 514 (1987).

The right to contribution does not exist unless two or more parties are joint tort-feasors. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Holland, 324 N.C. 466, 380 S.E.2d 100 (1989).

Since plaintiff general contractor did not allege negligence claims against defendant subcontractors that were not otherwise covered by contractual obligations, there was no tort-feasor, and thus, no statutory right to contribution under G.S. 1B-1; the trial court properly dismissed the claims against the subcontractors under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6). Kaleel Builders, Inc. v. Ashby, 161 N.C. App. 34, 587 S.E.2d 470, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1993 (2003), cert. denied, 358 N.C. 235, 595 S.E.2d 152 (2004).

Nor for Claim on Contract. — Under subsection (a) of this section, a defendant is entitled to contribution where he and one or more other persons are jointly or severally liable in tort. By the clear language of the statute, a defendant is not entitled to contribution for a claim against him in contract. Holland v. Edgerton, 85 N.C. App. 567, 355 S.E.2d 514 (1987).

Claim for relief, based on a breach of implied warranty, gave rise to no right of contribution on the part of third party plaintiff, because it sounded in contract and not in tort. Holland v. Edgerton, 85 N.C. App. 567, 355 S.E.2d 514 (1987).

Contribution Not Available for Intentional Infliction of Mental Distress. — The language of subsection (c) of this section clearly excludes the possibility of contribution on any claim by plaintiffs for intentional infliction of mental distress. Holland v. Edgerton, 85 N.C. App. 567, 355 S.E.2d 514 (1987).

Liability of State Restricted. — Although under this Article, the State may be sued for contribution as a joint tort-feasor; the rules governing and limiting the liability of the State and its agencies as provided in the Tort Claims Act apply. Guthrie v. North Carolina State Ports Auth., 307 N.C. 522, 299 S.E.2d 618 (1983).

Effect of Release or Covenant Not to Sue under § 1B-4. — The provisions of this section provide for contribution under certain circumstances, but G.S. 1B-4 takes away this right of contribution when the provisions thereof are complied with. Wheeler v. Denton, 9 N.C. App. 167, 175 S.E.2d 769 (1970).

Releases and covenants not to sue. — Releases and covenants not to sue are treated the same under the Uniform Contribution Among Tort-feasors Act, G.S. 1B-1 et seq., and absent other evidence, a release that releases all other persons or entities is valid; an all encompassing release signed by a pedestrian in exchange for a payment from a motorist's insurance company barred the pedestrian's later underinsured motorist claim against his employer's insurer, and summary judgment in favor of the motorist and the insurer was affirmed. Van Keuren v. Little, 165 N.C. App. 244, 598 S.E.2d 168, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 1154 (2004), cert. denied, 359 N.C. 197, 608 S.E.2d 328 (2004).

The determination of whether a settlement was reached in good faith is within the discretion of the trial court, which will consider the "totality of the circumstances" and may, but is not obligated to, consider any number of factors, such as "a rough approximation of plaintiffs' total recovery and the settlor's proportionate liability, the amount paid in settlement, the allocation of settlement proceeds among plaintiffs, . . . a recognition that a settlor should pay less in settlement than he would if he were found liable after a trial[,] . . . the financial conditions and insurance policy limits of settling defendants, as well as the existence of collusion, fraud, or tortious conduct aimed to injure the interests of nonsettling defendants." Brooks v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 139 N.C. App. 637, 535 S.E.2d 55 (2000).

Primary and secondary liability between defendants exists only when: (1) They are jointly and severally liable to the plaintiff; and (2) Either (a) one has been passively negligent but is exposed to liability through the active negligence of the other, or (b) one alone has done the act which produced the injury, but the other is derivatively liable for the negligence of the former. Ingram v. Smith, 16 N.C. App. 147, 191 S.E.2d 390, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 195 (1972).

The doctrine of primary-secondary liability is based upon a contract implied in law. Ingram v. Smith, 16 N.C. App. 147, 191 S.E.2d 390, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 195 (1972).

And is therefore subject to the three-year statute of limitations under G.S. 1-52(1). Ingram v. Smith, 16 N.C. App. 147, 191 S.E.2d 390, cert. denied, 282 N.C. 304, 192 S.E.2d 195 (1972).

Who Are Joint Tort-Feasors. — Two or more parties are joint tort-feasors when their negligent or wrongful acts are united in time or circumstance such that the two acts constitute one transaction or when two separate acts concur in point of time and place to cause a single injury. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Holland, 324 N.C. 466, 380 S.E.2d 100 (1989).

If independent wrongful acts of two or more persons unite in producing a single indivisible injury, the parties are joint tort-feasors within the meaning of the law. Cox v. Robert C. Rhein Interest, Inc., 100 N.C. App. 584, 397 S.E.2d 358 (1990).

Suit Against One or More Joint Tort-Feasors by Personal Representative. — The personal representative of a person killed by the negligence of two joint tort-feasors may, at his election, sue one or both of the tort-feasors. If he sues both and the jury finds them to be joint tort-feasors, the resulting judgment is joint and several and the party paying more than his pro rata share of the judgment is entitled to contribution from the other. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Holland, 324 N.C. 466, 380 S.E.2d 100 (1989).

Joinder of Other Tort-Feasors by Defendant. — Where plaintiff elects to sue only one of several joint tort-feasors, the original defendant may have others joined as additional or third party defendants. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Holland, 324 N.C. 466, 380 S.E.2d 100 (1989).

Separate Action by Defendant Against Other Tort-Feasor. — Where one of two joint tort-feasors is not made a party to the original action, either by the plaintiff or the original defendant, the original defendant may nevertheless, by separate action, seek contribution from the other tort-feasor. In such a case he must establish, not only that a judgment has been entered against him, but that the other party is in fact a joint tort-feasor, that is, that the other party is liable jointly with the original defendant to the plaintiff for damages. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Holland, 324 N.C. 466, 380 S.E.2d 100 (1989).

The burden is on the tort-feasor seeking contribution to show that the right exists, and to allege facts which show liability to the injured party as well as a right to contribution. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Holland, 324 N.C. 466, 380 S.E.2d 100 (1989).

Collateral Estoppel Not Available to Show Joint and Several Liability of One Not Made Defendant in Action. — Where, after wrongful death action in which mother was neither named as a defendant nor named as a third party defendant, and in which insured was found to have caused the death of child in a car accident, insurer sought contribution from mother for half of the money paid to the child's estate, the doctrine of collateral estoppel was not available to the insurer to show mother's joint and several liability to the estate of the child; since mother was not a party to the wrongful death claim and was not made a third party defendant for the purpose of contribution, neither her liability to the estate of child nor her liability to insurer as a joint tort-feasor was established by the judgment in the original action. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Holland, 324 N.C. 466, 380 S.E.2d 100 (1989).

To permit an original defendant against whom a judgment is entered in a claim for the wrongful death of a child to collect one-half of the judgment from the parent, based solely on determination of parent's negligence for the purpose of assessing damages against defendant, would effectively remove any need to make the parent a third party defendant. The practical effect of such a holding would be to prevent the parent's insurer from having an opportunity to defend a claim against the parent. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Holland, 324 N.C. 466, 380 S.E.2d 100 (1989).

Plaintiff's suit for contribution from a joint tortfeasors was not precluded by res judicata or collateral estoppel where an earlier settlement case between the defendants/tortfeasors and decedent's estate dealt only with issues of (1) good faith and (2) best interests of the estate and where the issue of the effect of the order approving the settlement on the respective rights of the joint tortfeasors to contribution was not ripe for determination until the plaintiff, as insurer for one of the joint tortfeasors, paid more than its share of the judgment. Medical Mut. Ins. Co. v. Mauldin, 137 N.C. App. 690, 529 S.E.2d 697, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 532 (2000), aff'd, 353 N.C. 352, 543 S.E.2d 478 (2001).

Third-party plaintiff had an affirmative burden to show that he met the requirements of subsection (d) of this section, and he failed to meet this burden where he did not introduce evidence of a release that he claimed he obtained from the injured party, nor show that third-party defendant's liability to the injured party had been extinguished. King v. Humphrey, 88 N.C. App. 143, 362 S.E.2d 614 (1987).

Trial court erred in not applying § 1B-4 where, in their complaint, plaintiffs treated defendants as joint tort-feasors and sought relief from flood damage caused by mud and silt runoff from all defendants' properties, and evidence at trial revealed only a single indivisible injury, the flooding of plaintiffs' property, and until appeal plaintiffs did not attempt to allocate their injury among defendants. Cox v.

Robert C. Rhein Interest, Inc., 100 N.C. App. 584, 397 S.E.2d 358 (1990).

For defendant to be entitled to verdict reduction in the amount of a pretrial settlement between plaintiffs and two other defendants, it must not only appear that the three defendants are tort-feasors, but also that the negligence of all three defendants caused an indivisible injury. Cox v. Robert C. Rhein Interest, Inc., 100 N.C. App. 584, 397 S.E.2d 358 (1990).

Church was not entitled to contribution from the YMCA where the church paid nothing of its own in settlement; therefore, it did not pay more than its pro rata share and was not entitled to contribution. Jones v. Shoji, 336 N.C. 581, 444 S.E.2d 203 (1994).

Although it appears that the legislature intended the phrase in subsection (f) of this section to mean "where one tort-feasor is entitled to indemnity from another tort-feasor," the language of the statute is simply "where one tort-feasor is entitled to indemnity from another." Since the term "another" as used in the statute is ambiguous, by applying principles of statutory construction to ascertain the legislative will, and the title of the Act makes clear that the statute applies to "tort-feasors"; the context of the legislation indicates that it is concerned only with the apportionment of loss as between tort-feasors, and the Act should not be read to speak to apportionment of loss by contract between a tort-feasor and a third party. Yates v. New S. Pizza, Ltd., 102 N.C. App. 66, 401 S.E.2d 380 (1991), rev'd on other grounds, 330 N.C. 790, 412 S.E.2d 666, reh'g denied, 331 N.C. 292, 417 S.E.2d 73 (1992).

Underinsured insurance carrier cannot assert a claim of contribution because the carrier is not a tortfeasor; however, the carrier can bring a direct action against one of the defendants even though that defendant executed a release in favor of the other defendants. Johnson v. Hudson, 122 N.C. App. 188, 468 S.E.2d 64 (1996).

If a negligent insurance broker was found to be an insurer's agent, the insurer could be liable for the broker's negligence, under the Uniform Contribution Among Tort-feasors Act, even though the broker settled with the insured who sued the insurer and the broker, G.S. 1B-1(a), the insurer was liable to the negligent broker for contribution to the amount for which the broker settled, because the broker's settlement with and release by the insured did not release the insurer, and the insurer's lack of direct negligence was immaterial. Jefferson Pilot Fin. Ins. Co. v. Marsh USA, Inc., 159 N.C. App. 43, 582 S.E.2d 701, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1436 (2003), review dismissed sub nom. Jefferson Pilot Fin. Ins. Co. v. Marsh United States, Inc., 357 N.C. 658, 590 S.E.2d 266 (2003), review denied, 357 N.C. 658, 590 S.E.2d 267 (2003).

A Negligent Insurance Broker, Who Was an Agent of Insurer, Was Not Prohibited From Pursuing Contribution Against Insurer. Under the Uniform Contribution Among Tort-feasors Act, G.S. 1B-1(d), a negligent insurance broker, who was an agent of an insurer, was not prohibited from pursuing contribution against the insurer because the agent extinguished its tort cross-claims against the insurer. Jefferson Pilot Fin. Ins. Co. v. Marsh USA, Inc., 159 N.C. App. 43, 582 S.E.2d 701, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1436 (2003), review dismissed sub nom. Jefferson Pilot Fin. Ins. Co. v. Marsh United States, Inc., 357 N.C. 658, 590 S.E.2d 266 (2003), review denied, 357 N.C. 658, 590 S.E.2d 267 (2003).

Pre-Judgment Interest. — Although an underlying wrongful death judgment awarded compensatory damages, apportionment of that judgment did not; therefore, prejudgment interest under G.S. 24-5(b) was properly denied since the contribution action under this article was derivative and based upon the codification of equitable principles. Medical Mut. Ins. Co. v. Mauldin, 157 N.C. App. 136, 577 S.E.2d 680, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 376 (2003).

Claim Sufficient to Survive Summary Judgment. — City's claim for contribution under the North Carolina Uniform Contribution Among Tortfeasors Act would survive summary judgment where facts could lead a rational jury to conclude that the driver was negligent in leaving her car with the keys inside, and that her negligence proximately caused plaintiff to be injured when her car was struck by driver's vehicle, being driven by another and being pursued by law enforcement officers. D'Alessandro v. Westall, 972 F. Supp. 965 (W.D.N.C. 1997).

Applied in Mann v. Virginia Dare Transp. Co., 283 N.C. 734, 198 S.E.2d 558 (1973); United States v. Ward, 618 F. Supp. 884 (E.D.N.C. 1985); Yates v. New S. Pizza, Ltd., 330 N.C. 790, 412 S.E.2d 666 (1992); Potter v. Hilemn Labs., Inc., 150 N.C. App. 326, 564 S.E.2d 259, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 492 (2002).

Editor's Note. — The cases cited below were decided under former G.S. 1-240.

Common Law. — At common law there was no right of contribution as between joint tort-feasors. Shaw v. Baxley, 270 N.C. 740, 155 S.E.2d 256 (1967).

Under the rules of the common law the right of one joint tort-feasor to compel contribution from another did not exist. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Bynum, 267 N.C. 289, 148 S.E.2d 114 (1966).

Prior to enactment of former G.S. 1-240 one tort-feasor was, as a rule, not entitled to contribution from another. Pearsall v. Duke Power Co., 258 N.C. 639, 129 S.E.2d 217 (1963).

Legislative Intent. — It is safe to assume that the General Assembly was moved to enact former G.S. 1-240 by the reason underlying the entire law of contribution, namely, that where one person has been compelled to pay money which others were equally bound to pay, each of the latter in good conscience should contribute the proportion which he ought to pay of the amount expended to discharge the common burden or obligation. Hunsucker v. High Point Bending & Chair Co., 237 N.C. 559, 75 S.E.2d 768 (1953).

Right to Contribution Among Joint Tort-Feasors Is Statutory. — At common law no right of action for contribution existed between or among joint tort-feasors who were in pari delicto; thus such right is statutory, and its use necessarily depends upon the terms of the statute. Godfrey v. Tidewater Power Co., 223 N.C. 647, 27 S.E.2d 736 (1943); Hayes v. City of Wilmington, 239 N.C. 238, 79 S.E.2d 792 (1954); Bell v. Lacey, 248 N.C. 703, 104 S.E.2d 833 (1958); Greene v. Charlotte Chem. Labs., 254 N.C. 680, 120 S.E.2d 82 (1961).

The enactment of former G.S. 1-240 created as to parties jointly and severally liable a new right and ready means for the enforcement of that right. Norris v. Johnson, 246 N.C. 179, 97 S.E.2d 773 (1957).

Common-law rule that there is no right of contribution between joint tort-feasors has been modified in this State so as to provide for enforcement of contribution as between joint tort-feasors in the manner and to the extent provided by statute. Herring v. Jackson, 255 N.C. 537, 122 S.E.2d 366 (1961).

In this jurisdiction, the common-law rule has been modified by statute so as to provide for enforcement of contribution as between joint tort-feasors in accordance with its provisions. Shaw v. Baxley, 270 N.C. 740, 155 S.E.2d 256 (1967).

Former G.S. 1-240 seemed to abrogate the well-settled rule, that, subject to some exceptions (see Gregg v. City of Wilmington, 155 N.C. 18, 70 S.E. 1070 (1911), there can be no contribution between joint tort-feasors. Raulf v. Elizabeth City Light & Power Co., 176 N.C. 691, 97 S.E. 236 (1918); Lineberger v. Gastonia, 196 N.C. 445, 146 S.E. 79 (1929); Hayes v. City of Wilmington, 239 N.C. 238, 79 S.E.2d 792 (1954).

And Must Be Enforced According to Statute. — The right to contribution comes from the statute, and it is to be enforced according to the form of the statute. Tarkington v. Rock Hill Printing & Finishing Co., 230 N.C. 354, 53 S.E.2d 269 (1949); Potter v. Frosty Morn Meats, Inc., 242 N.C. 67, 86 S.E.2d 780 (1955).

Former G.S. 1-240 created a new right and provided an exclusive remedy, and substantial compliance with its terms was necessary to make it available. Hoft v. Mohn, 215 N.C. 397, 2 S.E.2d 23 (1939); Potter v. Frosty Morn Meats, Inc., 242 N.C. 67, 86 S.E.2d 780 (1955).

Contribution is made the rule and not the exception by statute. Pearsall v. Duke Power Co., 258 N.C. 639, 129 S.E.2d 217 (1963).

Enforcement of Contribution Authorized. — In substance former G.S. 1-240 provided that where two or more persons were liable for their joint tort and judgment had been rendered against some, but not all, those who had paid could enforce contribution against the others who were jointly liable. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Bynum, 267 N.C. 289, 148 S.E.2d 114 (1966).

Joint tort-feasors and joint judgment debtors are given the right to contribution. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Bynum, 267 N.C. 289, 148 S.E.2d 114 (1966).

And there can be no contribution unless the parties are joint tort-feasors. Pearsall v. Duke Power Co., 258 N.C. 639, 129 S.E.2d 217 (1963).

Liability for contribution under the statute cannot be invoked except among joint tort-feasors. Lovette v. Lloyd, 236 N.C. 663, 73 S.E.2d 886 (1953); Wise v. Vincent, 265 N.C. 647, 144 S.E.2d 877 (1965).

An original defendant may not invoke the statutory right of contribution against another party in a tort action unless both parties are liable as joint tort-feasors to the plaintiff in the action. Clemmons v. King, 265 N.C. 199, 143 S.E.2d 83 (1965).

A defendant who has been sued for tort may bring into the action for the purpose of enforcing contribution only a joint tort-feasor whom plaintiff could have sued originally in the same action. Petrea v. Ryder Tank Lines, 264 N.C. 230, 141 S.E.2d 278 (1965).

Where insureds are adjudged to be joint tort-feasors and judgments are rendered against them, they are within the specific provisions of the statute. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Bynum, 267 N.C. 289, 148 S.E.2d 114 (1966).

The right of contribution is a personal right. Pittman v. Snedeker, 264 N.C. 55, 140 S.E.2d 740 (1965).

And Cannot Be Assigned or Transferred. — The right of contribution is not one that can be assigned or transferred by operation of law under the doctrine of subrogation. Pittman v. Snedeker, 264 N.C. 55, 140 S.E.2d 740 (1965).

Right to Contribution Is Not Dependent on Plaintiff's Continued Right to Sue. — The right of one joint tort-feasor to enforce contribution against another is said to spring from the plaintiff's suit. This right of contribution, however, projects itself beyond the plaintiff's suit, and is not dependent upon the plaintiff's continued right to sue both or all the joint tort-feasors. Godfrey v. Tidewater Power Co., 223 N.C. 647, 27 S.E.2d 736, 149 A.L.R. 1183 (1943).

As it is the joint tort and common liability to suit which gives rise to the right to enforce contribution. Tarkington v. Rock Hill Printing & Finishing Co., 230 N.C. 354, 53 S.E.2d 269 (1949); White v. Keller, 242 N.C. 97, 86 S.E.2d 795 (1955).

And Permission of Original Plaintiff Is Not Required. — When one joint tort-feasor is sued alone, he may join other joint tort-feasors for contribution without permission from the original plaintiff. Norris v. Johnson, 246 N.C. 179, 97 S.E.2d 773 (1957); McBryde v. Coggins-McIntosh Lumber Co., 246 N.C. 415, 98 S.E.2d 663 (1957).

How Right of Contribution May Be Enforced. — The right of the party sued to have contribution from all responsible for the damage may be enforced in either of two ways. The party sued may wait until a judgment has been obtained against him, whereupon he may maintain an action against the other tort-feasors; or he may, in the action against him, have the other tort-feasors made parties. In either event the party called on to compensate the injured party is a plaintiff in the action against his alleged joint tort-feasors. Pearsall v. Duke Power Co., 258 N.C. 639, 129 S.E.2d 217 (1963).

Only Pro Rata Share Required of Additional Defendants. — The statute does not contemplate that one brought in as an additional defendant shall pay more than a pro rata part of any verdict rendered against the original defendants. Jordan v. Blackwelder, 250 N.C. 189, 108 S.E.2d 429 (1959).

Plaintiff himself may sue any one or all of the tort-feasors. Clemmons v. King, 265 N.C. 199, 143 S.E.2d 83 (1965).

Plaintiff Cannot Be Compelled to Sue Joint Tort-Feasors. — Insofar as plaintiff is concerned, when he has elected to sue only one of several joint tort-feasors, the others are not necessary parties and plaintiff cannot be compelled to pursue them; nor can the original defendant compel plaintiff to join issue with a defendant he has elected not to sue. Moreover, the original defendant cannot rely on the liability to the original plaintiff of the party brought in, but must recover, if at all, upon the liability of such party to him. Charnock v. Taylor, 223 N.C. 360, 26 S.E.2d 911, 148 A.L.R. 1126 (1943); Hayes v. City of Wilmington, 239 N.C. 238, 79 S.E.2d 792 (1954); Bell v. Lacey, 248 N.C. 703, 104 S.E.2d 833 (1958); Greene v. Charlotte Chem. Labs., 254 N.C. 680, 120 S.E.2d 82 (1961).

A defendant sued in tort cannot compel plaintiff to sue all those responsible for the damage, but may have contribution from all responsible for the damage. Pearsall v. Duke Power Co., 258 N.C. 639, 129 S.E.2d 217 (1963).

But Defendant May Bring Them In. — When the aggrieved party elects to sue less than all the tort-feasors, the original defendant or defendants may have the others made additional defendants for the purpose of enforcing contribution in the event the plaintiff recovers. Phillips v. Hassett Mining Co., 244 N.C. 17, 92 S.E.2d 429 (1956).

When a person has been injured through the concurring negligence of two or more persons, he may sue one or all of the joint tort-feasors, at his option. Insofar as he is concerned, the others are not necessary parties and he may not be compelled to bring them in. They may, however, be brought in by the original defendant on a cross complaint in which he alleges joint tort-feasorship and his right to contribution in the event plaintiff recovers judgment against him. Hayes v. City of Wilmington, 239 N.C. 238, 79 S.E.2d 792 (1954).

When a defendant in a negligent injury action files answer denying negligence but alleging that if it were negligent a third party was also guilty of negligence which concurred in causing the injury in suit, and demands affirmative relief against such third person, he is entitled to have such third person joined as a codefendant. Freeman v. Thompson, 216 N.C. 484, 5 S.E.2d 434 (1939); Lackey v. Southern Ry., 219 N.C. 195, 13 S.E.2d 234 (1941). See also, Bost v. Metcalfe, 219 N.C. 607, 14 S.E.2d 648 (1941); Hayes v. City of Wilmington, 243 N.C. 525, 91 S.E.2d 673 (1956); Denny v. Coleman, 245 N.C. 90, 95 S.E.2d 352 (1956); Wise v. Vincent, 265 N.C. 647, 144 S.E.2d 877 (1965).

A party is given the right to bring in joint obligors for contribution. Overton v. Tarkington, 249 N.C. 340, 106 S.E.2d 717 (1959).

Applicability of § 1-166 to Cross Action Against Unknown Joint Tort-Feasor. — The obvious purpose of G.S. 1-166 is to provide plaintiff a means to toll the statute of limitations when he does not yet know the proper designation of the defendant. No comparable necessity exists when a defendant desires to pursue a cross action for contribution against an unknown joint tort-feasor, since the statute does not begin to run on the claim for contribution until judgment has been recovered against the first tort-feasor. Wall Funeral Home v. Stafford, 3 N.C. App. 578, 165 S.E.2d 532 (1969).

Judicial Admission of Negligence Need Not Be Made in Order to Interplead Third Party. — To interplead a third party for contribution the law does not require a defendant in a personal injury suit to make a judicial admission that his negligence was one of the proximate causes of the injury for which plaintiff sues. He may deny negligence and allege, conditionally or alternatively, that if he was negligent, the third party's negligence concurred with his as a proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries. Clemmons v. King, 265 N.C. 199, 143 S.E.2d 83 (1965).

The party brought in may assert any defense appropriate to the cause of action asserted against him. He may plead estoppel by settlement or a judgment binding the parties. Norris v. Johnson, 246 N.C. 179, 97 S.E.2d 773 (1957).

Additional Party Under No Obligation to Answer Allegations in Original Complaint. — An additional party defendant has no cause of action stated against him except that asserted in the cross action and set out in the cross complaint. Hence, the additional party defendant is under no obligation to answer any allegations in the original complaint, but only those alleged against him in the cross complaint. Greene v. Charlotte Chem. Labs., 254 N.C. 680, 120 S.E.2d 82 (1961).

Too Late to Bring in Other Joint Tort-Feasors After Entry of Default Judgment. — When joint tort-feasors who have been sued in an action fail to file an answer to a complaint that states a good cause of action, and plaintiffs obtain a judgment by default and inquiry, which is regular in all respects, a motion, lodged thereafter, to bring in other joint tort-feasors so as to determine liability for contribution as between themselves comes too late. Denny v. Coleman, 245 N.C. 90, 95 S.E.2d 352 (1956).

Allegations in Cross Action for Contribution. — In order to maintain a cross action against another for contribution, the original defendant must allege facts sufficient to show that both of them are liable to the plaintiff as joint tort-feasors. Potter v. Frosty Morn Meats, Inc., 242 N.C. 67, 86 S.E.2d 780 (1955).

In order for one defendant to join another as a third-party defendant for the purpose of contribution, he must allege facts sufficient to show joint tort-feasorship and his right to contribution in the event plaintiff recovers against him. Clemmons v. King, 265 N.C. 199, 143 S.E.2d 83 (1965); Wise v. Vincent, 265 N.C. 647, 144 S.E.2d 877 (1965).

In order for one defendant to join another as an additional defendant for the purpose of contribution, he must show by his allegations facts sufficient to make them both liable to plaintiff as joint tort-feasors, and allegations showing only a cause of action which would entitle the plaintiff to recover of such additional party are not sufficient. Hayes v. City of Wilmington, 239 N.C. 238, 79 S.E.2d 792 (1954); Hayes v. City of Wilmington, 243 N.C. 525, 91 S.E.2d 673 (1956).

In order to show joint tort-feasorship, it is necessary that the facts alleged in the cross complaint are sufficient to make the third party liable to the plaintiff along with the cross-complaining defendant in the event of a recovery by the plaintiff against him. Clemmons v. King, 265 N.C. 199, 143 S.E.2d 83 (1965); Wise v. Vincent, 265 N.C. 647, 144 S.E.2d 877 (1965).

The allegations of the cross complaint must be so related to the subject matter declared on in the plaintiff's complaint as to disclose that the plaintiff, had he desired to do so, could have joined the third party as a defendant in the action. Wise v. Vincent, 265 N.C. 647, 144 S.E.2d 877 (1965).

To entitle the original defendant in a tort action to have some third party made an additional party defendant to enforce contribution, it must be made to appear from the facts alleged in the cross action that the defendant and such third person are tort-feasors in respect to the subject of controversy, jointly liable to the plaintiff for the particular wrong alleged in the complaint. The facts must be such that the plaintiff, had he desired so to do, could have joined such third party as defendant in the action. Hobbs v. Goodman, 240 N.C. 192, 81 S.E.2d 413 (1954). See also, Hobbs v. Goodman, 241 N.C. 297, 84 S.E.2d 904 (1954); Hayes v. City of Wilmington, 243 N.C. 525, 91 S.E.2d 673 (1956); Johnson v. Catlett, 246 N.C. 341, 98 S.E.2d 458 (1957); Jones v. Douglas Aircraft Co., 253 N.C. 482, 117 S.E.2d 496 (1960).

The pleading filed by the original defendant must state facts which are sufficient to show that the original defendant is entitled to contribution from the additional defendant. If the facts alleged do not suffice to establish a right to contribution, the party or parties brought in as additional defendants are unnecessary parties and may on motion have the allegations stricken and the action dismissed as to them. Etheridge v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 249 N.C. 367, 106 S.E.2d 560 (1959).

When an alleged joint tort-feasor was brought into a case as an additional party defendant, and it turned out that no cause of action was stated against him, either in the main action or in a cross action pleaded by another defendant, he was an unnecessary party to the action and, on motion, could have his name stricken from the record as mere surplusage. Hayes v. City of Wilmington, 243 N.C. 525, 91 S.E.2d 673 (1956).

For allegations sufficient to state a cause of action against joint tort-feasor for contribution, see Read v. Young Roofing Co., 234 N.C. 273, 66 S.E.2d 821 (1951).

Original Defendant Becomes a Plaintiff as to Additional Defendant. — Where plaintiff does not bring his action against all joint tort-feasors, and an original defendant sets up a cross action against a third party and has him brought in as an additional party defendant for contribution, such original defendant makes himself a plaintiff as to the additional party defendant. Bell v. Lacey, 248 N.C. 703, 104 S.E.2d 833 (1959); Cox v. E.I. DuPont Chem. Labs., 254 N.C. 680, 120 S.E.2d 82 (1961).

When an injured party elects to sue some but not all of the tort-feasors responsible for his injuries, those sued have a right to bring the other wrongdoers in for contribution. The original defendant then becomes a plaintiff as to the tort-feasors not originally sued. Etheridge v. Carolina Power & Light Co., 249 N.C. 367, 106 S.E.2d 560 (1959).

Additional Defendant May File Counterclaim Against Original Defendant. — Where the original defendant has another joined as additional defendant for contribution on the ground of their concurring negligence in producing plaintiff's injury, the additional defendant may file a counterclaim against the original defendant for damages to the additional defendant's property allegedly resulting from the negligence of the original defendant, and such counterclaim is improperly stricken upon motion of the original defendant. Norris v. Johnson, 246 N.C. 179, 97 S.E.2d 773 (1957).

Interjection of Action Which Is Not Germane Not Contemplated. — The cross action for contribution between defendants charged with tort may not be used to interject into the litigation another action not germane to the plaintiff's action. White v. Keller, 242 N.C. 97, 86 S.E.2d 795 (1955).

Burden Is on Original Defendant to Prove Cross Action. — Where plaintiff does not demand any relief against a codefendant joined by the original defendant as a joint tort-feasor, the burden is on the original defendant to prove his cross action for contribution, and upon motion of the codefendant for nonsuit on the cross action the evidence must be considered in the light most favorable to the original defendant upon that cause. Pascal v. Burke Transit Co., 229 N.C. 435, 50 S.E.2d 534 (1948); Stansel v. McIntyre, 237 N.C. 148, 74 S.E.2d 345 (1953).

Where one joint tort-feasor has others joined for contribution, he is, as to the new defendants, a plaintiff and must establish his right of action, and such additional defendants may assert any appropriate defense to the cross action without regard to relevancy to the claim of plaintiff. Norris v. Johnson, 246 N.C. 179, 97 S.E.2d 773 (1957).

As to procedure for contribution between defendants, see Whiteman v. Seashore Transp. Co., 231 N.C. 701, 58 S.E.2d 752 (1950); Byerly v. Shell, 312 F.2d 141 (4th Cir. 1962).

Original Defendant's Right to Contribution Not Affected by Payment of Judgment by Insurer. — Where insurer of original defendant pays plaintiff's judgment against its insured and plaintiff's judgment is marked paid and satisfied, the original defendant's right to contribution from another defendant is not affected and the insurer is entitled to enforce his claim. Pittman v. Snedeker, 264 N.C. 55, 140 S.E.2d 740 (1965).

Assertion of Right Against Another Tort-Feasor Not Barred by Failure to Perfect Appeal. — Where plaintiff has established one tort-feasor's duty to compensate her, that tort-feasor, by its failure to perfect its appeal from the adjudication of its liability to plaintiff and the discharge thereof, is not thereby barred from asserting its right against another tort-feasor. Pearsall v. Duke Power Co., 258 N.C. 639, 129 S.E.2d 217 (1963).

Dismissal of Codefendants. — Where plaintiff elected to sue both joint tort-feasors and alleged active negligence on the part of both which concurred in producing the injury, each was entitled to contribution from the other if there was a judgment of joint and several liability against them, but during the course of the trial each was a defendant as to the plaintiff only, and neither could preclude dismissal of the action against the other if plaintiff failed to make out a prima facie case against the other; moreover, allegations and prayer for contribution contained in the answer of one were properly stricken on motion. Greene v. Charlotte Chem. Labs., 254 N.C. 680, 120 S.E.2d 82 (1961).

Where the plaintiff made out a prima facie case against both defendants, dismissal of other defendants was improper, since this prevented codefendants from pressing their claim for contribution. Byerly v. Shell, 312 F.2d 141 (4th Cir. 1962).

Additional Defendant Held Entitled to Motion for Nonsuit. — For the failure of original defendant to allege and offer any evidence tending to show that joint and concurring negligence on the part of herself and additional defendant proximately caused injury to plaintiff, additional defendant's motion for judgment of nonsuit should have been sustained. Clemmons v. King, 265 N.C. 199, 143 S.E.2d 83 (1965).

Effect of Settlement with Regard to Injured Party Not Involved Therein. — While passengers, by making settlement with one joint tort-feasor, waived any right they might have possessed to seek compensation from the other, the tort-feasor making settlement with them waived no right it possessed to assert its claim to contribution against the other alleged joint tort-feasor in an action by a passenger with whom no settlement has been made. Snyder v. Kenan Oil Co., 235 N.C. 119, 68 S.E.2d 805 (1952).

Res Judicata in Subsequent Action Between Joint Tort-Feasors. — Where initial action is instituted by the passenger in one vehicle against the driver of the other vehicle, and the passenger's driver is joined for contribution, adjudication that the passenger's driver was not guilty of negligence constituting a proximate cause of the accident, is res judicata in a subsequent action between the drivers. It is equally true in such a factual situation, where the plaintiff recovers judgment against the original defendant and the jury finds the additional defendant guilty of negligence and that such negligence concurred in jointly and proximately causing plaintiff's injuries, and gives the original defendant a verdict for contribution, that such judgment is res judicata in a subsequent action between such drivers, based on the same facts litigated in the cross action in the former trial. Hill v. Edwards, 255 N.C. 615, 122 S.E.2d 383 (1961); Sisk v. Perkins, 264 N.C. 43, 140 S.E.2d 753 (1965).

Defendant may not exculpate himself from liability for his negligence by showing that codefendant was also negligent. Byerly v. Shell, 312 F.2d 141 (4th Cir. 1962).

Allegation by plaintiff that defendants jointly and concurrently proximately caused injuries is a conclusion of the pleader and is not admitted by demurrer. Anderson v. Robinson, 275 N.C. 132, 165 S.E.2d 502 (1969).

Joint and Several Judgments in Favor of Plaintiff Held Error. — Where plaintiffs sought no affirmative relief against a codefendant joined by the original defendant for the purpose of enforcing contribution against it as a joint tort-feasor, it was error for the court to enter joint and several judgments in favor of plaintiffs against both defendants upon the jury's finding that both were guilty of actionable negligence, since the liability of the codefendant was solely to the original defendant on its claim for contribution. Pascal v. Burke Transit Co., 229 N.C. 435, 50 S.E.2d 534 (1948); Shaw v. Eaves, 262 N.C. 656, 138 S.E.2d 520 (1964).

As to the binding effect of a consent judgment in a foreign action, see Carolina Coach Co. v. Cox, 337 F.2d 101 (4th Cir. 1964).

In an action against a third party tortfeasor by an employee subject to the Worker's Compensation Act, the defendant was not entitled to join the employer or the insurance carrier for contribution or to set up the defense that its liability was secondary and that of the employer was primary. Lovette v. Lloyd, 236 N.C. 663, 73 S.E.2d 886 (1953); Johnson v. Catlett, 246 N.C. 341, 98 S.E.2d 458 (1957).

Where a third party tort-feasor is sued for the wrongful death of an employee, he is not entitled to have the employer joined as a joint tort-feasor nor as a necessary party to the determination of the action when the original defendant does not rely upon the doctrine of primary and secondary liability. Clark v. Pilot Freight Carriers, 247 N.C. 705, 102 S.E.2d 252 (1958); Jones v. Douglas Aircraft Co., 253 N.C. 482, 117 S.E.2d 496 (1960).

Where the personal representative of a deceased employee sued a third party tort-feasor in an action instituted in this State, and defendant had the employer and a fellow employee of the deceased employee joined for contribution, motions of the additional defendants to strike the cross action were properly allowed where it appeared that the deceased was employed in another state, that the injury came within the purview of the compensation act of such state, and that an award had been entered therein adjudicating the liabilities of the additional defendants for the death. Johnson v. Catlett, 246 N.C. 341, 98 S.E.2d 458 (1957).

In an action by property owner to recover damages from mining company due to dumping of silt in river in its mining operations, defendant company could file a cross complaint for contribution against two other mining companies committing the same injurious acts in their operations. Phillips v. Hassett Mining Co., 244 N.C. 17, 92 S.E.2d 429 (1956).

Where plaintiff sued a newspaper for alleged libel, the newspaper, upon allegations that an individual composed the libelous matter and had it published as a paid advertisement, was entitled to have such individual joined as a joint tort-feasor for the purpose of contribution, and such individual's demurrer to the cross action of the newspaper against him was properly overruled. Taylor v. Kinston Free Press Co., 237 N.C. 551, 75 S.E.2d 528 (1953).

Joinder of Injured or Deceased Child's Parents Held Improper. — In an action for wrongful death instituted by the administrator of a deceased unemancipated child against the driver of the car inflicting the fatal injury, defendant was not entitled to have the child's mother joined as a party defendant for the purpose of contribution or indemnity upon allegations that the child's mother was negligent in permitting the child to enter upon the highway unattended, since the mother could not be liable to the plaintiff as a joint tort-feasor, and the statutory right of contribution and the right to indemnity on the ground of primary and secondary liability are both based upon the liability of a joint tort-feasor. Lewis v. Farm Bureau Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 243 N.C. 55, 89 S.E.2d 788 (1955).

In an action on behalf of an unemancipated child to recover for negligent injury, the defendants could not file a cross action against the plaintiff's parents for contribution, because such cross action would indirectly hold the unemancipated minor's parents liable to him for the injury. Watson v. Nichols, 270 N.C. 733, 155 S.E.2d 154 (1967).

Subrogation was not included within the framework of former § 1-240. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Bynum, 267 N.C. 289, 148 S.E.2d 114 (1966).

The right permitted to be enforced under former G.S. 1-240 was one of contribution and not one of subrogation. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Bynum, 267 N.C. 289, 148 S.E.2d 114 (1966).

And Therefore Former § 1-240 Was Inapplicable to Subrogation by Insurers. — Since the liability of insurance carriers of tort-feasors is contractual and not founded on tort, where no judgment was recovered against such a carrier by any of the parties to an action, former G.S. 1-240 was inapplicable, as by its express terms it applied only to joint tort-feasors and to joint judgment debtors. Gaffney v. Lumbermen's Mut. Cas. Co., 209 N.C. 515, 184 S.E. 46 (1936); Lumbermen's Mut. Cas. Co. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 211 N.C. 13, 188 S.E. 634 (1936); Squires v. Sorahan, 252 N.C. 589, 114 S.E.2d 277 (1960).

Under former G.S. 1-240, the insurance carrier who paid a joint tort-feasor's obligations to the injured party could not force contribution from other tort-feasors, as the statute could not be stretched to include subrogation, which arises by reason of contract, into contribution, which arises by reason of participation in the tort. Squires v. Sorahan, 252 N.C. 589, 114 S.E.2d 277 (1960).

Under former G.S. 1-240, an insurer paying the judgment obtained by the injured party against one tort-feasor had no right of action to enforce contribution against the other tort-feasor, and could not acquire such right of action by the device of a "loan" to the injured party payable only in the event and to the extent of any recovery which the injured party might obtain against the other tort-feasor; and in an action for contribution in the name of the injured party, maintained solely in the interest of the insurer, the injured party was not a real party in interest. Herring v. Jackson, 255 N.C. 537, 122 S.E.2d 366 (1961).

An automobile insurer of one joint tort-feasor, after discharging in full a judgment obtained by an injured party against its insured, could not maintain in its own name an action for contribution under former G.S. 1-240 against a second joint tort-feasor whose negligence proximately caused and contributed to the injury for which the judgment was obtained, where the second tort-feasor was not made a party to the original suit, as the plaintiff's rights as insurer arose by contract of subrogation under its policy and not as a result of its joint liability as a tort-feasor who had paid the judgment and was entitled to force contribution. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. Bynum, 267 N.C. 289, 148 S.E.2d 114 (1966).

Primary and secondary liability between defendants exists only when: (1) They are jointly and severally liable to the plaintiff; and (2) Either (a) one has been passively negligent but is exposed to liability through the active negligence of the other, or (b) one alone has done the act which produced the injury but the other is derivatively liable for the negligence of the former. Anderson v. Robinson, 275 N.C. 132, 165 S.E.2d 502 (1969).

In order for one defendant to establish a right to indemnity from a second defendant, he must allege and prove (1) That the second defendant is liable to plaintiff, and (2) That the first defendant's liability to plaintiff is derivative, that is, based on tortious conduct of the second defendant, or that the first defendant is only passively negligent but is exposed to liability through the active negligence of the second defendant. Anderson v. Robinson, 275 N.C. 132, 165 S.E.2d 502 (1969).

Tort-feasor whose liability is secondary, upon payment by him of the injured party's recovery, is entitled to indemnity against the primary wrongdoer. Ingram v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 258 N.C. 632, 129 S.E.2d 222 (1963).

Where two persons are jointly liable in respect to a tort, one being liable because he is the actual wrongdoer, and the other by reason of constructive or technical fault imposed by law, the latter, if blameless as between himself and his co-tort-feasor, ordinarily will be allowed to recover full indemnity over against the actual wrongdoer. Hendricks v. Leslie Fay, Inc., 273 N.C. 59, 159 S.E.2d 362 (1968).

Where liability has been imposed on the master because of the negligence of his servant, and the master did not participate in the wrong and incurs liability solely under the doctrine of respondeat superior, the master, having discharged the liability, may recover full indemnity from the servant. Hendricks v. Leslie Fay, Inc., 273 N.C. 59, 159 S.E.2d 362 (1968).

A defendant secondarily liable, when sued alone, may have the person primarily liable brought in to respond to the original defendant's cross action. Hendricks v. Leslie Fay, Inc., 273 N.C. 59, 159 S.E.2d 362 (1968).

The law permits an adjudication in one action of primary and secondary liability between joint tort-feasors who are not in pari delicto. A defendant secondarily liable, when sued alone, may have the tort-feasor primarily liable brought into the action by alleging a cross action for indemnification against him. Edwards v. Hamill, 262 N.C. 528, 138 S.E.2d 151 (1964).

Where two alleged tort-feasors are sued by the injured party, one may set up a cross action against the other for indemnity, under the doctrine of primary-secondary liability, and have the matter adjudicated in that action. Steele v. Moore-Flesher Hauling Co., 260 N.C. 486, 133 S.E.2d 197 (1963); Hendricks v. Leslie Fay, Inc., 273 N.C. 59, 159 S.E.2d 362 (1968).

Lessees Held Not Entitled to Join Lessor on Principle of Primary and Secondary Liability. — Where plaintiff sued to recover for injuries sustained when a sign erected by lessees over a sidewalk fell and struck her, lessees were not entitled to join the lessor as a party defendant on the principle of primary and secondary liability, since upon the cause as set out in the complaint, lessees' active negligence created the situation which caused the injury, and therefore lessees were primarily liable. Hobbs v. Goodman, 240 N.C. 192, 81 S.E.2d 413 (1954).

§ 1B-2. Pro rata shares.

In determining the pro rata shares of tort-feasors in the entire liability

(1) Their relative degree of fault shall not be considered;

(2) If equity requires, the collective liability of some as a group shall constitute a single share; and

(3) Principles of equity applicable to contribution generally shall apply. (1967, c. 847, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Computing Share of Judgment. — In an insured's action against an insurer and a broker, where the insured settled with the broker, who admitted negligence, when it was established that the broker was the insurer's agent, the insurer was liable for half of the amount of the settlement, under the Uniform Contribution Among Tort-feasors G.S. 1B-2, even though it did not participate in the broker's settlement with the insured, because the total damage award was divided by the number of jointly and severally liable tortfeasors, without considering a tortfeasor's relative degree of fault, and the trial court's judgment in determining the liability of the broker and insurer to the insured for the same injury was binding among them in determining their right to contribution, under G.S. 1B-3(f). Jefferson Pilot Fin. Ins. Co. v. Marsh USA, Inc., 159 N.C. App. 43, 582 S.E.2d 701, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1436 (2003), review dismissed sub nom. Jefferson Pilot Fin. Ins. Co. v. Marsh United States, Inc., 357 N.C. 658, 590 S.E.2d 266 (2003), review denied, 357 N.C. 658, 590 S.E.2d 267 (2003).

§ 1B-3. Enforcement.

(a) Whether or not judgment has been entered in an action against two or more tort-feasors for the same injury or wrongful death, contribution may be enforced by separate action.

(b) Where a judgment has been entered in an action against two or more tort-feasors for the same injury or wrongful death, contribution may be enforced in that action by judgment in favor of one against other judgment defendants by motion upon notice to all parties to the action.

(c) If there is a judgment for the injury or wrongful death against the tort-feasor seeking contribution, any separate action by him to enforce contribution must be commenced within one year after the judgment has become final by lapse of time for appeal or after final judgment is entered in the trial court in conformity with the decisions of the appellate court.

(2) Agreed while action is pending against him to discharge the common liability and has within one year after the agreement paid the liability and commenced his action for contribution, or
(3) While action is pending against him, joined the other tort-feasors as third-party defendants for the purpose of contribution.

(e) The recovery of judgment against one tort-feasor for the injury or wrongful death does not of itself discharge the other tort-feasors from liability to the claimant. The satisfaction of the judgment discharges the other tort-feasors from liability to the claimant for the same injury or wrongful death, but does not impair any right of contribution. Provided, however, that a consent judgment in a civil action brought on behalf of a minor, or other person under disability, for the sole purpose of obtaining court approval of a settlement between the injured minor or other person under disability and one of two or more tort-feasors, shall not be deemed to be a judgment as that term is used herein, but shall be treated as a release or covenant not to sue as those terms are used in G.S. 1B-4 unless the judgment shall specifically provide otherwise.

Subsection (e) codifies the common-law rule applicable to joint tort-feasors. Ipock v. Gilmore, 73 N.C. App. 182, 326 S.E.2d 271, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 116, 332 S.E.2d 481 (1985), aff'd, 85 N.C. App. 70, 354 S.E.2d 315 (1987).

Party Entitled to One Satisfaction. — Although an injured party may pursue and obtain judgments against all joint tort-feasors for a single injury, he may have only one satisfaction. Ipock v. Gilmore, 73 N.C. App. 182, 326 S.E.2d 271, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 116, 332 S.E.2d 481 (1985), aff'd, 85 N.C. App. 70, 354 S.E.2d 315 (1987).

Statute of Limitations. — Subdivision (d)(3) must be read to provide for a three-year statute of limitations for refiling contribution claims. Safety Mut. Cas. Corp. v. Spears, 104 N.C. App. 467, 409 S.E.2d 736 (1991), cert. granted, 331 N.C. 118, 415 S.E.2d 200 (1992), petition withdrawn, 333 N.C. 346, 429 S.E.2d 552 (1993).

The legislature has failed to fix a time in subdivision (d)(3) for refiling contribution claims in the situation where a party brings a claim for contribution that is voluntarily dismissed after settlement of the underlying claim. However, the legislature has provided that a three-year statute of limitations applies upon a liability created by statute, either state or federal, unless some other time is mentioned in the statute creating it. Safety Mut. Cas. Corp. v. Spears, 104 N.C. App. 467, 409 S.E.2d 736 (1991), cert. granted, 331 N.C. 118, 415 S.E.2d 200 (1992), petition withdrawn, 333 N.C. 346, 429 S.E.2d 552 (1993).

Claims Between Insurance Companies. — Claim for contribution by insurance company against another insurance company was sufficiently analogous to claim for subrogation to warrant application of three year statute of limitations of G.S. 1-52(1); this section, which applies to actions among joint tortfeasors, did not apply to claims between insurance companies who both provide coverage to the same tortfeasor. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co. v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 122 N.C. App. 449, 470 S.E.2d 556 (1996).

Insurer Liable For Half of The Amount of A Settlement Entered Into by His Agent. — In an insured's action against an insurer and a broker, where the insured settled with the broker, who admitted negligence, when it was established that the broker was the insurer's agent, the insurer was liable for half of the amount of the settlement, under the Uniform

Contribution Among Tort-feasors Act, G.S. 1B-2, even though it did not participate in the broker's settlement with the insured, because the total damage award was divided by the number of jointly and severally liable tortfeasors, without considering a tortfeasor's relative degree of fault, and the trial court's judgment in determining the liability of the broker and insurer to the insured for the same injury was binding among them in determining their right to contribution, under G.S. 1B-3(f). Jefferson Pilot Fin. Ins. Co. v. Marsh USA, Inc., 159 N.C. App. 43, 582 S.E.2d 701, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1436 (2003), review dismissed sub nom. Jefferson Pilot Fin. Ins. Co. v. Marsh United States, Inc., 357 N.C. 658, 590 S.E.2d 266 (2003), review denied, 357 N.C. 658, 590 S.E.2d 267 (2003).

Collateral Estoppel Not Available to Show Joint and Several Liability of One Not Made Defendant in Action. — Where, after wrongful death action in which mother was neither named as a defendant nor named as a third party defendant, and in which insured was found to have caused the death of child in a car accident, insurer sought contribution from mother for half of the money paid to the child's estate, the doctrine of collateral estoppel was not available to the insurer to show mother's joint and several liability to the estate of the child; since mother was not a party to the wrongful death claim and was not made a third party defendant for the purpose of contribution, neither her liability to the estate of child nor her liability to insurer as a joint tort-feasor was established by the judgment in the original action. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Holland, 324 N.C. 466, 380 S.E.2d 100 (1989).

Section 1B-4 Not Applicable Where Requirements of Subsection (e) Not Met. — Where plaintiff did not bring previous wrongful death action for death of his son on behalf of an injured minor or minor plaintiff as required by subsection (e) of this section, and consent judgment entered therein between himself and his wife, the defendant, did not specify that it was anything other than a judgment, G.S. 1B-4 did not apply to the case which he subsequently brought against motorcycle dealer, manufacturer and credit company. Therefore, under subsection (e), the judgment entered therein was fully satisfied by the insurance company of plaintiff's wife, discharging defendants in the subsequent case from liability for the same injury or wrongful death. Severance v. Ford Motor Co., 98 N.C. App. 330, 390 S.E.2d 704 (1990).

This section controls the liability of joint tortfeasors after a judgment establishing their joint and several liability has been entered; consequently, G.S. 1B-4 does not permit one of multiple tortfeasors to avoid liability for contribution to other joint tortfeasors by a settlement, after judgment, for less than his pro rata share of the judgment. Medical Mut. Ins. Co. v. Mauldin, 137 N.C. App. 690, 529 S.E.2d 697, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 532 (2000), aff'd, 353 N.C. 352, 543 S.E.2d 478 (2001).

Where prior judgment is invalid, there can be no effective satisfaction of it within the meaning of subsection (e). Ballard v. Hunter, 12 N.C. App. 613, 184 S.E.2d 423 (1971), cert. denied, 280 N.C. 180, 185 S.E.2d 704 (1972).

Settlement of Minor's Claim Is Not Recovery and Satisfaction. — The settlement of a minor's tort claim which becomes effective and binding upon him only upon judicial examination and adjudication does not constitute a recovery and satisfaction of judgment within the meaning of subsection (e). Payseur v. Rudisill, 15 N.C. App. 57, 189 S.E.2d 562, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 758, 191 S.E.2d 356 (1972), decided prior to 1973 and 1975 amendments.

Trial court properly granted motion to enforce Texas judgment as a North Carolina judgment where the Texas judgment was well within the time limitation for enforcement of foreign judgments and the Texas judgment merely apportioned damages between parties and was not a separate action for contribution. In re Aerial Devices, Inc., 126 N.C. App. 709, 486 S.E.2d 463 (1997).

Applied in Mann v. Virginia Dare Transp. Co., 283 N.C. 734, 198 S.E.2d 558 (1973).

§ 1B-4. Release or covenant not to sue.

When a release or a covenant not to sue or not to enforce judgment is given in good faith to one of two or more persons liable in tort for the same injury or the same wrongful death:

(1) It does not discharge any of the other tort-feasors from liability for the injury or wrongful death unless its terms so provide; but it reduces the claim against the others to the extent of any amount stipulated by the release or the covenant, or in the amount of the consideration paid for it, whichever is the greater; and,

(2) It discharges the tort-feasor to whom it is given from all liability for contribution to any other tort-feasor. (1967, c. 847, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Chapter Inapplicable in Contract Actions. — By its terms, this Chapter applies only in tort actions, not contract actions. Duke Univ. v. St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co., 95 N.C. App. 663, 384 S.E.2d 36 (1989).

Construction with § 1B-3(f). — This section does not permit one of multiple tortfeasors to avoid liability for contribution to other joint tortfeasors by a settlement, after judgment, for less than his pro rata share of the judgment; G.S. 1B-3(f) controls the liability of joint tortfeasors after a judgment establishing their joint and several liability has been entered. Medical Mut. Ins. Co. v. Mauldin, 137 N.C. App. 690, 529 S.E.2d 697, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 532 (2000), aff'd, 353 N.C. 352, 543 S.E.2d 478 (2001).

Section Not Applicable Where Requirements of § 1B-3(e) Not Met. — Where plaintiff did not bring previous wrongful death action for death of his son on behalf of an injured minor or minor plaintiff as required by subsection (e) of this section, and consent judgment entered therein between himself and his wife, the defendant, did not specify that it was anything other than a judgment, G.S. 1B-4 did not apply to the case which he subsequently brought against motorcycle dealer, manufacturer and credit company. Therefore, under subsection (e), the judgment entered therein was fully satisfied by the insurance company of plaintiff's wife, discharging defendants in the subsequent case from liability for the same injury or wrongful death. Severance v. Ford Motor Co., 98 N.C. App. 330, 390 S.E.2d 704 (1990).

This section permits a tort-feasor to enter into a good faith settlement and release with an injured party and relieve himself of further liability to remaining joint tort-feasors for contribution. Menard ex rel. Menard v. Johnson, 105 N.C. App. 70, 411 S.E.2d 825 (1992).

This section abolishes the distinction which had existed between a release and a covenant not to sue. Ottinger v. Chronister, 13 N.C. App. 91, 185 S.E.2d 292 (1971).

One Recovery for Each Injury. — North Carolina recognizes the common law principle of "one recovery" for each injury, even where the legislature has authorized damages that are punitive in character. Ferris v. Haymore, 967 F.2d 946 (4th Cir. 1992).

In an action which an investor filed against an accountant who worked for the investor's former wife's corporation, alleging that the accountant led him to believe the corporation was profitable so he would sign personal guarantees in favor of a bank that loaned the corporation money, the appellate court reversed the trial court's judgment in favor of the accountant because there were questions of fact about whether a settlement the investor negotiated in a separate action against his former wife fully compensated the investor for his losses, such that he was no longer entitled to recover damages from the accountant. Kogut v. Rosenfeld, 157 N.C. App. 487, 579 S.E.2d 400, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 741, cert. granted, 357 N.C. 461, 585 S.E.2d 762 (2003).

Effect of This Section on Right of Contribution. — The provisions of G.S. 1B-1 provide for contribution under certain circumstances, but this section takes away this right of contribution when the provisions thereof are complied with. Wheeler v. Denton, 9 N.C. App. 167, 175 S.E.2d 769 (1970).

Burden of showing a lack of good faith is upon the party asserting it. Wheeler v. Denton, 9 N.C. App. 167, 175 S.E.2d 769 (1970).

Settlement Between Injured Party and Tort-Feasor Insufficient to Show Lack of Good Faith. — The mere showing that there has been a settlement between an injured party and a tort-feasor is insufficient to show that there has been a lack of good faith in the settlement. Wheeler v. Denton, 9 N.C. App. 167, 175 S.E.2d 769 (1970).

Execution of Release by Minor with Court Approval. — Infant plaintiff, having obtained the court's approval of his release agreement, is entitled to the same status as an adult executing a release under the provisions of this section. Payseur v. Rudisill, 15 N.C. App. 57, 189 S.E.2d 562, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 758, 191 S.E.2d 356 (1972).

Settlement of Minor's Claim Not Recovery and Satisfaction. — The settlement of a minor's tort claim which becomes effective and binding upon him only upon judicial examination and adjudication does not constitute a recovery and satisfaction of judgment within the meaning of G.S. 1B-3, subsection (e). Payseur v. Rudisill, 15 N.C. App. 57, 189 S.E.2d 562, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 758, 191 S.E.2d 356 (1972), decided prior to 1973 and 1975 amendments to § 1B-3.

Judgment Against One Tort-Feasor Reduced by Amount of Settlement with Another. — Where a passenger injured in an automobile accident settled with one tort-feasor for $3,750, the other tort-feasor, who went to trial, was entitled to have judgment of $10,000 rendered against him reduced by $3,750, but he was not entitled to have judgment reduced to $3,750. Wheeler v. Denton, 9 N.C. App. 167, 175 S.E.2d 769 (1970).

In a wrongful death action based on the medical specialist's malpractice, the trial court did not err in requiring the specialist to pay all pre-judgment interest and costs because the medical specialist failed to make any objection on the record as to the imposition of costs and pre-judgment interest or the apportionment thereof as required by G.S. 1A-1, Rule 10(b)(1, and the trial court properly determined costs and interest before entitling the specialist to set-off for the settlement amount involving the other treating doctor, a former codefendant. Boykin v. Kim, 174 N.C. App. 278, 620 S.E.2d 707, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2396 (2005).

Trial court erred in not applying this section where, in their complaint, plaintiffs treated defendants as joint tort-feasors and sought relief from flood damage caused by mud and silt runoff from all defendants' properties, and evidence at trial revealed only single indivisible injury, the flooding of plaintiffs' property, and until appeal plaintiffs did not attempt to allocate their injury among defendants. Cox v. Robert C. Rhein Interest, Inc., 100 N.C. App. 584, 397 S.E.2d 358 (1990).

A defendant who settles with a plaintiff and invokes this section to bar a cross claim for contribution from a co-defendant does not lose his rights to pursue his own cross claim or counterclaim against the same co-defendant for damages (personal and property) allegedly inflicted upon him by the co-defendant. Menard ex rel. Menard v. Johnson, 105 N.C. App. 70, 411 S.E.2d 825 (1992).

Reduction of a claim because of a settlement with one defendant is not limited to cases where the defendant is a joint tortfeasor, but applies to all cases where a plaintiff is seeking recovery from several defendants for single, indivisible injury. Ryals v. Hall-Lane Moving & Storage Co., 122 N.C. App. 134, 468 S.E.2d 69 (1996).

Claims for Injury or Damage Not Addressed. — The plain language of this section does not address cross claims or counterclaims for personal injury or property damage; this section only addresses the statutory right to contribution. Menard ex rel. Menard v. Johnson, 105 N.C. App. 70, 411 S.E.2d 825 (1992).

For defendant to be entitled to verdict reduction in the amount of a pretrial settlement between plaintiffs and two other defendants, it must not only appear that the three defendants are tort-feasors, but also that the negligence of all three defendants caused an indivisible injury. Cox v. Robert C. Rhein Interest, Inc., 100 N.C. App. 584, 397 S.E.2d 358 (1990).

Trial court did not err in awarding attorney's fees to a passenger pursuant to G.S. 6-21.1 in her action for personal injuries sustained in an automobile collision because she obtained a judgment against defendant for damages and was the prevailing party, notwithstanding the subsequent reduction of her judgment pursuant to G.S. 1B-4 by the amount of her settlement with a third-party defendant. Reinhold v. Lucas, 167 N.C. App. 735, 606 S.E.2d 412, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 10 (2005).

Trial court did not err in declining to award costs to defendant pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, N.C. R. Civ. P. 68 in a passenger's action for personal injuries sustained in an automobile collision because the total amount of the judgment obtained by the passenger, including the amount of damages, attorney's fees, and costs, exceeded defendant's offer for judgment, even after the amount of damages was reduced by the passenger's settlement with a third-party defendant pursuant to G.S. 1B-4. Reinhold v. Lucas, 167 N.C. App. 735, 606 S.E.2d 412, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 10 (2005).

Appellate Review Limited. — The trial court's determination of whether a settlement was made in good faith pursuant to this section may be reversed only if the court's ruling is manifestly unsupported by reason or is so arbitrary that it could not have been the result of a reasoned decision. Brooks v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 139 N.C. App. 637, 535 S.E.2d 55 (2000).

Passenger's appeal of the reduction of her judgment against defendant in an action for personal injuries sustained in an automobile collision by the amount of her settlement with a third-party defendant, pursuant to G.S. 1B-4, on the ground that she sustained two distinct injuries rather than a single indivisible injury, was dismissed because the passenger did not separate the injuries in the trial court, thus failing to preserve the issue for appeal pursuant to N.C. R. App. P. 10(b)(1). Reinhold v. Lucas, 167 N.C. App. 735, 606 S.E.2d 412, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 10 (2005).

ARTICLE 2.

Judgment Against Joint Obligors or Joint Tort-Feasors.

(a) In all cases in the courts of this State wherein judgment has been, or may hereafter be, rendered against two or more persons or corporations, who are jointly and severally liable for its payment either as joint obligors or joint tort-feasors, and the same has not been paid by all the judgment debtors by each paying his pro rata share thereof, if one or more of the judgment debtors shall pay the judgment creditor, either before or after execution has been issued, the full amount due on said judgment, and shall have entered on the judgment docket in the manner hereinafter set out a notation of the preservation of the right of contribution, such notation shall have the effect of preserving the lien of the judgment and of keeping the same in full force as against any judgment debtor who does not pay his pro rata share thereof to the extent of his liability thereunder in law and equity. Such judgment may be enforced by execution or otherwise in behalf of the judgment debtor or debtors who have so preserved the judgment.

(b) The entry on the judgment docket shall be made in the same manner as other cancellations of judgment, and shall recite that the same has been satisfied, released and discharged, together with all costs and interest, as to the paying judgment debtor, naming him, but that the lien of the judgment is preserved as to the other judgment debtors for the purpose of contribution. No entry of cancellation as to such other judgment debtors shall be made upon the judgment docket or judgment index by virtue of such payment.

(c) If the judgment debtors disagree as to their pro rata shares of the liability, on the grounds that any judgment debtor is insolvent or is a nonresident of the State and cannot be forced under the execution of the court to contribute to the payment of the judgment, or upon other grounds in law and equity, their shares may be determined upon motion in the cause and notice to all parties to the action. Issues of fact arising therein shall be tried by jury as in other civil actions. (1967, c. 847, s. 1.)

Equitable Contribution. — Nothing on the face of this section, or in its history, indicates that the General Assembly intended to eliminate the right to seek equitable contribution. Holcomb v. Holcomb, 70 N.C. App. 471, 320 S.E.2d 12 (1984).

At no point did any prior version of the contribution statute, nor does the modern version, expressly or impliedly eliminate the equitable contribution action. Rather, equitable contribution has continued as an independent action, separate from the summary proceedings set out in statute for preserving the judgment. Holcomb v. Holcomb, 70 N.C. App. 471, 320 S.E.2d 12 (1984).

ARTICLES 1 TO 15.

Exempt Property.

§ 1C-1601. What property exempt; waiver; exceptions.

(a) Exempt property. — Each individual, resident of this State, who is a debtor is entitled to retain free of the enforcement of the claims of creditors:

(1) The debtor's aggregate interest, not to exceed eighteen thousand five hundred dollars ($18,500) in value, in real property or personal property that the debtor or a dependent of the debtor uses as a residence, in a cooperative that owns property that the debtor or a dependent of the debtor uses as a residence, or in a burial plot for the debtor or a dependent of the debtor; however, an unmarried debtor who is 65 years of age or older is entitled to retain an aggregate interest in the property not to exceed thirty-seven thousand dollars ($37,000) in value so long as the property was previously owned by the debtor as a tenant by the entireties or as a joint tenant with rights of survivorship and the former co-owner of the property is deceased.

(2) The debtor's aggregate interest in any property, not to exceed five thousand dollars ($5,000) in value of any unused exemption amount to which the debtor is entitled under subdivision (1) of this subsection.

(3) The debtor's interest, not to exceed three thousand five hundred dollars ($3,500) in value, in one motor vehicle.

(4) The debtor's aggregate interest, not to exceed five thousand dollars ($5,000) in value for the debtor plus one thousand dollars ($1,000) for each dependent of the debtor, not to exceed four thousand dollars ($4,000) total for dependents, in household furnishings, household goods, wearing apparel, appliances, books, animals, crops, or musical instruments, that are held primarily for the personal, family, or household use of the debtor or a dependent of the debtor.

(5) The debtor's aggregate interest, not to exceed two thousand dollars ($2,000) in value, in any implements, professional books, or tools of the trade of the debtor or the trade of a dependent of the debtor.

(6) Life insurance as provided in Article X, Section 5 of the Constitution of North Carolina.

(7) Professionally prescribed health aids for the debtor or a dependent of the debtor.

(8) Compensation for personal injury, including compensation from private disability policies or annuities, or compensation for the death of a person upon whom the debtor was dependent for support, but such compensation is not exempt from claims for funeral, legal, medical, dental, hospital, and health care charges related to the accident or injury giving rise to the compensation.

(9) Individual retirement plans as defined in the Internal Revenue Code and any plan treated in the same manner as an individual retirement plan under the Internal Revenue Code, including individual retirement accounts and Roth retirement accounts as described in section 408(a) and section 408A of the Internal Revenue Code, individual retirement annuities as described in section 408(b) of the Internal Revenue Code, and accounts established as part of a trust described in section 408(c) of the Internal Revenue Code.

(10) Funds in a college savings plan qualified under section 529 of the Internal Revenue Code, not to exceed a cumulative limit of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000), but excluding any funds placed in a college savings plan account within the preceding 12 months (except to the extent any of the contributions were made in the ordinary course of the debtor's financial affairs and were consistent with the debtor's past pattern of contributions) and only to the extent that the funds are for a child of the debtor and will actually be used for the child's college or university expenses.

(11) Retirement benefits under the retirement plans of other states and governmental units of other states, to the extent that these benefits are exempt under the laws of the state or governmental unit under which the benefit plan is established.

(12) Alimony, support, separate maintenance, and child support payments or funds that have been received or to which the debtor is entitled, to the extent the payments or funds are reasonably necessary for the support of the debtor or any dependent of the debtor.

(b) Definitions. — As used in this section, the following definitions apply:

(1) "Internal Revenue Code" means Code as defined in G.S. 105-228.90.

(2) "Value" means fair market value of an individual's interest in property, less valid liens superior to the judgment lien sought to be enforced.

(c) Waiver. — The exemptions provided in this Article cannot be waived except by:

(1) Transfer of property allocated as exempt (and in that event only as to the specific property transferred);

(2) Written waiver, after judgment, approved by the clerk or district court judge. The clerk or district court judge must find that the waiver is made freely, voluntarily, and with full knowledge of the debtor's rights to exemptions and that he is not required to waive them; or

(3) Failure to assert the exemption after notice to do so pursuant to G.S. 1C-1603. The clerk or district court judge may relieve such a waiver made by reason of mistake, surprise or excusable neglect, to the extent that the rights of innocent third parties are not affected.

(d) Recent purchases. — The exemptions provided in subdivisions (2), (3), (4), and (5) of subsection (a) of this section are inapplicable with respect to tangible personal property purchased by the debtor less than 90 days preceding the initiation of judgment collection proceedings or the filing of a petition for bankruptcy, unless the purchase of the property is directly traceable to the liquidation or conversion of property that may be exempt and no additional property was transferred into or used to acquire the replacement property.

(e) Exceptions. — The exemptions provided in this Article are inapplicable to claims:

(1) Of the United States or its agencies as provided by federal law;

(2) Of the State or its subdivisions for taxes, appearance bonds or fiduciary bonds;

(3) Of lien by a laborer for work done and performed for the person claiming the exemption, but only as to the specific property affected;

(4) Of lien by a mechanic for work done on the premises, but only as to the specific property affected;

(5) For payment of obligations contracted for the purchase of the specific real property affected;

(6) Repealed by Session Laws 1981 (Regular Session, 1982), c. 1224, s. 6, effective September 1, 1982;

(7) For contractual security interests in the specific property affected; provided, that the exemptions shall apply to the debtor's household goods notwithstanding any contract for a nonpossessory, nonpurchase money security interest in any such goods;

(8) For statutory liens, on the specific property affected, other than judicial liens;

(9) For child support, alimony or distributive award order pursuant to Chapter 50 of the General Statutes;

(10) For criminal restitution orders docketed as civil judgments pursuant to G.S. 15A-1340.38.

(f) Federal Bankruptcy Code. — The exemptions provided in The Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. § 522(d), are not applicable to residents of this State. The exemptions provided by this Article and by other statutory or common law of this State shall apply for purposes of The Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. § 522(b).

(g) Effect of exemptions. — Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a creditor shall not obtain possession of a debtor's household goods and furnishings in which the creditor holds a nonpossessory, nonpurchase money security interest until the creditor has fully complied with the procedures required by G.S. 1C-1603. (1981, c. 490, s. 1; 1981 (Reg. Sess., 1982), c. 1224, ss. 1-7, 20; 1991, c. 506, s. 1; 1995, c. 250, s. 1; 1998-212, s. 19.4(j); 1999-337, s. 2; 2005-401, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2005-401, s. 1, effective January 1, 2006, and applicable to judgments and bankruptcy petitions filed on or after that date, rewrote this section.

CASE NOTES

Subsection (c) Unconstitutional. — Subsection (c) of this section and G.S. 1C-1603(e)(2), as they attempt to limit the claiming of constitutional exemptions to 20 days after notice to designate is served, are unconstitutional. HFC v. Ellis, 107 N.C. App. 262, 419 S.E.2d 592 (1992), aff'd per curiam, 333 N.C. 786, 429 S.E.2d 716 (1993).

Legislative Intent. — There is no clear indication in G.S. 1C-1601 through 1C-1604 that the General Assembly intended to repeal any statutes other than G.S. 1-369 through 1-392. Therefore, to find that G.S. 1C-1601 through 1C-1604 precludes the exemption granted by G.S. 135-9 would be to determine that G.S. 135-9 has been repealed by implication. Repeal by implication is not favored in North Carolina. In re Hare, 32 Bankr. 16 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1983).

North Carolina General Assembly's purpose in enacting G.S. 1C-1601(a)(9) was to protect a debtor's right to receive retirement benefits and not to limit the exemption to a specific class of retirement plans or trusts. Rather than give a blanket exemption to all "retirement" plans, the General Assembly limited the exemption to any retirement tool that was treated in the same manner as an individual retirement plan under the Internal Revenue Code. In re Grubbs, 325 B.R. 151, 2005 Bankr. LEXIS 1101 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 2005).

Construction of Section. — The general rule is that North Carolina's exemption laws are to be liberally construed in favor of the exemption. In re Laues, 90 Bankr. 158 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1988).

Since the primary purpose of a bond is to provide a source of funds to be applied to the satisfaction of a valid judgment, as a matter of public policy, a party is not permitted to post a cash bond to stay execution of a money judgment and then avoid forfeiture of the bond after default by claiming debtor's exemptions. Barrett v. Barrett, 122 N.C. App. 264, 468 S.E.2d 264 (1996).

Construction with G.S. 1-362. — G.S. 1-362 does not incorporate the exemptions of G.S. 1C-1601 by reference. Kroh v. Kroh, 154 N.C. App. 198, 571 S.E.2d 643, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 1404 (2002).

Construction with 11 U.S.C.S. § 522(f). — Implication in G.S. 1C-1601(c) that exemptions can be waived by conveyance of the property must not be applied in preference to the avoidance power of 11 U.S.C.S. § 522(f). In re Bowes, — Bankr. —, 2005 Bankr. LEXIS 1089 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. Feb. 11, 2005).

North Carolina, by this section, "opted out" of the federal exemptions in bankruptcy pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 522(b)(1). In re Banks, 22 Bankr. 891 (Bankr. W.D.N.C. 1982); In re Laues, 90 Bankr. 158 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1988).

North Carolina has opted-out of the § 522(d) exemptions of the Bankruptcy Code and has instead created its own. In re McQueen, 196 Bankr. 31 (E.D.N.C. 1995).

North Carolina has opted out of the exemption scheme provided by the U.S. Bankruptcy Code, so bankruptcy debtors in North Carolina depend on state law both for substance and for procedure. G.S. 1C-1601(f). In re McRae, 282 Bankr. 704, 2002 Bankr. LEXIS 957 (2002).

The provisions of §§ 1C-1601 to 1C-1604 govern the federal government's efforts to execute a judgment. United States v. Scott, 45 Bankr. 318 (M.D.N.C. 1984).

As to consumer loan contract divesting debtor of personal property otherwise exempt, see Montford v. Grohman, 36 N.C. App. 733, 245 S.E.2d 219, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 551, 248 S.E.2d 727 (1978), decided under former Article 32 of Chapter 1.

Exemption for Tenancies by the Entireties Not Eliminated by Section. — The legislature, by the passage of this section, did not alter or eliminate the exemption from North Carolina process of tenancy by the entireties. The legislative history reflects that the General Assembly considered eliminating, altering, and limiting tenancy by the entirety. However, the statute which was enacted does not mention tenancy by the entirety in any way. Thus, the General Assembly did not intend to alter the common law doctrine of tenancy by the entirety but to leave it in full force and effect. In re Banks, 22 Bankr. 891 (Bankr. W.D.N.C. 1982).

The purpose of the exemption under subdivision (a)(1) of this section is to permit the debtor some flexibility in determining which of his assets should be sheltered from creditors' claims. There is no reason to treat motor vehicles differently from other forms of property in according protection to this legislative goal. Avco Fin. Servs. v. Isbell, 67 N.C. App. 341, 312 S.E.2d 707 (1984).

The residential exemption of subdivision (a)(1) is conditional; property allocated to the debtor as a residence is free from the enforcement of creditors' claims only so long as the debtor or dependent for the debtor uses the property as a residence. Once the debtor ceases to so use the exempt property as a residence, the prohibition on the creditor's enforcement of his judgment ceases. In re Love, 42 Bankr. 317 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984), aff'd, 54 Bankr. 947 (E.D.N.C. 1985).

The North Carolina residential exemption is conditioned upon continued ownership of the property by the debtor. In re Love, 42 Bankr. 317 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984), aff'd, 54 Bankr. 947 (E.D.N.C. 1985).

The North Carolina residential exemption was enacted in 1983 as a part of the legislation which included the "opt out" of the federal bankruptcy exemptions of 11 U.S.C. § 522(d), and an overhaul of many of North Carolina's exemptions. The concept of the conditional residential exemption is entirely consistent with a long line of North Carolina cases holding that the homestead exemption in North Carolina is conditioned on continued use as a residence and continued ownership. In re Love, 42 Bankr. 317 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984), aff'd, 54 Bankr. 947 (E.D.N.C. 1985).

North Carolina law clearly provides for a residential exemption which is conditioned upon continued use as a residence and continued ownership. If the exempt residence ceases to be used as a residence or ceases to be owned by the debtor (or a dependent) the property is no longer exempt. In that event, a judgment creditor can enforce the judgment lien. If the judgment lien is unconditionally cancelled the judgment creditor would lose the right to pursue the property in the future should the use or ownership of the property change. In re Love, 42 Bankr. 317 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984), aff'd, 54 Bankr. 947 (E.D.N.C. 1985).

Involuntary Absence Did Not Constitute Abandonment of Residence. — Claimed homestead exemption was allowed, pursuant to G.S. 1C-1601(a)(1), over a trustee's objection because the debtor was forced to vacate and did not voluntarily abandon her damaged home as a result of hurricanes and she paid property taxes, stored personalty there, lived in temporary housing, and intended to use the home as a residence as soon as repairs were practicable. In re Foster, 348 B.R. 58, 2006 Bankr. LEXIS 1833 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 2006).

North Carolina law clearly requires individual to retain both ownership and use of residence if that person is to retain a homestead exemption. North Carolina's courts have failed to draw a distinction between bankruptcy debtors and civil judgment debtors when interpreting the statutory provision creating the homestead exemption. In re Love, 54 Bankr. 947 (E.D.N.C. 1985).

If jewelry is acquired and kept as an investment rather than as an item of ornamental apparel, then it is not wearing apparel. In re Mims, 49 Bankr. 283 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1985).

"Wearing apparel" exemption provided in this section may include a diamond engagement ring. In re Mims, 49 Bankr. 283 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1985).

Where the court found that the debtor had worn her diamond engagement ring as part of her daily attire since she received it from her ex-husband, the ring was not held as an investment, and the engagement ring was part of the debtor's daily wearing apparel. In re Mims, 49 Bankr. 283 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1985).

Subdivision (a)(2) of this section is known as the "wild card" exemption and allows the debtor to exempt his or her aggregate interest in any property, not to exceed $2,500 (now $3,500) in value less any amount of the exemption used under subdivision (a)(1). In re Laues, 90 Bankr. 158 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1988).

The language of subdivision (a)(2) of this section is clear and free from ambiguity. Avco Fin. Servs. v. Isbell, 67 N.C. App. 341, 312 S.E.2d 707 (1984).

Under subdivision (a)(2) a debtor may use the exemption to shelter any property except that described in the residence exemption, whether it be motor vehicles, other personal property, tools of the trade, or property not qualifying for any other exemption. Avco Fin. Servs. v. Isbell, 67 N.C. App. 341, 312 S.E.2d 707 (1984).

The limits contained in subdivision (a)(3) of this section apply only to exemptions claimed under that subsection, and have no application to exemptions claimed under subdivision (a)(2) of this section. Avco Fin. Servs. v. Isbell, 67 N.C. App. 341, 312 S.E.2d 707 (1984).

Subdivision (a)(8) of this section was intended to afford protection to those debtors who receive personal injury compensation and to those creditors who have certain kinds of claims for services rendered specifically related to the personal injury. Professional Health Servs., Inc. v. Brank, 67 Bankr. 1005 (W.D.N.C. 1986), aff'd sub nom. Brank v. Barrier, 826 F.2d 1059 (4th Cir. 1987).

The policy behind the exception to the exemption in subdivision (a)(8) is to protect those persons who helped the debtor receive personal injury compensation in the first place or rendered services for the personal injury. Professional Health Servs., Inc. v. Brank, 67 Bankr. 1005 (W.D.N.C. 1986), aff'd sub nom. Brank v. Barrier, 826 F.2d 1059 (4th Cir. 1987).

Gross Amount of Compensation Not Subject to All Claims. — Under subdivision (a)(8) of this section, the gross amount of the personal injury compensation subject to claims for legal or medical charges is not subject to claims for all debts by all creditors, regardless of whether they have claims for legal or medical charges. Professional Health Servs., Inc. v. Brank, 67 Bankr. 1005 (W.D.N.C. 1986), aff'd sub nom. Brank v. Barrier, 826 F.2d 1059 (4th Cir. 1987).

Portion of Compensation Not Exempt. — Although a general creditor is prevented from reaching any part of personal injury compensation which the debtor claims is exempt, a creditor having one of the claims enumerated in subdivision (a)(8) of this section is entitled to reach that portion of the compensation attributable to his services related to the injury. Professional Health Servs., Inc. v. Brank, 67 Bankr. 1005 (W.D.N.C. 1986), aff'd sub nom. Brank v. Barrier, 826 F.2d 1059 (4th Cir. 1987).

The court looked beyond the language of a Settlement Agreement and Release and determined that, in accord with the subject employment contract and complaint, while at least $11,725.56 of the bankrupt's $50,000 settlement represented income loss and was, therefore, not exempt under this section, the remainder received for mental anguish was exempt. In re LoCurto, 239 Bankr. 314 (E.D.N.C. 1999).

The "compensation" exemption provided in subdivision (a)(8) of this section does not include life insurance proceeds. In re Ragan, 64 Bankr. 384 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1986).

Retirement Account Exemption Does Not Apply to Shield a Debtor's Claim to Someone Else's Retirement Account. — Former husband was allowed pursuant to G.S. 1-362 to satisfy a tort judgment against his former wife by executing on her future interest in an equitable distribution award of his 401(k) retirement accounts, as the exemption for individual retirement plans in G.S 1C-1601(a)(9) did not shield from execution the wife's mere expectancy in an equitable distribution claim against the husband's retirement accounts. Kroh v. Kroh, 154 N.C. App. 198, 571 S.E.2d 643, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 1404 (2002).

Applicability to Tax-Sheltered Annuities. — Given the close similarity between the tax treatment of tax-sheltered annuities and individual retirement plans and the common purpose of both types of plans, the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Middle District of North Carolina, Greensboro Division, is convinced that the Supreme Court of North Carolina Court would conclude that 26 U.S.C.S. § 403(b) tax-sheltered annuities are "treated in the same manner as" individual retirement plans and therefore would construe G.S. 1C-1601(a)(9) as encompassing such tax-sheltered annuities as property that may be exempted under that statute. Accordingly, the debtor was allowed to claim an exemption in this type of retirement plan. In re Garner, — Bankr. —, 2005 Bankr. LEXIS 1118 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. Apr. 29, 2005).

Applicability to Alimony. — Since G.S. 1C-1601(e)(9) did not apply to claims for alimony, the trial court properly denied the ex-husband's motion to exempt his retirement account. Rhew v. Felton, 178 N.C. App. 475, 631 S.E.2d 859, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 1560, appeal dismissed, review denied, 636 S.E.2d 810 (2006).

Subsection (c) of this section does not preclude the use of § 135-9 by a bankruptcy debtor to claim an exemption in state employee retirement benefits. In re Hare, 32 Bankr. 16 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1983).

For interpretation of subsection (d) of this section, see In re Hallman, 26 Bankr. 34 (Bankr. W.D.N.C. 1982).

Purpose of Subsection (d). — The obvious purpose of subsection (d) of this section is to prevent pre-petition planning whereby a debtor uses nonexempt property to purchase exempt personal property, or purchases exempt personal property with the proceeds of a dischargeable loan obligation. In re Ellis, 33 Bankr. 16 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1983).

Applicability of Subsection (e) to Court Appointed Counsel Fees. — The State assumes the status of a judgment lien creditor against the assets of an indigent defendant who has accepted court-appointed counsel and been found guilty of the offense. The lien is not valid unless the indigent defendant was given both notice of the state claim and the opportunity to resist its perfection in a hearing before the trial court. Alexander v. Johnson, 742 F.2d 117 (4th Cir. 1984).

North Carolina is not barred from structuring a program to collect the amount it is owed from a financially-able defendant through reasonable and fairly administered procedures. The State's initiatives in this area naturally must be narrowly drawn to avoid either chilling the indigent's exercise of the right to counsel, or creating discriminating terms of repayment based solely on the defendant's poverty. Beyond these threshold requirements, however, the State has wide latitude to shape its attorneys' fees recoupment or restitution program along the lines it deems most appropriate for achieving lawful state objectives. Alexander v. Johnson, 742 F.2d 117 (4th Cir. 1984).

Compensation for Personal Injury Includes Attorney Fees. — Law in the Fourth Circuit was quite clear that the attorney fees paid to a debtor's personal injury attorneys as part of the settlement of her personal injury case were exempt under G.S. 1C-1601(a)(8); therefore, there was no legal basis for the Chapter 7 trustee's motion to determine that they were part of the debtor's bankruptcy estate. In re Simmons, — Bankr. —, 2006 Bankr. LEXIS 3280 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. Nov. 22, 2006).

Term "purchase" does not encompass every means of acquiring property, and should be defined in the context of subsection (d) of this section so as not to include an acquisition of exemptable personal property where there is no new interest in property obtained, but merely a transfer of equity from the property given to the property received. This definition allows the statute to accomplish its purpose of denying debtors the benefit of certain prebankruptcy petition planning, but will not unnecessarily hinder an honest debtor who trades certain property which could be claimed as exempt for other property of like kind a short time before seeking a fresh start. In re Ellis, 33 Bankr. 16 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1983).

Trial Court's Findings As to Value of Stock Unsupported by Evidence. — In a G.S. 1C-1603(e) proceeding on an objection to a debtor's claimed exemption, a trial court failed to make sufficient findings as to how or by what methodology it concluded that the value of the debtor's stock in a development company was zero; there was no evidence supporting the trial court's finding that, purely as a result of pending litigation, the company had no value, and no authority permitted the trial court to base its allowance of a party's claim of exemption on the court's assessment of the equities between the parties rather than on the actual value of the property. Susi v. Aubin, 173 N.C. App. 608, 620 S.E.2d 682, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2093 (2005).

This section expresses interest in ensuring that a bankruptcy debtor retain sufficient possessions for a fresh start. In re Ellis, 33 Bankr. 16 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1983).

State Exemptions Apply in Bankrutpcy Proceeding. — Where a bankruptcy trustee objected to the use by a wife of her wild card exemption for property owned by her husband, pursuant to G.S. 1C-1601(f), the state exemptions applied to North Carolina residents in bankruptcy actions. In re Horstman, 276 Bankr. 80, 2002 Bankr. LEXIS 379 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 2002).

Trustee could exercise his strong arm powers under 11 U.S.C.S. § 544(a)(3) to include the property, which a debtor held in a resulting trust for her sister, and its equity in the bankruptcy estate, after applying the wildcard exemption in G.S. 1C-1601(a)(2); therefore, the trustee's objection that the Chapter 13 plan, which proposed to pay unsecured creditors one percent, did not comply with 11 U.S.C.S. § 1325(a)(4) was sustained and confirmation denied. In re Alston, 355 B.R. 529, 2006 Bankr. LEXIS 2968 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 2006).

Two joint Chapter 13 debtors were permitted to claim a $20,000 exemption in their real property under G.S. 1C-1601(a)(1) several years after their Chapter 13 plan was confirmed; the debtors had successfully moved to reopen their case to assert the exemption, and caselaw from the Eastern District of North Carolina District court provided that debtors could avoid a judicial lien against their residence under 11 U.S.C.S. § 522(f)(1) and claim an exemption under G.S. 1C-1601(a)(1), even though they did not have any equity in the real property at issue. In re Male, 362 B.R. 238, 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 583 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 2007).

What Property Exempt in Bankruptcy. — An individual debtor in this State may, pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 522(b)(2)(A), claim as exempt property under subsection (a) of this section and may, pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 522(b)-(2)(B), claim as exempt property under the North Carolina common law doctrine of tenancy by the entireties. In re Banks, 22 Bankr. 891 (Bankr. W.D.N.C. 1982).

The legislature exercised its right to "opt out" of the federal bankruptcy exemptions law by adopting a statute which provides North Carolina citizens with a list of exemptions available to them, and precludes a debtor's use of the federal "laundry list" by expressly not authorizing its use. Thus the exemptions available to a North Carolina debtor in bankruptcy are those prescribed by G.S. 1C-1601, 1C-1602 and the exemptions, other than those in 11 U.S.C. § 522(d), afforded by federal law. Berry v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 33 Bankr. 351 (Bankr. W.D.N.C. 1983).

Under G.S. 1C-1601(a)(8), where all claims against a debtor for services related to her personal injury had been paid, the Chapter 7 Trustee could not use any remaining funds from the debtor's personal injury settlement to pay general creditors; G.S. 1C-1601(a)(8) prevented a general creditor from reaching any part of personal injury compensation, but such compensation was not exempt from claims for services related to the personal injury: funeral, legal, medical, dental, hospital, and health care charges. In re Thompson, 313 B.R. 683, 2004 Bankr. LEXIS 1693 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 2004).

In North Carolina, compensatory damages for purposes of a personal injury settlement included lost wages, and these compensatory damages were "compensation for the personal injury" and, therefore, exempt pursuant to G.S. 1C-1601(a)(8); accordingly, a Chapter 7 Trustee could not recover the lost wages portion from a debtor's personal injury settlement as this amount was exempt. In re Thompson, 313 B.R. 683, 2004 Bankr. LEXIS 1693 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 2004).

Where North Carolina, pursuant to G.S. 1C-1601(f), opted out of 11 U.S.C.S. § 522, any bankruptcy property exemptions were controlled by state law; thus, a North Carolina debtor could not use § 522 to exempt disability insurance policy payments from his bankruptcy estate and the payments were not exempt under G.S. 1-362 because such payments were not earnings for performance of personal services but resulted from nonperformance. In re Dillon, — Bankr. —, 2005 Bankr. LEXIS 1314 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. July 8, 2005).

Exemptions Under 11 U.S.C. § 522(d) Compared. — Many of the new North Carolina exemptions were borrowed from the 11 U.S.C. § 522(d) bankruptcy exemptions. In fact, while the amounts are different, the categories of personal property which may be exempt under subdivision (a)(4) of this section are identical to the categories which are exemptable under 11 U.S.C. § 522(d)(3). In re Mims, 49 Bankr. 283 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1985).

Controlling Effect of 11 U.S.C. § 522(f). — There may be an inconsistency in the operation of the state exemption statute and the Bankruptcy Code due to the conditional nature of North Carolina exemptions. To the extent that there is any conflict between the operation of 11 U.S.C. § 522(f) and the state statute, the federal provision controls. In re Jackson, 55 Bankr. 343 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1985).

State May Not "Opt-Out" of 11 U.S.C. § 522(f). — While a state may "opt-out" of the federal exemptions listed in 11 U.S.C. § 522(d), a state may not "opt-out" of 11 U.S.C. § 522(f). In re Jackson, 55 Bankr. 343 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1985), granting debtors' motion to avoid nonpossessory, nonpurchase money security interest in debtors' household personal property, which impaired the total value of the property as exempt.

A debtor's failure to properly preserve his exemptions by not complying with the requirements of exemption laws in a prior state regulated proceeding will be fatal to the debtor's later claim of exemptions in bankruptcy. In re Laughinghouse, 44 Bankr. 789 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984).

Once a debtor validly waives his exemptions by failure to act after being given both notice and an opportunity to claim them as required by state law, the exemptions cannot be revived merely by filing a bankruptcy petition. In re Laughinghouse, 44 Bankr. 789 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984).

Debtor's Intent in Determining Homestead Exemption. — Debtor's intent must be the focus in determining whether an involuntary absence constitutes abandonment for the purposes of G.S. 1C-1601(a)(1); a narrow interpretation of the statute would be contrary to the North Carolina Supreme Court's prior decisions regarding state law exemptions and a liberal construction is consistent with the Court's efforts to embrace all persons fairly within the exemptions statutes. In re Foster, 348 B.R. 58, 2006 Bankr. LEXIS 1833 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 2006).

Conveyance of Part of Homestead Did Not Bar Lien Avoidance Action. — Debtors' conveyance of part of their homestead to their daughter, post-petition, did not impair their homestead exemption, bar them from seeking relief under 11 U.S.C.S. § 522(f), or bar them from claiming the conveyed property as exempt pursuant to G.S. 1C-1601(c). They did not have to have an interest in the property when they filed their motion to avoid creditor's judicial lien against the property, and the implication in G.S. 1C-1601(c) that exemptions could be waived by conveyance of the property could not be applied in preference to the avoidance power of 11 U.S.C.S. § 522(f). In re Bowes, — Bankr. —, 2005 Bankr. LEXIS 1089 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. Feb. 11, 2005).

Relief from Waiver of Exemption in Bankruptcy. — Debtor who had waived his property exemption by failing to have his exempt property designated by motion within 20 days as required by G.S. 1C-1603 was entitled to relief from such waiver under 11 U.S.C. § 522, which provides no specific time limit for filing exemption. North Carolina Baptist Hosps. v. Howell, 51 Bankr. 1015 (M.D.N.C. 1985).

Where credit union contended that it had a valid security interest in debtors' account by virtue of broad language in loan documents by which the debtors pledged to the credit union all deposits in their checking account with the credit union as security for an automobile loan, and the debtors filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy action, the language of the loan documents did not constitute a waiver of debtors' right to exempt the account balance under either G.S. 1C-1601 or G.S. 1-362. In re Laues, 90 Bankr. 158 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1988).

Debtors may not claim exemption rights in bankruptcy which they would not be entitled to under state law due to their failure to comply with procedural requirements, i.e., failing to respond to the notice of right to have exemptions designated. In re McLamb, 93 Bankr. 72 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1988).

Testimony that debtor turned all documents he received in relation to Land Bank and Protection Credit Association judgments over to his attorney was insufficient to establish grounds for relief from the procedural waiver; under North Carolina law a waiver of exemption by failure to act may be relieved because of mistake, surprise or excusable neglect, and bankruptcy court has authority to grant such relief. In re McLamb, 93 Bankr. 72 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1988).

Exemption Laws Construed in Favor of Debtor. — The State recognizes that the waiver of exemptions may result in harsh consequences to debtors, and the waiver issue is not one to be taken lightly. The courts have held that the exemption laws must be liberally construed in favor of the debtor. In re Laughinghouse, 44 Bankr. 789 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984).

Excusable Neglect. — In considering granting relief from a court order finding the waiver of exemptions by failure to act, the court must focus on the litigant's excusable neglect, not the attorney's. The negligence of the attorney, in attending to his clients' case, although inexcusable, may still be cause for relief. In re Laughinghouse, 44 Bankr. 789 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984).

Surplus Funds Arising From Foreclosure Sale. — A debtor has a property interest in surplus funds arising from a foreclosure sale; consequently, the interest becomes property of the estate upon filing of a petition for bankruptcy and the debtor may claim exemption in it to the extent permitted by law. In re Harris, 139 Bankr. 386 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1992).

Life Insurance Policy. — Upon filing a bankruptcy petition, a debtor can claim as exempt the value of her life insurance policy. There is no provision, however, that extends the protection of the life insurance exemption to the beneficiary of the policy once the proceeds are in the beneficiary's hands. The proceeds are treated like any other asset of the beneficiary and are available to his creditors, except to the extent an exemption or other protection is available to the beneficiary in his own right under applicable law. The result is no different where the beneficiary is the codebtor of the insured in a joint bankruptcy case. Butler v. Sharik, 41 Bankr. 388 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984).

I.R.C. § 403(b) Annuity Exempt. — Annuity created pursuant to I.R.C. § 403(b) is exempt under North Carolina law because a § 403(b) annuity, at least within the meaning of the exemption statute, is treated in the same manner as an individual retirement plan under the Internal Revenue Code. Exemption statute governing retirement plans, G.S. 1C-1601(a)(9), was applicable to debtor's annuity. In re Grubbs, 325 B.R. 151, 2005 Bankr. LEXIS 1101 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 2005).

No Property Exemptions for Past Residents. — Neither N.C. Const., Art. X, § 1, nor subsection (a) of this section confers any property exemptions on past residents of this State. Indeed, the constitutional and statutory provisions both contemplate the possibility that changes in a debtor's residency or other changing circumstances may warrant subsequent modification of the debtor's right to constitutional or statutory exemptions. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Rolfe, 90 N.C. App. 85, 367 S.E.2d 367 (1988).

Finding of Nonresidency Upheld. — Where the only evidence supporting defendant's contention of residency was her statement that she "hoped" to return to this State as soon as her sister's estate in Ireland was settled, this general declaration did not of itself defeat the trial court's findings of nonresidency in light of the other facts of the case, especially the undisputed evidence that defendant had moved to Ireland (her place of citizenship) at least one year previously, had no dwelling in this State, and offered no definite plan to return. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Rolfe, 90 N.C. App. 85, 367 S.E.2d 367 (1988).

Exemption Unavailable to Defeat Valid Security Interest. — As a general proposition, a debtor may not use an exemption to defeat a valid contractual security interest. In re Laues, 90 Bankr. 158 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1988).

Interest of Creditor in Goods of Debtor Who Failed to Elect Exemption. — When debtor failed to make an election for an exemption under this section, allowing debtor to retain $2,500 (now $3,500) worth of household goods and furnishings free from judgment, there was no unfair or deceptive practice on the part of a creditor who took a nonpossessory, nonpurchase money security interest in debtor's household goods and furnishings, even if creditor failed to inform debtor that such an exemption was available. See Ken-Mar Fin. v. Harvey, 90 N.C. App. 362, 368 S.E.2d 646, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 365, 373 S.E.2d 545 (1988).

Chapter 13 debtor was entitled to avoid lien that impaired homestead exemption where he had an ownership interest in the real property prior to the attachment of the creditor's judgment lien. In re Ulmer, 211 Bankr. 523 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1997).

Chapter 7 debtors were not entitled to exempt their tax refunds pursuant to subdivision (a)(4) of this section, and the trustee's objection would therefore be allowed. In re Batton, 88 Bankr. 90 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1988).

The 1987 Ford truck used by the debtor in his boat hauling business did not qualify as a tool of the trade under subdivision (a)(5). In re Trevino, 96 Bankr. 608 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1989).

A horse trailer without a motor does not qualify as a motor vehicle subject to exemption pursuant to subdivision (a)(3); the trustee's objection on this point would be allowed. In re Trevino, 96 Bankr. 608 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1989).

A horse trailer does not constitute a household good or appliance or fall within any of the other categories enumerated in subdivision (a)(4). In re Trevino, 96 Bankr. 608 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1989).

Tools including sockets, wrenches, pliers, hammers, a screwdriver, a level, and a handsaw were used to work on cars, but these tools could also be used to fix the drain on a sink and qualified for exemption under subdivision (a)(4). In re Trevino, 96 Bankr. 608 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1989).

When husband elected to deposit cash bond in lieu of surety bond to stay execution of a judgment against him for spousal support and breach of separation agreement, husband waived any exemption to which he otherwise may have been entitled. Barrett v. Barrett, 122 N.C. App. 264, 468 S.E.2d 264 (1996).

Applied in Schewel Furn. Co. v. Goard, 26 Bankr. 316 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1982); In re Pinner, 146 Bankr. 659 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1992).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Effect of Federal Claims on Exemptions. — North Carolina's exemptions in this Article "are inapplicable" to federal claims only insofar as federal law or regulations provide that they are inapplicable. In other words, there must be a provision of federal law or regulation which specifically creates an exception to the general exemption provisions; otherwise, the property is exempt from federal claims. See opinion of Attorney General to Ms. Sarah S. Kaylor, Special Investigator, Department of Social Services, Catawba County, 55 N.C.A.G. 13 (1985).

The exemptions of this Article are applicable to civil claims arising from the Aid for Families with Dependent Children, Medicaid, and food stamp programs asserted by county departments of social services acting as the administering agencies for such programs. The exemptions are inapplicable to Child Support and Establishment of Paternity (Title IV, Part D of the Social Security Act) programs insofar as they are claims for child support under Chapter 50. See opinion of Attorney General to Ms. Sarah S. Kaylor, Special Investigator, Department of Social Services, Catawba County, 55 N.C.A.G. 13 (1985).

The debtor may elect to take the personal property and homestead exemptions provided in Article X of the Constitution of North Carolina instead of the exemptions provided by G.S. 1C-1601. If the debtor elects to take his constitutional exemptions, the exemptions provided in G.S. 1C-1601 shall not apply and in that event the exemptions provided in this Article shall not be construed so as to affect the personal property and homestead exemptions granted by Article X of the Constitution of North Carolina. If the debtor elects to take his constitutional exemptions, the clerk or district court judge must designate the property to be exempt under the procedure set out in G.S. 1C-1603. The debtor is entitled to have one thousand dollars ($1,000) in value in real property owned and occupied by him and five hundred dollars ($500.00) in value in his personal property exempted from sale under execution. If the value of the property in which the debtor claims his constitutional exemption is in excess of his exemptions, the clerk, in an execution, may order the sale of the property with the proceeds of the sale being distributed first to the debtor to satisfy his exemption and the excess to be distributed as ordered. (1981, c. 490, s. 1; 1981 (Reg. Sess., 1982), c. 1224, s. 8.)

CASE NOTES

Exemptions Available in Bankruptcy. — The legislature exercised its right to "opt out" of the federal bankruptcy exemptions law by adopting a statute which provides North Carolina citizens with a list of exemptions available to them, and precludes a debtor's use of the federal "laundry list" by expressly not authorizing its use. Thus the exemptions available to a North Carolina debtor in bankruptcy are those prescribed by G.S. 1C-1601, 1C-1602 and the exemptions, other than those in 11 U.S.C. § 522(d), afforded by federal law. Berry v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 33 Bankr. 351 (Bankr. W.D.N.C. 1983).

Applied in United States v. Scott, 45 Bankr. 318 (M.D.N.C. 1984).

Cited in In re Hare, 32 Bankr. 16 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1983); First Union Nat'l Bank v. Rolfe, 90 N.C. App. 85, 367 S.E.2d 367 (1988).

§ 1C-1603. Procedure for setting aside exempt property.

(a) Motion or Petition; Notice. —

(1) A judgment debtor may have his exempt property designated by motion after judgment has been entered against him.

(2) Repealed by Session Laws 1981 (Regular Session, 1982), c. 1224, s. 10.

(3) The clerk or district court judge may determine that particular property is not exempt even though there has been no proceeding to designate the exemption.

(4) After judgment, except as provided in G.S. 1C-1603(a)(3) or when exemptions have already been designated, the clerk may not issue an execution or writ of possession unless notice from the court has been served upon the judgment debtor advising the debtor of the debtor's rights. The judgment creditor shall cause the notice, which shall be accompanied by the form for the statement by the debtor under subsection (c) of this section, to be served on the debtor as provided in G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4(j)(1). If the judgment debtor cannot be served as provided above, the judgment creditor may serve the judgment debtor by mailing a copy of the notice to the judgment debtor at the debtor's last known address. Proof of service by certified or registered mail or personal service is as provided in G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4. The judgment creditor may prove service by mailing to last known address by filing a certificate that the notice was served indicating the circumstances warranting the use of such service and the date and address of service. The notice shall be substantially in the following form:

My Commission Expires:

(d) Notice to Persons Affected. — If the judgment debtor moves to designate his exemptions, a copy of the motion and schedule must be served on the judgment creditor as provided in G.S. 1A-1, Rule 5.

(e) Procedure for Setting Aside Exempt Property. —

(1) When served with the notice provided in G.S. 1C-1603(a)(4), the judgment debtor may either file a motion to designate his exemptions with a schedule of assets or may request, in writing, a hearing before the clerk to claim exemptions.

(2) If the judgment debtor does not file a motion to designate exemptions with a schedule of assets within 20 days after notice of his rights was served in accordance with G.S. 1C-1603(a)(4) or if he does not request a hearing before the clerk within 20 days after service of the notice of rights and appear at the requested hearing, the judgment debtor has waived the exemptions provided in this Article and in Sections 1 and 2 of Article X of the North Carolina Constitution. Upon request of the judgment creditor, the clerk shall issue a writ of execution or writ of possession.

(3) If the judgment debtor moves to designate his exemptions by filing a motion and schedule of assets, the judgment creditor is served as provided in G.S. 1C-1603(d).

(4) If the judgment debtor requests a hearing before the clerk to claim exemptions, the clerk sets a hearing date and gives notice of the hearing to the judgment debtor and judgment creditor. At the hearing, the judgment debtor may claim his exemptions.

(5) The judgment creditor has 10 days from the date served with a motion and schedule of assets or from the date of a hearing to claim exemptions to file an objection to the judgment debtor's schedule of exemptions.

(6) If the judgment creditor files no objection to the schedule filed by the judgment debtor or claimed at the requested hearing, the clerk shall enter an order designating the property allowed by law and scheduled by the judgment debtor as exempt property. Upon request of the judgment creditor, the clerk shall issue an execution or writ of possession except for exempt property.

(7) If the judgment creditor objects to the schedule filed or claimed by the judgment debtor, the clerk must place the motion for hearing by the district court judge, without a jury, at the next civil session.

(8) The district court judge must determine the value of the property. The district court judge or the clerk, upon order of the judge, may appoint a qualified person to examine the property and report its value to the judge. Compensation of that person must be advanced by the person requesting the valuation and is a court cost having priority over the claims.

(9) The district court judge must enter an order designating exempt property. Supplemental reports and orders may be filed and entered as necessary to implement the order.

(10) Where the order designating exemptions indicates excess value in exempt property, the clerk, in an execution, may order the sale of property having excess value and appropriate distribution of the proceeds.

(11) The clerk or district court judge may permit a particular item of property having value in excess of the allowable exemption to be retained by the judgment debtor upon his making available to judgment creditors money or property not otherwise available to them in an amount equivalent to the excess value. Priorities of judgment creditors are the same in the substituted property as they were in the original property.

(12) Appeal from a designation of exempt property by the clerk is to the district court judge. A party has 10 days from the date of entry of an order to appeal. Appeal from a designation of exempt property by a district court judge is to the Court of Appeals. Decisions of the Court of Appeals with regard to questions of valuation of property are final as provided in G.S. 7A-28. Other questions may be appealed as provided in G.S. 7A-30 and 7A-31.

(f) Notation of Order on Judgment Docket. — A notation of the order setting aside exempt property must be entered by the clerk of court on the judgment docket opposite the judgment that was the subject of the enforcement proceeding. If real property located in a county other than the county in which the judgment was rendered is designated as exempt and the judgment has already been docketed in that county, the clerk must send a notice of the designation of exempt property to the county where the property is located. The clerk of the county where the land is located shall enter a notation of the designation of exempt property on the judgment docket. If a judgment is docketed in a county where real property is located after that real property has been designated as exempt, the transcript of judgment must indicate that the exemptions have been designated. The clerk in the county receiving the transcript must enter the notation of designation of exempt property as well as docket the judgment.

(g) Modification. — The debtor's exemption may be modified by motion in the original exemption proceeding by anyone who did not receive notice of the exemption hearing. Also, the debtor's exemption may be modified upon a change of circumstances, by motion in the original exemption proceeding, made by the debtor or anyone interested. A substantial change in value may constitute changed circumstances. Modification may include the substitution of different property for the exempt property.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2005-401, ss. 2 and 3, effective January 1, 2006, and applicable to judgments and bankruptcy petitions filed on or after that date, rewrote subdivision (a)(4) and subsection (c).

For article analyzing North Carolina's exemptions law, see 18 Wake Forest L. Rev. 1025 (1982).

CASE NOTES

Subdivision (e)(2) Unconstitutional. — Subsection (c) of G.S. 1C-1601 and subdivision (e)(2) of this section, as they attempt to limit the claiming of constitutional exemptions to 20 days after notice to designate is served, are unconstitutional. HFC v. Ellis, 107 N.C. App. 262, 419 S.E.2d 592 (1992), aff'd per curiam, 333 N.C. 786, 429 S.E.2d 716 (1993).

Failure to Comply with Procedural Requirements. — Debtors may not claim exemption rights in bankruptcy which they would not be entitled to under state law due to their failure to comply with state law procedural requirements, such as by failing to respond to the notice of right to have exemptions designated. In re McLamb, 93 Bankr. 72 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1988).

Requirement of Notice. — Notice is required before each execution. A single notice before the first execution is not sufficient. HFC v. Ellis, 107 N.C. App. 262, 419 S.E.2d 592 (1992), aff'd per curiam, 333 N.C. 786, 429 S.E.2d 716 (1993).

Failure to Give Notice or Opportunity to Be Heard. — Defendant who defaulted on original complaint which alleged that she was a resident of this State was entitled to notice of plaintiff's subsequent motion to declare that none of her property was exempt by virtue of nonresidency, and an opportunity to contest the factual allegations as to her nonresidency. Where she was given neither notice nor an opportunity to be heard, in violation of statutory and constitutional provisions, the order declaring that her property was not exempt was invalid, and she was entitled to relief therefrom pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 60(b)(4). First Union Nat'l Bank v. Rolfe, 83 N.C. App. 625, 351 S.E.2d 117 (1986).

Exemptions Available in Bankruptcy. — The legislature exercised its right to "opt out" of the federal bankruptcy exemptions law by adopting a statute which provides North Carolina citizens with a list of exemptions available to them, and precludes a debtor's use of the federal "laundry list" by expressly not authorizing its use. Thus the exemptions available to a North Carolina debtor in bankruptcy are those prescribed by G.S. 1C-1601, G.S. 1C-1602 and the exemptions, other than those in 11 U.S.C. § 522(d), afforded by federal law. Berry v. First-Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 33 Bankr. 351 (Bankr. W.D.N.C. 1983).

Execution and Waiver. — This statute requires that no execution be issued until a Notice to Designate Exemptions has been served and any waiver applies only to the particular execution issued. HFC v. Ellis, 107 N.C. App. 262, 419 S.E.2d 592 (1992), aff'd per curiam, 333 N.C. 786, 429 S.E.2d 716 (1993).

Relief from Waiver of Exemption in Bankruptcy. — Debtor who had waived his property exemption by failing to have his exempt property designated by motion within 20 days, as required by this section, was entitled to relief from such waiver under 11 U.S.C. § 522, which provides no specific time limit for filing exemption. North Carolina Baptist Hosps. v. Howell, 51 Bankr. 1015 (M.D.N.C. 1985).

Conflicts Between 11 U.S.C. § 522(l) and Time Limits Under State Law. — G.S. 1C-1601(c) and G.S. 1C-1603(e) severely undermine the effectiveness and limit the application of the federal bankruptcy provisions. The federal provision, 11 U.S.C. § 522(l), must be read independent of the state provision in order to resolve the inherent conflict between the two. There is no question that when a state law conflicts with a federal law, the former is preempted by the latter. The inconsistencies which exist between federal and state law should undoubtedly be resolved in favor of federal law. Thus, where a time limitation or a lack of time limitation in a federal provision is different from a provision in state legislation, the federal legislation controls. To hold otherwise, especially in the context of bankruptcy, would frustrate Congress' policy of giving debtors a new start. North Carolina Baptist Hosps. v. Howell, 51 Bankr. 1015 (M.D.N.C. 1985).

North Carolina law clearly requires individual to retain both ownership and use of residence if that person is to retain a homestead exemption. North Carolina's courts have failed to draw a distinction between bankruptcy debtors and civil judgment debtors when interpreting the statutory provision creating the homestead exemption. In re Love, 54 Bankr. 947 (E.D.N.C. 1985).

Interest of Creditor in Goods of Debtor Who Failed to Elect Exemption. — When debtor failed to make an election for an exemption under G.S. 1C-1601, allowing debtor to retain $2,500 (now $3,500) worth of household goods and furnishings free from judgment, there was no unfair or deceptive practice on the part of a creditor who took a nonpossessory, nonpurchase money security interest in debtor's household goods and furnishings, even if creditor failed to inform debtor that such an exemption was available. See Ken-Mar Fin. v. Harvey, 90 N.C. App. 362, 368 S.E.2d 646, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 365, 373 S.E.2d 542 (1988).

Manner of Allotment. — Where the debtor requested that the allotment of his homestead begin at a point at the front door of his dwelling, with the result that the entire area allotted was located in the hallway adjacent to the front door of the house, the fact that the allotment was useless to the debtor and impaired the value of the remaining property available for satisfaction of the creditor's judgment did not entitle the debtor to claim his exemption in the entire dwelling. Seeman Printery, Inc. v. Schinhan, 34 N.C. App. 637, 239 S.E.2d 744 (1977), appeal dismissed, 294 N.C. 442, 241 S.E.2d 844 (1978), decided under former Article 32 of Chapter 1.

Surplus Funds Arising From Foreclosure Sale. — A debtor has a property interest in surplus funds arising from a foreclosure sale; consequently, the interest becomes property of the estate upon filing of a petition for bankruptcy and the debtor may claim exemption in it to the extent permitted by law. In re Harris, 139 Bankr. 386 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1992).

As to consumer loan contract divesting debtor of property otherwise exempt, see Montford v. Grohman, 36 N.C. App. 733, 245 S.E.2d 219, appeal dismissed, 295 N.C. 551, 248 S.E.2d 727 (1978), decided under former Article 32 of Chapter 1.

Authority of District Court. — Although no specific statute grants a district court authority, when a matter relating to exemptions is transferred, pursuant to subsection (e)(7), from the clerk to the district court, the district court must be given the same general authority granted to a superior court pursuant to G.S. 1-276. Bromhal v. Stott, 119 N.C. App. 428, 458 S.E.2d 724 (1995).

Jurisdiction of District Court. — Once the issue of exemptions is properly before the district court, that court has jurisdiction to order the sale of exempt property having excess value, unless it would be more efficient to remand this issue to the clerk. Bromhal v. Stott, 119 N.C. App. 428, 458 S.E.2d 724 (1995).

Where debtors' interest in two adjacent lots exceeded the amount of the available exemption debtors could not protect their entire interest in both lots; because they exhibited no intention to protect one lot at the expense of losing the lot on which their house rested and, without sacrificing the lot with their home, could not have exempted the other lot from sale, they had no standing to challenge the sale of the other lot. Hollar v. United States, 188 Bankr. 539 (M.D.N.C. 1995), aff'd without op. 92 F.3d 1179 (4th Cir. 1996).

Findings As to Value of Stock Unsupported by Evidence. — In a G.S. 1C-1603(e) proceeding on an objection to a debtor's claimed exemption, a trial court failed to make sufficient findings as to how or by what methodology it concluded that the value of the debtor's stock in a development company was zero; there was no evidence supporting the trial court's finding that, purely as a result of pending litigation, the company had no value, and no authority permitted the trial court to base its allowance of a party's claim of exemption on the court's assessment of the equities between the parties rather than on the actual value of the property. Susi v. Aubin, 173 N.C. App. 608, 620 S.E.2d 682, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2093 (2005).

Applied in In re Love, 42 Bankr. 317 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1984); United States v. Scott, 45 Bankr. 318 (M.D.N.C. 1984).

Cited in In re Hare, 32 Bankr. 16 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 1983); First Union Nat'l Bank v. Rolfe, 90 N.C. App. 85, 367 S.E.2d 367 (1988).

(a) Property allocated to the debtor as exempt is free of the enforcement of the claims of creditors for indebtedness incurred before or after the exempt property is set aside, other than claims exempted by G.S. 1C-1601(e), for so long as the debtor owns it. When the property is conveyed to another, the exemption ceases as to liens attaching prior to the conveyance. Creation of a security interest in the property does not constitute a conveyance within the meaning of this section, but a transfer in satisfaction of, or for the enforcement of, a security interest is a conveyance. When exempt property is conveyed, the debtor may have other exemptions allotted.

(a1) The statute of limitations on judgments is suspended for the period of exemption as to the property which is exempt. However, the statute of limitations is not suspended as to the exempt property unless the judgment creditor shall have, prior to the expiration of the statute of limitations, recorded a copy of the order designating exempt property in the office of the register of deeds in the county where the exempt real property is located.

(b) Exempt property which passes by bequest, devise, intestate succession or gift to a dependent spouse, child or person to whom the debtor stands in loco parentis, continues to be exempt while held by that person. The exemption is terminated if the spouse remarries, or, with regard to a dependent, when the court determines that dependency no longer exists. (1981, c. 490, s. 1; 1991, c. 607, s. 2.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article analyzing North Carolina's exemptions law, see 18 Wake Forest L. Rev. 1025 (1982).

North Carolina law clearly requires individual to retain both ownership and use of residence if that person is to retain a homestead exemption. North Carolina's courts have failed to draw a distinction between bankruptcy debtors and civil judgment debtors when interpreting the statutory provision creating the homestead exemption. In re Love, 54 Bankr. 947 (E.D.N.C. 1985).

Ownership Interest Required. — Under North Carolina law, an individual must have an ownership interest in residential property in order to claim a homestead exemption in the property. Hollar v. United States, 184 Bankr. 25 (Bankr. M.D.N.C.), aff'd, 188 Bankr. 539 (M.D.N.C. 1995), aff'd, 92 F.3d 1179 (4th Cir. 1996).

Controlling Effect of 11 U.S.C. § 522(f). — There may be an inconsistency in the operation of the state exemption statute and the Bankruptcy Code due to the conditional nature of North Carolina exemptions. To the extent that there is any conflict between the operation of 11 U.S.C. § 522(f) and the state statute, the federal provision controls. In re Jackson, 55 Bankr. 343 (Bankr. M.D.N.C. 1985).

The provision of subsection (a) of this section limiting the homestead exemption to the duration of the debtor's actual residence in that place must not be applied in preference to the avoidance power of § 522(f) of the Bankruptcy Code. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Opperman, 943 F.2d 441 (4th Cir. 1991).

Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act.

§ 1C-1701. Short title.

This Article shall be known and may be cited as the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act. (1989, c. 747, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Applicability. — Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act, G.S. 1C-1701 et seq., did not apply to a North Carolina court giving full faith and credit to a Kentucky judgment, as action on the judgment was not being sought in North Carolina, but the judgment was being relied on as a bar to an insured's claim against an insurer. Freeman v. Pac. Life Ins. Co., 156 N.C. App. 583, 577 S.E.2d 184, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 190 (2003).

Authenticated Foreign Judgment. — In an action to enforce a foreign judgment under this Article of the General Statutes, in the absence of any evidence from the judgment debtor, the introduction of a properly authenticated foreign judgment is entitled the foreign judgment to full faith and credit. Lust v. Fountain of Life, Inc., 110 N.C. App. 298, 429 S.E.2d 435 (1993).

Presumption of Validity. — Once a judgment creditor was entitled to a presumption that an out of state judgment was entitled to full faith and credit, the plaintiff was not required, as the defendants suggested, to bring forth evidence that none of the defenses available to defendants were valid; rather the defendants were required to bring forth evidence to rebut the presumption of validity, and, as the defendants offered no such evidence, the trial court correctly ordered that the plaintiff's motion to enforce the judgment be allowed and ordered that the out of state judgment be given full faith and credit. Lust v. Fountain of Life, Inc., 110 N.C. App. 298, 429 S.E.2d 435 (1993).

Full Faith And Credit Dependent on Personal Jurisdiction. — An Alabama default judgment was not entitled to full faith and credit because the Alabama court which entered it lacked personal jurisdiction; the plaintiffs had failed to argue in the North Carolina trial court that the service by mail was adequate, and personal service on defendants's attorney was inadequate because it was not in writing and signed by the defendant and a credible witness. Moss v. Improved Benevolent & Protective Order of Elks, 139 N.C. App. 172, 532 S.E.2d 825, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 810 (2000).

App. LEXIS 331 (2000); Security Credit Leasing, Inc. v. D.J.'s of Salisbury, Inc., 140 N.C. App. 521, 537 S.E.2d 227, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1212 (2000).

As used in this Article, unless the context requires otherwise:

(1) "Foreign Judgment" means any judgment, decree, or order of a court of the United States or a court of any other state which is entitled to full faith and credit in this State, except a "child support order," as defined in G.S. 52C-1-101 (The Uniform Interstate Family Support Act), a "custody decree," as defined in G.S. 50A-102 (The Uniform Child-Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act), or a domestic violence protective order as provided in G.S. 50B-4(d).

(2) "Judgment Debtor" means the party against whom a foreign judgment has been rendered.

(3) "Judgment Creditor" means the party in whose favor a foreign judgment has been rendered. (1989, c. 747, s. 1; 1999-23, s. 3; 1999-223, s. 4.)

"Foreign Judgment." — Although the Israeli order in the husband and wife's divorce case was not a "foreign judgment" under the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act (UEFJA) because the order was not the order of a United States court or a state court, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to the wife and in recognizing that the husband owed a certain sum to the wife under the Israeli order; the wife made it clear in the wife's complaint that the wife was proceeding under the North Carolina Foreign Money-Judgments Recognition Act (NCFMJRA), which included in its definition of foreign state any governmental unit other than the United States, and thus the trial court could recognize the wife's rights under the NCFMJRA that would allow the wife to later pursue enforcement of the Israeli order under the UEFJA. Cotter v. Cotter, — N.C. App. —, 648 S.E.2d 552, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1809 (2007).

§ 1C-1703. Filing and status of foreign judgments.

(a) A copy of any foreign judgment authenticated in accordance with an act of Congress or the statutes of this State may be filed in the office of the clerk of superior court of any county of this State in which the judgment debtor resides, or owns real or personal property. Along with the foreign judgment, the judgment creditor or his attorney shall make and file with the clerk an affidavit which states that the foreign judgment is final and that it is unsatisfied in whole or in part, and which sets forth the amount remaining unpaid on the judgment.

(b) Upon the filing of the foreign judgment and the affidavit, the foreign judgment shall be docketed and indexed in the same manner as a judgment of this State; however, no execution shall issue upon the foreign judgment nor shall any other proceeding be taken for its enforcement until the expiration of 30 days from the date upon which notice of filing is served in accordance with G.S. 1C-1704.

(c) A judgment so filed has the same effect and is subject to the same defenses as a judgment of this State and shall be enforced or satisfied in like manner; provided however, if the judgment debtor files a motion for relief or notice of defense pursuant to G.S. 1C-1705, enforcement of the foreign judgment is automatically stayed, without security, until the court finally disposes of the matter. (1989, c. 747, s. 1.)

This section specifically sets out how and where the judgment must be filed, and the specific documents which must be served on the defendant, in G.S. 1C-1704(a). Sun Bank/South Fla. v. Tracy, 104 N.C. App. 608, 410 S.E.2d 509 (1991).

This Act's 30 day limitation is a "waiting period"—a restriction on when plaintiff creditors may act and not on when defendant debtors may not; the 30 day limitation period is not one barring a defendant debtor's response but instead the limitation period is specifically set to bar a plaintiff creditor from obtaining a foreign judgment against one of our state's citizens and then immediately (within 30 days) being able to enforce it without that defendant debtor being afforded the notice required by due process. Security Credit Leasing, Inc. v. D.J.'s of Salisbury, Inc., 140 N.C. App. 521, 537 S.E.2d 227, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1212 (2000).

Authenticated Foreign Judgment. — In an action to enforce a foreign judgment under this Article of the General Statutes, in the absence of any evidence from the judgment debtor, the introduction of a properly authenticated foreign judgment entitled the foreign judgment to full faith and credit. Lust v. Fountain of Life, Inc., 110 N.C. App. 298, 429 S.E.2d 435 (1993).

Enforcement of Foreign Judgments. — Foreign judgment that the judgment creditor obtained in New York was entitled to a presumption that the judgment was entitled to full faith and credit, as the judgment creditor met its burden of showing that entitlement by filing a properly authenticated judgment; however, the general contractor timely moved for relief from the foreign judgment by raising the defense that the New York trial court that entered it did not have personal jurisdiction over the general contractor, and because the trial court did not make any findings of fact or conclusions of law regarding the motion to enforce the judgment, the conclusion that the foreign judgment was enforceable in North Carolina was not supported by competent evidence and the case had to be remanded to the trial court for further proceedings. Quantum Corp. Funding, Ltd. v. B.H. Bryan Bldg. Co., 175 N.C. App. 483, 623 S.E.2d 793, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 187 (2006).

§ 1C-1704. Notice of filing; service.

(a) Promptly upon the filing of a foreign judgment and affidavit, the judgment creditor shall serve the notice of filing provided for in subsection (b) on the judgment debtor and shall attach thereto a filed-stamped copy of the foreign judgment and affidavit. Service and proof of service of the notice may be made in any manner provided for in Rule 4(j) of the Rules of Civil Procedure.

(b) The notice shall set forth the name and address of the judgment creditor, of his attorney if any, and of the clerk's office in which the foreign judgment is filed in this State, and shall state that the judgment attached thereto has been filed in that office, that the judgment debtor has 30 days from the date of receipt of the notice to seek relief from the enforcement of the judgment, and that if the judgment is not satisfied and no such relief is sought within that 30 days, the judgment will be enforced in this State in the same manner as any judgment of this State. (1989, c. 747, s. 1.)

Service and proof of service of the notice may be made in any manner provided for in Rule 4(j) of the Rules of Civil Procedure. Sun Bank/South Fla. v. Tracy, 104 N.C. App. 608, 410 S.E.2d 509 (1991).

dant debtors may not; the 30 day limitation period is not one barring a defendant debtor's response but instead the limitation period is specifically set to bar a plaintiff creditor from obtaining a foreign judgment against one of our state's citizens and then immediately (within 30 days) being able to enforce it without that defendant debtor being afforded the notice required by due process. § 1C-1705. Defenses; procedure; stay.

(a) The judgment debtor may file a motion for relief from, or notice of defense to, the foreign judgment on the grounds that the foreign judgment has been appealed from, or enforcement has been stayed by, the court which rendered it, or on any other ground for which relief from a judgment of this State would be allowed. Notwithstanding subsection (b) of this section, the court shall stay enforcement of the foreign judgment for an appropriate period if the judgment debtor shows that:

(1) The foreign judgment has been stayed by the court that rendered it; or

(2) An appeal from the foreign judgment is pending or the time for taking an appeal has not expired and the judgment debtor executes a written undertaking in the same manner and amount as would be required in the case of a judgment entered by a court of this State under G.S. 1-289.

(b) If the judgment debtor has filed a motion for relief or notice of defenses then the judgment creditor may move for enforcement of the foreign judgment as a judgment of this State, unless the court stays enforcement of the judgment under subsection (a) of this section. The judgment creditor's motion shall be heard before a judge of the trial division which would be the proper division for the trial of an action in which the amount in controversy is the same as the amount remaining unpaid on the foreign judgment. The Rules of Civil Procedure (G.S. 1A-1) shall apply. The judgment creditor shall have the burden of proving that the foreign judgment is entitled to full faith and credit. (1989, c. 747, s. 1; 2003-19, s. 2.)

Grounds for Attacking Foreign Judgment. — A judgment of another state may be attacked in this state only on grounds of fraud, public policy, or lack of jurisdiction. Reinwand v. Swiggett, 107 N.C. App. 590, 421 S.E.2d 367 (1992).

Once a creditor establishes, under G.S. 1C-1705(b), that a foreign judgment is entitled to full faith and credit, the judgment may only be attacked on the grounds of fraud, public policy, or lack of jurisdiction; no authority permitted a district court to base its allowance of a party's claim of exemption on the court's assessment of the equities between the parties rather than on the actual value of the property. Susi v. Aubin, 173 N.C. App. 608, 620 S.E.2d 682, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2093 (2005).

Judicial Review of Foreign Judgment. — Review of the jurisdiction of a court rendering a judgment is limited to determining if the issues were indeed fully and fairly litigated. Reinwand v. Swiggett, 107 N.C. App. 590, 421 S.E.2d 367 (1992).

Enforcement of Foreign Judgments. — Although the Israeli order in the husband and wife's divorce case was not a "foreign judgment" under the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act (UEFJA) because the order was not the order of a United States court or a state court, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to the wife and in recognizing that the husband owed a certain sum to the wife under the Israeli order; the wife made it clear in the wife's complaint that the wife was proceeding under the North Carolina Foreign Money-Judgments Recognition Act (NCFMJRA), which included in its definition of foreign state any governmental unit other than the United States, and thus the trial court could recognize the wife's rights under the NCFMJRA that would allow the wife to later pursue enforcement of the Israeli order under the UEFJA. Cotter v. Cotter, — N.C. App. —, 648 S.E.2d 552, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1809 (2007).

Contesting Jurisdictional Issues. — For full faith and credit purposes, appearing specially to contest jurisdictional issues constitutes litigation of those issues. Reinwand v. Swiggett, 107 N.C. App. 590, 421 S.E.2d 367 (1992).

Foreign judgment that the judgment creditor obtained in New York was entitled to a presumption that the judgment was entitled to full faith and credit, as the judgment creditor met its burden of showing that entitlement by filing a properly authenticated judgment; however, the general contractor timely moved for relief from the foreign judgment by raising the defense that the New York trial court that entered it did not have personal jurisdiction over the general contractor, and because the trial court did not make any findings of fact or conclusions of law regarding the motion to enforce the judgment, the conclusion that the foreign judgment was enforceable in North Carolina was not supported by competent evidence and the case had to be remanded to the trial court for further proceedings. Quantum Corp. Funding, Ltd. v. B.H. Bryan Bldg. Co., 175 N.C. App. 483, 623 S.E.2d 793, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 187 (2006).

Contractual Provisions Prevented Surety from Claiming Lack of Personal Jurisdiction. — The Virginia court had personal jurisdiction over the defendant/surety who executed a contract guaranteeing immediate payment if the corporation failed to satisfy the debt owed the plaintiff and affirming the plaintiff's forum clause. United Leasing Corp. v. Plumides, 138 N.C. App. 696, 531 S.E.2d 891, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 793 (2000).

Where Jurisdiction Fully and Fairly Litigated. — Upon a finding that the issue of jurisdiction was fully and fairly litigated, constitutional federal principles preclude their relitigation elsewhere. Reinwand v. Swiggett, 107 N.C. App. 590, 421 S.E.2d 367 (1992).

Where the issue of personal jurisdiction was fully and fairly litigated in the Alaska court, defendant was precluded from relitigating the issue in the courts of North Carolina. Reinwand v. Swiggett, 107 N.C. App. 590, 421 S.E.2d 367 (1992).

Alaska Judgment. — For a case holding that plaintiff met his burden of proving that a judgment of the state courts of Alaska was entitled to full faith and credit, see Reinwand v. Swiggett, 107 N.C. App. 590, 421 S.E.2d 367 (1992).

Florida Judgment. — Creditor's 2006 motion under the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act (UEFJA) to register a 2005 Florida judgment against the debtors in North Carolina was timely filed within the 10-year period under G.S. 1-47 because the creditor timely filed a new action in Florida in 2005 in accordance with the 20-year period under Fla. Stat. § 95.11(1) to start the limitation period anew, the creditor's 1990 judgment was extinguished by the 2005 judgment, and the UEFJA action was based on the 2005 judgment and not the 1990 judgment. Palm Coast Recovery Corp. v. Moore, — N.C. App. —, 646 S.E.2d 438, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1466 (2007).

Texas Judgment. — Trial court properly granted motion to enforce Texas judgment as a North Carolina judgment where the Texas judgment was well within the time limitation for enforcement of foreign judgments and the Texas judgment merely apportioned damages between parties and was not a separate action for contribution. In re Aerial Devices, Inc., 126 N.C. App. 709, 486 S.E.2d 463 (1997).

Trial court's factual findings on judgment debtor's claim that judgment debtor did not sign an agreed judgment which a corporation filed in Texas and sought to enforce in North Carolina were insufficient and the appellate court vacated the trial court's judgment in favor of the judgment debtor and remanded the case for further proceedings. HCA Health Servs. of Tex., Inc. v. Reddix, 151 N.C. App. 659, 566 S.E.2d 754, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 876 (2002).

The enforcement of a foreign judgment under this Article shall be subject to the costs and fees set forth in Article 28 of Chapter 7A of the General Statutes. The amount remaining unpaid on the foreign judgment as set forth in the affidavit filed under G.S. 1C-1703(b) shall determine the amount of the costs to be collected at the time of the filing of the foreign judgment and assessed pursuant to G.S. 7A-305. (1989, c. 747, s. 1.)

§ 1C-1707. Optional procedure.

This Article may not be construed to impair a judgment creditor's right to bring a civil action in this State to enforce such creditor's judgment. (1989, c. 747, s. 1.)

§ 1C-1708. Judgments against public policy.

The provisions of this Article shall not apply to foreign judgments based on claims which are contrary to the public policies of North Carolina. (1989, c. 747, s. 1.)

North Carolina Foreign Money Judgments Recognition Act.

As used in this Article:

(1) "Foreign judgment" means any judgment of a foreign state granting or denying recovery of a sum of money, other than a judgment for taxes, a fine or other penalty, or a judgment for support in matrimonial or family matters.

(2) "Foreign state" means any governmental unit other than the United States, any state, district, commonwealth, territory, insular possession thereof, the Panama Canal Zone, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, or the Ryukyu Islands. (1993, c. 188, s. 1.)

"Foreign Judgment." — Although the Israeli order in the husband and wife's divorce case was not a "foreign judgment" under the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act (UEFJA) because the order was not the order of a United States court or a state court, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to the wife and in recognizing that the husband owed a certain sum to the wife under the Israeli order; the wife made it clear in the wife's complaint that the wife was proceeding under the North Carolina Foreign Money-Judgments Recognition Act (NCFMJRA), which included in its definition of foreign state any governmental unit other than the United States, and thus the trial court could recognize the wife's rights under the NCFMJRA that would allow the wife to later pursue enforcement of the Israeli order under the UEFJA. Cotter v. Cotter, — N.C. App. —, 648 S.E.2d 552, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1809 (2007).

§ 1C-1802. Applicability of Article.

This Article applies to any foreign judgment that is final and conclusive and enforceable where rendered even though an appeal of the judgment is pending or the judgment is subject to appeal. (1993, c. 188, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Enforcement of Foreign Judgments. — Although the Israeli order in the husband and wife's divorce case was not a "foreign judgment" under the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act (UEFJA) because the order was not the order of a United States court or a state court, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to the wife and in recognizing that the husband owed a certain sum to the wife under the Israeli order; the wife made it clear in the wife's complaint that the wife was proceeding under the North Carolina Foreign Money-Judgments Recognition Act (NCFMJRA), which included in its definition of foreign state any governmental unit other than the United States, and thus the trial court could recognize the wife's rights under the NCFMJRA that would allow the wife to later pursue enforcement of the Israeli order under the UEFJA. Cotter v. Cotter, — N.C. App. —, 648 S.E.2d 552, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1809 (2007).

§ 1C-1803. Recognition and enforcement.

Except as provided in G.S. 1C-1804, a foreign judgment meeting the requirements of G.S. 1C-1802 is conclusive between the parties to the extent that it grants or denies recovery of a sum of money. The foreign judgment is enforceable in the manner set forth in Article 17 of this Chapter. The defenses available to a judgment debtor under G.S. 1C-1804 may be asserted by the judgment debtor in the manner set forth in G.S. 1C-1705. (1993, c. 188, s. 1.)

Enforcement of Foreign Judgments. — Although the Israeli order in the husband and wife's divorce case was not a "foreign judgment" under the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act (UEFJA) because the order was not the order of a United States court or a state court, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to the wife and in recognizing that the husband owed a certain sum to the wife under the Israeli order; the wife made it clear in the wife's complaint that the wife was proceeding under the North Carolina Foreign Money-Judgments Recognition Act (NCFMJRA), which included in its definition of foreign state any governmental unit other than the United States, and thus the trial court could recognize the wife's rights under the NCFMJRA that would allow the wife to later pursue enforcement of the Israeli order under the UEFJA. Cotter v. Cotter, — N.C. App. —, 648 S.E.2d 552, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1809 (2007).

§ 1C-1804. Grounds for nonrecognition.

(a) A foreign judgment is not conclusive if:
  (1) The judgment was rendered under a system that does not provide impartial tribunals or procedures compatible with the requirements of due process of law;
  (2) The foreign court did not have personal jurisdiction over the defendant; or
  (3) The foreign judgment did not have jurisdiction over the subject matter.
(b) A foreign judgment need not be recognized if:
  (1) The defendant in the proceedings in the foreign court did not receive notice of the proceedings in sufficient time to enable the presentation of a defense;
  (2) The judgment was obtained by fraud;
  (3) The cause of action on which the judgment is based is repugnant to the public policy of this State;
  (4) The judgment conflicts with another final and conclusive judgment;
  (5) The proceedings in the foreign court were contrary to an agreement between the parties under which the dispute in question was to be settled out of court;
  (6) In the case of jurisdiction based on personal service, the foreign court was a seriously inconvenient forum for the trial of the action; or
  (7) The foreign court rendering the judgment would not recognize a comparable judgment of this State. (1993, c. 188, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Application of Act. — Defendant's contention, that the North Carolina Foreign Money Judgments Recognition Act had nothing to do with the facts of the case because defendant was not seeking to enforce his Honduran judgment in North Carolina, was unavailing; the Act does not govern the enforcement of foreign judgments, but pertains only to whether a court should recognize the judgment. Pursuant to G.S. 1C-1804(b)(5), the court did not need to recognize the Honduran judgments. VF Jeanswear Ltd. P'ship v. Molina, 320 F. Supp. 2d 412, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10810 (M.D.N.C. 2004).

Although the Israeli order in the husband and wife's divorce case was not a "foreign judgment" under the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act (UEFJA) because the order was not the order of a United States court or a state court, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to the wife and in recognizing that the husband owed a certain sum to the wife under the Israeli order; the wife made it clear in the wife's complaint that the wife was proceeding under the North Carolina Foreign Money-Judgments Recognition Act (NCFMJRA), which included in its definition of foreign state any governmental unit other than the United States, and thus the trial court could recognize the wife's rights under the NCFMJRA that would allow the wife to later pursue enforcement of the Israeli order under the UEFJA. Cotter v. Cotter, — N.C. App. —, 648 S.E.2d 552, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1809 (2007).

Factual Findings by Trial Court; Insufficient. — Trial court's factual findings on judgment debtor's claim that judgment debtor did not sign an agreed judgment which a corporation filed in Texas and sought to enforce in North Carolina, pursuant to North Carolina's Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act, G.S. 1C-1701 to 1C-1708 (2001), were insufficient. HCA Health Servs. of Tex., Inc. v. Reddix, 151 N.C. App. 659, 566 S.E.2d 754, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 876 (2002).

Foreign judgment that the judgment creditor obtained in New York was entitled to a presumption that the judgment was entitled to full faith and credit, as the judgment creditor met its burden of showing that entitlement by filing a properly authenticated judgment; however, the general contractor timely moved for relief from the foreign judgment by raising the defense that the New York trial court that entered it did not have personal jurisdiction over the general contractor, and because the trial court did not make any findings of fact or conclusions of law regarding the motion to enforce the judgment, the conclusion that the foreign judgment was enforceable in North Carolina was not supported by competent evidence and the case had to be remanded to the trial court for further proceedings. Quantum Corp. Funding, Ltd. v. B.H. Bryan Bldg. Co., 175 N.C. App. 483, 623 S.E.2d 793, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 187 (2006).

§ 1C-1805. Basis for personal jurisdiction.

(a) The foreign judgment shall not be refused recognition for lack of personal jurisdiction if:

(1) The defendant was served personally in the foreign state;

(2) The defendant voluntarily appeared in the proceedings, other than for the purpose of protecting property seized or threatened with seizure in the proceeding or of contesting the jurisdiction of the court over the defendant;

(3) The defendant, prior to the commencement of the proceedings, had agreed to submit to the jurisdiction of the foreign court with respect to the subject matter involved;

(4) The defendant was domiciled in the foreign state when the proceedings were instituted, or, being a body corporate had its principal place of business, was incorporated, or had otherwise acquired corporate status, in the foreign state;

(5) The defendant had a business office in the foreign state, and the proceedings in the foreign court involved a cause of action arising out of business done by the defendant through that office in the foreign state; or

(6) The defendant operated a motor vehicle or airplane in the foreign state and the proceedings involved a cause of action arising out of such operation.

(b) The courts of this State may recognize other bases of jurisdiction. (1993, c. 188, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Consent to Personal Jurisdiction. — Foreign judgment that the judgment creditor obtained in New York was entitled to a presumption that the judgment was entitled to full faith and credit, as the judgment creditor met its burden of showing that entitlement by filing a properly authenticated judgment; however, the general contractor timely moved for relief from the foreign judgment by raising the defense that the New York trial court that entered it did not have personal jurisdiction over the general contractor, and because the trial court did not make any findings of fact or conclusions of law regarding the motion to enforce the judgment, the conclusion that the foreign judgment was enforceable in North Carolina was not supported by competent evidence and the case had to be remanded to the trial court for further proceedings. Quantum Corp. Funding, Ltd. v. B.H. Bryan Bldg. Co., 175 N.C. App. 483, 623 S.E.2d 793, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 187 (2006).

Foreign Judgment Supported by Contractual Agreement to Submit to Jurisdiction. — The Virginia court had personal jurisdiction over the defendant/surety who executed a contract guaranteeing immediate payment if the corporation failed to satisfy the debt owed the plaintiff and affirming the plaintiff's forum clause. United Leasing Corp. v. Plumides, 138 N.C. App. 696, 531 S.E.2d 891, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 793 (2000).

§ 1C-1806. Stay pending an appeal.

If the defendant satisfies the court either that an appeal is pending or that the defendant is entitled and intends to appeal from the foreign judgment, the court may stay the proceedings until the appeal has been determined or until the expiration of a period of time sufficient to enable the defendant to prosecute the appeal. (1993, c. 188, s. 1.)

§ 1C-1807. Situations not covered by Article.

This Article does not prevent the recognition of foreign judgments in situations not covered by this Article. (1993, c. 188, s. 1; 1995, c. 509, s. 1.)

The North Carolina Foreign-Money Claims Act.

Editor's Note. — Permission to include the Official Comments was granted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws and The American Law Institute. It is believed that the Official Comments will prove of value to the practitioner in understanding and applying the text of this Chapter.

As used in this Article:

(1) "Action" means a judicial proceeding or arbitration in which a payment in money may be awarded or enforced with respect to a foreign-money claim.

(2) "Bank-offered spot rate" means the spot rate of exchange at which a bank will sell foreign money at a spot rate.

(3) "Conversion date" means the banking day next preceding the date on which money, in accordance with this Article, is:
   a. Paid to a claimant in an action or distribution proceeding;
   b. Paid to the official designated by law to enforce a judgment or award on behalf of a claimant; or
   c. Used to recoup, set off, or counterclaim in different moneys in an action or distribution proceeding.

(4) "Distribution proceeding" means a judicial or nonjudicial proceeding for the distribution of a fund in which one or more foreign-money claims is asserted and includes an accounting, an assignment for the benefit of creditors, a foreclosure, the liquidation or rehabilitation of a corporation or other entity, and the distribution of an estate, trust, or other fund.

(5) "Foreign money" means money other than money of the United States.

(6) "Foreign-money claim" means a claim upon an obligation to pay, or a claim for recovery of a loss, expressed in or measured by a foreign money.

(7) "Money" means a medium of exchange for the payment of obligations or a store of value authorized or adopted by a government or by intergovernmental agreement.

(8) "Money of the claim" means the money determined as proper for payment of the claim pursuant to G.S. 1C-1823.

(9) "Person" means an individual, a corporation, government or governmental subdivision or agency, business trust, estate, trust, joint venture, partnership, association, two or more persons having a joint or common interest, or any other legal or commercial entity.

(10) "Rate of exchange" means the rate at which money of one country may be converted into money of another country in a free financial market convenient to or reasonably usable by a person obligated to pay or to state a rate of conversion. "Rate of exchange" means, if separate rates of exchange apply to different kinds of transactions, the rate applicable to the particular transaction giving rise to the foreign-money claim.

(11) "Spot rate" means the rate of exchange at which foreign money is sold by a bank or other dealer in foreign exchange for immediate or next day availability or for settlement by immediate payment in cash or its equivalent, by charge to an account, or by an agreed delayed settlement not exceeding two days.

OFFICIAL COMMENT

1. "Action." A suit or arbitration may be legal or equitable in nature, but it must be based on a pecuniary claim.

2. "Bank-offered spot rate" is the rate at which a bank will sell the requisite amount of foreign money for immediate or nearly immediate use by the buyer.

3. "Conversion date." Exchange rates may fluctuate from day to day. A date must be picked for calculating the value of foreign money in terms of United States dollars. As used in the Act, "conversion date" means the day before a foreign-money claim is paid or set-off. The day refers to the time period of the place of the payor, not necessarily that of the recipient. The exchange rate prevailing at or near the close of business on the banking day before the day payment is made will be well known at the time of payment. See Comment 2 to Section 7.

4. "Distribution proceeding." In keeping with the concept underlying Section 2, the coverage of this statute is limited to judicial actions and nonjudicial proceedings which involve the creation of a fund from which pro-rata distributions are made to claimants. As provided in Section 8, a different conversion date is required where either input to or outgo from a fund involves two or more different moneys. Thus, the term includes a mortgage foreclosure proceeding, judicial or under a trust deed, distribution of property in divorce and child support proceedings, distributions in the administration of a trust or a decedent's estate, an assignment for the benefit of creditors, an equity receivership, a liquidation by a statutory successor, a voluntary dissolution of a business or a nonprofit enterprise or the like when in each case a fund must be shared among claimants and where, usually, the fund will not satisfy all claimants of the same class. An asset or a liability of the fund must also involve one or more foreign-money claims, but not all of the claims can be in the same money.

5. "Foreign money." Since only the federal government has the power to coin money and regulate the value thereof, the term "foreign" means a government other than that of the United States of America. Special Drawing Rights of the International Monetary Fund are foreign money even though the United States is a member of the Fund. Foreign governments included are all those whose moneys are, in the currency markets of the world, exchangeable for the money of other currencies even though the government is not recognized by the United States.

6. "Foreign-money claim." The term "claim" is not limited to any one party to an action or a distribution proceeding and may be asserted by a plaintiff or a defendant or by a party to an arbitration or distribution proceeding. It may be based on a foreign judgment, or sound in contract, quasi-contract, or tort.

7. "Money." The definition includes composite currencies such as European Currency Units created by agreement of the governments that are members of the European Monetary System or the Special Drawing Rights created under the auspices of the International Money Fund. These are "stores of value" used to determine the quantity of payment in some international transactions.

8. "Money of the claim." See Section 4 and the Comment thereto.

9. "Party." This combines the Uniform Commercial Code's definitions of "person" and "organization," but is limited to those who are parties to transactions or involved in events which could give rise to a foreign-money claim.

10. "Rate of Exchange." A free market rate is to be used rather than an official rate if both exist. Some countries have transactional differences in exchange rates with slightly different rates; for example, in Belgium one rate prevails for commercial and another for financial transactions. Both rates are recognized in money market transactions. The last sentence of the definition indicates that the rate appropriate to the transaction is the rate to be used.

11. "Spot rate" is the term used in the financial markets of the United States for the rate of exchange for immediate or nearly immediate transfers from one money to another, as distinguished from the rates for future options or future deliveries.

In the foreign exchange markets, as in the stock markets, quotations are either "bid" or "ask," and the spread between is where the dealer makes a profit. An "offered spot rate" is the rate at which the offeror will sell the particular money. It is, of course, higher than the rate at which that person will buy the same money. "Spot" refers to the time the trade is made, not the time for settlement, which in spot transactions is often two days after the date of the trade.

12. "State." The definition, as in other Uniform Laws, is extended to include areas given the same, or nearly the same, treatment in law as the states.

§ 1C-1821. Scope of Article.

(a) This Article applies only to a foreign-money claim in an action or distribution proceeding.

(b) This Article applies to foreign-money issues even if other law under the conflict of laws rules of this State applies to other issues in the action or distribution proceeding. (1995, c. 213, s. 1.)

Under the rules of the conflict of laws, the determination of when a foreign money is converted to United States dollars is generally considered a procedural matter for the law of the forum. Subsection (b) removes any doubt.

§ 1C-1822. Variation by agreement.

(a) The effect of this Article may be varied by agreement of the parties made before or after commencement of an action or distribution proceeding or the entry of judgment.

(b) Parties to a transaction may agree upon the money to be used in a transaction giving rise to a foreign-money claim and may agree to use different moneys for different aspects of the transaction. Stating the price in a foreign money for one aspect of a transaction does not alone require the use of that money for other aspects of the transaction. (1995, c. 213, s. 1.)

1. A basic policy of the Act is to preserve freedom of contract and to permit parties to resolve disputed matters by contract at any time, even as to choice of law problems. The parties may agree upon the date and time for conversion. After entry of judgment the parties may agree upon how the judgment is to be satisfied.

2. Subsection (b) covers cases where, for example, claims for petroleum may be settled in United States dollars but settlement for joint costs of exploration may be in pounds sterling. The parties also may agree on the money to be used for damages. The second sentence recognizes that a price stated in a particular money does not indicate, without more evidence, an intent that all damages from breach are to be in the same money. The principle of freedom of contract allows the parties to allocate the risks of currency fluctuations between foreign moneys as they desire. Sections 4 and 5 provide rules in the absence of special agreements by the parties for determining the money to be used. Parties may by agreement select a particular market or foreign exchange dealer to be used for exchange purposes.

(a) The money in which the parties to a transaction have agreed that payment is to be made is the proper money of the claim for payment.

(b) If the parties to a transaction have not otherwise agreed, the proper money of the claim, as in each case may be appropriate, is the money:

(1) Regularly used between the parties as a matter of usage or course of dealing;

(2) Used at the time of a transaction in international trade, by trade usage or common practice, for valuing or settling transactions in the particular commodity or service involved; or

(3) In which the loss was ultimately felt or will be incurred by the party claimant. (1995, c. 213, s. 1.)

1. Subsection (a) uses "payment" in a broad sense not related to just the price, but to any obligation arising out of a contract to transfer money. See also Section 3(b).

2. Subsection (b) states rules to fill gaps in the agreement of the parties with rules as to the allocation of risks of fluctuations in exchange rates. The three rules will normally apply in the order stated. Prior dealings may indicate the desired money. If there are none, it is appropriate to use the money indicated by trade usage or custom for transactions of like kind. The final rule of subsection (a) is one established in English cases. See The Despina R and the Folias (1979) A.C. 685. An example is the use of an operating account in United States dollars by a French company to buy Japanese yen for ship repairs; the loss is felt in the depletion of the dollar bank account. Appropriateness of a rule is to be determined by the judge from the facts of the case. See Section 6(d).

§ 1C-1824. Determining amount of the money of certain contract claims.

(a) If an amount contracted to be paid in a foreign money is measured by a specified amount of a different money, the amount to be paid shall be determined on the conversion date.

(b) If an amount contracted to be paid in a foreign money is to be measured by a different money at the rate of exchange prevailing on a date before default, that rate of exchange applies only to payments made within a reasonable time after default, not exceeding 30 days. Thereafter, conversion is made at the bank-offered spot rate on the conversion date.

(c) A monetary claim is neither usurious nor unconscionable for the reason that the agreement on which it is based provides that the amount of the debtor's obligation to be paid in the debtor's money, when received by the creditor, must equal a specified amount of the foreign money of the country of the creditor. If, because of unexcused delay in payment of a judgment or award, the amount received by the creditor does not equal the amount of the foreign money specified in the agreement, the court or arbitrator shall amend the judgment or award accordingly. (1995, c. 213, s. 1.)

1. Subsections (a) and (b) cover different interpretation problems. One arises where the amount of the money to be paid is measured by another money, one of which is foreign. An example is "pay 5,000 Swiss francs in pounds sterling." The issue is the time at which the rate of exchange into pounds sterling is to be applied. Subsection (a) says in a "measured by" situation with no rate specified, the rate of exchange that controls is the one prevailing at or near the close of business on the day before the day of payment. See Section 1(2), the definition of "conversion date."

2. Another problem arises when an exchange rate in effect before a default is used, as in "pay on November 30, 1989, 5,000 Swiss francs in pounds sterling at the exchange rate prevailing on June 30, 1989." In this case, the issue is how long does the specified exchange rate control in the absence of a clear expression of intent?

Inclusion of a fixed rate as of a date before default, under subsection (b), remains effective only if payment is made within a reasonable time after default, not to exceed 30 days. The 30-day limitation accords usually with the expectation of the parties. Parties may agree to a longer time.

3. The most common application of subsection (c) will be found in international loan transactions. For example, a loan by a Japanese bank to an American company could be made with dollars purchased by yen for the purpose. The loan agreement could provide for repayment in dollars of an amount which, when received by the lender, would repurchase the amount of yen used to acquire the dollars advanced.

An exemption is needed from the application of usury laws that may be interpreted to hold that the indexing of the principal amount creates additional interest. See Aztec Properties, Inc. v. Union Planters National Bank, 530 S.W.2d 756 (Tenn. Sup. Ct. 1975). The subsection removes all doubts as to the legal enforceability of such agreements under theories such as usury, merger in a judgment, unconscionability, or the like.

§ 1C-1825. Asserting and defending foreign-money claims.

(a) A person may assert a claim in a specified foreign money. If a foreign-money claim is not asserted, the claimant shall make the claim in United States dollars.

(b) An opposing party may allege and prove that a claim, in whole or in part, is in a different money than that asserted by the claimant.

(c) A person may assert a defense, setoff, recoupment, or counterclaim in any money without regard to the money of other claims.

1. Subsection (a) covers not only the claim of a plaintiff but also the assertion by a defendant of a defense, set-off, or counterclaim. Subsection (b) provides that the money asserted as the money of its defenses by the defendant need not be the same as that of the plaintiff.

2. The money to be used as the money of the claim is a threshold issue to be determined, if contested, by the court after any factual issues as to expenditures, custom, usage, or course of dealing are decided. See subsection (b). If a payment is made or a debt incurred in a money other than that in which the loss was felt, the party asserting the foreign-money claim should establish the amount of the money of the claim used to procure the money of expenditure and the applicable exchange rate used.

3. Judgments may be entered in more than one money when dealings impact on more than one area. An inn-keeper in Mexico, for example, in taking in customers from many countries, should be held to foresee that treatment for injuries at the inn would occur not only in Mexico, but also in the native land of the injured party or in a third country.

§ 1C-1826. Judgments and awards on foreign-money claims, times of money conversion; form of judgments.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (c) of this section, a judgment or award on a foreign-money claim must be stated in an amount of the money of the claim.

(b) A judgment or award on a foreign-money claim is payable in that foreign money or, at the option of the debtor, in the amount of United States dollars that will purchase that foreign money on the conversion date at a bank-offered spot rate.

(c) A judgment or award on a foreign-money claim shall assess costs in United States dollars.

(d) Each payment in United States dollars shall be accepted and credited on a judgment or award on a foreign-money claim in the amount of the foreign money that could be purchased by the dollars at a bank-offered spot rate of exchange at or near the close of business on the conversion date for that payment.

(e) A judgment or award made in an action or distribution proceeding on:

(1) A defense, setoff, recoupment, or counterclaim, and

(2) The adverse party's claim

shall be netted by converting the money of the smaller into the money of the larger, and by subtracting the smaller from the larger and shall specify the rates of exchange used.

(f) A judgment substantially in the following form satisfies the provisions of this section:

"It is ORDERED, ADJUDGED, AND DECREED that defendant (insert name) pay to Plaintiff (insert name) the sum of (insert amount in the foreign money) plus interest on that sum at the rate of (insert rate pursuant to G.S. 1C-1828) percent a year or, at the option of the judgment debtor, the number of United States dollars that will purchase the (insert name of foreign money) with interest due, at a bank-offered spot rate at or near the close of business on the banking day next before the day of payment, together with assessed costs of (insert amount) United States dollars."

(g) If a contract claim is of the type covered by G.S. 1C-1824(a) or G.S. 1C-1824(b), the judgment or award shall be entered for the amount of money stated to measure the obligation to be paid in the money specified for payment or, at the option of the debtor, the number of United States dollars that will purchase the computed amount of the money of payment on the conversion date at a bank-offered spot rate.

(h) A judgment shall be filed, docketed, and indexed in foreign money in the same manner as other judgments and has the same effect as a lien. A judgment may be discharged by payment.

(i) A party seeking enforcement of a judgment entered as provided in this section shall file with each request or application an affidavit or certificate executed in good faith by its counsel or a bank officer, stating the rate of exchange used and how it was obtained and setting forth the calculation and the amount of United States dollars that would satisfy the judgment on the date of the affidavit or certificate by applying that rate of exchange. Affected court officials shall incur no liability, after a filing of the affidavit or certificate, for acting as if the judgment were in the amount of United States dollars stated in the affidavit or certificate. The computation contained in the affidavit or certificate shall remain in effect for 90 days following the filing of the affidavit or certificate and may be recomputed before the expiration of 90 days by filing additional affidavits or certificates. Recomputation shall not affect any payment obtained before the filing of the recomputation.

1. Subsection (a) changes a number of statutes in the states which can be construed to require all values in legal proceedings to be expressed in United States dollars. Professor Brand, in his article in the Yale Journal of International Law, Vol. 11:139 at page 169, identified 18 states having statutes which could require all judgments to be entered in dollars. They are Arkansas, California, Idaho, Iowa, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan, Montana, Nevada, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, South Carolina, Tennessee, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, and Wisconsin. Brand, ibid. fn. 166. Hence, direct statutory authority must be given the courts in those states, and will be helpful in other states. In some states other statutes may need amendments. See, e.g., Wisc. Stats. §§ 138.01, 138.02, 138.03, and 779.05.

2. Subsection (d) gives defendants the option of paying in dollars which are, at the payment date, practically the economic equivalent of the foreign money awarded. The judgment creditor should be indifferent to whether the debtor exercises the right to pay in dollars as the only difference is a small bank charge for exchanging the dollars for the foreign money. The concept of the rate of the banking day next before the payment day is taken from Section 131 of the Province of Ontario, Canada, Courts of Justice Act (Ch. 11 Ont. Stats. (1984) as recently amended). It gives the defendant and the sheriff conducting the sale the necessary conversion rate comfortably ahead of its use. Newspaper quotations are usually said to be ‘at or near the close of business‘ on the stated date, so that phrase is used in this Act.

3. Subsection (e) provides for netting the affirmative recoveries of a defendant and plaintiff, whether in the same money or in different moneys, but preserving the quantum of each for appellate purposes. The theory is that when claims are reduced to money, they become mutual debts and should be set-off, so that a person's exchange rate fluctuation risk continues only for the surplus in its money of the claim. The set-off is made by the judge or arbitrator.

4. The form of judgment in subsection (f) should be varied appropriately where the money to be paid is measured by a foreign money. See Section 5.

§ 1C-1827. Conversions of foreign money in distribution proceedings.

The rate of exchange prevailing at or near the close of business on the day the distribution proceeding is initiated shall govern all exchanges of foreign money in a distribution proceeding. A foreign-money claimant in a distribution proceeding shall assert its claim in the named foreign money and show the amount of United States dollars resulting from a conversion as of the date the proceeding was initiated. (1995, c. 213, s. 1.)

All claims must be in the same money when determining aliquot shares in a distribution proceeding. The Act requires use of the date the proceeding was initiated for applying the exchange rate to convert foreign-money claims into United States dollars. See Re Lines Bros. Ltd., (1982) 2 All E.R. 99. A claim may be amended to show the proper conversion rate and the proper amount of United States dollars.

§ 1C-1828. Prejudgment and judgment interest.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, recovery of prejudgment or pre-award interest and the rate of interest to be applied in the action or distribution proceeding shall be determined by the substantive law governing the right to recovery under the conflict of laws rules of this State.

(b) The court or arbitrator shall increase or decrease the amount of prejudgment or pre-award interest otherwise payable in a judgment or award in foreign money to the extent required by the law of this State governing a failure to make or accept an offer of settlement or offer of judgment, or conduct by a party or its attorney causing undue delay or expense.

1. As to pre-judgment interest, the Act adopts the majority rule in the United States that pre-judgment interest follows the substantive law of the case under conflict of laws rules, both as to the right to recover and the rate. English courts use a different rule, i.e.,the borrowing rate used by plaintiff or prevailing in the country issuing the money of the judgment. See Helmsing Schiffarts G.M.B.H. v. Malta Drydock Corp. (1977) 2 Lloyd's Rep. 44 (Maltese money but borrowed in West Germany; German rate); Miliangos v. George Frank (Textiles) Ltd. (No. 2) (1976) 1 QB 487 at 489 (Swiss money, Swiss interest rate). Although pre-judgment interest is one form of damages, provision for pre- judgment interest is not to be taken as indicating that no other damages for delay in payment can be awarded under the substantive law applicable to the determination of damages. Cf. Isaac Naylor & Sons, Ltd. v. New Zealand Co-operative Wool Marketing Association, Ltd. (1981) 1 N.Z.L.R. 361 (exchange loss due to delay as additional damages).

2. Allowances of pre-judgment interest in some states depend upon a party's conduct with respect to settlement or delay of the proceeding. Subsection (b) treats these state laws as either procedural in nature or expressions of a significant policy, in either case to be governed by the law of the forum state.

3. Interest on a judgment is considered to be procedural and also goes by the law of the forum. There is a problem here in that there is great discrepancy among the states in the rates for judgment interest. When a judgment is in a foreign money, United States interest rates may result in some overcompensation or undercompensation as compared to what would be awarded in the jurisdiction issuing the foreign money. But in both the United States and in foreign countries, most jurisdictions have fixed statutory rates that do not readily respond to the inflation or deflation of the value of their money in the world market. Hence it was decided to apply the usual rules of the conflict of laws.

§ 1C-1829. Enforcement of foreign judgments.

Subject to the provisions of Article 17 and 18 of this Chapter:

(a) If an action is brought to enforce a judgment of another jurisdiction expressed in a foreign money and the judgment is recognized in this State as enforceable, the enforcing judgment shall be entered as provided in G.S. 1C-1826, whether or not the foreign judgment confers an option to pay in an equivalent amount of United States dollars.

(b) A foreign judgment may be filed or docketed in accordance with any rule or statute of this State providing a procedure for its recognition and enforcement.

(c) A satisfaction or partial payment made upon the foreign judgment, on proof thereof, shall be credited against the amount of foreign money specified in the judgment, notwithstanding the entry of judgment in this State.

1. Some states have special acts that simply cover the recognition, entry, and enforcement of foreign judgments. Common law enforcement is by action. Subsection (a) refers to the common law method; it is subject to subsection (b) which refers to statutory procedures. Subsection (c) applies to both procedures.

2. Subsection (d) avoids constitutional issues under the full faith and credit clause by requiring that judgments of sister states be enforced as entered in the sister state.

§ 1C-1830. Determining United States dollar value of assets to be seized or restrained.

(a) Computations under this section shall not affect computation of the United States dollar equivalent of the money of the judgment for the purpose of payment.

(b) For the limited purpose of facilitating the enforcement of provisional remedies in an action, the value in United States dollars of assets to be seized or restrained pursuant to a writ of attachment, garnishment, execution, or other legal process, the amount of United States dollars at issue for assessing costs, or the amount of United States dollars involved for a surety bond or other court-required undertaking, shall be ascertained as provided in subsections (c) and (d) of this section.

(c) A party seeking process, costs, bond, or other undertaking under subsection (b) of this section shall compute in United States dollars the amount of the foreign-money claim from a bank-offered spot rate prevailing at or near the close of business on the banking day next preceding the filing of a request or application for the issuance of process or for the determination of costs, or an application for a bond or other court-required undertaking.

(d) A party seeking the process, costs, bond, or other undertaking under subsection (b) of this section shall file with each request or application an affidavit or certificate executed in good faith by its counsel or a bank officer, stating the market quotation used and how it was obtained, and setting forth the calculation. Affected court officials shall incur no liability, after a filing of the affidavit or certificate, for acting as if the judgment were in the amount of United States dollars stated in the affidavit or certificate. (1995, c. 213, s. 1.)

This section protects those who must determine how much should be held subject to a levy or other collection process or what the dollar amount of a supersedeas or other surety bond should be. If the judgment debtor is damaged by a gross overstatement of the dollar amount in the affidavit or certificate of counsel for the judgment creditor or the bank officer, recovery should be against that person.

§ 1C-1831. Effect of currency revalorization.

(a) If, after an obligation is expressed or a loss is incurred in a foreign money, the country issuing or adopting that money substitutes a new money in place of that money, the obligation or the loss shall be treated as if expressed or incurred in the new money at the rate of conversion the issuing country established for the payment of like obligations or losses denominated in the former money.

1. Subsection (a) refers to situations in which a country authorizes the issue of a new money to take the place of the old money at a stated ratio. An example is Brazil's recent abolition of cruzieros for cruzados. The subsection mandates that foreign money claims should be subjected to the same ratio.

2. The Act takes no position on the effect of money repudiations or revalorizations so drastic as to be, in effect, confiscations. Remedy, if any, for these is usually found through diplomatic channels. Equally, the Act takes no position on the effect of exchange control laws. The effect, if any, on obligations to pay is left to other law.

§ 1C-1832. Supplementary general principles of law.

Unless displaced by particular provisions of this Article, the principles of law and equity, including the law merchant, and the law relative to capacity to contract, principal and agent, estoppel, fraud, misrepresentation, duress, coercion, mistake, bankruptcy, or other validating or invalidating causes shall supplement its provisions. (1995, c. 213, s. 1.)

The section is taken from Section 1-103 of the Uniform Commercial Code.

§ 1C-1833. Uniformity of application and construction.

This Article shall be applied and construed to effectuate its general purpose to make uniform the law with respect to the subject of this Article among states enacting it. (1995, c. 213, s. 1.)

This Article may be cited as the North Carolina Foreign-Money Claims Act. (1995, c. 213, s. 1.)

This section does not apply to incidents that occurred before it was enacted. Connelly v. Family Inns of Am., 141 N.C. App. 583, 540 S.E.2d 38, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1408 (2000).

Deceased Defendant. — When an alleged injured party sought punitive damages against a motorist who died prior to the filing of the alleged injured party's complaint, the alleged injured party's claim for punitive damages was properly dismissed because the purpose in G.S. 1D-1 of deterring the motorist from committing similar wrongful acts could not be achieved. Harrell v. Bowen, — N.C. App. —, 635 S.E.2d 498, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 2155 (2006).

Text of G.S. 1D-1 provides that punitive damages could be awarded "to punish a defendant for egregiously wrongful acts and to deter the defendant and others from committing similar wrongful acts," and it was a common rule of statutory construction that when the conjunctive "and" connected words, phrases or clauses of a statutory sentence, they were to be considered jointly, so an individual was subject to punitive damages where he or she could be punished for the egregiously wrongful act and be deterred from committing such an act in the future, but this did not apply to a deceased defendant. Harrell v. Bowen, — N.C. App. —, 635 S.E.2d 498, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 2155 (2006).

Entitlement to Punitive Damages. — Borrowers established willful or wanton tortious activity by a bank subsidiary pursuant to G.S. 1D-5(7) because the borrowers proved facts sufficient to show that the actions of the subsidiary were in conscious and intentional disregard of and indifference to the rights of the borrowers; furthermore, the subsidiary knew or should have known that by selling unlawful insurance with mortgage loans, its actions were reasonably likely to result in injury, damage, or other harm. Richardson v. Bank of Am., N.A., — N.C. App. —, 643 S.E.2d 410, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 809 (2007).

§ 1D-5. Definitions.

As used in this Chapter:

(1) "Claimant" means a party, including a plaintiff, counterclaimant, cross-claimant, or third-party plaintiff, seeking recovery of punitive damages. In a claim for relief in which a party seeks recovery of punitive damages related to injury to another person, damage to the property of another person, death of another person, or other harm to another person, "claimant" includes any party seeking recovery of punitive damages.
(2) "Compensatory damages" includes nominal damages.
(3) "Defendant" means a party, including a counterdefendant, cross-defendant, or third-party defendant, from whom a claimant seeks relief with respect to punitive damages.
(4) "Fraud" does not include constructive fraud unless an element of intent is present.
(5) "Malice" means a sense of personal ill will toward the claimant that activated or incited the defendant to perform the act or undertake the conduct that resulted in harm to the claimant.
(6) "Punitive damages" means extracompensatory damages awarded for the purposes set forth in G.S. 1D-1.
(7) "Willful or wanton conduct" means the conscious and intentional disregard of and indifference to the rights and safety of others, which the defendant knows or should know is reasonably likely to result in injury, damage, or other harm. "Willful or wanton conduct" means more than gross negligence. (1995, c. 514, s. 1.)

"Willful or Wanton Conduct". — Where plaintiff workers were exposed to asbestos dust and fibers at defendant's polyester manufacturing plant, the jury returned verdicts in favor of plaintiffs, awarding them compensatory damages for personal injuries; however, defendant was entitled to a directed verdict on the issue of punitive damages because the plant industrial hygienist's destruction of a memo stating the asbestos exposure was cause for concern did not constitute willful and wanton conduct by defendant. Schenk v. HNA Holdings, Inc., 167 N.C. App. 47, 604 S.E.2d 689, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 2059 (2004).

Directed verdict in favor of a manufacturing plant, a maintenance company, and its successor on the issue of punitive damages was upheld on appeal, because plaintiff workers failed to demonstrate any willful or wanton misconduct with regard to their exposure to asbestos when they removed insulation. The trial court's reduction of the workers' compensatory damages awards was also upheld on appeal, because the workers received prior workers' compensation claim settlements and prior third-party settlement amounts and were entitled to only one recovery for their asbestos exposure. Schenk v. HNA Holdings, Inc., 170 N.C. App. 555, 613 S.E.2d 503, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 1067 (2005), cert. denied, — N.C. —, 626 S.E.2d 649 (2005).

Wife of a decedent who was electrocuted on a stairwell at an amphitheater, which was operated by a subsidiary, could not recover punitive damages under G.S. 1D-5(7), 1D-15(c), and 28A-18-2 because evidence showing: (1) that the subsidiary had been informed prior to the accident that other patrons had been electrocuted on a stairwell; and (2) that the subsidiary took ineffective efforts to address electrical hazards did not demonstrate a wilful and wanton disregard for the safety of others. Faris v. Clear Channel Communs., Inc., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 63059 (W.D.N.C. Sept. 1, 2006).

In a medical malpractice suit, a trial court's entry of summary judgment in favor of the defendants as to the plaintiffs' punitive damages claims was upheld on appeal based on the plaintiffs' failure to forecast sufficient evidence to meet the standard for punitive damages set forth in G.S. 1D-15(a); the plaintiffs did not contend that either fraud or malice existed and relied upon the willful or wanton conduct aggravating factor, but their complaint and proofs only alleged reckless supervision on the part of the defendants. Foster v. Crandell, — N.C. App. —, 638 S.E.2d 526, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 73 (2007).

Borrowers proved sufficient facts establishing willful or wanton tortious activity by a bank subsidiary, pursuant to G.S. 1D-5(7), because the borrowers proved facts sufficient to show that the actions of the subsidiary were in conscious and intentional disregard of and indifference to the rights of the borrowers, and the subsidiary knew or should have known that by selling unlawful insurance with mortgage loans, its actions were reasonably likely to result in injury, damage, or other harm. Richardson v. Bank of Am., N.A., — N.C. App. —, 643 S.E.2d 410, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 809 (2007).

§ 1D-10. Scope of the Chapter.

This Chapter applies to every claim for punitive damages, regardless of whether the claim for relief is based on a statutory or a common-law right of action or based in equity. In an action subject to this Chapter, in whole or in part, the provisions of this Chapter prevail over any other law to the contrary. (1995, c. 514, s. 1.)

§ 1D-15. Standards for recovery of punitive damages.

(a) Punitive damages may be awarded only if the claimant proves that the defendant is liable for compensatory damages and that one of the following aggravating factors was present and was related to the injury for which compensatory damages were awarded:

(1) Fraud.
(2) Malice.
(3) Willful or wanton conduct.

(b) The claimant must prove the existence of an aggravating factor by clear and convincing evidence.

Pleading with Particularity Not Required. — Plaintiff’s alienation of affection complaint, which averred both malice and willful and wanton conduct as the relevant aggravating factors under this section, was not required to state with particularity the circumstances underlying these factors. Ward v. Beaton, 141 N.C. App. 44, 539 S.E.2d 30, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1288 (2000), cert denied, 353 N.C. 398, 547 S.E.2d 431 (2001).

Applicability of Section. — G.S. 1D-15 is not to be applied retroactively and, therefore, applies only to cases arising after January 1, 1996. Rhone-Poulenc Agro, S.A. v. Dekalb Genetics Corp., 272 F.3d 1335, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 24812 (4th Cir. 2001).

Because the corporation and the stockholder carried their burden of showing there were no genuine issues of material fact and that they were entitled to judgment in their favor as a matter of law as to the former employee’s underlying claims for fraud, constructive fraud, negligent misrepresentation, and violating the North Carolina Securities Act (G.S. 78A-56(b) concerning the employee’s sale of stock to the stockholder, summary judgment was also proper as to the employee's claim for punitive damages. Sullivan v. Mebane Packaging Group, Inc., 158 N.C. App. 19, 581 S.E.2d 452, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 944 (2003), cert. denied, 357 N.C. 511, 588 S.E.2d 473 (2003).

When taxpayers sued county commissioners for entering into a contract that benefitted one of the commissioners, the taxpayers, under their punitive damages claim, had to prove by clear and convincing evidence one or more aggravating factors such as fraud, malice, or willful or wanton conduct. Gibbs v. Mayo, 162 N.C. App. 549, 591 S.E.2d 905, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 252 (2004), cert. denied, 358 N.C. 543, 599 S.E.2d 45 (2004).

On interlocutory appeal, prisoner's Eighth Amendment Bivens claim for alleged inadequate medical care did not extend to defendants, who were individual employees of a privately operated prison, because the actions of the employees were not fairly attributable to the federal government and because the prisoner had adequate remedies under state law, G. S. 1D-15, for his alleged injuries. Holly v. Scott, 434 F.3d 287, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 685 (4th Cir. 2006), cert. denied, — U.S. —, 126 S. Ct. 2333, 164 L. Ed. 2d 849 (2006).

Consideration of Factors as to Each Plaintiff. — In the absence of some legislative directive, it is assumed that the trier of fact should, as it did at common law, consider the factors set forth in G.S. 1D-15(a) as to each plaintiff's cause of action and not as to each defendant; it follows that, like G.S. 1D-15(a), G.S. 1D-25(b) applies to the individual jury verdict of each plaintiff. Thus, where a jury awarded compensatory and punitive damages, which exceeded the statutory cap of G.S. 1D-25(b), to two plaintiffs against one defendant, the trial court properly reduced the individual awards to both plaintiffs and entered judgment against defendant in the amount of the statutory cap for each plaintiff. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 193 (2004).

The aggravating factor required under this section was sufficiently alleged in complaint to support a claim for punitive damages where plaintiffs former jurors' complaint sufficiently alleged a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress. Burgess v. Busby, 142 N.C. App. 393, 544 S.E.2d 4, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 146 (2001).

Punitive Damages Warranted in Alienation of Affections Where Sexual Relations Occurred. — Punitive damages award against a boyfriend in an alienation of affections claim was warranted pursuant to this section where it was shown that the boyfriend had sexual relations on at least two occasions with the husband's wife; additionally, the award was not deemed excessive where it did not go beyond the limits established by G.S. 1D-25(b), and accordingly, the trial court's denial of the boyfriend's motion for a new trial on that issue, pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 59, was proper. Oddo v. Presser, 158 N.C. App. 360, 581 S.E.2d 123, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1196 (2003).

Punitive Damage Award with Comparative Ratio Greater Than Three. — G.S. 1D-15 and G.S. 1D-25, when taken together, imply that a punitive damage award with a comparative ratio greater than three, based upon a showing of fraud by only a preponderance of the evidence, will not be upheld under North Carolina law. Rhone-Poulenc Agro, S.A. v. Dekalb Genetics Corp., 272 F.3d 1335, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 24812 (4th Cir. 2001).

Evidence Sufficient. — Punitive damages were justified where the plaintiff presented evidence that the defendant and plaintiff's husband "had sex" at least two times and where the defendant on several occasions appeared at the marital home. Ward v. Beaton, 141 N.C. App. 44, 539 S.E.2d 30, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1288 (2000), cert denied, 353 N.C. 398, 547 S.E.2d 431 (2001).

Defendant was denied partial summary judgment on plaintiffs' claim for punitive damages, where, viewed in a light most favorable to plaintiffs, the evidence tended to show defendant drove a front end loader with his field of vision completely obstructed when he should have known two trucks were in front of him; in this light, the evidence was sufficient to support a finding that this defendant acted with conscious and intentional disregard of and indifference to the rights and safety of others. Abel v. Carolina Stalite Co., Ltd. P'ship, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5303 (M.D.N.C. Mar. 18, 2004).

Corporation was denied partial summary judgment on two individuals' claim for punitive damages, where, viewed in a light most favorable to the individuals, the evidence was sufficient to support a finding that the corporation acted with conscious and intentional disregard of and indifference to the rights and safety of others; the individuals had contended that the corporation intentionally and repetitively disregarded several Federal Mine Safety and Health Act of 1977 (FMSHA), 30 U.S.C.S. §§ 801 et seq., health and safety regulations and that the corporation knew or reasonably should have known that its disregard of FMSHA health and safety regulations would result in injury. Abel v. Carolina Stalite Co., Ltd. P'ship, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5303 (M.D.N.C. Mar. 18, 2004).

Because the lessees presented evidence of the lessors' willful, wanton, and malicious conduct in breaching the parties' lease/purchase agreement, violating a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction, and converting the lessees' property, a court properly denied the lessors' motion for a directed verdict on the issue of punitive damages under G.S. 1D-15(a). Zubaidi v. Earl L. Pickett Enters., 164 N.C. App. 107, 595 S.E.2d 190, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 716 (2004).

Trial court did not err in denying two corporations' motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict as to an award of punitive damages to a patron beaten by bouncers employed by the corporations during the scope of their employment where: (1) the operations manager directed the bouncers' to check on the patron, (2) he condoned the attack, and (3) he did not intervene in the beating. Wallace v. M, M & R, Inc., 165 N.C. App. 827, 600 S.E.2d 514, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 1510 (2004).

Borrowers established willful or wanton tortious activity by a bank subsidiary, pursuant to G.S. 1D-5(7), because the borrowers proved facts sufficient to show that the actions of the subsidiary were in conscious and intentional disregard of and indifference to the rights of the borrowers; furthermore, the subsidiary knew or should have known that by selling unlawful insurance with mortgage loans, its actions were reasonably likely to result in injury, damage, or other harm. Richardson v. Bank of Am., N.A., — N.C. App. —, 643 S.E.2d 410, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 809 (2007).

Evidence Insufficient. — The defendant-physical therapist was entitled to a directed verdict on the punitive damages claim based on willful or wanton negligence where the evidence indicated that, although the defendant may have been negligent in deviating from customary standards in caring for an exercise machine, the evidence fell short of creating a reasonable inference that defendant recklessly disregarded the plaintiff's rights or safety. Collins v. St. George Physical Therapy, 141 N.C. App. 82, 539 S.E.2d 356, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1286 (2000).

Where plaintiff workers were exposed to asbestos dust and fibers at defendant's polyester manufacturing plant, the jury returned verdicts in favor of plaintiffs, awarding them compensatory damages for personal injuries; however, defendant was entitled to a directed verdict on the issue of punitive damages because the plant industrial hygienist's destruction of a memo stating the asbestos exposure was cause for concern did not constitute willful and wanton conduct by defendant. Schenk v. HNA Holdings, Inc., 167 N.C. App. 47, 604 S.E.2d 689, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 2059 (2004).

Directed verdict in favor of a manufacturing plant, a maintenance company, and its successor on the issue of punitive damages was upheld on appeal, because plaintiff workers failed to demonstrate any willful or wanton misconduct with regard to their exposure to asbestos when they removed insulation. The trial court's reduction of the workers' compensatory damages awards was also upheld on appeal, because the workers received prior workers' compensation claim settlements and prior third-party settlement amounts and were entitled to only one recovery for their asbestos exposure. Schenk v. HNA Holdings, Inc., 170 N.C. App. 555, 613 S.E.2d 503, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 1067 (2005), cert. denied, — N.C. —, 626 S.E.2d 649 (2005).

Where plaintiff's complaint did not allege any facts that would have tended to show fraud, malice, or willful or wanton conduct in relation to the alleged breach of fiduciary duty, the omission strongly suggested that plaintiff's claim for punitive damages was without basis and had been asserted solely to confer jurisdiction on the court. Southstar Funding, L.L.C. v. Warren, Perry & Anthony, P.L.L.C., 445 F. Supp. 2d 583, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 61500 (E.D.N.C. 2006).

Wife of a decedent who was electrocuted on a stairwell at an amphitheater, which was operated by a subsidiary, could not recover punitive damages under G.S. 1D-5(7), 1D-15(c), and 28A-18-2 because evidence showing: (1) that the subsidiary had been informed prior to the accident that other patrons had been electrocuted on a stairwell; and (2) that the subsidiary took ineffective efforts to address electrical hazards did not demonstrate a wilful and wanton disregard for the safety of others. Faris v. Clear Channel Communs., Inc., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 63059 (W.D.N.C. Sept. 1, 2006).

In a medical malpractice suit, a trial court's entry of summary judgment in favor of the defendants as to the plaintiffs' punitive damages claims was upheld on appeal based on the plaintiffs' failure to forecast sufficient evidence to meet the standard for punitive damages set forth in G.S. 1D-15(a); the plaintiffs did not contend that either fraud or malice existed and relied upon the willful or wanton conduct aggravating factor, but their complaint and proofs only alleged reckless supervision on the part of the defendants. Foster v. Crandell, — N.C. App. —, 638 S.E.2d 526, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 73 (2007).

Borrower's 's claim for punitive damages was inappropriate for several reasons: because the borrower was not entitled to compensatory damages, her claim for punitive damages failed and she did not state a sufficient claim for an independent tort to accompany her breach of contract allegations; in addition, the borrower did not expressly state that any of the lender's actions included a heightened level of fault for which to allow punitive damages, nor did the borrower allege any facts showing that the lender's conduct rose to a fraudulent, malicious, or willful or wanton level. Booker v. Wash. Mut. Bank, F.A., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9632 (M.D.N.C. Feb. 9, 2007).

Defendants were entitled to summary judgment as to plaintiff's punitive damages claim because defendants' evidence tended to show they moved to withdraw from representation of plaintiff due to ill health and defendants asserted a proper basis and utilized proper procedures mandated by the Rules of Professional Conduct and the Rules for Superior Court Practice to move to withdraw; thus, the evidence failed to raise an inference of the existence of any of the three aggravating factors necessary to support a claim for punitive damages under G.S. 1D-15(a). Wilkins v. Safran, — N.C. App. —, 649 S.E.2d 658, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1952 (2007).

Regarding Allegation of Fraudulent Misrepresentation. — Regarding a manufacturer's request for punitive damages from a seller and its president arising from the alleged breach of an agreement executed by the parties, the seller's motion for partial summary judgment as to the fraudulent misrepresentation claim and request for punitive damages under G.S. 1D-15(d) was denied because the manufacturer showed that the seller and the president knowingly and willfully concealed any breaches of the agreement so that the manufacturer, relying on the misrepresentations, would continue to offer the seller product discounts and that the president knew of the potentially breaching purchases; hence, a jury, crediting such evidence, could reasonably have found that the seller and the president committed fraudulent misrepresentation. Interstate Narrow Fabrics, Inc. v. Century USA, Inc., 218 F.R.D. 455, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18227 (M.D.N.C. 2003).

Under this section, enacted in 1995, punitive damages may be awarded only if a plaintiff can prove willful or wanton conduct which he failed to do, thus warranting a directed verdict for the defendant. McNeill v. Holloway, 141 N.C. App. 109, 539 S.E.2d 309, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1279 (2000).

Court denied an administratrix's Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b) motion for reconsideration of the grant of summary judgment to a corporation on the administratrix's punitive damages claim, under G.S. 1D-15(c), in the administratrix's action against the corporation for the electrocution of a decedent at the corporation's amphitheater where no reasonable jury could find with clear and convincing proof that the corporation acted in a willful or wanton manner or ignored safety procedures and policies. Faris v. SFX Entm't, Inc., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 89918 (W.D.N.C. Dec. 12, 2006).

Discovery of Financial Information Where Prima Facie Showing Is Made. — Franchisees' motion to compel was granted in part, to the extent that they sought to compel three corporate officers to respond to an interrogatory by providing personal financial information about themselves, as: (1) the information was relevant because the franchisees had made a prima facie showing of their entitlement to punitive damages under G.S. 1D-15; (2) the officers were not required to produce documents under Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(d), in response to the franchisees' interrogatory; and (3) the production of the requested information, concerning the officers' financial assets, liabilities, and monthly income as of December 31, 2001, did not rise to the level of burden contemplated by Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(2). Rich Food Servs. v. Rich Plan Corp., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27791 (E.D.N.C. June 17, 2002).

§ 1D-25. Limitation of amount of recovery.

(a) In all actions seeking an award of punitive damages, the trier of fact shall determine the amount of punitive damages separately from the amount of compensation for all other damages.

(b) Punitive damages awarded against a defendant shall not exceed three times the amount of compensatory damages or two hundred fifty thousand dollars ($250,000), whichever is greater. If a trier of fact returns a verdict for punitive damages in excess of the maximum amount specified under this subsection, the trial court shall reduce the award and enter judgment for punitive damages in the maximum amount.

(c) The provisions of subsection (b) of this section shall not be made known to the trier of fact through any means, including voir dire, the introduction into evidence, argument, or instructions to the jury. (1995, c. 514, s. 1.)

Constitutionality — Separation of Powers. — G.S. 1D-25, which places a cap on punitive damages, did not unconstitutionally violate the principle of separation of powers, contrary to N.C. Const., Art. I, § 6, by exercising the power of remittitur because the cap on punitive damages is different from remittitur in that it requires an award to be limited after a proper jury trial, while remittitur is utilized only after a court has determined that a party has not received a fair and proper jury trial. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 149 N.C. App. 672, 562 S.E.2d 82, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 316 (2002), aff'd, 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1 (2004).

G.S. 1D-25 does not operate as a "legislative remittitur" because, unlike remittitur, G.S. 1D-25 does not grant the General Assembly the authority to remit excessive awards on a case-by-case basis, but rather, by enacting G.S. 1D-25, the General Assembly has imposed a limit on the recovery of punitive damages in all cases; this function is wholly distinct from that within the trial court's authority to apply fixed laws to individual controversies, and thus, G.S. 1D-25 did not violate separation of powers principles under N.C. Const. art. I, § 6. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 193 (2004).

G.S. 1D-25 does not represent an impermissible interference with the judiciary's constitutionally defined authority because the Constitution neither expressly nor implicitly empowers North Carolina courts to award punitive damages or to remit excessive awards thereof; rather, because punitive damages are awarded on grounds of public policy, G.S. 1D-25 is a modification of the common law within the General Assembly's policy-making authority to define legally cognizable remedies. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 193 (2004).

Constitutionality — Open Courts. — G.S. 1D-25, which places a cap on punitive damages, is not unconstitutional under the open courts provision in N.C. Const., Art. I, § 18, because it does not limit the recovery of actual damages. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 149 N.C. App. 672, 562 S.E.2d 82, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 316 (2002), aff'd, 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1 (2004).

Because the Open Courts Clause of N.C. Const. art. I, § 18 does not prevent the General Assembly from abolishing the recovery of punitive damages altogether, it follows that G.S. 1D-25, which limits the awards of punitive damages, does not violate the Open Courts Clause. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 193 (2004).

Constitutionality — Due Process. — G.S. 1D-25, placing a cap on an award of punitive damages, does not take property without just compensation, infringing on a fundamental right, contrary to N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19, because punitive damages are not property belonging to an individual. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 149 N.C. App. 672, 562 S.E.2d 82, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 316 (2002), aff'd, 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1 (2004).

The statutory limit on punitive damages in G.S. 1D-25 does not constitute an unconstitutional taking of property by denying plaintiffs of the "enjoyment of the fruits of their own labor" under N.C. Const. art. I, § 1 because (1) a jury's verdict is not "property" in which a plaintiff enjoys a vested right where the limitation on punitive damages applies prior to the entry of judgment; and (2) a litigant's participation in a trial is not a "labor" nor is a jury's verdict the "fruits" of that labor. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 193 (2004).

Constitutionality — Equal Protection. — G.S. 1D-25, placing a cap on an award of punitive damages, does not treat similarly situated persons differently without compelling reason or rational justification, contrary to N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19, because no fundamental right is involved and the statute makes no mention of suspect classifications, subjecting it to rational basis review, and because the statute bears a rational relationship to a legitimate governmental interest in the state's economic development. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 149 N.C. App. 672, 562 S.E.2d 82, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 316 (2002), aff'd, 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1 (2004).

Because the limitation on punitive damages contained in G.S.1D-25 bears some rational relationship to several legitimate governmental interests, G.S. 1D-25 does not violate principles of due process and equal protection as guaranteed by N.C. Cont. art. I, § 19. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 193 (2004).

Constitutionality — Vagueness. — G.S. 1D-25, which places a cap on punitive damages, is not unconstitutionally vague because it provides sufficient language for uniform judicial administration. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 149 N.C. App. 672, 562 S.E.2d 82, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 316 (2002), aff'd, 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1 (2004).

G.S. 1D-25 is not unconstitutionally vague because the court can apply the rules of statutory construction to discern a meaning from G.S. 1D-25 that can be uniformly administered. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 193 (2004).

Constitutionality — Special Legislation. — G.S. 1D-25, placing a cap on an award of punitive damages, is not unconstitutional special legislation contrary to N.C. Const., Art. II, § 24, which prohibits the enactment of any local, private or special legislation remitting fines, penalties and forfeitures, because it does not constitute remittitur. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 149 N.C. App. 672, 562 S.E.2d 82, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 316 (2002), aff'd, 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1 (2004).

G.S. 1D-25, placing a cap on an award of punitive damages, is not unconstitutional special legislation, contrary to N.C. Const., Art. I, § 32, because it applies equally to all defendants and creates no distinction between groups. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 149 N.C. App. 672, 562 S.E.2d 82, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 316 (2002), aff'd, 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1 (2004).

Constitutionality — Right to Jury Trial. — G.S. 1D-25, which places a cap on punitive damages, does not violate injured parties' rights to a jury trial, under N.C. Const., Art. I, § 25, because the right to punitive damages is not a property interest, and there is only a right to a civil jury trial concerning property. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 149 N.C. App. 672, 562 S.E.2d 82, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 316 (2002), aff'd, 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1 (2004).

Although N.C. Const. art. I, § 25 appears to embody a broad definition of the term ""property," a controversy in which punitive damages are assessed is not one which enforces a plaintiff's legal rights and, therefore, does not respect property; thus, G.S. 1D-25 in no way infringes upon plaintiffs' right to a trial by jury under N.C. Const. art. 1, § 25. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 193 (2004).

Application of Section Upheld. — G.S. 1D-25, which places a cap on punitive damages, was appropriately applied to limit each individual plaintiff's punitive damages award, rather than being applied per each plaintiff's claim or per defendant. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 149 N.C. App. 672, 562 S.E.2d 82, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 316 (2002), aff'd, 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1 (2004).

This section is not retroactive. Food Lion, Inc. v. Capital Cities/ABC, Inc., 984 F. Supp. 923 (M.D.N.C. 1997).

G.S. 1D-25 is not to be applied retroactively and, therefore, applies only to cases arising after January 1, 1996. Rhone-Poulenc Agro, S.A. v. Dekalb Genetics Corp., 272 F.3d 1335, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 24812 (4th Cir. 2001).

Cap Applies to Individual Jury Verdict of Each Plaintiff, Not Each Defendant. — In the absence of some legislative directive, it is assumed that the trier of fact should, as it did at common law, consider the factors set forth in G.S. 1D-15(a) as to each plaintiff's cause of action and not as to each defendant; it follows that, like G.S. 1D-15(a), G.S. 1D-25(b) applies to the individual jury verdict of each plaintiff. Thus, where a jury awarded compensatory and punitive damages, which exceeded the statutory cap of G.S. 1D-25(b), to two plaintiffs against one defendant, the trial court properly reduced the individual awards to both plaintiffs and entered judgment against defendant in the amount of the statutory cap for each plaintiff. Rhyne v. K-Mart Corp., 358 N.C. 160, 594 S.E.2d 1, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 193 (2004).

Punitive Damage Award with Comparative Ratio Greater Than Three. — G.S. 1D-15 and G.S. 1D-25, when taken together, imply that a punitive damage award with a comparative ratio greater than three, based upon a showing of fraud by only a preponderance of the evidence, will not be upheld under North Carolina law. Rhone-Poulenc Agro, S.A. v. Dekalb Genetics Corp., 272 F.3d 1335, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 24812 (4th Cir. 2001).

Award Within the Statutory Boundaries

for Punitive Damages. — Where a jury awarded lessees compensatory damages in the amount of $62,001.00 for breach of a lease/purchase agreement and conversion and punitive damages in the amount of $150,000.00, the amount of punitive damages was well within the boundaries provided in G.S. 1D-25(b) and was not excessively disproportionate to the circumstances of contumely and indignity present in the case. Zubaidi v. Earl L. Pickett Enters., 164 N.C. App. 107, 595 S.E.2d 190, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 716 (2004).

Illustrative Cases. — An award of punitive damages of $500,000 to the former wife against the current wife for alienation of affections and criminal conversion was not excessive, considering that the jury awarded the same amount in compensatory damages, and thus, could have awarded $1,500,000 in punitive damages. Hutelmyer v. Cox, 133 N.C. App. 364, 514 S.E.2d 554, 1999 N.C. App. LEXIS 510 (1999), cert. denied, 351 N.C. 104, 541 S.E.2d 146 (1999).

Punitive damages award against a boyfriend in an alienation of affections claim was warranted pursuant to G.S. 1D-15 where it was shown that the boyfriend had sexual relations on at least two occasions with the husband's wife; additionally, the award was not deemed excessive where it did not go beyond the limits established by subsection (b) of this section, and accordingly, the trial court's denial of the boyfriend's motion for a new trial on that issue, pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 59, was proper. Oddo v. Presser, 158 N.C. App. 360, 581 S.E.2d 123, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1196 (2003).

§ 1D-26. Driving while impaired; exemption from cap.

G.S. 1D-25(b) shall not apply to a claim for punitive damages for injury or harm arising from a defendant's operation of a motor vehicle if the actions of the defendant in operating the motor vehicle would give rise to an offense of driving while impaired under G.S. 20-138.1, 20-138.2, or 20-138.5. (1995, c. 514, s. 1.)

§ 1D-30. Bifurcated trial.

Upon the motion of a defendant, the issues of liability for compensatory damages and the amount of compensatory damages, if any, shall be tried separately from the issues of liability for punitive damages and the amount of punitive damages, if any. Evidence relating solely to punitive damages shall not be admissible until the trier of fact has determined that the defendant is liable for compensatory damages and has determined the amount of compensatory damages. The same trier of fact that tried the issues relating to compensatory damages shall try the issues relating to punitive damages. (1995, c. 514, s. 1.)

Section Not Retroactive. — This section did not apply where the cause of action was initiated prior to the enactment of this statute. Watson v. Dixon, 132 N.C. App. 329, 511 S.E.2d 37, 1999 N.C. App. LEXIS 121 (1999), cert. denied, 351 N.C. 191 (1999).

The defendant's failure to request a bifurcated trial under this section rendered evidence relating solely to punitive damages admissible at any time during plaintiff's case-in-chief. Ward v. Beaton, 141 N.C. App. 44, 539 S.E.2d 30, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1288 (2000), cert denied, 353 N.C. 398, 547 S.E.2d 431 (2001).

Remand for New Trial. — Where jury awarded compensatory damages, but not punitive damages, the appellate court was required to remand the entire case for retrial of all issues, following juror misconduct during punitive deliberation phase of bifurcated trial, since the same jury was required to hear and determine all issues. Lindsey v. Boddie-Noell Enters., Inc., 147 N.C. App. 166, 555 S.E.2d 369, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 1145 (2001), cert. denied, 355 N.C. 213, 559 S.E.2d 803 (2002).

When taxpayers' punitive damages claim was bifurcated in their suit against county commissioners for entering into a contract that benefitted one of the commissioners, evidence relating only to punitive damages was not admissible in the compensatory damages portion of the trial, but nothing prevented them from presenting all of their evidence of liability for punitive damages. Gibbs v. Mayo, 162 N.C. App. 549, 591 S.E.2d 905, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 252 (2004), cert. denied, 358 N.C. 543, 599 S.E.2d 45 (2004).

§ 1D-35. Punitive damages awards.

In determining the amount of punitive damages, if any, to be awarded, the trier of fact:

(1) Shall consider the purposes of punitive damages set forth in G.S. 1D-1; and

(2) May consider only that evidence that relates to the following:
  a. The reprehensibility of the defendant's motives and conduct.
  b. The likelihood, at the relevant time, of serious harm.
  c. The degree of the defendant's awareness of the probable consequences of its conduct.
  d. The duration of the defendant's conduct.
  e. The actual damages suffered by the claimant.
  f. Any concealment by the defendant of the facts or consequences of its conduct.
  g. The existence and frequency of any similar past conduct by the defendant.
  h. Whether the defendant profited from the conduct.
  i. The defendant's ability to pay punitive damages, as evidenced by its revenues or net worth. (1995, c. 514, s. 1.)

Applicability. — This section is not applicable to claims arising before January 1, 1996. Food Lion, Inc. v. Capital Cities/ABC, Inc., 984 F. Supp. 923 (M.D.N.C. 1997).

Relevance of Ability to Pay. — Where plaintiff asserted a claim for punitive damages against defendant, and the claim survived a motion for summary judgment, defendant's individual tax return became relevant for purposes of discovery under Fed. R. Civ. P. 26 because defendant's ability to pay punitive damages, as evidenced by his revenues or net worth, could be considered by the jury when it determined the amount of punitive damages to award. Interstate Narrow Fabrics, Inc. v. Century United States, Inc., — F. Supp. 2d —, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3839 (M.D.N.C. Feb. 24, 2004).

The defendant's failure to request a bifurcated trial under G.S. 1D-30 rendered evidence relating solely to punitive damages admissible at any time during plaintiff's case-in-chief. Ward v. Beaton, 141 N.C. App. 44, 539 S.E.2d 30, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1288 (2000), cert denied, 353 N.C. 398, 547 S.E.2d 431 (2001).

The court shall award reasonable attorneys' fees, resulting from the defense against the punitive damages claim, against a claimant who files a claim for punitive damages that the claimant knows or should have known to be frivolous or malicious. The court shall award reasonable attorney fees against a defendant who asserts a defense in a punitive damages claim that the defendant knows or should have known to be frivolous or malicious. § 1D-50. Judicial review of award.

When reviewing the evidence regarding a finding by the trier of fact concerning liability for punitive damages in accordance with G.S. 1D-15(a), or regarding the amount of punitive damages awarded, the trial court shall state in a written opinion its reasons for upholding or disturbing the finding or award. In doing so, the court shall address with specificity the evidence, or lack thereof, as it bears on the liability for or the amount of punitive damages, in light of the requirements of this Chapter. Historical Background. — See Resort Dev. Co. v. Parmele, 235 N.C. 689, 71 S.E.2d 474 (1952), overruled in part, Gwathmey v. State ex rel. Dep't of Env't, Health & Natural Resources, 342 N.C. 287, 464 S.E.2d 674 (1995).

Since the American Revolution and our independence, the common law has continued to apply in North Carolina. Hall v. Post, 323 N.C. 259, 372 S.E.2d 711 (1988).

The term "common law" refers to the common law of England. State v. Willis, 255 N.C. 473, 121 S.E.2d 854 (1961); State v. Lackey, 271 N.C. 171, 155 S.E.2d 465 (1967); State ex rel. Bruton v. Flying "W" Enters., Inc., 273 N.C. 399, 160 S.E.2d 482 (1968).

Common Law Adopted as of Date of Signing of Declaration of Independence. — This section adopted the common law of England as of the date of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Steelman v. City of New Bern, 279 N.C. 589, 184 S.E.2d 239 (1971).

Extent of Common Law in Force and Effect. — So much of the common law as is not destructive of, repugnant to, or inconsistent with our form of government, and which has not been repealed or abrogated by statute or become obsolete, is in full force and effect in this jurisdiction. State v. Hampton, 210 N.C. 283, 186 S.E. 251 (1936).

So much of the common law as has not been abrogated or repealed by statute is in full force and effect in this State. Hoke v. Atlantic Greyhound Corp., 226 N.C. 332, 38 S.E.2d 105 (1946); Scholtens v. Scholtens, 230 N.C. 149, 52 S.E.2d 350 (1949), overruled on other grounds, Foster v. Foster, 264 N.C. 694, 142 S.E.2d 638 (1965); Hensen v. Thomas, 231 N.C. 173, 56 S.E.2d 432, 12 A.L.R.2d 1171 (1949); Friendly Fin. Corp. v. Quinn, 232 N.C. 407, 61 S.E.2d 192 (1950); Ionic Lodge No. 72 F.A. & A.M. v. Ionic Lodge F.A. & A.M. No. 72 Co., 232 N.C.

648, 62 S.E.2d 73 (1950); Cooperative Warehouse v. Lumberton Tobacco Bd. of Trade, Inc., 242 N.C. 123, 87 S.E.2d 25.

A common-law rule which has not been abrogated or repealed by statute in North Carolina is still in effect under the terms of this section. Elliott v. Elliott, 235 N.C. 153, 69 S.E.2d 224 (1952); Redding v. Redding, 235 N.C. 638, 70 S.E.2d 676 (1952); McMichael v. Proctor, 243 N.C. 479, 91 S.E.2d 231 (1956); Mullen v. Sawyer, 8 N.C. App. 458, 174 S.E.2d 646 (1970), rev'd on other grounds, 277 N.C. 623, 178 S.E.2d 425 (1971). See note in 30 N.C.L. Rev. 417 (1952).

The "common law" to be applied in North Carolina is the common law of England to the extent it was in force and use within this State at the time of the Declaration of Independence; is not otherwise contrary to the independence of this State or the form of government established therefor; and is not abrogated, repealed, or obsolete. Gwathmey v. State ex rel. Dep't of Env't, Health & Natural Resources, 342 N.C. 287, 464 S.E.2d 674 (1995); Conley v. Emerald Isle Realty, Inc., 350 N.C. 293, 513 S.E.2d 556 (1999).

Extent to Which Common Law May Be Modified. — So much of the common law as is in force by virtue of this section may be modified or repealed, but those parts of the common law which are imbedded in the Constitution are not subject to control. State v. Mitchell, 202 N.C. 439, 163 S.E. 581 (1932).

Effect of Legislation with Respect to Subject Matter of Common-Law Rule. — Where the North Carolina General Assembly has legislated with respect to the subject matter of a common-law rule, the statute supplants the common law with respect to the particular rule, but so much of the common law as has not been abrogated or repealed by statute is in full force and effect. Allen v. Standard Crankshaft & Hydraulic Co., 210 F. Supp. 844 (W.D.N.C. 1962), aff'd, 323 F.2d 29 (4th Cir. 1963).

When the General Assembly legislates in respect to the subject matter of a common law rule, the statute supplants the common law rule in regard to that matter. State v. Green, 124 N.C. App. 269, 477 S.E.2d 182 (1996), cert. denied and appeal denied, 345 N.C. 644, 483 S.E.2d 714 (1997), aff'd, 348 N.C. 588, 502 S.E.2d 819 (1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1111, 119 S. Ct. 883, 142 L. Ed. 2d 783 (1999).

Statutes Construed According to Common-Law Definition. — When a statute punishes an act, giving it a name known to the common law without otherwise defining it, the statute is construed according to the common-law definition. State v. England, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971); State v. Roberts, 286 N.C. 265, 210 S.E.2d 396 (1974).

Presumption as to Common Law in Sister States. — Where there is no evidence to the contrary, the presumption is that the common law is in force in a sister state. Hipps v. Southern Ry., 177 N.C. 472, 99 S.E. 335 (1919).

Applied in Wells v. Guardian Life Ins. Co., 213 N.C. 178, 195 S.E. 394, 116 A.L.R. 130 (1938); State v. Sullivan, 229 N.C. 251, 49 S.E.2d 458 (1948); State v. Crawford, 329 N.C. 466, 406 S.E.2d 579 (1991); Burgess v. Busby, 142 N.C. App. 393, 544 S.E.2d 4, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 146 (2001); Rosero v. Blake, 357 N.C. 193, 581 S.E.2d 41, 2003 N.C. LEXIS 605 (2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1177, 124 S. Ct. 1407, 158 L. Ed. 2d 78 (2004).

II. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

A. Civil.

Sovereign Immunity. — The concept of sovereign immunity, extant in the English common law, made its way into the common law of colonial North Carolina and remains in force in this State. Teachy v. Coble Dairies, Inc., 306 N.C. 324, 293 S.E.2d 182 (1982).

The common-law rights and disabilities of husband and wife are in force in this State, except insofar as they have been abrogated or repealed by statute. Scholtens v. Scholtens, 230

N.C. 149, 52 S.E.2d 350 (1949), overruled on other grounds, Foster v. Foster, 264 N.C. 694, 142 S.E.2d 638 (1965).

The common-law doctrine of survivorship between husband and wife as tenants by entireties has not been changed by statute and is in force in this State. Dorsey v. Kirkland, 177 N.C. 520, 99 S.E. 407 (1919).

Because the historical purposes underlying the separation exception to the necessaries doctrine are incompatible with current mores and laws governing modern marital relationships in North Carolina, the separation exception as previously applied in the courts is "obsolete" within the meaning of this section. Being obsolete, that exception has no place in the common law and must be modified. Forsyth Mem. Hosp. v. Chisholm, 342 N.C. 616, 467 S.E.2d 88 (1996).

Presumption of Death. — The doctrine of the common law as to presumptive death is not repealed or affected by statute, and obtains in our courts. Steele v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 196 N.C. 408, 145 S.E. 787 (1928).

Obligation of Father to Support Child. — At common law it is the duty of a father to support his minor children. The common-law obligation of a father to support his child is not a debt in the legal sense, but an obligation imposed by law. It is not a property right of the child, but is a personal duty of the father, which is terminated by his death. These common-law principles have not been abrogated or modified by statute and are in full force and effect in this jurisdiction. Mullen v. Sawyer, 277 N.C. 623, 178 S.E.2d 425 (1971).

The North Carolina Legislature has no explicit intention to overrule or abrogate the Fuchs-Williams principles. Pataky v. Pataky, 160 N.C. App. 289, 585 S.E.2d 404, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1797 (2003), aff'd, 359 N.C. 65, 602 S.E.2d 360 (2004).

Right of Father of Illegitimate Child to Visitation Privileges. — The common law principle that the father of an illegitimate child is not entitled to visitation privileges absent consent of the mother has been abrogated by statutes as well as case law. Conley v. Johnson, 24 N.C. App. 122, 210 S.E.2d 88 (1974).

Tort Action by Child Against Parent. — The common-law rule that an unemancipated, minor child, living in the household of its parents, cannot maintain an action in tort against its parents or either of them, still prevails in North Carolina. Redding v. Redding, 235 N.C. 638, 70 S.E.2d 676 (1952).

Exemption of Nonresidents from Civil Process. — The common-law privilege of the exemption of nonresidents from service of civil process while attending upon litigation in the courts of this State, as suitors or witnesses, was not repealed by implication by G.S. 8-64, 9-18. Cooper v. Wyman, 122 N.C. 784, 29 S.E. 947 (1898).

Limitation Over in Personal Property. — The common-law rule that there can be no limitation over in personal property after reservation of a life estate therein is in force in this State, under this section, and has been recognized by judicial decision and by statutory implication. Speight v. Speight, 208 N.C. 132, 179 S.E. 461 (1935).

The common-law rule that future interests in personal property may be created by will but not by deed prevails in this State, since it has not been abrogated or repealed by statute or become obsolete, and is not destructive of, or repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the freedom and independence of this State. Woodard v. Clark, 236 N.C. 190, 72 S.E.2d 433 (1952).

Trademarks. — State statutes providing for registration of trademarks are in affirmance of the common law. Allen v. Standard Crankshaft & Hydraulic Co., 210 F. Supp. 844 (W.D.N.C. 1962), aff'd, 323 F.2d 29 (4th Cir. 1963).

The remedies given by statutes providing for registration of trademarks are either declaratory of or are cumulative and additional to those recognized by the common law. Allen v. Standard Crankshaft & Hydraulic Co., 210 F. Supp. 844 (W.D.N.C. 1962), aff'd, 323 F.2d 29 (4th Cir. 1963).

Implied Warranty in Sale of Food. — The common-law rule of implied warranty in the sale of food by a retailer to a consumer, even though the food may be sold in a sealed container, has not been rendered obsolete by the changes in the manner and method of the manufacture, preparation and distribution of food. Rabb v. Covington, 215 N.C. 572, 2 S.E.2d 705 (1939).

Survival of Actions. — Since at common law, causes of action for wrongful injury, whether resulting in death or not, did not survive the injured party, the survival of such actions is solely by virtue of statute. Hoke v. Atlantic Greyhound Corp., 226 N.C. 332, 38 S.E.2d 105 (1946).

Tortious Killing. — The common law, adopted as the law of North Carolina in this section, gave no right of action for the tortious killing of a human being. Gay v. Thompson, 266 N.C. 394, 146 S.E.2d 425 (1966).

Short-Form Murder Indictments. — Prisoner's short-form murder indictment did not omit an element of the offense because the indictment stated every element of the charged offense of common law murder, as codified in 1893 N.C. Sess. Laws 76 since, under North Carolina law, murder by torture was just another means of committing the single common law crime of murder. Stroud v. Polk, 466 F.3d 291, 2006 U.S. App. LEXIS 26216 (4th Cir. 2006).

Preference to Debts Due to State Abrogated. — The English common law, which gave a debt due to the sovereign a preference over the debts due to others, is not in force as applied to a debt due to this State, since the rule as it existed at common law is antagonistic to the spirit of our governmental institutions. North Carolina Corp. Comm'n v. Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 193 N.C. 513, 137 S.E. 587 (1927).

Exemption of Attorneys from Arrest. — The common law exemption of an attorney from arrest in a civil action should, under our institutions and because of obsoleteness by nonusage, not prevail, except where the attorneys are actually in attendance upon court in the due course of their employment as attorneys. Greenleaf v. People's Bank, 133 N.C. 292, 45 S.E. 638 (1903).

Attorney-Client Privilege. — Because the North Carolina General Assembly had not enacted a statutory provision concerning the attorney-client privilege, it was necessary to look solely to the common law for the privilege's proper application. In re Investigation of the Death of Miller, 357 N.C. 316, 584 S.E.2d 772, 2003 N.C. LEXIS 831 (2003).

The determination of the navigability of waters by whether they were subject to the ebb and flow of the tides, the lunar tides test, had never been part of the English common law applied in this State before or after the Revolution and that test was "obsolete," as it was inapplicable to the conditions of the waters within this State. For these reasons, the lunar tides test is not a part of the common law as it applies in North Carolina. Gwathmey v. State ex rel. Dep't of Env't, Health & Natural Resources, 342 N.C. 287, 464 S.E.2d 674 (1995).

B. Criminal.

The year and a day rule has become "obsolete," within the meaning of that term as used in this section, and is no longer part of the common law of North Carolina for any purpose. State v. Vance, 328 N.C. 613, 403 S.E.2d 495 (1991).

Punishment When No Penalty Expressly Provided. — The common-law rule obtains in this State that where a statute enacted in the public interest commands an act to be done or proscribes the commission of an act, and no penalty is expressly provided for its breach, its violation may be punished as for a misdemeanor. State v. Bishop, 228 N.C. 371, 45 S.E.2d 858 (1947).

The solicitation of another to commit a felony is a crime, although the solicitation is of no effect, and the crime is not committed, the common-law rule being in effect and controlling. State v. Hampton, 210 N.C. 283, 186 S.E. 251 (1936); State v. Furr, 292 N.C. 711, 235 S.E.2d 193, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 924, 98 S. Ct. 402, 54 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1977); State v. Tyner, 50 N.C. App. 206, 272 S.E.2d 626 (1980), cert. denied, 302 N.C. 633, 280 S.E.2d 451 (1981).

The offense of solicitation of another to commit a felony has been cognizable at common law at least since Rex v. Higgins, 2 East 5, 102 Eng. Rep. 269 (1801) and still an indictable offense under the common law in this State. State v. Furr, 292 N.C. 711, 235 S.E.2d 193, cert. denied, 434 U.S. 924, 98 S. Ct. 402, 54 L. Ed. 2d 281 (1977).

Solicitation to commit a felony was a misdemeanor at common law. United States v. MacCloskey, 682 F.2d 468 (4th Cir. 1982).

Obstruction of justice is a common-law offense in North Carolina. Article 30 of Chapter 14 does not abrogate this offense. In re Kivett, 309 N.C. 635, 309 S.E.2d 442 (1983).

False Imprisonment. — North Carolina does not have a criminal statute making false imprisonment a crime, and therefore, the common law with respect to false imprisonment is the law of this State. State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971).

Kidnapping. — Since this section adopted the common law as the law of this State, the common law with respect to kidnapping and false imprisonment was the law of this State. State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971).

The failure of G.S. 14-39, prior to its 1975 amendment, to define kidnapping did not render the statute vague or uncertain, and the common-law definition of the offense was incorporated into the statute by construction. State v. Ingland, 278 N.C. 42, 178 S.E.2d 577 (1971).

Since G.S. 14-39, prior to its 1975 amendment, did not define kidnapping, the common-law definition of that crime was the law of this State. State v. Murphy, 280 N.C. 1, 184 S.E.2d 845 (1971); State v. Hudson, 281 N.C. 100, 187 S.E.2d 756 (1972), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1160, 94 S. Ct. 920, 39 L. Ed. 2d 112 (1974).

Rape. — By this section the common-law death penalty for rape was adopted in North Carolina. State v. Waddell, 282 N.C. 431, 194 S.E.2d 19 (1973).

Common law attempted murder was not abrogated by G.S. 14-32(a), prohibiting assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury, because while a person could attempt to murder another person by assaulting that person, with the intent to kill, using a deadly weapon and thereby inflict serious injury, a person did not have to do so to commit attempted murder, and attempted murder could occur through a multitude of circumstances, requiring simply (1) intent to kill and (2) an overt act which was more than mere preparation and committed with malice, premeditation, and deliberation. State v. Ramirez, 156 N.C. App. 249, 576 S.E.2d 714, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 117 (2003), cert. denied, 357 N.C.

Burglary. — Since 1889, burglary has been divided into two degrees by G.S. 14-51. If the burglarized dwelling is occupied, it is burglary in the first degree; if unoccupied, it is burglary in the second degree. To constitute burglary in either degree, however, the common law required the felonious breaking and entering to occur in the nighttime, and this common law requirement is still the law in North Carolina. State v. Jones, 294 N.C. 642, 243 S.E.2d 118 (1978).

The common-law definition of arson is still in force in this State. State v. Long, 243 N.C. 393, 90 S.E.2d 739 (1956); State v. Arnold, 285 N.C. 751, 208 S.E.2d 646 (1974).

Attempt to Commit Arson. — The common-law rule that an attempt to commit arson is a misdemeanor was changed by G.S. 14-67, which made an attempt to commit arson a felony. State v. Arnold, 285 N.C. 751, 208 S.E.2d 646 (1974).

Champerty is an offense at common law, and prevails in this State, being retained under this section. Merrell v. Stuart, 220 N.C. 326, 17 S.E.2d 458 (1941).

Barratry. — The common-law offense of barratry obtains in this State, since it has never been the subject of legislation in North Carolina and is not repugnant to nor inconsistent with our form of government. State v. Batson, 220 N.C. 411, 17 S.E.2d 511, 139 A.L.R. 614 (1941).

Stop and Frisk. — The absence of a stop and frisk statute is not fatal to the authority of law-enforcement officers in North Carolina to stop suspicious persons for questioning and to search those persons for dangerous weapons, since those practices are valid under the common law. State v. Streeter, 283 N.C. 203, 195 S.E.2d 502 (1973).

Right of Bail in Capital Cases. — At common law bail might be granted in capital cases only by a high judicial officer upon thorough scrutiny of the facts and great caution. This right, though once modified by former statutes against its existence in capital offenses where the proof was evident and the presumption was great, now prevails in this State as it existed at common law. State v. Herndon, 107 N.C. 934, 12 S.E. 268 (1890). See G.S. 15A-533.

Habeas Corpus. — It is an admitted principle of common law that every court of record of superior jurisdiction has the power to issue the writ of habeas corpus. This power is preserved in this State and can be exercised by all courts of record of superior jurisdiction. In re Bryan, 60 N.C. 1 (1863).

The common-law writ of error coram nobis to challenge the validity of petitioner's conviction for matters extraneous to the record is available under our procedure. In re Taylor, 230 N.C. 566, 53 S.E.2d 857 (1949), overruled on other grounds, Dantzic v. State, 279 N.C. 212, 182 S.E.2d 563 (1971); State v. Daniels, 231 N.C. 17, 56 S.E.2d 2 (1949), aff'd and appeal dismissed, 231 N.C. 509, 57 S.E.2d 653, cert. denied, 339 U.S. 954, 70 S. Ct. 837, 94 L. Ed. 2d 1366 (1950), overruled on other grounds, Dantzic v. State, 279 N.C. 571, 182 S.E.2d 571 (1971).

The availability of a writ of error coram nobis in this State stems from this section, which adopts the common law as the law of this State, and authority for the writ stems from N.C. Const., Art. IV, § 12, which gives the Supreme Court authority to exercise supervision over the inferior courts of the State. State v. Green, 277 N.C. 188, 176 S.E.2d 756 (1970).

There is no requirement that in every instance the approval of the Supreme Court must first be obtained before application can be made to the trial court for issuance of a writ of error coram nobis. Prior to In re Taylor, 229 N.C. 297, 49 S.E.2d 749 (1948), it does not appear that authority for the issuance of the writ, long recognized as an available common-law writ, was derived from the supervisory powers granted in the Constitution, but rather from this section, which, with certain exceptions, adopted the common law as the law of this State. Dantzic v. State, 279 N.C. 212, 182 S.E.2d 563, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 619, 184 S.E.2d 113 (1971).

Forfeiture for felony, which was the established rule at common law, has had no force in this State since 1778. White v. Fort, 10 N.C. 251 (1824).

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This Chapter replaces Chapter 5 of the North Carolina General Statutes. The Commission deals with the full range of contempt, both criminal and civil, for two reasons. First, criminal contempt is clearly within the subject matter which the Commission was charged to study, and many aspects of civil contempt are necessary to the enforcement of orders in criminal cases. Second, once the Commission began to deal with criminal contempt, it became necessary also to deal with civil contempt since the two are inextricably bound together in Chapter 5. The provisions in Chapter 5A are not directly drawn from any other statute, but they are drafted in light of Chapter 5 and of the American Bar Association's standards on the function of the trial judge. This Chapter does not carry forward the provisions of Chapter 5 which grant contempt powers to boards of county commissioners and the Utilities and Industrial Commissions. The application of those powers was sufficiently unclear under Chapter 5 that the Commission thought it best that those bodies either initiate statutes specifically dealing with that authority or that those bodies rely on court orders or criminal statutes dealing with the disruption of meetings.

Editor's Note. — The "Official Commentary" under this Chapter is reprinted from the Legislative Program and Report of the Criminal Code Commission to the 1977 General Assembly.

ARTICLE 1.

Criminal Contempt.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The establishment of this Article represents one of the basic purposes of the Commission in drafting the Chapter on contempt — to draw a sharp distinction between proceedings for criminal contempt and the proceedings for civil contempt (or "as for contempt"). This Article deals with those matters for which a sanction is imposed purely as punishment. The sanction occurs without regard to what the contemnor will do after imposition of the sanction.

§ 5A-11. Criminal contempt.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b), each of the following is criminal contempt:

(1) Willful behavior committed during the sitting of a court and directly tending to interrupt its proceedings.

(2) Willful behavior committed during the sitting of a court in its immediate view and presence and directly tending to impair the respect due its authority.

(3) Willful disobedience of, resistance to, or interference with a court's lawful process, order, directive, or instruction or its execution.

(4) Willful refusal to be sworn or affirmed as a witness, or, when so sworn or affirmed, willful refusal to answer any legal and proper question when the refusal is not legally justified.

(5) Willful publication of a report of the proceedings in a court that is grossly inaccurate and presents a clear and present danger of imminent and serious threat to the administration of justice, made with knowledge that it was false or with reckless disregard of whether it was false. No person, however, may be punished for publishing a truthful report of proceedings in a court.

(6) Willful or grossly negligent failure by an officer of the court to perform his duties in an official transaction.

(7) Willful or grossly negligent failure to comply with schedules and practices of the court resulting in substantial interference with the business of the court.

(8) Willful refusal to testify or produce other information upon the order of a judge acting pursuant to Article 61 of Chapter 15A, Granting of Immunity to Witnesses.

(9) Willful communication with a juror in an improper attempt to influence his deliberations.

(9a) Willful refusal by a defendant to comply with a condition of probation.

(10) Any other act or omission specified elsewhere in the General Statutes of North Carolina as grounds for criminal contempt.

The grounds for criminal contempt specified here are exclusive, regardless of any other grounds for criminal contempt which existed at common law.

(b) No person may be held in contempt under this section on the basis of the content of any broadcast, publication, or other communication unless it presents a clear and present danger of an imminent and serious threat to the administration of criminal justice.

(c) This section is subject to the provisions of G.S. 7A-276.1, Court orders prohibiting publication or broadcast of reports of open court proceedings or reports of public records banned. (1977, c. 711, s. 3; 1994, Ex. Sess., c. 19, s. 1.)

This section is based on Section 5-1. Generally this section merely compresses the existing statement of grounds for criminal contempt, including the consolidation of previously separate grounds. Under subdivision (4), refusal to answer a question when that answer is privileged would not be contempt since the refusal would be "legally justified." Subdivision (5) adds the clause "made with knowledge that it was false …" thus engrafting the standard of

New York Times v. Sullivan, 376 U.S. 254 (1964), onto cases of alleged contempt in publishing reports of proceedings. Subdivision (7) does not have a counterpart in Chapter 5; it was added to make clear, for example, that the failure to appear in court at the proper time by one, including counsel, whose nonappearance would interfere with the court's schedule, could be subject to criminal contempt. Subdivision (9) is new and gives the court authority to step in immediately in cases of improper communication with jury. It is intended to complement the provision of a new G.S. 14-225.1, enlarging the Chapter 14 provisions dealing with jury tampering. The provisions of G.S. 5A-12(e) dictate the relationship between the two sanctions for jury tampering. Subdivision (10) is also new and is intended to insure that this Chapter does not reject attempts elsewhere in the General Statutes to make certain acts criminal contempt. The final sentences of this section are intended to effect the same purpose as the final two sentences of G.S. 5-1. Subsection (b) supplements or clarifies G.S. 5A-11(a)(4) by prohibiting as punishment as contempt for a communication which does not pose a "clear and present danger" to justice. Subsection (c) operates as a reminder of the existence of another new provision, G.S. 7A-276.1, which prohibits "gag orders" of reports of open-court proceedings or of records required to be open to public inspection. Especially important is the final sentence of the section making such an order void, thus overcoming the usual rule that a person subject to an order must comply with that order, even though it may be illegal, until a higher court declares its illegality.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Many of the annotations under this section are from cases decided under former statutory provisions.

This section should be strictly construed as a criminal statute. West v. West, 199 N.C. 12, 153 S.E. 600 (1930). See In re Hege, 205 N.C. 625, 172 S.E. 345 (1934); North Carolina v. Carr, 264 F. Supp. 75 (W.D.N.C. 1967), appeal dismissed, 386 F.2d 129 (4th Cir. 1967).

The power to punish for contempt is inherent in all courts. Ex parte Terry, 128 U.S. 289, 9 S. Ct. 77, 32 L. Ed. 405 (1888).

Statutory provisions regulating proceedings for contempt confer on the courts all the inherent powers to attach for contempt that were recognized by the common law as essential to the due and orderly exercise of their jurisdiction and functions. State v. Little, 175 N.C. 743, 94 S.E. 680 (1917).

For discussions of the history, nature, and extent of the power of courts to punish for contempt, see Ex parte McCown, 139 N.C. 95, 51 S.E. 957 (1905); In re Brown, 168 N.C. 417, 84 S.E. 690 (1915). See also 12 N.C.L. Rev. 260.

And Courts Cannot Be Deprived of Such Power. — It is essential for an effective administration of justice in an orderly and efficient way that the court possess certain powers to enforce its mandate. A legislative interference to the extent of depriving the courts of these powers is tantamount to depriving the judicial department of the means of self-preservation and cannot be constitutionally justified. See Ex parte McCown, 139 N.C. 95, 51 S.E. 957 (1905); Snow v. Hawkes, 183 N.C. 365, 111 S.E. 621 (1922).

The power to punish for a contempt committed in the presence of the court, or near enough to impede its business, is essential to the existence of every court. In re Hennis, 6 N.C. App. 683, 171 S.E.2d 211 (1969), rev'd on other grounds, 276 N.C. 571, 173 S.E.2d 785 (1970).

But Legislature May Regulate Same. — Contempt powers, as they existed at common law, while they may not be abrogated, may be reasonably regulated by legislation. Thus, statutes such as those in former Chapter 5 were regulatory legislation upon the subject, and being in accord with modern doctrine, could not be assailed on the grounds of unconstitutionality. See In re Oldham, 89 N.C. 23 (1883); In re Robinson, 117 N.C. 533, 23 S.E. 453 (1895); In re Brown, 168 N.C. 417, 84 S.E. 690 (1915).

Limit of District Court's Authority. — A judge of the district court has no authority, except in his own district, to punish for contempt. In re Rhodes, 65 N.C. 518 (1871); Morris v. Whitehead, 65 N.C. 637 (1871).

Acts constituting contempt committed before a referee in supplementary proceedings are to be punished by the court making the reference. LaFontaine v. Southern Underwriters Ass'n, 83 N.C. 132 (1880).

Authority of Commissioner Not Exclusive. — The power of a commissioner, appointed by the court, to commit for refusal to testify is not given exclusively, if at all; but he may invoke the power of the judge, even though he may be given concurrent authority, under statute. Bradley Fertilizer Co. v. Taylor, 112 N.C. 141, 17 S.E. 69 (1893).

Authority of Nisi Prius Judge. — The right of a nisi prius judge to order a witness or anyone else into immediate custody for a contempt committed in the presence of the court in session is unquestioned. State v. Dick, 60 N.C. 440 (1864); State v. Ownby, 146 N.C. 677, 61 S.E. 630 (1908); State v. Swink, 151 N.C. 726, 66 S.E. 448 (1909).

Contempt of Subordinate Officer Regarded as Contempt of Appointing Court. — A contempt against a subordinate officer appointed by a court, such as a commissioner, ordinarily is regarded as contempt of the authority of the appointing court, and the appointing court has power to punish such contempt. This is true even where such subordinate officer is vested with the power to punish. Galyon v. Stutts, 241 N.C. 120, 84 S.E.2d 822 (1954).

Notice of Charges and Opportunity to Be Heard. — The principles of due process require that before an attorney is finally adjudicated in contempt and sentenced after a trial for conduct during the trial, he should have reasonable notice of the specific charges and opportunity to be heard in his own behalf. In re Paul, 84 N.C. App. 491, 353 S.E.2d 254, cert. denied, 319 N.C. 673, 356 S.E.2d 779 (1987), 484 U.S. 1004, 108 S. Ct. 694, 98 L. Ed. 2d 646 (1988).

The superior court judge was well within the bounds of the court's inherent authority to manage the case docket when he struck defendant's answer as sanction for willful failure to execute agreed settlement because defendants offered no plausible excuse as to why they did not execute the two paragraph consent judgment, saying only that they did not understand it and in addition judge gave notice that failure to file consent order would result in the imposition of sanctions. Lomax v. Shaw, 101 N.C. App. 560, 400 S.E.2d 97 (1991).

Failure to Comply with Schedules. — The trial judge has the power to hold a party in contempt for willful or grossly negligent failure to comply with schedules and practices of the court resulting in substantial interference with the business of the court. Lomax v. Shaw, 101 N.C. App. 560, 400 S.E.2d 97 (1991).

Applied in Osmar v. Crosland-Osmar, Inc., 43 N.C. App. 721, 259 S.E.2d 771 (1979); Atassi v. Atassi, 122 N.C. App. 356, 470 S.E.2d 59 (1996); State v. Reaves, 142 N.C. II. NATURE AND PURPOSE OF PROCEEDINGS.

Nature of Proceedings. — The fact that contemptuous conduct arises in a civil action does not alter the fact that contempt proceedings are criminal in nature. Blue Jeans Corp. of Am. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Although contempt of court, in its essential character, is divided into various kinds, such as direct or constructive, and civil or criminal, nevertheless in every species of contempt there is said to be necessarily inherent an element of offense against the majesty of the law savoring more or less of criminality. Therefore it is said that the process by which the party charged is reached and tried is essentially criminal or quasi-criminal. Blue Jeans Corp. of Am. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

A contempt proceeding is sui generis. It is criminal in its nature in that the party is charged with doing something forbidden, and if found guilty, is punished. Mauney v. Mauney, 268 N.C. 254, 150 S.E.2d 391 (1966).

A contempt proceeding under this section is sui generis, criminal in its nature, which may be resorted to in civil or criminal actions. Blue Jeans Corp. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 4 N.C. App. 245, 166 S.E.2d 698, aff'd, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Although labeled "civil" contempt, the proceeding formerly designated "as for contempt" was by no means a civil action or proceeding to which G.S. 6-18 (when costs shall be allowed to plaintiff as a matter of course), or G.S. 6-20 (allowance of costs in discretion of court) would apply. United Artists Records, Inc. v. Eastern Tape Corp., 18 N.C. App. 183, 196 S.E.2d 598, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 666, 197 S.E.2d 880 (1973).

Contempt proceedings may be resorted to in civil or criminal actions. Mauney v. Mauney, 268 N.C. 254, 150 S.E.2d 391 (1966).

Purpose. — Punishments for contempt of court have two aspects, namely: (1) To vindicate the dignity of the court from disrespect shown to it or its orders; and (2) To compel the performance of some order or decree of the court which it is in the power of the party to perform and which he refuses to obey. See In re Chiles, 89 U.S. 157, 22 L. Ed. 819 (1874); Bessette v. W.B. Conkey Co., 194 U.S. 324, 24 S. Ct. 665, 48 L. Ed. 997 (1904).

Contempt Proceeding as Part of Original Injunction Suit. — While some jurisdictions hold that a criminal contempt proceeding is independent and not a part of the case out of which the alleged contempt arose, there is authority that a contempt proceeding based on the violation of an injunction, regardless of whether the proceeding is civil or criminal in nature, is a part of the original injunction suit and properly triable as such. Blue Jeans Corp. of Am. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Criminal and Civil Contempt Distinguished. — Proceedings for contempt are of two classes, criminal and civil. Criminal proceedings are those brought to preserve the power and to vindicate the dignity of the court and to punish for disobedience of its processes or orders. Civil proceedings are those instituted to preserve and enforce the rights of the parties to actions and to compel obedience to orders and decrees made for the benefit of the suitors. Galyon v. Stutts, 241 N.C. 120, 84 S.E.2d 822 (1954).

Criminal contempt is a term applied where the judgment is in punishment of an act already accomplished, tending to interfere with the administration of justice. Civil contempt is a term applied where the proceeding is had to preserve and enforce the rights of private parties to suits and to compel obedience to orders and decrees made for the benefit of such parties. Mauney v. Mauney, 268 N.C. 254, 150 S.E.2d 391 (1966); Blue Jeans Corp. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 4 N.C. App. 245, 166 S.E.2d 698, aff'd, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969); O'Briant v. O'Briant, 313 N.C. 432, 329 S.E.2d 370 (1985).

Contempt proceedings are of two classes: those brought to vindicate the dignity and authority of the court; and those brought to enforce the rights of private parties. The former are as a rule held criminal in their nature and are generally governed by the rules applicable to criminal cases. North Carolina v. Carr, 264 F. Supp. 75 (W.D.N.C. 1967), appeal dismissed, 386 F.2d 129 (4th Cir. 1967).

Criminal proceedings, involving as they do offenses against the courts and organized society, are punitive in their nature, and the government, the courts, and the people are interested in their prosecution. Whereas civil proceedings, having as their underlying purpose the preservation of private rights, are primarily remedial and coercive in their nature, and are usually prosecuted at the instance of an aggrieved suitor. Galyon v. Stutts, 241

Criminal contempt is the commission of an act tending to interfere with the administration of justice, while civil contempt is the remedy for the enforcement of orders in the equity jurisdiction of the court, and the willful refusal to pay alimony as ordered by the court is civil contempt. Dyer v. Dyer, 213 N.C. 634, 197 S.E. 157 (1938).

A major factor in determining whether contempt is civil or criminal is the purpose for which the power is exercised. Where the punishment is to preserve the court's authority and to punish disobedience of its orders, it is criminal contempt. Where the purpose is to provide a remedy for an injured suitor and to coerce compliance with an order, the contempt is civil. O'Briant v. O'Briant, 313 N.C. 432, 329 S.E.2d 370 (1985).

Punishment for Both Criminal and Civil Contempt. — There are certain instances where contemners may be punished for both criminal contempt and for civil contempt. Blue Jeans Corp. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 4 N.C. App. 245, 166 S.E.2d 698, aff'd, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

When Criminal Contempt Sanctions Are Applied. — Criminal contempt or punishment for contempt is applied where the judgment is in punishment of an act already accomplished, tending to interfere with the administration of justice. Rose's Stores, Inc. v. Tarrytown Center, Inc., 270 N.C. 201, 154 S.E.2d 320 (1967); Blue Jeans Corp. of Am. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Conditioning of Probation or Suspended Sentence on Contemnor's Purging Himself. — The imposition of probationary conditions under G.S. 15A-1343 and the possibility of early termination under G.S. 15A-1342(b) do not transform probationary or suspended sentences into civil relief. However, specifically conditioning the imposition or effect of the probationary or suspended sentence upon the contemnor's purging himself would constitute civil relief. Bishop v. Bishop, 90 N.C. App. 499, 369 S.E.2d 106 (1988).

Order Allowing Defendant to Avoid Confinement by Paying Arrearages Held Remedial Relief. — Where the court ordered defendant confined in jail for a period of 29 days, but it allowed defendant to avoid that punishment altogether by paying the entire amount of child support arrearages, this constituted remedial relief and therefore required that the court's order be construed as adjudicating defendant in civil contempt. Bishop v. Bishop, 90 N.C. App. 499, 369 S.E.2d 106 (1988).

III. RIGHTS OF ACCUSED.

Criminal contempts are crimes. North Carolina v. Carr, 264 F. Supp. 75 (W.D.N.C. 1967), appeal dismissed, 386 F.2d 129 (4th Cir. 1967); O'Briant v. O'Briant, 313 N.C. 432, 329 S.E.2d 370 (1985).

Accordingly, accused is entitled to benefits of all constitutional safeguards. North Carolina v. Carr, 264 F. Supp. 75 (W.D.N.C. 1967), appeal dismissed, 386 F.2d 129 (4th Cir. 1967); O'Briant v. O'Briant, 313 N.C. 432, 329 S.E.2d 370 (1985).

Summary Proceedings Not Repugnant to Principles of Due Process. — Summary proceedings for contempt are not within the constitutional prohibition contained in the due process clause. The power to punish summarily for contempt has existed at common law "as far as the annals of the law extend." State v. Little, 175 N.C. 743, 94 S.E. 680 (1917).

But Safeguards Are Required Where Adjudication and Sentencing Are Delayed. — Due process safeguards must be extended to persons cited for direct contempt of court in cases where final adjudication and sentencing for the contemptuous conduct is delayed until after trial. In re Paul, 28 N.C. App. 610, 222 S.E.2d 479, appeal dismissed, 289 N.C. 614, 223 S.E.2d 767 (1976).

Notice of Charges and Opportunity to Be Heard. — Before an attorney is finally adjudicated in contempt and sentenced after trial for conduct during trial, he should have reasonable notice of the specific charges and opportunity to be heard in his own behalf. This is not to say, however, that a full scale trial is appropriate. In re Paul, 28 N.C. App. 610, 222 S.E.2d 479, appeal dismissed, 289 N.C. 614, 223 S.E.2d 767 (1976).

The principles of due process require that before an attorney is finally adjudicated in contempt and sentenced after a trial for conduct during the trial, he should have reasonable notice of the specific charges and opportunity to be heard in his own behalf. In re Paul, 84 N.C. App. 491, 353 S.E.2d 254, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 1004, 108 S. Ct. 694, 98 L. Ed. 2d 646 (1988).

When Notice and Hearing Are Required. — Summary proceedings are appropriate for punishing direct contempt when necessary to restore order or maintain the dignity and authority of the court and when the measures are imposed substantially contemporaneously with the contempt; however, in cases where a court does not act immediately to punish acts constituting direct contempt or where the contempt is indirect, notice and a hearing are required. O'Briant v. O'Briant, 313 N.C. 432, 329 S.E.2d 370 (1985).

In contempt actions where the defendant is not punished summarily or where the contemptuous act does not occur in the presence of the judge or legislative body, principles of due process require reasonable notice of a charge and opportunity to be heard in defense before punishment is imposed. O'Briant v. O'Briant, 313 N.C. 432, 329 S.E.2d 370 (1985).

Notice Held Inadequate. — Notice afforded plaintiff mother in custody and support proceedings was inadequate to inform her that she should be prepared to defend herself, for her failure to attend court hearings, on charges of contempt at custody trial. O'Briant v. O'Briant, 313 N.C. 432, 329 S.E.2d 370 (1985).

Right to Jury Trial. — The United States Supreme Court has held that serious contempts are so merely like other serious crimes that they are subject to the jury trial provisions of U.S. Const., Art. 3, § 2 and of Amend. VI thereto, which is binding upon the states by virtue of the due process clause of Amend. XIV. Blue Jeans Corp. of Am. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

The maximum punishment authorized for criminal contempt under former G.S. 5-1 and 5-4 was a fine of $250 or imprisonment for 30 days, or both. This made it a petty offense with no constitutional right to a jury trial. Blue Jeans Corp. of Am. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

The possibilities that striking workers adjudged guilty of criminal contempt under former G.S. 5-1 might be denied the right to return to work or might be disqualified from drawing unemployment benefits for as long as 12 weeks were held irrelevant on the issue of whether the strikers were entitled to trial by jury in the contempt proceedings, since the possibilities were no part of the punishment which the court could impose for criminal contempt. Blue Jeans Corp. of Am. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Contempt proceedings may be resorted to in civil or criminal actions, and though contempt is criminal in its nature, respondents therein are not entitled to trial by jury. Safie Mfg. Co. v. Arnold, 228 N.C. 375, 45 S.E.2d 577 (1947).

In a North Carolina contempt proceeding, the contemnor is not entitled to a jury trial. Blue Jeans Corp. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 4 N.C. App. 245, 166 S.E.2d 698, aff'd, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Due Process Requirements Met. — Due process requirements of notice and opportunity to be heard on a contempt charge were adequately met where petitioner received actual notice, including the time and place, that he would be cited for contempt, and a written transcript provided formal notice of the specific actions for which petitioner was being cited. In re Paul, 28 N.C. App. 610, 222 S.E.2d 479, appeal dismissed, 289 N.C. 614, 223 S.E.2d 767 (1976).

Right to Confront Witnesses. — A person denying his asserted violation of a restraining order in contempt proceedings has the right under the provisions of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19, synonymous with due process of law under the United States Constitution, to confront and cross-examine witnesses by whose testimony the asserted violation is to be established. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

The North Carolina Constitution preserves the right of confrontation of the witnesses against an accused, and this right is applicable to contempt proceedings, so that an adjudication of contempt against defendant based on the affidavit of the receiver of a corporation was invalid. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Such Right Is Waivable. — See Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Self-Incrimination. — Where defendant was accused of mismanaging, diverting, converting and wasting corporate assets, and he was ordered by the trial court to produce his tax returns, the production of the returns did not amount to such authentication as to be compelled testimonial self-incrimination which would support a claim of Fifth Amendment privilege; thus, defendant could be found in contempt. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

IV. ACTS CONSTITUTING CONTEMPT.

A. In General.

Grounds Exhaustive. — The enumeration of the acts punishable for contempt is exhaustive; hence no other act than those specifically designated may be the subject matter of contempt proceedings. See In re Odum, 133 N.C. 250, 45 S.E. 569 (1903).

A person guilty of any of the acts or omissions enumerated in this section may be punished for contempt, because such acts or omissions have a direct tendency to interrupt the proceedings of the court or to impair the respect due to its authority. Luther v. Luther, 234 N.C. 429, 67 S.E.2d 345 (1951); Rose's Stores, Inc. v. Tarrytown Center, Inc., 270 N.C. 206, 154 S.E.2d 313 (1967).

The acts and omissions enumerated in this section correspond to criminal contempt and involve offenses against the court and organized society, punishable for contempt for the purpose of preserving the power and vindicating the dignity of the court. Galyon v. Stutts, 241 N.C. 120, 84 S.E.2d 822 (1954).

"Willful" and "Unlawful" Distinguished. — The word "willful", when used in a statute creating an offense, implies the doing of the act purposely and deliberately in violation of law.

The term "unlawfully" implies that an act is done or not done as the law allows or requires, while the term "willfully" implies that the act is done knowingly and of stubborn purpose. In re Hege, 205 N.C. 625, 172 S.E. 345 (1934); Clayton v. Clayton, 54 N.C. App. 612, 284 S.E.2d 125 (1981).

In order for an act to be "willful," as the term is used in criminal law, it must be done deliberately and purposefully in violation of law, and without authority, justification or excuse. State v. Chriscoe, 85 N.C. App. 155, 354 S.E.2d 289 (1987).

"Grossly negligent," for purposes of criminal culpability, implies recklessness or carelessness that shows a thoughtless disregard of consequences or a heedless indifference to the rights of others. State v. Chriscoe, 85 N.C. App. 155, 354 S.E.2d 289 (1987).

Willfulness or Gross Negligence Not Shown. — Where evidence showed that defendant's short delay of an hour or an hour and a quarter in arriving at court was due, not merely to an absence of transportation, but also to her concern for her mother's safety brought about by her mother's failure to arrive on time or to answer the telephone, defendant's behavior did not rise to the level of willfulness or gross negligence. State v. Chriscoe, 85 N.C. App. 155, 354 S.E.2d 289 (1987).

Trial courts must be on guard against confusing offenses to their sensibilities with obstruction to the administration of justice. In re Little, 404 U.S. 553, 92 S. Ct. 659, 30 L. Ed. 2d 708 (1972).

The vehemence of the language used is not alone the measure of the power to punish for contempt. The fires which it kindles must constitute an imminent, not merely a likely, threat to the administration of justice. The danger must not be remote or even probable; it must immediately imperil. In re Little, 404 U.S. 553, 92 S. Ct. 659, 30 L. Ed. 2d 708 (1972).

Accused Conducting His Own Defense. — Where the accused was defending himself at his criminal trial when his motion for continuance, by reason of another trial engagement of his retained counsel, was denied, and he was adjudged in contempt for stating in summation after the close of evidence that the court was biased and had prejudged his case, and that he was a political prisoner, the court held that he was entitled to as much latitude in conducting his defense as is enjoyed by counsel vigorously espousing a client's cause, and that his statements did not constitute criminal contempt, as they were not uttered in a boisterous tone, and did not actually disrupt the court proceeding or constitute an imminent threat to the administration of justice. In re Little, 404 U.S. 553, 92 S. Ct. 659, 30 L. Ed. 2d 708 (1972).

A contempt citation delivered to a drunk who had been put into a holding cell at the far end of the room from the booking area, and who was behaving in a boisterous, rude, profane and obscene manner, by a magistrate who never engaged in any work on the drunk's warrant, was an unconstitutional and fundamentally unfair act which violated due process of law. Thompson v. Stahl, 346 F. Supp. 401 (W.D.N.C. 1972).

B. Disruptive Conduct.

Disturbances Calculated to Interrupt Proceedings. — Acts which are punishable under this section include all cases of disorderly conduct, breaches of the peace, noise and other disturbance near enough, designed and reasonably calculated to interrupt the proceedings of the court then engaged in the administration of justice and the dispatch of the business presently before it. State v. Little, 175 N.C. 743, 94 S.E. 680 (1917).

Employment of Individual to Disrupt Criminal Trial. — Evidence held sufficient to support the trial judge's finding that respondent attorney solicited an individual to disrupt the criminal trial of his client, thereby committing willful behavior during the sitting of a court which tended to interrupt its proceedings, in violation of subsection (a) of this section. In re Paul, 84 N.C. App. 491, 353 S.E.2d 254, cert. denied, 319 N.C. 673, 356 S.E.2d 779 (1987), 484 U.S. 1004, 108 S. Ct. 694, 98 L. Ed. 2d 646 (1988).

Assaulting Judge During Recess of Court. — Where the respondent visited the judge at his boardinghouse during a recess of the court, before the adjournment of the term and assaulted the judge, it was held that this conduct was a direct contempt of the court as much as if the assault had been committed in the court during trial. Ex parte McCown, 139 N.C. 95, 51 S.E. 957 (1905).

Protection Extended to Officers of Court, Witnesses, etc. — It is an act of contempt to interfere with the functioning of the business not only of the judge but also of all the officers of the court, and persons such as attorneys, jurors and witnesses, who in the line of their duty are assisting the court in the dispatch of its business. State v. Little, 175 N.C. 743, 94 S.E. 680 (1917); Snow v. Hawkes, 183 N.C. 365, 111 S.E. 621 (1922).

Fighting in Courthouse Yard. — Fighting in the yard of the courthouse, before the courthouse door, constituted the basis of the offense of contempt. State v. Woodfin, 27 N.C. 199 (1844).

C. Disobedience of Orders.

Willful disobedience of an order lawfully issued by the court is contemptuous conduct. Blue Jeans Corp. of Am. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Deliberate Disobedience Irrespective of Intent. — Attorney willfully disobeyed a lawful order of the court in a manner that was likely to interrupt the matters before the court where he deliberately disobeyed the judge's repeated orders to sit down and be quiet, and while it was unlikely that he intended any insult or injury to the court, he consciously disobeyed direct orders and was properly convicted of criminal contempt. Nakell v. Attorney Gen., 15 F.3d 319 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 866, 115 S. Ct. 184, 130 L. Ed. 2d 118 (1994).

In the absence of an order to be present, defendant may not be held in contempt for violation of such an order. State v. Chriscoe, 85 N.C. App. 155, 354 S.E.2d 289 (1987).

Conditioning of Probation or Suspended Sentence on Contemnor's Purging Himself. — The imposition of probationary conditions under G.S. 15A-1343 and the possibility of early termination under G.S. 15A-1342(b) do not transform probationary or suspended sentences into civil relief. However, specifically conditioning the imposition or effect of the probationary or suspended sentence upon the contemnor's purging himself would constitute civil relief. Bishop v. Bishop, 90 N.C. App. 499, 369 S.E.2d 106 (1988).

Failure to obey a court order cannot be punished for contempt unless the disobedience is willful, which imports knowledge and a stubborn purpose. Lamm v. Lamm, 229 N.C. 248, 49 S.E.2d 403 (1948); Mauney v. Mauney, 268 N.C. 254, 150 S.E.2d 391 (1966).

Impossibility to Comply with Order or Process. — Where disobedience to process or order is due to circumstances which make it impossible for the contemnor to obey such order or process, he may not be punished for contempt. Thus where the clerk issued a notice to the respondent to produce a certain will which was in the custody of some other clerk, it was held that the order to adjudge the respondent guilty of contempt was reversible on appeal. In re Scarborough's Will, 139 N.C. 423, 51 S.E. 931 (1905).

The defendant must have been able to obey the order, and in spite of his ability must have disobeyed it. Inability to obey is a good excuse. Kane v. Haywood, 66 N.C. 1 (1872); Boyett v. Vaughan, 89 N.C. 27 (1883); Smith v. Smith, 92 N.C. 304 (1885).

One does not act willfully in failing to comply with a judgment if it has not been within his power to do so since the judgment was rendered. Mauney v. Mauney, 268 N.C. 254, 150 S.E.2d 391 (1966).

Inability to Pay Money. — The excuse is sufficient where the defendant has been unable to pay money according to an order. Kane v. Haywood, 66 N.C. 1 (1872); Boyett v. Vaughan, 89 N.C. 27 (1883); Smith v. Smith, 92 N.C. 304 (1885).

Order Allowing Defendant to Avoid Confinement by Paying Arrearages Held Remedial Relief. — Where the court ordered defendant confined in jail for a period of 29 days, but it allowed defendant to avoid that punishment altogether by paying the entire amount of child support arrearages, this constituted remedial relief and therefore required that the court's order be construed as adjudicating defendant in civil contempt. Bishop v. Bishop, 90 N.C. App. 499, 369 S.E.2d 106 (1988).

Alimony and Support Payments. — Where defendant testified that his failure after knowledge to obey a court order for the payment of alimony pendente lite was due to his lack of financial means, and no evidence was presented at the hearing tending to negative the truth of defendant's explanation or to establish as an affirmative fact that he possessed the means wherewith to comply with the order, the court's finding that defendant willfully disobeyed the order was not supported by the record, and judgment committing him to imprisonment for contempt would be set aside. Lamm v. Lamm, 229 N.C. 248, 49 S.E.2d 403 (1948).

As to failure to pay alimony, see also Zimmerman v. Zimmerman, 113 N.C. 432, 18 S.E. 334 (1893).

Where the husband, in proceedings against him for contempt for disobeying an order to pay moneys for the support of his child, showed by the uncontradicted testimony of himself and a witness that he had no property nor income except what he could earn, and that he had been unable to obtain employment and was therefore unable to comply with the terms of the order, the evidence failed to show that the disobedience was willful, and he could not be adjudged in contempt of court. West v. West, 199 N.C. 12, 153 S.E. 600 (1930).

The mere fact that defendant, ordered to pay a certain sum monthly for the necessary subsistence of his wife and child, has a right to move at any time for modification of the order does not support the conclusion that defendant's failure to comply with the order is willful. Smithwick v. Smithwick, 218 N.C. 503, 11 S.E.2d 455 (1940).

Failure to Comply with Separation Agreement. — Husband could not be adjudged in contempt for failure to comply with separation agreement entered into prior to the institution of divorce action, judgment in which provided that it should not affect or invalidate the separation agreement. Brown v. Brown, 224 N.C. 556, 31 S.E.2d 529 (1944).

Where the impossible circumstances are removed prior to the arrest for contempt the defendant will not be excused. Thomasville

Shooting Club v. Thomas, 120 N.C. 334, 26 S.E. 1007 (1897).

Disavowal of Disrespectful Intent. — The willful disobedience of a restraining order by the party on whom it had been served, and who was aware of its meaning and import, is in itself an act of contempt, from which he may not purge himself by disavowing a disrespectful intent. In re Parker, 177 N.C. 463, 99 S.E. 342 (1919).

Advice of Counsel No Excuse. — The failure to obey the order of the court placing property in possession of a receiver is contempt, even though the contemnor acted under an advice of counsel. Such advice is no protection to the intentional violation of the order. Delozier v. Bird, 123 N.C. 689, 31 S.E. 834 (1898).

In such a case the counsel himself may be subjected to contempt proceedings. This fact, however, will be considered by the judge in imposing the punishment. Weston v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 158 N.C. 270, 73 S.E. 799 (1912). See Green v. Griffin, 95 N.C. 50 (1886).

An order of court not lawfully issued may not be the basis on which to found a proceeding for contempt. Patterson v. Patterson, 230 N.C. 481, 53 S.E.2d 658 (1949); State v. Black, 232 N.C. 154, 59 S.E.2d 621 (1950).

Where an order is void ab initio, one may not be held for contempt for disobeying such order, and the fact that he did not appeal from the granting of the order does not affect his liability, the order not being one lawfully issued. In re Longley, 205 N.C. 488, 171 S.E. 788 (1933).

Where a subpoena issued by a municipal-county court and running outside the county was a nullity because not attested by the seal of the court, neither service of the process nor voluntary appearance thereunder could waive the defect or vitalize the process so as to make the willful disobedience of the subpoena a basis for contempt proceedings. State v. Black, 232 N.C. 154, 59 S.E.2d 621 (1950).

Thus, disobeying an order entered by a court without jurisdiction is not contempt. Harding v. Harding, 46 N.C. App. 62, 264 S.E.2d 131 (1980).

Upon application for custody of children after decree of divorce, the resident judge entered a temporary order awarding the custody to the father, and issued an order to defendant wife to appear outside the county and outside the district to show cause why the temporary order should not be made permanent. It was held that the judge was without jurisdiction to hear the matter outside the district, and an order issued upon the hearing of the order to show cause was void ab initio. Patterson v. Patterson, 230 N.C. 481, 53 S.E.2d 658 (1949).

Failure to Comply with Discovery Order Punishable for Both Civil and Criminal Contempt. — One act may be punishable both for civil contempt and for criminal contempt. This kind of duality particularly inheres in a party litigant's willful failure to comply with a discovery order. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

Where defendant was accused of mismanaging, diverting and wasting corporate assets and the trial court ordered him to cooperate with receivers of the corporation and to provide them and plaintiffs with copies of his tax returns and a list of his assets, defendant's contempt, if any, in failing to provide the required materials could be criminal or civil, and contemnor waived procedural requirements when he came into court to answer charges of the trial court's show cause order. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Disobeying Order of Clerk. — Where, in supplementary proceedings, the defendant has willfully disobeyed an order of the clerk of the superior court having jurisdiction, in disposing of his property, he is guilty of contempt of court. Bank of Zebulon v. Chamblee, 188 N.C. 417, 124 S.E. 741 (1924).

Urging Witness to Disobey Subpoena. — Where there was evidence that defendant telephoned a witness in a civil action and tried to get her not to obey a subpoena to be issued by the court, defendant was held to be in indirect contempt of court in accordance with G.S. 5A-13. State v. Wall, 49 N.C. App. 678, 272 S.E.2d 152 (1980).

Noncompliance with Order to Produce Records of Business. — Where, in response to an order to produce records of his business for a designated period, defendant appeared and testified that the only business records kept by him were the cash register tapes, that these had been destroyed by rats, and that therefore he had no records or documents with which to comply with the order, and there was no evidence to the contrary, it was error for the court to find and conclude that defendant was in contempt within the purview of this section for noncompliance with the order. Galyon v. Stutts, 241 N.C. 120, 84 S.E.2d 822 (1954).

Willfully Preventing Receiver from Taking Possession. — A judgment debtor, fixed with knowledge as a party upon whom notice was served, is guilty of contempt of court in willfully preventing the receiver from taking possession of the property in conformity with a lawful order of the court, even though the order may be erroneous, if no appeal therefrom was perfected by him. Nobles v. Roberson, 212 N.C. 334, 193 S.E. 420 (1937).

Violation of Injunction. — Where courts of competent jurisdiction successively issued three injunctive orders for the purpose of protecting persons who desired to work, and who had a right to work, if they so desired, in plaintiff's plant, while the orders were by their terms temporary and effective only until final trial of the cause, they were lawful orders of a court of competent jurisdiction. Any person guilty of willful disobedience of such orders could be punished for contempt of court. Blue Jeans Corp. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 4 N.C. App. 245, 166 S.E.2d 698, aff'd, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

As to disobeying an injunction or restraining order such as cutting timber after injunction against the same, see Fleming v. Patterson, 99 N.C. 404, 6 S.E. 396 (1888); In re Carolina, C. & O. Ry., 151 N.C. 467, 66 S.E. 438 (1909); Weston v. John L. Roper Lumber Co., 158 N.C. 270, 73 S.E. 799 (1912).

Defendant Not Subjected to Improper Burden of Proof. — Defendant was not subjected to an improper burden of proof under G.S. 5A-15(f) in finding that defendant was in criminal contempt under G.S. 5A-11(a)(3), as defendant admitted that defendant was ordered to stay out of the judges' offices and that defendant entered an area of the courthouse marked "Judges Offices" to file an emergency motion with the trial court administrator; there was no issue of fact to be decided, and thus no burden of proof was placed on defendant, as the trial court properly required proof beyond a reasonable doubt of defendant's contempt of court. State v. Simon, — N.C. App. —, 648 S.E.2d 853, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1734 (2007).

Cases Involving Violations of Order Restraining Strikers. — For a series of cases involving violations of a restraining order which sought to prohibit violence and mass picketing on the part of strikers, see Harriet Cotton Mills v. Local No. 578, Textile Workers Union, 251 N.C. 218, 111 S.E.2d 457 (1959), cert. denied, 362 U.S. 941, 80 S. Ct. 806, 4 L. Ed. 2d 770 (1960); Harriet Cotton Mills v. Local No. 578, Textile Workers Union, 251 N.C. 231, 111 S.E.2d 465 (1959), cert. denied, 362 U.S. 941, 80 S. Ct. 806, 4 L. Ed. 2d 770 (1960); Henderson Cotton Mills v. Local No. 584, Textile Workers Union, 251 N.C. 234, 111 S.E.2d 476 (1959); Henderson Cotton Mills v. Local No. 584, Textile Workers Union, 251 N.C. 240, 111 S.E.2d 471 (1959); Harriet Cotton Mills v. Local No. 578, Textile Workers Union, 251 N.C. 248, 111 S.E.2d 467 (1959), cert. denied, 362 U.S. 941, 80 S. Ct. 806, 4 L. Ed. 2d 770 (1960); Henderson Cotton Mills v. Local No. 584, Textile Workers Union, 251 N.C. 254, 111 S.E.2d 480 (1959), cert. denied, 362 U.S. 941, 80 S. Ct. 806, 4 L. Ed. 2d 770 (1960).

As to failure to return process, see Ex parte Summers, 27 N.C. 149 (1844).

As to failure to settle estates by public administrator, see In re Brinson, 73 N.C. 278 (1875).

Defendant Properly Found in Criminal Contempt. — Defendant was properly found in criminal contempt under G.S. 5A-11(a)(3) as: (1) G.S. 5A-11(a)(3) did not require that a finding of criminal contempt be predicated upon the failure to obey a written order; (2) the practical effect of a show cause order was the same as if it had noticed a first judge's order; (3) defendant was ordered not to visit the judges' office about the case any further, yet defendant entered the courthouse area marked "Judges' Office" to hand deliver an emergency motion to the trial court administrator; (4) defendant knew defendant was to stay out of the judges' office area where the trial court administrator's office was located; and (5) defendant's claim that defendant should not have been held in contempt because defendant's purpose for being in the trial court administrator's office was to leave an emergency motion for the trial court administrator was rejected. State v. Simon, — N.C. App. —, 648 S.E.2d 853, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1734 (2007).

Violations of Court's Holding Regarding Standing. — Where court repeatedly held that former corporation manager had no standing to appeal, but he continued to appeal every decision reached on behalf of corporate defendants in violation of court's orders, trial court had jurisdiction to consider criminal contempt based on corporation manager's repeated violations of the court's orders. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 100 N.C. App. 318, 396 S.E.2d 92 (1990).

Because an administrative agency of the State is not subject to contempt, respondent, a State employee who was dismissed from his job and later reinstated, could not petition the superior court for a show cause order against petitioner Department of Transportation ("DOT"), an administrative agency of the State, for contempt pursuant to this section or G.S. 5A-21. North Carolina DOT v. Davenport, 334 N.C. 428, 432 S.E.2d 303 (1993).

D. Recalcitrant Witnesses.

Refusal to Testify After Having Been Sworn. — It has been uniformly held by the Supreme Court and by courts of other jurisdictions that the power to punish for contempt committed in the presence of the court is inherent in the court, and not dependent upon statutory authority. Without such power the court cannot perform its judicial function. This principle is especially applicable when the contempt consists in the refusal of the witness in attendance upon the court, after having been duly sworn, to answer a question propounded to him for the purpose of eliciting evidence material to the issue to be decided by the court. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967).

The giving of testimony which is obviously false or evasive can constitute contempt. In re Edison, 15 N.C. App. 354, 190 S.E.2d 235 (1972).

Since the power of the court over a witness in requiring proper responses is inherent and necessary for the furtherance of justice, it must be conceded that testimony which is obviously false or evasive is equivalent to a refusal to testify. In re Edison, 15 N.C. App. 354, 190 S.E.2d 235 (1972).

Obviously False or Evasive Testimony Is Equivalent to Refusal to Testify. — The power of the court to require a witness to give proper responses is inherent and necessary for the furtherance of justice, and therefore, testimony which is obviously false or evasive is equivalent to a refusal to testify. Galyon v. Stutts, 241 N.C. 120, 84 S.E.2d 822 (1954).

Although It Is Also a Crime. — Making a false statement under oath may constitute contempt, notwithstanding that the conduct may also be a crime, such as perjury or false swearing. In re Edison, 15 N.C. App. 354, 190 S.E.2d 235 (1972).

And Can Be Punished Civilly or Criminally. — Giving "obviously false" testimony can be punishable by contempt civilly or criminally. In re Edison, 15 N.C. App. 354, 190 S.E.2d 235 (1972).

Commissioner May Ask Aid of Judge. — The commissioner before whom the witness had refused to answer may invoke the aid of the judge to punish for contempt. But the judge has no right to delegate the judicial power to punish for contempt to an executive officer. Bradley Fertilizer Co. v. Taylor, 112 N.C. 141, 17 S.E. 69 (1893).

No Distinction Between Refusing to Be Sworn and Refusing to Answer. — This section makes no distinction between one who, in the presence of the court, pursuant to its lawful subpoena, refuses to be sworn as a witness and one who, having been sworn, refuses to answer a proper question. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967).

Motive of Recalcitrant Witness Immaterial. — Whatever the motive of the recalcitrant witness or party may be, it does not determine whether he may lawfully be adjudged in contempt and punishment. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967).

The refusal of one subpoenaed as a witness to take the oath or to answer proper questions propounded to him, when done knowingly and intentionally, is willful even though such person believes it to be his moral duty to refuse to testify. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967).

Decrease in Esteem No Justification for Refusing to Testify. — The fact that one called as a witness fears that his testimony may decrease the esteem in which he is held in the community, or may decrease his ability to render service therein, does not justify refusal by him to testify in response to questions otherwise proper. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967).

Nor Religious Conscience. — The State has a compelling interest that a person called as a witness should be sworn and should testify in the administration of justice between the State and one charged with a serious offense; therefore a minister called as a witness in such prosecution may be held in contempt of court upon his refusal to be sworn as a witness, notwithstanding he asserts that his refusal is a matter of religious conscience. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967). But see § 8-53.2.

As to refusal to testify before a referee, see LaFontaine v. Southern Underwriters Ass'n, 83 N.C. 132 (1880).

E. Inaccurate Publications.

Publication After Adjournment of Court. — For constructive contempt by publication of false matter relating to the conduct of the presiding judge, published after the adjournment of the court, the judge must seek redress by the ordinary method and bring his cause before an impartial tribunal. He may not proceed to determine the matter summarily without the intervention of a jury. In re Brown, 168 N.C. 417, 84 S.E. 690 (1915).

Publication of Past Matter. — There no longer exists the power to punish summarily for defamatory reports and publications about a matter which is past and ended. To justify contempt proceedings the publication must have been pendente lite. In re Brown, 168 N.C. 417, 84 S.E. 690 (1915).

Trial of Issue by the Court Instead of the Jury. — If on the face of the publication there is nothing to show that it was grossly incorrect or calculated to bring the court into contempt, the respondent is entitled to have the issue tried not by a jury but by a court. In re Robinson, 117 N.C. 533, 23 S.E. 453 (1895).

F. Failure of Officer to Perform Duties.

Gross negligence of attorneys is a sort of contempt, and courts may order them to pay the costs of cases in which they are guilty of such negligence. Ex parte Robins, 63 N.C. 309 (1869).

Abandoning Client. — Actions of defendant, an attorney, in abandoning a client at a courthouse on the day of a hearing because the client failed to pay defendant's fee, were not legally justifiable under G.S. 5A-11(a)(7), as defendant was not held in criminal contempt for failing to return to court the day of the client's hearing and instead attending a parent-teacher conference for defendant's daughter later in the day, but for failing to appear at the client's absconder hearing and abandoning the client. State v. Key, — N.C. App. —, 643 S.E.2d 444, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 800 (2007).

Actions of defendant, an attorney, in abandoning a client at a courthouse on the day of a hearing because the client failed to pay defendant's fee were not legally justifiable as defendant entered an appearance in a criminal proceeding without limiting the representation under G.S. 15A-141(2), failed to comply with defendant's duties to the client under G.S. 15A-143, did not have the trial court's permission to withdraw under G.S. 15A-144, and substantially interfered with the court's business under G.S. 5A-11(a)(7) by requiring the trial court, its staff, and its officers to expend significant time and effort in an attempt to get the client's case resolved over a two-day period. State v. Key, — N.C. App. —, 643 S.E.2d 444, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 800 (2007).

G. Failure to Comply with Schedules.

Willful Absence of Attorney from Trial. — Generally, the willful absence of an attorney from a scheduled trial constitutes contempt of court, although disputes arise over whether it is direct or indirect contempt. In re Smith, 45 N.C. App. 123, 263 S.E.2d 23 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 301 N.C. 621, 272 S.E.2d 834 (1981).

V. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

The court must specify the particulars of the offense on the record by stating the words, acts or gestures amounting to direct contempt, and when the record contains only conclusions that contemnor was contemptuous, contemnor is entitled to his discharge. Rose's Stores, Inc. v. Tarrytown Center, Inc., 270 N.C. 201, 154 S.E.2d 320 (1967).

Facts Must Be Found and Filed. — In contempt proceedings the facts upon which the contempt is based must be found and filed, especially the facts concerning the purpose and object of the contemnor, and the judgment must be founded on those findings. In re Odum, 133 N.C. 250, 45 S.E. 569 (1903); Mauney v. Mauney, 268 N.C. 254, 150 S.E.2d 391 (1966).

In contempt proceedings it is necessary for the court to find the facts supporting the judgment and especially the facts as to the purpose and object of the contemnor, since nothing short of willful disobedience will justify punishment. Smith v. Smith, 247 N.C. 223, 100 S.E.2d 370 (1957).

Failure to Denominate Conclusions of Law as Such. — Where the judgment in contempt fully states the facts found and the conclusions of law based thereon, adjudging defendants in contempt for a willful disobedience of an order lawfully issued by the superior court having jurisdiction, exception on the ground that the court did not specifically denominate his conclusions of law as such cannot be sustained. Glendale Mfg. Co. v. Bonano, 242 N.C. 587, 89 S.E.2d 116 (1955).

Review of Findings of Fact. — In proceedings for contempt, the facts found by the trial judge are not reviewable by the appellate division except for the purpose of passing upon their sufficiency to warrant the judgment. Mauney v. Mauney, 268 N.C. 254, 150 S.E.2d 391 (1966).

In contempt proceedings, the trial judge's findings of fact are conclusive on appeal when supported by any competent evidence and are reviewable only for the purpose of passing on their sufficiency. O'Briant v. O'Briant, 313 N.C. 432, 329 S.E.2d 370 (1985).

Beyond a reasonable doubt standard not indicated. — Neither the trial court's findings in the summary proceeding, nor the superior court's findings in the plenary proceeding, conducted de novo pursuant to G.S. 5A-17, specifically indicated that the beyond a reasonable doubt standard was actually applied; the failure to make such an indication made the contempt orders fatally deficient. State v. Ford, 164 N.C. App. 566, 596 S.E.2d 846, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 1034 (2004).

Appealability of Acquittal of Criminal Contempt. — In a domestic relations case in which plaintiff sought to have defendant's attorney held in contempt for harboring a child for the purpose of resisting and interfering with a court order granting temporary custody to the plaintiff, the charges were in the nature of criminal contempt, and the court's order finding that the attorney's conduct did not constitute contempt was not appealable, since the acquittal did not affect any substantial right of the plaintiff. Patterson v. Phillips, 56 N.C. App. 454, 289 S.E.2d 48 (1982).

§ 5A-12. Punishment; circumstances for fine or imprisonment; reduction of punishment; other measures.

(a) A person who commits criminal contempt, whether direct or indirect, is subject to censure, imprisonment up to 30 days, fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), or any combination of the three, except that a person who commits a contempt described in G.S. 5A-11(8) is subject to censure, imprisonment not to exceed 6 months, fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), or any combination of the three and a person who has not been arrested who fails to comply with a nontestimonial identification order, issued pursuant to Article 14 of G.S. 15A is subject to censure, imprisonment not to exceed 90 days, fine not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00), or any combination of the three.

(b) Except for contempt under G.S. 5A-11(5) or 5A-11(9), fine or imprisonment may not be imposed for criminal contempt, whether direct or indirect, unless:

(1) The act or omission was willfully contemptuous; or
(2) The act or omission was preceded by a clear warning by the court that the conduct is improper.

(c) The judicial official who finds a person in contempt may at any time withdraw a censure, terminate or reduce a sentence of imprisonment, or remit or reduce a fine imposed as punishment for contempt if warranted by the conduct of the contemnor and the ends of justice.

(d) A person held in criminal contempt under this Article shall not, for the same conduct, be found in civil contempt under Article 2 of this Chapter, Civil Contempt.

(e) A person held in criminal contempt under G.S. 5A-11(9) may nevertheless, for the same conduct, be found guilty of a violation of G.S. 14-225.1, but he must be given credit for any imprisonment resulting from the contempt. (1977, c. 711, s. 3; 1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 843, s. 1; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1040, ss. 2, 4; 1989 (Reg. Sess., 1990), c. 1039, s. 4; 1991, c. 686, s. 3; 1999-361, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Subsection (b) is drawn from the recommendations of the American Bar Association. It intends to preclude fine or punishment in response to what is essentially innocent conduct although censure alone would still be possible. Subsection (c) makes clear that a judge may change his mind and reduce or remove any punishment he imposed in response to contempt. Subsection (d) makes clear that, although civil contempt and criminal contempt proceedings are distinct, each may be imposed for the same conduct.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the annotations under this section are from cases decided under former statutory provisions.

No Constitutional Right to Jury Trial. — In view of the punishment, contempt is a petty offense for which there is no constitutional right to a jury trial. Thompson v. Thompson, 25 N.C. App. 79, 212 S.E.2d 243, appeal dismissed, 288 N.C. 120, 215 S.E.2d 606 (1975).

Punishment Immediate. — The punishment in contempt cases must be immediate, or it would be ineffectual, as it is designed to suppress an outrage which impedes the business of the court. State v. Yancy, 4 N.C. 133 (1814); Blue Jeans Corp. of Am. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Punishment for Criminal and Civil Contempt Distinguished. — Criminal contempt is administered as punishment for acts already committed that have impeded the administration of justice in some way. And as is the case with all offenses of a criminal nature, the punishment that courts can impose therefor, either by fine or imprisonment, is circumscribed by law. Civil contempt, on the other hand, is employed to coerce disobedient defendants into complying with orders of court, and the length of time that a defendant can be imprisoned in a proper case is not limited by law, since the defendant can obtain his release immediately upon complying with the court's order. Brower v. Brower, 70 N.C. App. 131, 318 S.E.2d 542 (1984).

A major factor in determining whether contempt is criminal or civil is the purpose for which the power is exercised. Where the punishment is to preserve the court's authority and to punish disobedience of its orders, it is criminal contempt. Where the purpose is to provide a remedy for an injured suitor and to coerce compliance with an order, the contempt is civil. The importance in distinguishing criminal and civil contempt lies in the difference in procedure, punishment and right of review. Bishop v. Bishop, 90 N.C. App. 499, 369 S.E.2d 106 (1988).

Contempt may be of two kinds, civil or criminal, although the demarcation between the two may be hazy at best. Criminal contempt is generally applied where the judgment is in punishment of an act already accomplished, tending to interfere with the administration of justice. Civil contempt is a term applied where the proceeding is had to preserve the rights of private parties and to compel obedience to orders and decrees made for the benefit of such parties. Bishop v. Bishop, 90 N.C. App. 499, 369 S.E.2d 106 (1988).

Treatment of Civil Contempt. — Where the court finds that a defendant is in civil contempt, it is not limited by this section to imposing a 30-day sentence for criminal contempt. It can, under G.S. 5A-21(b), order his imprisonment until he purges himself of contempt. Bennett v. Bennett, 71 N.C. App. 424, 322 S.E.2d 439 (1984).

Punishment of One Act as Both Criminal and Civil Contempt. — As recognized in subsection (d) of this section and G.S. 5A-21(c), a person may be found to be in both criminal and civil contempt, although only a single act was committed. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

One act may be punishable both as civil contempt and as criminal contempt. This kind of duality particularly inheres in a party litigant's willful failure to comply with a discovery order. Punishment is not, therefore, limited to criminal sanctions. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

Decision Not to Prosecute For Criminal Contempt. — Defendant claimed that his prosecution for failure to appear violated his due process rights under N.C. Const. art. I, § 19, where he was prosecuted under G.S. 15A-543, and he could have been punished for failure to appear under the criminal contempt statute, G.S. 5A-12(a); however, because there was evidence from which a jury could have found that defendant violated either G.S. 15A-543 or G.S. 5A-12(a), it was within the prosecutor's discretion to decide under which statute the State wished to proceed. State v. Dammons, 159 N.C. App. 284, 583 S.E.2d 606, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1539 (2003), cert. denied, 357 N.C. 579, 589 S.E.2d 133 (2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 951, 124 S. Ct. 1691, 158 L. Ed. 2d 382 (2004).

No Defense to Criminal Prosecution. — The fact that a person has been punished for contempt of court is no defense to a criminal indictment for the act constituting the contempt. State v. Yancy, 4 N.C. 133 (1814); In re Griffin, 98 N.C. 225, 3 S.E. 515 (1887).

Provision in a criminal contempt adjudication requiring defendant to pay $3,150 in damages to plaintiff was invalid, because this section limits the punishment that can be imposed for criminal contempts to a fine of $500 and 30 days in jail; and damages may not be awarded to a private party because of any contempt, which is an offense against the State. M.G. Newell Co. v. Wyrick, 91 N.C. App. 98, 370 S.E.2d 431 (1988).

Conditioning of Probation or Suspended Sentence on Contemnor's Purging Himself. — The imposition of probationary conditions under G.S. 15A-1343 and the possibility of early termination under G.S. 15A-1342(b) do not transform probationary or suspended sentences into civil relief. However, specifically conditioning the imposition or effect of the probationary or suspended sentence upon the contemnor's purging himself would constitute civil relief. Bishop v. Bishop, 90 N.C. App. 499, 369 S.E.2d 106 (1988).

Order Allowing Defendant to Avoid Confinement by Paying Arrearages Held Remedial Relief. — Where the court ordered defendant confined in jail for a period of 29 days, but it allowed defendant to avoid that punishment altogether by paying the entire amount of child support arrearages, this constituted remedial relief and therefore required that the court's order be construed as adjudicating defendant in civil contempt. Bishop v. Bishop, 90 N.C. App. 499, 369 S.E.2d 106 (1988).

Power of Industrial Commission. — The Industrial Commission proceeding under the Worker's Compensation Act, being expressly given the authority to subpoena witnesses and have them give evidence at the hearing, acts in a judicial capacity in adjudging in contempt a witness who refuses to give material evidence, and has power to punish by a fine or imprisonment under the provisions of this section. In re Hayes, 200 N.C. 133, 156 S.E. 791 (1931).

A sentence of ten days in jail, imposed by the superior court for contempt by refusal to be sworn as a witness, was well within the statutory maximum. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967).

Imprisonment for Indefinite Period Erroneous. — A judgment entered is erroneous in directing that the defendant be committed to jail for an indefinite period rather than for the statutory period. Basnight v. Basnight, 242 N.C. 645, 89 S.E.2d 259 (1955).

Effect of Abolishment of Imprisonment for Debt. — The abolishment of imprisonment for debt does not include commitment under attachments for failure to comply with an order of court. Wood v. Wood, 61 N.C. 538 (1868).

A fine for contempt goes to the State, being a punishment for a wrong to the State, and should not be directed to be paid to a party to the suit. In re Rhodes, 65 N.C. 518 (1871); Morris v. Whitehead, 65 N.C. 637 (1871).

Where the judge converted an entry into a final judgment, the violation of which subjected the defendant to criminal contempt of court, punishable under subsection (a), the trial court erred when it imposed a term of imprisonment of six months, suspended for five years under the supervision of a probation officer; therefore, the case was remanded for a hearing on contempt pursuant to G.S. 5A-11(a)(3). State v. Brown, 110 N.C. App. 658, 430 S.E.2d 433 (1993).

Sentence Was Not An Abuse of Discretion. — It was not an abuse of discretion to sentence defendant to 30 days of imprisonment, suspended for 18 months, and to probation, as defendant argued only that the sanction was unreasonable, but not that it was an abuse of discretion; defendant did not argue that the special conditions of defendant's probation were not reasonably related to defendant's rehabilitation under G.S. 15A-1343(b1)(10). State v. Key, — N.C. App. —, 643 S.E.2d 444, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 800 (2007).

§ 5A-13. Direct and indirect criminal contempt; proceedings required.

(a) Criminal contempt is direct criminal contempt when the act:

(1) Is committed within the sight or hearing of a presiding judicial official; and

(2) Is committed in, or in immediate proximity to, the room where proceedings are being held before the court; and

(3) Is likely to interrupt or interfere with matters then before the court.

The presiding judicial official may punish summarily for direct criminal contempt according to the requirements of G.S. 5A-14 or may defer adjudication and sentencing as provided in G.S. 5A-15. If proceedings for direct criminal contempt are deferred, the judicial official must, immediately following the conduct, inform the person of his intention to institute contempt proceedings.

(b) Any criminal contempt other than direct criminal contempt is indirect criminal contempt and is punishable only after proceedings in accordance with the procedure required by G.S. 5A-15. (1977, c. 711, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section specifies that only direct criminal contempt may be the subject of summary proceedings and defines direct criminal contempt. The three factors listed in subsection (a)(1), (2) and (3) must all be present before an act can be direct contempt. Subsection (a) also permits the judge who is authorized to punish summarily to defer the proceedings if he choose. The last sentence of subsection (a) establishes the rule that a person be cited for contempt at the time the contempt occurs even if the proceedings are to be held later.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the annotations under this section are from cases decided under former statutory provisions.

When Notice and Hearing Are Required. — Summary proceedings are appropriate for punishing direct contempt when necessary to restore order or maintain the dignity and authority of the court and when the measures are imposed substantially contemporaneously with the contempt; however, in cases where a court does not act immediately to punish acts constituting direct contempt or where the contempt is indirect, notice and a hearing is required. O'Briant v. O'Briant, 313 N.C. 432, 329 S.E.2d 370 (1985).

False Testimony as Direct or Indirect Contempt. — Where all the facts necessary to establish false testimony were not before the court, it was impossible to say that there were words spoken or acts committed in the actual presence of the court which would constitute direct contempt. In re Edison, 15 N.C. App. 354, 190 S.E.2d 235 (1972), decided under former statutory provisions.

Indirect Contempt. — Indirect contempt is that which arises from matters not occurring in or near the presence of the court, but which tend to obstruct or defeat the administration of justice. Atassi v. Atassi, 122 N.C. App. 356, 470 S.E.2d 59 (1996).

Failure to comply with a prior court order would amount to an act committed outside the presence of the court, at a distance from it, which tends to degrade the court or interrupts, prevents or impedes the administration of justice and would be classified an indirect contempt. Ingle v. Ingle, 18 N.C. App. 455, 197 S.E.2d 61 (1973), decided under former § 5-7; Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Defendant's failure to appear at a show cause hearing was classified as indirect criminal contempt since trial judge had no direct knowledge of facts which would establish that defendant's failure to appear was willful. Cox v. Cox, 92 N.C. App. 702, 376 S.E.2d 13 (1989).

Urging Witness to Disobey Subpoena as Indirect Contempt. — Where there was evidence that defendant telephoned a witness in a civil action and tried to get her not to obey a subpoena to be issued by the court, defendant was held to be in indirect contempt of court in accordance with this section. State v. Wall, 49 N.C. App. 678, 272 S.E.2d 152 (1980).

Deliberate Disobedience Irrespective of Intent. — Attorney willfully disobeyed a lawful order of the court in a manner that was likely to interrupt the matters before the court where he deliberately disobeyed the judge's repeated orders to sit down and be quiet, and while it was unlikely that he intended any insult or injury to the court, he consciously disobeyed direct orders and was properly convicted of criminal contempt. Nakell v. Attorney Gen., 15 F.3d 319 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 866, 115 S. Ct. 184, 130 L. Ed. 2d 118 (1994).

Requirements of Due Process. — The requirements of due process are met when one charged with contempt is afforded notice and an opportunity to be heard; delayed summary contempt proceedings are also consistent with due process. Nakell v. Attorney Gen., 15 F.3d 319 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 866, 115 S. Ct. 184, 130 L. Ed. 2d 118 (1994).

§ 5A-14. Summary proceedings for contempt.

(a) The presiding judicial official may summarily impose measures in response to direct criminal contempt when necessary to restore order or maintain the dignity and authority of the court and when the measures are imposed substantially contemporaneously with the contempt.

(b) Before imposing measures under this section, the judicial official must give the person charged with contempt summary notice of the charges and a summary opportunity to respond and must find facts supporting the summary imposition of measures in response to contempt. The facts must be established beyond a reasonable doubt. (1977, c. 711, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

If the contempt proceedings are to be summary, subsection (a) requires that they occur substantially at the same time as the contempt itself. Subsection (b) follows the American Bar Association recommendation that the person charged with contempt be given notice of what the contemptuous action was and an opportunity to respond. This was intended not to provide for a hearing, or anything approaching that, in summary contempt proceedings, but merely to assure that the alleged contemnor had an opportunity to point out instances of gross mistake about who committed the contemptuous act or matters of that sort.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the annotations under this section are from cases decided under former statutory provisions.

Constitutionality. — Summary punishment for direct contempt committed in the presence of the court does not contemplate a trial at which the person charged with contempt must be represented by counsel, and therefore sentence for contempt does not deprive the contemnor of his liberty without due process of law. In re Williams, 269 N.C. 68, 152 S.E.2d 317, cert. denied, 388 U.S. 918, 87 S. Ct. 2137, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1362 (1967).

The requirements of this section are meant to ensure that the individual has an opportunity to present reasons not to impose a sanction. In re Owens, 128 N.C. App. 577, 496 S.E.2d 592 (1998), aff'd, 350 N.C. 656, 517 S.E.2d 605 (1999).

The term "substantially contemporaneously with the contempt" in subsection (a) of this section is construed in light of its legislative purpose of meeting due process safeguards. The word "substantially" qualifies the word "contemporaneously," and clearly does not require that the contempt proceedings immediately follow the misconduct. Factors bearing on the time lapse include the contemnor's notice or knowledge of the charged misconduct, the nature of the misconduct, and other circumstances that may have some bearing upon the defendant's right to a fair and timely hearing. State v. Johnson, 52 N.C. App. 592, 279 S.E.2d 77, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 303 N.C. 549, 281 S.E.2d 390 (1981).

Jury Trial. — It is well settled that the defendant in contempt proceedings is not entitled to a jury trial upon the controverted facts. In re Deaton, 105 N.C. 59, 11 S.E. 244 (1890).

Contemnor Must Have Opportunity to Be Heard. — The court violated this section where the transcript revealed that the court advised contemnor that, because he had questioned the rulings of the court and shown disrespect for the court, he was in the bailiff's custody after which the court was immediately recessed without giving him "an opportunity to present reasons not to impose a sanction." Peaches v. Payne, 139 N.C. App. 580, 533 S.E.2d 851 (2000).

Trial court failed to comply with the statutory requirements by failing to give defendant a summary opportunity to respond to the charge of criminal contempt after defendant failed to stand for the call to rise. State v. Randell, 152 N.C. App. 469, 567 S.E.2d 814, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 928 (2002).

When Notice and Hearing Are Required. — Summary proceedings are appropriate for punishing direct contempt when necessary to restore order or maintain the dignity and authority of the court and when the measures are imposed substantially contemporaneously with the contempt; however, in cases where a court does not act immediately to punish acts constituting direct contempt or where the contempt is indirect, notice and a hearing is required. O'Briant v. O'Briant, 313 N.C. 432, 329 S.E.2d 370 (1985).

When Notice and Hearing Not Required. — Notice and a formal hearing are not required when the trial court promptly punishes acts of contempt in its presence. In re Owens, 128 N.C. App. 577, 496 S.E.2d 592 (1998), aff'd, 350 N.C. 656, 517 S.E.2d 605 (1999).

What Findings of Fact Must Include. — A requirement that the judicial official's findings should indicate that the standard of proof required by subsection (b) was applied to his findings of fact is implicit in this section. State v. Verbal, 41 N.C. App. 306, 254 S.E.2d 794 (1979).

It is implicit in this section that the judicial official's findings in a summary contempt proceeding should clearly reflect that the contemnor was given an opportunity to be heard, along with a summary of whatever response was made and the judicial official's finding that the excuse or explanation proffered was inadequate or disbelieved. State v. Verbal, 41 N.C. App. 306, 254 S.E.2d 794 (1979).

Neither the trial court's findings in the summary proceeding, nor the superior court's findings in the plenary proceeding, conducted de novo pursuant to G.S. 5A-17, specifically indicated that the beyond a reasonable doubt standard was actually applied; the failure to make such an indication made the contempt orders fatally deficient. State v. Ford, 164 N.C. App. 566, 596 S.E.2d 846, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 1034 (2004).

Trial court's order finding an attorney in criminal contempt under G.S. 5A-11(a)(6) was reversed because the trial court failed to indicate that the trial court applied the beyond a reasonable doubt standard to the trial court's findings as required by G.S. 5A-14(b). In re Contempt Proceedings Against Cogdell, — N.C. App. —, 644 S.E.2d 261, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1044 (2007).

Illustrative Case. — Trial court complied with the requirements of this section and properly declined to recognize a news reporter's qualified privilege to refuse to testify in a criminal proceeding regarding non-confidential information obtained from a non-confidential source. In re Owens, 128 N.C. App. 577, 496 S.E.2d 592 (1998), aff'd, 350 N.C. 656, 517 S.E.2d 605 (1999).

§ 5A-15. Plenary proceedings for contempt.

(a) When a judicial official chooses not to proceed summarily against a person charged with direct criminal contempt or when he may not proceed summarily, he may proceed by an order directing the person to appear before a judge at a reasonable time specified in the order and show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court. A copy of the order must be furnished to the person charged. If the criminal contempt is based upon acts before a judge which so involve him that his objectivity may reasonably be questioned, the order must be returned before a different judge.

(b) Proceedings under this section are before a district court judge unless a court superior to the district court issued the order, in which case the proceedings are before that court. Venue lies throughout the district court district as defined in G.S. 7A-133 or superior court district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1, as the case may be, where the order was issued.

(c) The person ordered to show cause may move to dismiss the order.

(d) The judge is the trier of facts at the show cause hearing.

(e) The person charged with contempt may not be compelled to be a witness against himself in the hearing.

(f) At the conclusion of the hearing, the judge must enter a finding of guilty or not guilty. If the person is found to be in contempt, the judge must make findings of fact and enter judgment. The facts must be established beyond a reasonable doubt.

(g) The judge presiding over the hearing may appoint a prosecutor or, in the event of an apparent conflict of interest, some other member of the bar to represent the court in hearings for criminal contempt. (1977, c. 711, s. 3; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 44.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section provides for a show-cause hearing in instances in which the judge either chooses not to proceed by summary proceedings or may not so proceed because the contempt was not direct. Plenary proceedings may not be held by a magistrate or clerk; they must always be held before a judge. The final sentence of subsection (a) responds to the constitutional requirement of Bloom v. Illinois, 391 U.S. 194 (1968), that contempt proceedings be held before another judge when the one citing the contemnor was involved in the act in question. Subsection (f) permits the judge, in addition to using the prosecutor, who traditionally represents the court in contempt actions, to appoint another member of the Bar when there is a conflict of interest. The central example of this would be when the prosecutor himself or a law-enforcement officer with whom he worked closely was involved in the contempt.

CASE NOTES

Notice of Charges and Opportunity to Be Heard. — The principles of due process require that before an attorney is finally adjudicated in contempt and sentenced after a trial for conduct during the trial, he should have reasonable notice of the specific charges and opportunity to be heard in his own behalf. In re Paul, 84 N.C. App. 491, 353 S.E.2d 254, cert. denied, 319 N.C. 673, 356 S.E.2d 779 (1987), 484 U.S. 1004, 108 S. Ct. 694, 98 L. Ed. 2d 646 (1988).

When Notice and Hearing Are Required. — Summary proceedings are appropriate for punishing direct contempt when necessary to restore order or maintain the dignity and authority of the court and when the measures are imposed substantially contemporaneously with the contempt; however, in cases where a court does not act immediately to punish acts constituting direct contempt or where the contempt is indirect, notice and a hearing is required. O'Briant v. O'Briant, 313 N.C. 432, 329 S.E.2d 370 (1985).

Section Held Applicable. — Where trial judge did not proceed summarily against plaintiff, the Supreme Court would conclude, without deciding whether plaintiff's acts constituted direct or indirect contempt, that this section, requiring a plenary proceeding, governed the appropriate procedure. O'Briant v. O'Briant, 313 N.C. 432, 329 S.E.2d 370 (1985).

What findings of fact must include. — Superior court order from a plenary proceeding of contempt under G.S. 5A-15(f) must indicate that the reasonable doubt standard of proof was applied to the findings of fact; failure to make such an indication is fatally deficient, unless the proceeding is of a limited instance where there were no factual determinations for the court to make. State v. Ford, 164 N.C. App. 566, 596 S.E.2d 846, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 1034 (2004).

Findings Not Required. — Court need not make specific findings of improper conduct when issuing a criminal contempt citation. State v. Pierce, 134 N.C. App. 148, 516 S.E.2d 916 (1999).

Defendant Not Subjected to Improper Burden of Proof. — Defendant was not subjected to an improper burden of proof under G.S. 5A-15(f) in finding that defendant was in criminal contempt under G.S. 5A-11(a)(3), as defendant admitted that defendant was ordered to stay out of the judges' offices and that defendant entered an area of the courthouse marked "Judges Offices" to file an emergency motion with the trial court administrator; there was no issue of fact to be decided, and thus no burden of proof was placed on defendant, as the trial court properly required proof beyond a reasonable doubt of defendant's contempt of court. State v. Simon, — N.C. App. —, 648 S.E.2d 853, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1734 (2007).

Verification Not Prerequisite to Issuance of Show Cause Order. — The filing of a petition, an affidavit, or other proper verification is not required as a prerequisite to issuance of a show cause order under this section, although they may be a proper basis for issuance of the show cause order. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Service Held Proper. — Where the court issued an order pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4(j)(1)c notifying a foreign attorney of the contempt charges and allowing him 60 days to respond to the charges, which order was mailed to the attorney at the address he gave the court in a motion to be admitted in a case pro hac vice, this method of service was proper to comply with the requirement of subsection (a) that "[a] copy of the order must be furnished to the person charged", where the court had personal jurisdiction as provided in G.S. 1-75.4. In re Smith, 45 N.C. App. 123, 263 S.E.2d 23 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 301 N.C. 621, 272 S.E.2d 834 (1981).

Notice Held Inadequate. — Notice afforded plaintiff mother in custody and support proceedings was inadequate to inform her that she should be prepared to defend herself, for her failure to attend court hearings, on charges of contempt at custody trial. O'Briant v. O'Briant, 313 N.C. 432, 329 S.E.2d 370 (1985).

Contempt Following Chapter 19 Injunction. — The plenary proceedings provided for in this section apply to contempt actions following a Chapter 19 injunction. State ex rel. Andrews v. Chateau X, Inc., 296 N.C. 251, 250 S.E.2d 603 (1979), vacated, 445 U.S. 947, 100 S. Ct. 1593, 63 L. Ed. 2d 782 (1980), aff'd, 302 N.C. 321, 275 S.E.2d 443 (1981).

§ 5A-16. Custody of person charged with criminal contempt.

(a) A judicial official may orally order that a person he is charging with direct criminal contempt be taken into custody and restrained to the extent necessary to assure his presence for summary proceedings or notice of plenary proceedings.

(b) If a judicial official who initiates plenary proceedings for contempt under G.S. 5A-15 finds, based on sworn statement or affidavit, probable cause to believe the person ordered to appear will not appear in response to the order, he may issue an order for arrest of the person, pursuant to G.S. 15A-305. A person arrested under this subsection is entitled to release under the provisions of Article 26, Bail, of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes. (1977, c. 711, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The authority for taking custody of a person charged with contempt has been unclear. This section is aimed to fill that gap. Subsection (a) clarifies the legality of seizing a person charged with direct contempt and bringing him before the judge. Subsection (b) makes clear the propriety of issuing an order for arrest of a person when the proceedings are not to be summary. A concurrent change in G.S. 15A-305, providing for the order for arrest, makes clear that an order may be used for this purpose.

§ 5A-17. Appeals.

A person found in criminal contempt may appeal in the manner provided for appeals in criminal actions, except appeal from a finding of contempt by a judicial official inferior to a superior court judge is by hearing de novo before a superior court judge. (1977, c. 711, s. 3.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section rejects present law and permits appeal from all convictions for criminal contempt.

Jurisdiction. — This section vests exclusive jurisdiction in the superior court to hear appeals from orders in the district court holding a person in criminal contempt. Michael v. Michael, 77 N.C. App. 841, 336 S.E.2d 414 (1985), cert. denied, 316 N.C. 195, 341 S.E.2d 577 (1986).

Criminal contempt orders are properly appealed from district court to the superior court, not to the Court of Appeals. Hancock v. Hancock, 122 N.C. App. 518, 471 S.E.2d 415 (1996).

Standard of review de novo. — Neither the trial court's findings in the summary proceeding, nor the superior court's findings in the plenary proceeding, conducted de novo pursuant to G.S. 5A-17, specifically indicated that the beyond a reasonable doubt standard was actually applied; the failure to make such an indication made the contempt orders fatally deficient. State v. Ford, 164 N.C. App. 566, 596 S.E.2d 846, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 1034 (2004).

Appealability of Acquittal of Criminal Contempt. — In a domestic relations case in which plaintiff sought to have defendant's attorney held in contempt for harboring a child for the purpose of resisting and interfering with a court order granting temporary custody to the plaintiff, the charges were in the nature of criminal contempt, and the court's order finding that the attorney's conduct did not constitute contempt was not appealable, since the acquittal did not affect any substantial right of the plaintiff. Patterson v. Phillips, 56 N.C. App. 454, 289 S.E.2d 48 (1982).

Finding of Fact Not Disturbed. — Where the judge has found sufficient facts to attach the defendant for direct contempt of court, upon imposing punishment therefor, the finding will not be disturbed by appeal. ARTICLE 2.

Civil Contempt.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

The Commission felt that it was proper, once they had to deal with civil contempt in some respect as a consequence of severing it in Chapter 5 from the related criminal contempt provisions, to resolve some of the uncertainties that surround the present civil contempt procedures.

§ 5A-21. Civil contempt; imprisonment to compel compliance.

(a) Failure to comply with an order of a court is a continuing civil contempt as long as:

(1) The order remains in force;

(2) The purpose of the order may still be served by compliance with the order;

(2a) The noncompliance by the person to whom the order is directed is willful; and

(3) The person to whom the order is directed is able to comply with the order or is able to take reasonable measures that would enable the person to comply with the order.

(b) A person who is found in civil contempt may be imprisoned as long as the civil contempt continues, subject to the limitations provided in subsections (b1) and (b2) of this section. Notwithstanding subsection (b2) of this section, if a person is found in civil contempt for failure to pay child support or failure to comply with a court order to perform an act that does not require the payment of a monetary judgment, the person may be imprisoned as long as the civil contempt continues without further hearing.

(b2) The period of imprisonment for a person found in civil contempt shall not exceed 90 days for the same act of disobedience or refusal to comply with an order of the court. A person who has not purged himself or herself of the contempt within the period of imprisonment imposed by the court under this subsection may be recommitted for one or more successive periods of imprisonment, each not to exceed 90 days. However, the total period of imprisonment for the same act of disobedience or refusal to comply with the order of the court shall not exceed 12 months, including both the initial period of imprisonment imposed under this section and any additional period of imprisonment imposed under this subsection. Before the court may recommit a person to any additional period of imprisonment under this subsection, the court shall conduct a hearing de novo. The court must enter a finding for or against the alleged contemnor on each of the elements of G.S. 5A-21(a), and must find that all of elements of G.S. 5A-21(a) continue to exist before the person can be recommitted. For purposes of this subsection, a person's failure or refusal to purge himself or herself of contempt shall not be deemed a separate or additional act of disobedience, failure, or refusal to comply with an order of the court.

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

This section is based on the Commission's recognition that civil contempt should be solely a matter of forcing the contemnor to comply with a court order and, unlike criminal contempt, is not a form of punishment. Subsections (a) and (b) make clear that civil contempt is appropriate only so long as the court order is capable of being complied with. The section rejects the approach of the present Chapter 5 specifying particular grounds for civil contempt. Instead, the only issue in determining whether imprisonment for civil contempt is proper is whether or not there is a court order which may be complied with. Subdivision (3) of subsection (a), by specifying that the contempt continues while the person is "able to take reasonable measures that would enable him to comply," is intended to make clear, for example, that the person who does not have the money to make court-ordered payments but who could take a job which would enable him to make those payments, remains in contempt by not taking such a job. In most cases, a person in civil contempt may be held for so long as his civil contempt continues; he holds the keys to his own jail by virtue of his ability to comply. The Commission felt, however, in the case of failure to comply with nontestimonial identification order by one who is only suspected of a crime, that this unlimited jailing would be improper. Therefore, unless probable cause for arrest arises, the person subject to a nontestimonial identification order who remains noncompliant must be released after 90 days. Concurrent amendments to G.S. 15A-279 (the section dealing with nontestimonial identification orders) point out that resisting compliance with a nontestimonial identification order may be used in determining whether there is probable cause that the person subject to the order committed the crime in question. This means that in many cases the person who resists the order for the full 90 day period will become subject to arrest on probable cause, at which time the 90 day limitation will no longer apply. Another concurrent amendment to G.S. 15A-279 provides, however, that a nontestimonial identification order may not be reissued unless there is newly available evidence to support it. In subsection (c), the Commission was seeking to insure that a person could not serve a longer period of imprisonment by being found in both civil and criminal contempt for the same conduct than he could if he had been found to be in only civil or criminal contempt. An earlier draft of this subsection had specified that a finding of civil or criminal contempt did not preclude disciplinary proceedings if the contemnor were a member of the Bar. The Commission approved this policy but felt it more appropriate that it be mentioned in commentary rather than in the body of the section.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Some of the annotations under this section are from cases decided under former statutory provisions.

Nature and Purpose of Proceeding. — Civil contempt is applied to a continuing act, and the proceeding is used to compel obedience to orders and decrees made for the benefit of private parties and to preserve and enforce private rights. Rose's Stores, Inc. v. Tarrytown Center, Inc., 270 N.C. 201, 154 S.E.2d 320 (1967); Blue Jeans Corp. of Am. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

Civil contempt proceedings are without question civil in nature. Jolly v. Wright, 300 N.C. 83, 265 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

This section makes clear that civil contempt is not a form of punishment; rather, it is a civil remedy to be utilized exclusively to enforce compliance with court orders. Jolly v. Wright, 300 N.C. 83, 265 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

The purpose of civil contempt is not to punish; rather, its purpose is to use the court's power to impose fines or imprisonment as a method of coercing the defendant to comply with an order of the court. Jolly v. Wright, 300 N.C. 83, 265 S.E.2d 135 (1980); Ferree v. Ferree, 71 N.C. App. 737, 323 S.E.2d 52 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 328, 327 S.E.2d 889 (1985).

Acts and omissions constituting civil contempt involve matters tending to defeat, impair, impede, or prejudice the rights or remedies of a party to an action pending in court, and are punishable with the underlying purpose of preserving private rights by coercion. Galyon v. Stutts, 241 N.C. 120, 84 S.E.2d 822 (1954).

Criminal and Civil Contempt Distinguished. — The line of demarcation between civil and criminal contempts is hazy at best. A major factor in determining whether a contempt is civil or criminal is the purpose for which the power is exercised. Where the primary purpose is to preserve the court's authority and to punish for disobedience of its orders, the contempt is criminal. Where the primary purpose is to provide a remedy for an injured suitor and to coerce compliance with an order, the contempt is civil. Blue Jeans Corp. of Am. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969); O'Briant v. O'Briant, 313 N.C. 432, 329 S.E.2d 370 (1985).

Criminal contempt is a term applied where the judgment is in punishment of an act already accomplished, tending to interfere with the administration of justice. Civil contempt is a term applied where the proceeding is had to preserve and enforce the rights of private parties to suits and to compel obedience to orders and decrees made for the benefit of such parties. Mauney v. Mauney, 268 N.C. 254, 150 S.E.2d 391 (1966).

Proceedings instituted to vindicate the dignity of the court and to punish attorney for his alleged interference with a custody order, although arising in a civil case, are criminal in nature. Patterson v. Phillips, 56 N.C. App. 454, 289 S.E.2d 48 (1982).

An administrative agency of the State is not subject to contempt. North Carolina DOT v. Davenport, 334 N.C. 428, 432 S.E.2d 303 (1993).

Treatment of Civil Contempt. — Where the court finds that a defendant is in civil contempt, it is not limited by G.S. 5A-12 to imposing a 30-day sentence for criminal contempt. Under subsection (b) of this section, it can order his imprisonment until he purges himself of contempt. Bennett v. Bennett, 71 N.C. App. 424, 322 S.E.2d 439 (1984).

Trial court was in error where it described a civil contempt action as punishment. Atassi v. Atassi, 122 N.C. App. 356, 470 S.E.2d 59 (1996).

Civil contempt order was not proper where the court order allegedly violated was not directed at defendant. Atassi v. Atassi, 122 N.C. App. 356, 470 S.E.2d 59 (1996).

Punishment for Both Criminal and Civil Contempt. — As recognized in G.S. 5A-12(d) and subsection (c) of this section, a person may be found to be in both criminal and civil contempt, although only a single act was committed. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

There are certain instances where contemners may be punished for both criminal contempt and for civil contempt. Blue Jeans Corp. v. Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 4 N.C. App. 245, 166 S.E.2d 698, aff'd, 275 N.C. 503, 169 S.E.2d 867 (1969).

One act may be punishable as both civil contempt and criminal contempt. This kind of duality particularly inheres in a party litigant's willful failure to comply with a discovery order. Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

Disobedience Must Be Willful. — A failure to obey an order of a court cannot be punished by contempt proceedings unless the disobedience is willful, which imports knowledge and a stubborn resistance. Cox v. Cox, 10 N.C. App. 476, 179 S.E.2d 194 (1971).

The element of willfulness is required for a finding of civil contempt under G.S. 50-13.4(f)(9) and this section. Jones v. Jones, 52 N.C. App. 104, 278 S.E.2d 260 (1981); Harris v. Harris, 91 N.C. App. 699, 373 S.E.2d 312 (1988).

While a strict reading of this section does not require that a defendant's conduct be willful in order for him/her to be found in civil contempt, the courts have interpreted the statute to require an element of willfulness. Ross v. Voiers, 127 N.C. App. 415, 490 S.E.2d 244 (1997), cert. denied, 347 N.C. 402, 496 S.E.2d 387 (1997).

Although the statutes governing civil contempt do not expressly require willful conduct, case law has interpreted the statutes to require an element of willfulness. Sharpe v. Nobles, 127 N.C. App. 705, 493 S.E.2d 288 (1997).

Father was properly held in contempt for not paying child support where (1) he was properly subject to an order increasing his child support obligation as of the date of the mother's filing of a divorce complaint, (2) the purpose of the order could be served by his compliance, and (3) his noncompliance with the order was willful in that he had made no payment toward the increase in his obligation from the date of the complaint to the date of trial, despite his ability to comply with the court's order, and he presented no evidence as to why he should not be held in contempt. Miller v. Miller, 153 N.C. App. 40, 568 S.E.2d 914, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 1070 (2002).

Thus, Defendant Must Possess Means to Comply. — To support a finding of willfulness in failing to comply with a support order, there must be evidence to establish as an affirmative fact that defendant possessed the means to comply with the order at some time after the entry of the order. Teachey v. Teachey, 46 N.C. App. 332, 264 S.E.2d 786 (1980).

For civil contempt to be applicable, the defendant must have the present ability to comply, or the present ability to take reasonable measures that would enable him to comply, with the order. Teachey v. Teachey, 46 N.C. App. 332, 264 S.E.2d 786 (1980); Hodges v. Hodges, 64 N.C. App. 550, 307 S.E.2d 575 (1983); Lee v. Lee, 78 N.C. App. 632, 337 S.E.2d 690 (1985).

In order to punish by contempt proceedings, the trial court must find as a fact that the defendant possessed the means to comply with orders of the court during the period when he was in default. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970); Cox v. Cox, 10 N.C. App. 476, 179 S.E.2d 194 (1971).

Civil contempt is based upon acts or neglect constituting a willful violation of a lawful order of the court. A failure to obey an order of the court cannot be punished by attachment for civil contempt unless the disobedience is willful. It is well settled that one does not act willfully in failing to comply with a judgment if it has not been within his power to do so since the judgment was rendered. Henderson v. Henderson, 307 N.C. 401, 298 S.E.2d 345 (1983).

This section and G.S. 5A-22 must be construed in pari materia. When so construed, these statutes require that a person have the present ability to comply with the conditions for purging the contempt before that person may be imprisoned for civil contempt. McMiller v. McMiller, 77 N.C. App. 808, 336 S.E.2d 134 (1985).

The purpose of civil contempt is to coerce compliance with a court order; therefore, present ability or means to satisfy that order is essential. Adkins v. Adkins, 82 N.C. App. 289, 346 S.E.2d 220 (1986).

Conduct Held Willful. — Defendant's voluntary purging of assets in bankruptcy was considered a deliberate divestment of assets; therefore, failure to comply with a child support order was willful and punishable by contempt proceedings. Harris v. Harris, 91 N.C. App. 699, 373 S.E.2d 312 (1988).

Court Must Determine Defendant's Ability to Comply. — A defendant in a civil contempt action will be fined or incarcerated only after a determination is made that the defendant is capable of complying with the order of the court. Reece v. Reece, 58 N.C. App. 404, 293 S.E.2d 662 (1982).

Findings on Means to Comply Held Adequate. — Trial court's finding regarding contemnor's "present means to comply" held minimally sufficient to satisfy the statutory requirement for civil contempt, although specific findings supporting the contemnor's present means are preferable. Adkins v. Adkins, 82 N.C. App. 289, 346 S.E.2d 220 (1986).

Trial court's finding that a debtor was in civil contempt for failing to comply with a consent judgment for the payment of a debt was proper pursuant to G.S 5A-21(a); the finding was based on evidence establishing as an affirmative fact that the debtor possessed the current ability to comply with the order. GMAC v. Wright, 154 N.C. App. 672, 573 S.E.2d 226, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 1524 (2002).

Findings Inadequate to Support Contempt. — A trial court's findings that a defendant was healthy and able-bodied, had been and was presently employed, had not been in ill health or incapacitated, and had the ability to earn good wages, without finding that defendant presently had the means to comply, did not support confinement in jail for contempt. Hodges v. Hodges, 64 N.C. App. 550, 307 S.E.2d 575 (1983).

Trial court erred in holding a husband in contempt for his failure to pay alimony where there was no determination in the trial court's findings of the husband's present ability to comply with the terms of the alimony order. Oakley v. Oakley, 165 N.C. App. 859, 599 S.E.2d 925, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 1511 (2004).

Even if he does not have the money to make court ordered payments, a person will be guilty of civil contempt if he could take a job which would enable him to make those payments. Frank v. Glanville, 45 N.C. App. 313, 262 S.E.2d 677 (1980).

Disobedience of an order made without, or in excess of, jurisdiction is not punishable as contempt. Harding v. Harding, 46 N.C. App. 62, 264 S.E.2d 131 (1980); In re Smith, 301 N.C. 621, 272 S.E.2d 834 (1981).

Violation of a provision of a judgment which is void cannot be made the basis for contempt. Corey v. Hardison, 236 N.C. 147, 72 S.E.2d 416 (1952).

Civil Contempt Order Was Improper After Mother Purged Herself. — Trial court erred in holding the mother in civil contempt of an order awarding the father custody of the parties' children since the mother had purged herself of contempt by complying with the amended custody order and returning the children to the father; thus, there was no longer any purpose to be served by holding the mother in civil contempt, and the trial court's conclusion was improper as a matter of law. Ruth v. Ruth, 158 N.C. App. 123, 579 S.E.2d 909, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 948 (2003).

Confrontation of Witnesses. — The North Carolina Constitution preserves the right of confrontation of the witnesses against an accused, and this right is applicable to contempt proceedings, so that an adjudication of contempt against defendant based on the affidavit of the receiver of a corporation was invalid. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

No Authority to Award Costs to Private Party in Contempt Proceeding. — A North Carolina court has no authority to award damages in the form of costs to a private party in a contempt proceeding. Green v. Crane, 96 N.C. App. 654, 386 S.E.2d 757 (1990).

Although labeled "civil" contempt, a proceeding as for contempt is by no means a civil action or proceeding to which G.S. 6-18 (when costs shall be allowed to plaintiff as a matter of course) or G.S. 6-20 (allowance of costs in discretion of court) would apply. Green v. Crane, 96 N.C. App. 654, 386 S.E.2d 757 (1990).

Court Not Authorized to Award Attorneys' Fees. — In a contempt action for the enforcement of a consent judgment regarding defendant's obligation to pay daughter's college tuition, the trial court was without authority to award the plaintiff attorneys' fees. Powers v. Powers, 103 N.C. App. 697, 407 S.E.2d 269 (1991).

When the trial court found plaintiff in contempt under G.S. 5A-21, it erred in awarding attorney fees to defendant as sanctions; such an award was not authorized by statute, as G.S. 6-18 and G.S. 6-20, governing costs, did not apply to a contempt proceeding. Sea Ranch II Owners Ass'n v. Sea Ranch II, Inc., — N.C. App. —, 636 S.E.2d 307, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 2246 (2006).

Trial court was without authority to award attorney fees to an individual because there was no statutory authority allowing the trial court to impose attorney fees as a sanction for the failure of business parties to comply with an order of the trial court for the specific performance of a settlement agreement between the individual and the business parties. Baxley v. Jackson, 179 N.C. App. 635, 634 S.E.2d 905, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 2055 (2006).

Consent Judgment Not Enforceable Through Contempt Powers. — Where the judgment on which the trial court based its contempt order did not reflect a determination by the trial court of either issues of fact or conclusions of law presented by the case before it, the order was merely a recital of the parties' agreement and not an adjudication of rights. Consequently, the consent judgment was not an order enforceable through the contempt powers of the court. Crane v. Green, 114 N.C. App. 105, 441 S.E.2d 144 (1994).

Applied in Monds v. Monds, 46 N.C. App. 301, 264 S.E.2d 750 (1980).

II. ORDERS ENFORCEABLE AS CIVIL CONTEMPT.

Child Support Orders. — Willful failure and refusal of a party to make payments for the support of his child in accordance with decree of court is civil contempt, and the court may order him into custody until he shows compliance or is otherwise discharged according to law. Smith v. Smith, 248 N.C. 298, 103 S.E.2d 400 (1958).

Civil contempt proceedings are a proper method of enforcing orders for payment of child support. The purpose of civil contempt in such a case is not to punish but to coerce a defendant into compliance with the support order. McMiller v. McMiller, 77 N.C. App. 808, 336 S.E.2d 134 (1985).

Father was properly held in contempt where he unilaterally reduced his child support payments after suffering a substantial reduction in income. Chused v. Chused, 131 N.C. App. 668, 508 S.E.2d 559 (1998).

Former wife was not in contempt, although she divided her child support in half when one of the parties' two children came to live with her, and shortly thereafter moved the court for a reduction in child support, thereby indicating that the reduction was not a deliberate or intentional attempt to violate the court's support order. Spencer v. Spencer, 133 N.C. App. 38, 514 S.E.2d 283 (1999).

Husband was found to be in contempt of order requiring him to pay $5,000 to his wife as a lump sum property settlement and to provide health insurance for their minor children: the husband was aware of his obligation to pay the property settlement, but admittedly failed to pay because he paid higher taxes due to the wife's failure to jointly file tax returns with him; in addition, there was no evidence to support the husband's contention that the wife agreed to modify that portion of the original order requiring the husband to provide health insurance for the children. Meehan v. Lawrance, 166 N.C. App. 369, 602 S.E.2d 21, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 1731 (2004).

Trial court's order of specific performance, which required business parties to comply with the terms of a court approved settlement agreement with an individual, was enforceable through the contempt powers of the court. Baxley v. Jackson, 179 N.C. App. 635, 634 S.E.2d 905, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 2055 (2006).

Visitation Orders. — Where mother encouraged child to go with his father for scheduled visitations, and the child refused, the evidence was insufficient to find that the mother acted purposefully and deliberately or with knowledge and stubborn resistance to prevent the father's visitation with the child, so as to subject her to civil contempt; the mother was not required to physically force the child to go. Hancock v. Hancock, 122 N.C. App. 518, 471 S.E.2d 415 (1996).

Trial court properly found a mother to be in civil contempt of court pursuant to G.S. 5A-21(a); the mother knew of the existence of an order granting the child's grandparents visitation, but refused to send the child for visitation and took the child to Hawaii for the summer to prevent the visitation in a willful manner. Young v. Young, 169 N.C. App. 31, 609 S.E.2d 795, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 539 (2005).

Payment of Educational Expenses. — Where defendant refused to pay educational expenses as provided in consent judgment, there was competent evidence to support the court's findings and conclusion that the defendant was in contempt of the consent judgment pursuant to subsection (a). Smith v. Smith, 121 N.C. App. 334, 465 S.E.2d 52 (1996).

Trial court properly found father in civil contempt where he willfully failed to pay his daughters college expenses as he had contracted to do. Ross v. Voiers, 127 N.C. App. 415, 490 S.E.2d 244 (1997), cert. denied, 347 N.C. 402, 496 S.E.2d 387 (1997).

Imprisonment for Nonsupport. — A defendant in a nonsupport civil contempt proceeding can be imprisoned only if he has willfully violated the court order and has the present ability to make the payments. He can regain his liberty by doing that which the court has ordered him to do and he has the ability to do, i.e., make the payments. This is consistent with the notion that civil contempt is not criminal punishment, but a civil remedy to be utilized exclusively to enforce compliance with court orders. Hodges v. Hodges, 64 N.C. App. 550, 307 S.E.2d 575 (1983).

Before a previous order of child support can be enforced by civil imprisonment which can be avoided by paying money, it must first appear that the defendant is capable of making the payments required. State v. Miller, 77 N.C. App. 436, 335 S.E.2d 187 (1985).

Failure to Pay Child Support Where Unable to Do So. — A defendant who has not made child support payments because he is actually unable to make the payments does not face a loss of liberty. Hodges v. Hodges, 64 N.C. App. 550, 307 S.E.2d 575 (1983); Graham v. Graham, 77 N.C. App. 422, 335 S.E.2d 210 (1985).

Although an order for child support is enforceable by civil contempt proceedings, a supporting party cannot be held in contempt unless such party has willfully failed to comply with the support order. A finding of willful failure to comply with the order requires evidence of the present ability to pay or to take reasonable measures to comply. Brower v. Brower, 75 N.C. App. 425, 331 S.E.2d 170 (1985).

Consent Judgment in Domestic Relations Setting. — In a domestic relations setting, a consent judgment which has been adopted by the court, but which contains unequivocal language to the effect that it is not subject to modification, may nevertheless be enforced by civil contempt. Henderson v. Henderson, 55 N.C. App. 506, 286 S.E.2d 657 (1982), aff'd, 307 N.C. 401, 298 S.E.2d 345 (1983).

Civil contempt proceedings to enforce orders for payment of support to children pursuant to consent judgment are authorized by this section. Smith v. Smith, 248 N.C. 298, 103 S.E.2d 400 (1958).

Alimony. — A judgment ordering the payment of alimony may be enforced by the contempt power. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Where the trial judge found that individual was a healthy and able-bodied man for his age, and further found that he could pay at least a portion of the alimony, it was error to imprison him until he should pay the whole amount. Cox v. Cox, 10 N.C. App. 476, 179 S.E.2d 194 (1971).

A breach of contract is not punishable as civil contempt. Luther v. Luther, 234 N.C. 429, 67 S.E.2d 345 (1951); In re Will of Smith, 249 N.C. 563, 107 S.E.2d 89 (1959).

Where proceeding for civil contempt is set in motion to compel a person to substitute a binding agreement for an invalid one, an order penalizing the plaintiff runs counter to the sound rule that the court will not entertain contempt proceedings where the mover's purpose is to coerce his adversary into making a contract. Luther v. Luther, 234 N.C. 429, 67 S.E.2d 345 (1951).

Refusal to effectuate an agreement to sign a consent judgment may not be made the basis for contempt proceedings where it does not appear that the parties ever agreed to the exact terms of such judgment. State v. Clark, 207 N.C. 657, 178 S.E. 119 (1935).

Failure to Comply with Discovery Order. — Where defendant was accused of mismanaging, diverting and wasting corporate assets, and the trial court ordered him to cooperate with receivers of the corporation and to provide them and plaintiffs with copies of his tax returns and a list of his assets, defendant's contempt, if any, in failing to provide the required materials could be criminal or civil, and contemnor waived procedural requirements when he came into court to answer charges of the trial court's show cause order. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Refusal of municipal officers to surrender their offices in accordance with the results of an election held pursuant to the provisions of a decree of court cannot be made the basis for contempt proceedings, since upon the hearing of the order to show cause the court must first adjudicate the rights of the parties to the offices, and such adjudication can be made only in a direct proceeding for that purpose. Corey v. Hardison, 236 N.C. 147, 72 S.E.2d 416 (1952).

Order to Produce Tax Returns. — Where defendant was accused of mismanaging, diverting, converting and wasting corporate assets, and he was ordered by the trial court to produce his tax returns, the production of the returns did not amount to such authentication as to be compelled testimonial self-incrimination which would support a claim of Fifth Amendment privilege; thus, defendant could be found in contempt. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Where defendant was accused of mismanaging, diverting, converting and wasting corporate assets, defendant's refusal to comply with the trial court's order to produce tax returns was not protected by the Fifth Amendment proscription against compulsory self-incrimination, and thus he could be found in contempt, since there was no evidence tending to show that defendant was under any physical or mental coercion at the time he prepared his tax returns, and he therefore could not rely upon the contents of the tax returns to support his claim of Fifth Amendment protection. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Order to Appear as Attorney. — An out-of-state attorney could not be held in and punished for willful contempt of court for failure to comply with an order of the trial court that he appear as an attorney in a criminal case where there had been no general appearance by local counsel as required by G.S. 84-4.1 and the out-of-state attorney thus never acquired eligibility to appear in the case and was never an attorney in the case admitted to limited practice in North Carolina. In re Smith, 301 N.C. 621, 272 S.E.2d 834 (1981).

Order Allowing Defendant to Avoid Confinement by Paying Arrearages Held Remedial Relief. — Where the court ordered defendant confined in jail for a period of 29 days, but it allowed defendant to avoid that punishment altogether by paying the entire amount of child support arrearages, this constituted remedial relief and therefore required that the court's order be construed as adjudicating defendant in civil contempt. Bishop v. Bishop, 90 N.C. App. 499, 369 S.E.2d 106 (1988).

Continual Violation of Sexual Exhibition/Adult Business Ordinance. — Competent evidence supported the trial court's decision to hold plaintiff owner of adult business in contempt, and the plaintiff, by her refusal to present testimony and invoking her Fifth Amendment Right, chose to abandon her claim that she was not in contempt of the trial court's order. McKillop v. Onslow County, 139 N.C. App. 53, 532 S.E.2d 594, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 808 (2000).

III. PURGING CONTEMPT.

Payment of Counsel Fees as Condition to Being Purged of Contempt. — The contempt power includes the authority for a district court judge to require one whom he has found in willful contempt of court for failure to comply with a child support order entered pursuant to G.S. 50-13.1, et seq., to pay reasonable counsel fees to opposing counsel as a condition to being purged of contempt. Blair v. Blair, 8 N.C. App. 61, 173 S.E.2d 513 (1970).

Effect of Payment of Fine. — A party to a proceeding as for contempt undoubtedly waives his right to have the judgment in the proceeding reviewed on appeal by voluntarily paying the fine imposed upon him by the judgment. But where the record reveals that the fine was paid under protest at the precise moment an appeal was noted from the order imposing it, and that the party took this course to avoid being committed to jail until the fine was paid, inasmuch as the payment was the product of coercion, the right of appeal was not waived by making it. Luther v. Luther, 234 N.C. 429, 67 S.E.2d 345 (1951).

Payment of Child Support. — Husband could not be found in civil contempt under G.S. 5A-21(b), for his failure to pay child support, where he paid the past due support prior to the contempt hearing, even though it was paid after he was served with the show cause contempt motion. Reynolds v. Reynolds, 147 N.C. App. 566, 557 S.E.2d 126, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 1231 (2001), cert. denied, 355 N.C. 493, 563 S.E.2d 567 (2002).

Conditioning of Probation or Suspended Sentence on Contemnor's Purging Himself. — The imposition of probationary conditions under G.S. 15A-1343 and the possibility of early termination under G.S. 15A-1342(b) do not transform probationary or suspended sentences into civil relief. However, specifically conditioning the imposition or effect of the probationary or suspended sentence upon the contemnor's purging himself would constitute civil relief. Bishop v. Bishop, 90 N.C. App. 499, 369 S.E.2d 106 (1988).

IV. PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.

Jury Trial. — Respondents in proceedings for civil contempt are not entitled to a jury trial. In re Gorham, 129 N.C. 481, 40 S.E. 311 (1901).

Filing of Injunction Required for Contempt Purposes. — A party could not be held in contempt for violations of a preliminary injunction that occurred after the order for the injunction was issued, but before it was filed with the county clerk. Onslow County v. Moore, 129 N.C. App. 376, 499 S.E.2d 780 (1998).

Appointment of Counsel for Indigents. — Due process requires appointment of counsel for indigents in nonsupport civil contempt proceedings only in those cases where assistance of counsel is necessary for an adequate presentation of the merits or to otherwise ensure fundamental fairness. Jolly v. Wright, 300 N.C. 83, 265 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

When a civil proceeding may result in imprisonment, due process requirements are met by evaluating the necessity for appointed counsel on a case-by-case basis. Hodges v. Hodges, 64 N.C. App. 550, 307 S.E.2d 575 (1983).

Right to Confront Witnesses. — A person denying his asserted violation of a restraining order in contempt proceedings has the right under the provisions of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19, synonymous with due process of law under the United States Constitution, to confront and cross-examine witnesses by whose testimony the asserted violation is to be established. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

But This Right Is Waivable. — See Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

District Court May Enforce Judgment Entered in Superior Court. — A district court judge may hold a party to a proceeding before him in civil contempt for failure to comply with court orders issued pursuant to a confession of judgment regarding payment of alimony which was entered in the superior court prior to the establishment of a district court for the district in which the order was entered. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Where the trial court made no findings of defendant's ability to pay the entire arrearage arising from nonpayment of child support, the Court of Appeals was required to conclude that there were inadequate findings to support the adjudication of civil contempt. Bishop v. Bishop, 90 N.C. App. 499, 369 S.E.2d 106 (1988).

V. APPEAL AND ERROR.

Scope of Review. — The scope of review in contempt proceedings is limited to whether the findings of fact by the trial judge are supported by competent evidence and whether those factual findings are sufficient to support the judgment. McMiller v. McMiller, 77 N.C. App. 808, 336 S.E.2d 134 (1985); Adkins v. Adkins, 82 N.C. App. 289, 346 S.E.2d 220 (1986).

The findings of fact made by the judge in contempt proceedings are conclusive on appeal when supported by any competent evidence, and are reviewable only for the purpose of passing on their sufficiency to warrant the judgment. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970); Cox v. Cox, 10 N.C. App. 476, 179 S.E.2d 194 (1971).

Incorrect standard in ruling on show cause order. — Trial court's conclusion, in ruling on a motion to show cause for failure to comply with the court's previous orders, that no showing had been made under G.S. 5A-21 was error, as the trial court was only required to determine, pursuant to G.S. 5A-23(a), whether the information contained in the motion and the record was sufficient to warrant a prudent person to believe the contemnor had the ability to comply with the trial court's order; since the trial court used the incorrect standard in denying the motion, remand was required. Young v. Mastrom, Inc., 149 N.C. App. 483, 560 S.E.2d 596, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 192 (2002).

Interference with Order Awarding Child Custody. — Trial court erred by holding a husband in contempt for violating the court's order awarding custody of the husband's children to his ex-wife where the husband followed his ex-wife as she was leaving a ball game and argued with her in front of their children. Scott v. Scott, 157 N.C. App. 382, 579 S.E.2d 431, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 742 (2003).

§ 5A-22. Release when civil contempt no longer continues.

(a) A person imprisoned for civil contempt must be released when his civil contempt no longer continues. The order of the court holding a person in civil contempt must specify how the person may purge himself of the contempt. Upon finding compliance with the specifications, the sheriff or other officer having custody may release the person without a further order from the court.

(b) On motion of the contemnor, the court must determine if he is subject to release and, on an affirmative determination, order his release. The motion must be directed to the judge who found civil contempt unless he is not available. Then the motion must be made to a judge of the same division in the same district court district as defined in G.S. 7A-133 or superior court district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1, as the case may be. The contemnor may also seek his release under other procedures available under the law of this State. (1977, c. 711, s. 3; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 45.)

Subsection (a) permits the one who has custody of a jailed contemnor to release him without a court order or any formal proceedings, if the custodian finds that the contemnor has purged himself of the contempt by complying with the contempt order's specifications. This is intended to apply mainly to the situation in which compliance with the order calls for payment to the court. It was felt that this action was so clear that the custodian should be able to proceed on his own. The possibility that a person will be released when a release was not proper was outweighed by the importance of seeing to it that a person did not remain jailed longer than was necessary. Subsection (b) establishes the machinery for a civil contemnor to seek his own release if he has complied or if compliance is no longer possible, but he has still not been released.

CASE NOTES

The purpose of civil contempt is not to punish but to coerce the defendant to comply with a court order. Cox v. Cox, 133 N.C. App. 221, 515 S.E.2d 61 (1999).

Civil contempt is employed to coerce disobedient defendants into complying with orders of court, and the length of time that a defendant can be imprisoned in a proper case is not limited by law, since the defendant can obtain his release immediately upon complying with the court's order. Brower v. Brower, 70 N.C. App. 131, 318 S.E.2d 542 (1984).

Defendant Must Have Present Ability to Comply. — This section and G.S. 5A-21 must be construed in pari materia. When so construed, these statutes require that a person have the present ability to comply with the conditions for purging the contempt before that person may be imprisoned for civil contempt. McMiller v. McMiller, 77 N.C. App. 808, 336 S.E.2d 134 (1985).

Purging Provision. — The contempt order must be vacated if it fails to specify, as required by subsection (a) of this section, how the defendant might purge herself of contempt. The purpose of civil contempt is not to punish, but to coerce the defendant to comply with the order. Thus the purging provision is essential to the order. Bethea v. McDonald, 70 N.C. App. 566, 320 S.E.2d 690 (1984).

Means for Purging Contempt Required. — Trial court had the authority to enforce consent order regarding repairs to a dwelling through its contempt powers, but the trial court erred by failing to provide for a means for defendant to purge himself of the contempt. Nohejl v. First Homes of Craven County, Inc., 120 N.C. App. 188, 461 S.E.2d 10 (1995).

Purge Provision Impermissibly Vague. — A condition of a temporary child custody order was impermissibly vague, where a condition to be met for the mother to purge herself of civil contempt was that she not punish either of the minor children in any manner that was "stressful, abusive, or detrimental" to the child. Cox v. Cox, 133 N.C. App. 221, 515 S.E.2d 61 (1999).

Trial Court Without Authority to Require Contemnor to Pay Compensatory Damages. — Upon a finding of contempt, in situations where the original order requires a transfer of property (including intangible property such as that represented by stock certificates), the trial court has authority to order the contemnor to transfer said property as a condition of purging the contempt, but does not have authority to require the contemnor to pay compensatory damages incurred as a result of his noncompliance with the original order. Hartsell v. Hartsell, 99 N.C. App. 380, 393 S.E.2d 570 (1990), aff'd, 328 N.C. 729, 403 S.E.2d 307 (1991).

§ 5A-23. Proceedings for civil contempt.

(a) Proceedings for civil contempt are by motion pursuant to G.S. 5A-23(a1), by the order of a judicial official directing the alleged contemnor to appear at a specified reasonable time and show cause why he should not be held in civil contempt, or by the notice of a judicial official that the alleged contemnor will be held in contempt unless he appears at a specified reasonable time and shows cause why he should not be held in contempt. The order or notice must be given at least five days in advance of the hearing unless good cause is shown. The order or notice may be issued on the motion and sworn statement or affidavit of one with an interest in enforcing the order, including a judge, and a finding by the judicial official of probable cause to believe there is civil contempt.

(a1) Proceedings for civil contempt may be initiated by motion of an aggrieved party giving notice to the alleged contemnor to appear before the court for a hearing on whether the alleged contemnor should be held in civil contempt. A copy of the motion and notice must be served on the alleged contemnor at least five days in advance of the hearing unless good cause is shown. The motion must include a sworn statement or affidavit by the aggrieved party setting forth the reasons why the alleged contemnor should be held in civil contempt. The burden of proof in a hearing pursuant to this subsection shall be on the aggrieved party.

(c) The person ordered to show cause may move to dismiss the order.

(d) The judicial official is the trier of facts at the show cause hearing.

(e) At the conclusion of the hearing, the judicial official must enter a finding for or against the alleged contemnor on each of the elements set out in G.S. 5A-21(a). If civil contempt is found, the judicial official must enter an order finding the facts constituting contempt and specifying the action which the contemnor must take to purge himself or herself of the contempt.

(f) A person with an interest in enforcing the order may present the case for a finding of civil contempt for failure to comply with an order.

(g) A person who is found in civil contempt under this Article shall not, for the same conduct, be found in criminal contempt under Article 1 of this Chapter. (1977, c. 711, s. 3; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1080, ss. 2-4; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 46; 1999-361, ss. 2, 4, 5; 2000-140, s. 35.)

OFFICIAL COMMENTARY

Subsection (a) draws a distinction between an order to appear for a show of cause hearing and a notice that the show-cause hearing will be held. The Commission wanted to make clear the propriety of a person's not appearing if he was notified of the show-cause hearing rather than ordered to appear at it. Since the Commission felt that there were some instances in which the court would want the contemnor present regardless of his wishes, the order was left as an option. Application of subsection (b) results in magistrates and clerks being unable to hold proceedings for civil contempt. The Commission particularly intended "a person with an interest" under subsection (f) to include the State, as represented by the district attorney, in a criminal case. Subsection (g) permits, in essence, consolidated hearings for civil and criminal contempt, thus permitting a judge who has begun a civil contempt hearing to continue and find the person in criminal contempt even though he is beyond the reach of civil contempt because of inability at that time to comply with the order.

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Some of the annotations under this section are from cases decided under former statutory provisions.

This section has no application in criminal contempt proceedings. Mather v. Mather, 70 N.C. App. 106, 318 S.E.2d 548 (1984).

Defendant's Rights Under U.S. Const., Amend. V Not Implicated in Civil Contempt Case. — Where trial court ordered defendant incarcerated, gave defendant the opportunity to purge his contempt by complying with prior consent order and paying certain sums for attorney's fees and damages, and imposed no other penalty, the relief granted was wholly civil in nature. Since defendant was not, in fact, subject to criminal penalties, there was no necessity to examine whether defendant's rights under U.S. Const., Amend. V were adequately protected during the contempt proceeding. Hartsell v. Hartsell, 99 N.C. App. 380, 393 S.E.2d 570 (1990), aff'd, 328 N.C. 729, 403 S.E.2d 307 (1991).

Contemnor Must Have Means to Comply Before Being Found in Contempt. — Contempt proceedings are not a form of punishment, but serve to ensure obedience to orders of the court. Therefore it is essential that the alleged contemnor have the means to comply, and that the court so find, before she can be found in contempt. Glesner v. Dembrosky, 73 N.C. App. 594, 327 S.E.2d 60 (1985).

On its face order demonstrated noncompliance with this section where the trial court first determined that plaintiff's failure to appear created the jeopardy of contempt, then it immediately found plaintiff to be in actual contempt. Garrett v. Garrett, 121 N.C. App. 192, 464 S.E.2d 716 (1995).

Findings Preferable But Not Essential in Proceeding to Enforce Support. — While explicit findings are always preferable in a civil contempt proceeding to enforce an order for child support, they are not absolutely essential where the findings otherwise clearly indicate that a contempt order is warranted. Plott v. Plott, 74 N.C. App. 82, 327 S.E.2d 273 (1985).

Court Need Only Find Means to Comply and Refusal to Do So. — In civil contempt proceedings to enforce orders for child support, the court is required to find only that the allegedly delinquent obligor has the means to comply with the order and that he or she willfully refused to do so. Plott v. Plott, 74 N.C. App. 82, 327 S.E.2d 273 (1985).

Incorrect standard in ruling on show cause order. — Trial court's conclusion, in ruling on a motion to show cause for failure to comply with the court's previous orders, that no showing had been made under G.S. 5A-21 was error, as the trial court was only required to determine, pursuant to G.S. 5A-23(a), whether the information contained in the motion and the record was sufficient to warrant a prudent person to believe the contemnor had the ability to comply with the trial court's order; since the trial court used the incorrect standard in denying the motion, remand was required. Young v. Mastrom, Inc., 149 N.C. App. 483, 560 S.E.2d 596, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 192 (2002).

Findings were insufficient to support the court's contempt holding that the defendant was in violation of the parental visitation order that provided for defendant's daily telephone contact with the minor child. Watkins v. Watkins, 136 N.C. App. 844, 526 S.E.2d 485, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 163.

Opposing party must show cause why he should not be found in contempt. In a proceeding to enforce an order for child support, this would involve showing either that he lacked the means to pay or that the failure to pay was not willful. Plott v. Plott, 74 N.C. App. 82, 327 S.E.2d 273 (1985).

The statutes governing proceedings for civil contempt in child support cases clearly assign the burden of proof to the party alleged to be delinquent, and after a civil contempt proceeding is initiated by an interested party who files a motion in the cause, the opposing party must then show cause why he should not be found in contempt. Belcher v. Averette, 136 N.C. App. 803, 526 S.E.2d 663, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 166 (2000).

Evidence sufficient to support finding of contempt. — The trial court properly found that defendant was sufficiently able to comply with the temporary alimony order but willfully, deliberately, and without justification failed to do so where the defendant failed to meet his burden of proof of establishing that he lacked the means to pay or that his failure to pay was not willful; the defendant failed to provide a financial statement or personal bank statements, failed to give his accountant accurate information, failed to explain large sums of money he received from his girlfriend, and was generally vague or indifferent as to supplemental income he did or could receive. Shumaker v. Shumaker, 137 N.C. App. 72, 527 S.E.2d 55, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 268 (2000).

Judge was authorized to shorten notice period of civil contempt hearing for good cause, where the defendant had known for several months of the particular charges pending against him and had had ample opportunity to prepare to meet them, where all the witnesses, some of whom had been in court on earlier occasions, were present, along with the parties, and where defendant's lawyer acknowledged that his argument for delaying the hearing was based, not upon any unreadiness to proceed, but upon his mistaken impression that a hearing upon less than five days notice was automatically invalid. M.G. Newell Co. v. Wyrick, 91 N.C. App. 98, 370 S.E.2d 431 (1988).

Notice. — Arrest order was improper where it was issued without assurance that the party had received notice and opportunity to be heard as required by this section. In re Ammons, 344 N.C. 195, 473 S.E.2d 326 (1996).

Service on a father of a motion by the mother, and ex-wife of the father, of a motion to show cause and a notice of a hearing 27 days before the scheduled hearing was adequate notice of a contempt proceeding in a case where the mother claimed that the father was not meeting his child support obligations. Trivette v. Trivette, 162 N.C. App. 55, 590 S.E.2d 298, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 40 (2004).

The trial court failed to comply with the provisions of this section in its contempt proceeding against the defendant where no notice or order to show cause was ever issued to the defendant. Watkins v. Watkins, 136 N.C. App. 844, 526 S.E.2d 485, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 163.

Defendant Held Not Entitled to Notice. — Where the defendant had notice of civil contempt hearing and he was simultaneously adjudged to be in both civil and criminal contempt, defendant was entitled to no notice as to the criminal contempt, as subsection (g) of this section expressly authorizes a judge conducting a hearing to determine civil contempt to "find the person in criminal contempt for the same conduct" upon making the required findings. M.G. Newell Co. v. Wyrick, 91 N.C. App. 98, 370 S.E.2d 431 (1988).

Requirement for Proper Verification. — Although the language used in this section seems to be permissive in nature, prior case law under the antecedent statute established that, in cases of civil contempt, previously denominated as cases as for contempt, a petition, affidavit, or other proper verification charging a willful violation of an order of court was necessary in order for an order to show cause to issue. The legislature has not altered this requirement. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 45 N.C. App. 348, 263 S.E.2d 624 (1980), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

The procedure to punish for civil contempt is by order to show cause based upon a petition, affidavit, or other proper verification charging a willful violation of an order of court. Rose's Stores, Inc. v. Tarrytown Center, Inc., 270 N.C. 201, 154 S.E.2d 313 (1967).

Precedent decrees that a judge should recuse himself in contempt proceeding involving his personal feelings, which do not make for an impartial and calm judicial consideration and conclusion in the matter. Ponder v. Davis, 233 N.C. 699, 65 S.E.2d 356 (1951).

No judge should sit in his own case or participate in a matter in which he has a personal interest or has taken sides. Ponder v. Davis, 233 N.C. 699, 65 S.E.2d 356 (1951).

Trial court did not have jurisdiction to conduct contempt proceedings while appeal was pending, because, under G.S. 1-294, all proceedings below are stayed; therefore order finding defendant in contempt was void, at least until appeal was perfected. Collins v. Collins, 18 N.C. App. 45, 196 S.E.2d 282 (1973), decided under former G.S. 5-9.

Waiver of Procedural Requirements. — Where defendant was accused of mismanaging, diverting and wasting corporate assets and the trial court ordered him to cooperate with receivers of the corporation and to provide them and plaintiffs with copies of his tax returns and a list of his assets, defendant's contempt, if any, in failing to provide the required materials could be criminal or civil, and contemnor waived procedural requirements when he came into court to answer charges of the trial court's show cause order. Lowder v. All Star Mills, Inc., 301 N.C. 561, 273 S.E.2d 247 (1981).

Jurisdiction Conferred by General Appearance. — The defendant's appearance in court on the scheduled date and participation in the contempt proceedings constituted a general appearance which conferred jurisdiction over her person, despite the fact that the plaintiff's motion instigating the civil contempt proceedings was not accompanied by a sworn statement or affidavit and no order or notice by a judicial official directing the defendant to appear and show cause why she should not be held in civil contempt was ever issued or served upon her. Bethea v. McDonald, 70 N.C. App. 566, 320 S.E.2d 690 (1984).

Willfulness Required. — Although the statutes governing civil contempt do not expressly require willful conduct, case law has interpreted the statutes to require an element of willfulness. Sharpe v. Nobles, 127 N.C. App. 705, 493 S.E.2d 288 (1997).

Burden of Proof. — Because the trial court erroneously placed the burden on the father to prove a lack of wilful contempt for failing to meet his child support payments, the trial court's finding of fact did not support its conclusion of law; thus, the appellate court vacated the father's adjudication of wilful civil contempt. Trivette v. Trivette, 162 N.C. App. 55, 590 S.E.2d 298, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 40 (2004).

Applied in Bennett v. Bennett, 71 N.C. App. 424, 322 S.E.2d 439 (1984).

§ 5A-24. Appeals.

A person found in civil contempt may appeal in the manner provided for appeals in civil actions. (1977, c. 711, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Nature of Order. — Where order allowed mother to purge the contempt by delivering the child over to the father for his scheduled visitation and by turning over the father's property or otherwise consenting to a search of her home, the contempt order was actually civil in nature. In civil contempt matters, appeal is from the district court to the Court of Appeals. Hancock v. Hancock, 122 N.C. App. 518, 471 S.E.2d 415 (1996).

Article 3.

Contempt by Juveniles.

§ 5A-31. Contempt by a juvenile.

(a) Each of the following, when done by an unemancipated minor who (i) is at least six years of age, (ii) is not yet 16 years of age, and (iii) has not been convicted of any crime in superior court, is contempt by a juvenile:

(1) Willful behavior committed during the sitting of a court and directly tending to interrupt its proceedings.

(2) Willful behavior committed during the sitting of a court in its immediate view and presence and directly tending to impair the respect due its authority.

(3) Willful disobedience of, resistance to, or interference with a court's lawful process, order, directive, or instruction or its execution.

(4) Willful refusal to be sworn or affirmed as a witness, or, when so sworn or affirmed, willful refusal to answer any legal and proper question when the refusal is not legally justified.

(5) Willful or grossly negligent failure to comply with schedules and practices of the court resulting in substantial interference with the business of the court.

(6) Willful refusal to testify or produce other information upon the order of a judge acting pursuant to Article 61 of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes, Granting of Immunity to Witnesses.

(7) Willful communication with a juror in an improper attempt to influence the juror's deliberations.

(8) Any other act or omission specified in another Chapter of the General Statutes as grounds for criminal contempt.

(b) Contempt by a juvenile is direct contempt by a juvenile when each of the following conditions is met:

(1) The act is committed within the sight or hearing of a presiding judicial official.

(2) The act is committed in, or in the immediate proximity to, the room where proceedings are being held before the court.

(3) The act is likely to interrupt or interfere with matters then before the court.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2007-168, s. 8, makes this article effective December 1, 2007, and applicable to acts occurring or offenses committed on or after that date.

§ 5A-32. Direct contempt by a juvenile.

(a) A presiding judicial official may summarily impose measures in response to direct contempt by a juvenile when necessary to restore order or maintain the dignity and authority of the court and when the measures are imposed substantially contemporaneously with the contempt. Before imposing measures summarily, the judicial official shall do all of the following:

(1) Give the juvenile summary notice of the contempt allegation and a summary opportunity to respond.

(2) Appoint an attorney to represent the juvenile and allow time for the juvenile and attorney to confer.

(3) Find facts supporting the summary imposition of measures in response to contempt by a juvenile. The facts shall be established beyond a reasonable doubt.

(c) After a determination is made pursuant to subsection (a) or (b) of this section that a juvenile has committed direct contempt, the court may order any or all of the following:

(1) That the juvenile be detained in a juvenile detention facility for up to five days.

(2) That the juvenile perform up to 30 hours of supervised community service as arranged by a juvenile court counselor.

(3) That the juvenile be required to undergo any evaluation necessary for the court to determine the needs of the juvenile.

The court shall not impose any of these sanctions without finding first that the juvenile's act or omission was willfully contemptuous or that the act or omission was preceded by a clear warning by the court that the conduct is improper.

(d) A judicial official who finds a juvenile in direct contempt may at any time terminate or reduce a sanction of detention or eliminate or reduce the number of hours of community service ordered if warranted by the juvenile's conduct and the ends of justice.

(e) A judicial official may orally order that a juvenile the official is charging with direct contempt be taken into custody and restrained to the extent necessary to assure the juvenile's presence for summary proceedings or notice of plenary proceedings.

(f) The clerk shall place a copy of any order or other paper issued pursuant to this section in the juvenile's juvenile file, if one exists, or in a new juvenile file.

§ 5A-33. Indirect contempt by a juvenile.

Indirect contempt by a juvenile may be adjudged and sanctioned only pursuant to the procedures in Subchapter II of Chapter 7B of the General Statutes. (2007-168, s. 1.)

§ 5A-34. When minor can be in contempt.

(a) No act or omission by a minor younger than six years of age constitutes contempt.

(b) The provisions of Article 1 and Article 2 of this Chapter apply to acts or omissions by a minor who:

(1) Is 16 years of age or older;

(2) Is married or otherwise emancipated; or

(3) Before the act or omission, was convicted in superior court of any criminal offense. (2007-168, s. 1.)

  - C. Other Costs.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

For discussion of costs generally, see State v. Massey, 104 N.C. 877, 10 S.E. 608 (1889).

Jurisdiction of Court to Make Award. — Because a successor judge lacked jurisdiction to overrule a prior judge's denial of summary judgment and to award summary judgment to plaintiffs on their second claim for relief, a valid judgment was not awarded to the plaintiffs so that they were not to be considered the prevailing parties; thus, there was not a statutory basis for the award of costs to the plaintiffs. Cail v. Cerwin, — N.C. App. —, 648 S.E.2d 510, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1684 (2007).

Costs Follow the Judgment. — In general this section states the rule that costs follow the judgment, a rule which is founded on policy and natural justice, designed to prevent the unsuccessful litigant from escaping the consequence ensuing from the unfavorable termination of a suit, and which, to a great extent, acts as deterrent to the prosecution or appeal of promiscuous and frivolous litigation. Criminal actions and civil suits alike are controlled by the principle. In State v. Horne, 119 N.C. 853, 26 S.E. 36 (1896), it is said: "There is no exception in State cases to the rule prevailing in civil cases that the costs follow the result of the final judgment." The true and only test of liability for costs depends upon the nature of the final judgment, and the party cast in the suit is the one upon whom the costs must fall. Kincaid v. Graham, 92 N.C. 154 (1885); Williams v. Hughes, 139 N.C. 17, 51 S.E. 790 (1905); Smith v. Cashie & Cowan R.R. & Lumber Co., 148 N.C. 334, 62 S.E. 416 (1908); Kinston Cotton Mills v. Rocky Mount Hosiery Co., 154 N.C. 462, 70 S.E. 910 (1911); Ritchie v. Ritchie, 192 N.C. 538, 135 S.E. 458 (1926).

This basic rule of costs is underlying throughout and apparent from the other provisions of this chapter, and, as stated in Costin v. Baxter, 29 N.C. 111 (1846), "in no instance found in the books has the losing party recovered his costs or any part of them."

Trial judges are authorized to tax court costs, and if the court misused its authority in taxing costs against pauper plaintiff, that error was waived by her failure to appeal therefrom.

Schaffner v. Pantelakos, 98 N.C. App. 399, 391 S.E.2d 41 (1990).

At common law neither party to a civil action could recover costs. Costin v. Baxter, 29 N.C. 111 (1846); State v. Massey, 104 N.C. 877, 10 S.E. 608 (1889); Charwick v. Life Ins. Co., 158 N.C. 380, 74 S.E. 115 (1912); Waldo v. Wilson, 177 N.C. 461, 100 S.E. 182 (1919); City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

And each party paid his own witnesses. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Costs are entirely creatures of legislation, etc, without which they do not exist. Clerk's Office v. Commissioners of Carteret County, 121 N.C. 29, 27 S.E. 1003 (1897).

Today in this State, all costs are given in a court of law by virtue of some statute. Costs, in this State, are entirely creatures of legislation, and without this they do not exist. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

The court's power to tax costs is entirely dependent upon statutory authorization. State v. Johnson, 282 N.C. 1, 191 S.E.2d 641 (1972).

An award of costs is an exercise of statutory authority; if the statute is misinterpreted, the judgment is erroneous. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Plain meaning of G.S. 7A-320, 6-1, and 6-20 precluded a finding that any reasonable and necessary litigation expenses could be taxed as costs against a non-prevailing opposing party; pursuant to North Carolina Supreme Court precedent, the only expenses which could be taxed as costs were those specifically authorized by statute. DOT v. Charlotte Area Manufactured Hous., Inc., 160 N.C. App. 461, 586 S.E.2d 780, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1822 (2003).

Statutes Are Strictly Construed. — Since the right to tax costs did not exist at common law and costs are considered penal in their nature, statutes relating to costs are strictly construed. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Costs May Not Be Adjudged on Mere Equitable or Moral Grounds. — Since costs may be taxed solely on the basis of statutory authority, it follows a fortiori that courts have no power to adjudge costs against anyone on mere equitable or moral grounds. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Parties Are Entitled to Actual Costs Reasonably Incurred and Specifically Authorized. — Parties to whom judgment is given are entitled to recover their actual costs reasonably incurred and specifically authorized by statutes. Such reimbursement is the limit of their entitlement. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Costs and Expenses Unnecessarily Incurred. — Even when allowed by statute, costs and expenses unnecessarily incurred by the prevailing party will not be taxed against the unsuccessful party. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

No Costs in Mistrial. — Trial court had no discretion to award witness expenses to the doctors as a cost from the first malpractice trial which ended in a mistrial. Smith v. Cregan, 178 N.C. App. 519, 632 S.E.2d 206, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 1568 (2006).

II. PARTICULAR COSTS.

A. Attorneys' Fees.

In the absence of express statutory authority, attorneys' fees are not allowable as part of the court costs in civil actions. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

In the absence of express statutory authority, attorneys' fees are not allowable. — Pursuant to G.S. 1-294, a trial court did not have jurisdiction to decide the issue of attorney fees after a county and its board of commissioners had filed their notice of appeal from the judgment in favor of a chairman of a county airport authority who had been improperly removed from his position; an exception did not apply, as the award of attorney fees under G.S. 6-1, G.S. 6-20, G.S. 6-19.1, G.S. 7A-314, and G.S. 143-318.16B was based upon the chairman being the prevailing party. McClure v. County of Jackson, — N.C. App. —, 648 S.E.2d 546, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1814 (2007).

The power to make an allowance of attorneys' fees from a fund brought into court is susceptible of great abuse, and should be exercised with jealous caution. With the power of award being limited to items of reasonable attorneys' fees and expenses, so as to exclude compensation or allowance of any kind for the time and effort of the suing taxpayer, thus fixing it so the taxpayer may not capitalize on the suit, there is no real danger of abuse. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

B. Witness Fees.

In General. — The losing party is taxed with the costs of his adversary's witness only if the witness was subpoenaed and examined or tendered. Hobbs v. Atlantic C.L.R.R., 151 N.C. 134, 65 S.E. 755 (1909); Chadwick v. Life Ins. Co., 158 N.C. 380, 74 S.E. 115 (1912); City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972). See also, Porter v. Durham, 79 N.C. 596 (1878); Sitton v. Edward-Eversole Lumber Co., 135 N.C. 540, 47 S.E. 609 (1904).

Witnesses Who Are Not Summoned or Who Are Nonresidents. — There is no provision in our law authorizing the taxation, as costs, of the fees for attendance and mileage of witnesses who have not been summoned, nor of witnesses who have been summoned but who are nonresidents of the State. Stern v. Herren, 101 N.C. 516, 8 S.E. 221 (1888).

Witness Fees Not Allowed and Taxed for Party Testifying in His Own Case. — The general rule is that, unless authorized by express statute provision, witness fees cannot be allowed and taxed for a party to the action. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

In construing this section, it is not necessary to resort to rules of construction. Clearly, the legislature did not contemplate that a party would disburse or become liable to himself for a fee when he testified as a witness for himself in his own case. Neither did it contemplate that a party would pay an officer to subpoena himself as a witness. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

If a successful party is not entitled to have a witness fee for himself taxed against his losing adversary, he is not entitled to have taxed an expert witness fee for himself. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Expert witness fees can be taxed against an adverse party only when the testimony of the witness examined or tendered was or would have been material and competent. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

The testimony of expert civil engineer that his plan for widening street was as good as city's was totally irrelevant to the question of city's right to condemn the property in question. The record disclosed no facts which would justify taxing, as a part of the costs for which the city was liable, an expert witness fee. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Where neither expert witness testified in obedience to a subpoena, the court was without authority to allow either of them an expert fee or to tax the losing party with the amount of the fee as a part of the costs. Couch v. Couch, 18 N.C. App. 108, 196 S.E.2d 64 (1973).

Witnesses Summoned by Both Parties. — A witness summoned by each party to a suit is entitled to compensation from each. Peace v. Person, 5 N.C. 188 (1808).

Expense of Transporting Witnesses. — A provision in an order for removal that movant should pay "costs" of transporting the witnesses of the adverse party was held to mean "expense," since such "costs" are no part of the costs of the action. Nichols v. Goldston, 231 N.C. 581, 58 S.E.2d 348 (1950).

This section does not include expenses for returning defendant to this State from points without the State. State v. Patterson, 224 N.C. 471, 31 S.E.2d 380 (1944).

Effect of Nonsuit. — The costs of the defendant's witnesses who are present when the case is brought for trial, but are not sworn, because the plaintiff takes a nonsuit, are properly taxed against the latter. Henderson v. Williams, 120 N.C. 339, 27 S.E. 30 (1897).

C. Other Costs.

Compensation for Time and Effort Devoted to Litigation. — Parties are not entitled to recover an hourly wage or per diem for the time they expend in attending hearings, or securing evidence or exhibits; a party is not entitled to compensation for the time and effort he devotes to the litigation. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Mileage, Meals and Hotel Bills. — No statute authorizes the inclusion of expenses of parties for mileage, meals and hotel bills expended in securing evidence and attending hearings in court costs. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

The expense of procuring surveys, maps, plans, photographs and documents are not taxable as costs unless there is clear statutory authority therefor or unless they have been ordered by the court. City of Charlotte v. McNeely, 281 N.C. 684, 190 S.E.2d 179 (1972).

Nominal Damages Entitling Plaintiff to Costs Not Allowed in Action for Wrongful Death. — Where, in an action for wrongful death, the sole issue is that of damages, and there is no pecuniary loss on which recovery could be based, nominal damages, which would entitle plaintiff to costs, would not be allowed. Armentrout v. Hughes, 247 N.C. 631, 101 S.E.2d 793 (1958).

Where the appellate court allowed improvements claimed in partition proceedings, claimant would not be taxed with the costs of trial in the superior court involving her claim. Jenkins v. Strickland, 214 N.C. 441, 199 S.E. 612 (1938).

Arbitration Fee. — Costs were properly allowed to a successful driver even though the driver's insurer paid all of his costs, as: (1) the judgment was entered for the driver and the costs award did not violate G.S. 6-1; (2) the driver incurred the expenses; (3) the award of an arbitration fee was specifically allowed in

G.S. 7A-305(d)(7); (4) it was not an abuse of discretion under G.S. 6-20 to award the deposition fee; and (5) the preparation time fees of a driver's reconstruct expert were properly allowed. Hoffman v. Oakley, — N.C. App. —, 647 S.E.2d 117, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1628 (2007).

An action upon a contract sounding in damages is one at law, and the costs are taxable under this section, and are not in the discretion of the court as an equity proceeding controlled by G.S. 6-20. Highland Cotton Mills v. Ragan Knitting Co., 194 N.C. 80, 138 S.E. 428 (1927).

§ 6-3. Sureties on prosecution bonds liable for costs.

When an action is brought in any court in which security is given for the prosecution thereof, or when any case is brought up to a court by an appeal or otherwise, in which security for the prosecution of the suit has been given, and judgment is rendered against the plaintiff for the costs of the defendant, the appellate court shall also give judgment against the surety for said costs, and execution may issue jointly against the plaintiff and his surety. (1831, c. 46; R.S., c. 31, s. 133; R.C., c. 31, s. 126; Code, s. 543; Rev., s. 1251; 1913, c. 189, s. 1; C.S., s. 1227.)

CASE NOTES

Section Applies in Supreme Court. — This section could not be restricted in its application to appeals from the court of a justice of the peace, for the first sentence of the section would not apply to such a court, as no prosecution bond for costs is given there, but only in the superior court, or in the Supreme Court if an action is brought there against the State, or perhaps in some other cases not cognizable by a justice of the peace. Kenney v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 166 N.C. 566, 82 S.E. 849 (1914); Grimes v. Andrews, 171 N.C. 367, 88 S.E. 513 (1916), decided prior to abolition of office of justices of the peace.

The words "appellate court," as used by the amendment of this section in 1913, in view of the context could mean only the Supreme Court. Kenney v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 166 N.C. 566, 82 S.E. 849 (1914).

It Is Not Limited to Cases Where Plaintiff Appeals. — This section is so broadly worded as to apply to all cases where the costs are adjudged for the defendant against the plaintiff, and not simply to those where the plaintiff appeals. Kenney v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 166 N.C. 566, 82 S.E. 849 (1914).

But it does not apply where the defendant does not gain an entire reversal in the appellate court; where a partial new trial only is awarded, the costs are in the discretion of the appellate court, as provided in G.S. 6-33. Rayburn v. Casualty Co., 142 N.C. 376, 55 S.E. 296 (1906).

Application Where Judgment Is Asked Against Sureties in Quo Warranto. — Where an action is brought to recover fees of an office, and in the same action judgment is asked against the sureties on a bond given in a quo warranto proceeding, the superior court has jurisdiction and judgment may be rendered against the sureties. McCall v. Zachary, 131 N.C. 466, 42 S.E. 903 (1902).

The words "security for the prosecution" mean the prosecution bond. Kenney v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 166 N.C. 566, 82 S.E. 849 (1914).

Increasing Penalty of Bond. — Where the defendant has been successful on his appeal to the appellate court, and his judgment for costs against the sureties on the prosecution bond of the plaintiff results in making insecure the costs in the superior court, the remedy is by application to increase the penalty of the bond. Kenney v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 166 N.C. 566, 82 S.E. 849 (1914).

Appeal by Surety. — Though a surety on a prosecution bond is not a party to the action, yet, when he is made a party to a proceeding to tax the costs in a case, he may appeal from the order allowing the motion to retax. Smith v. Arthur, Coffin & Co., 116 N.C. 871, 21 S.E. 696 (1895).

§ 6-4. Execution for unpaid costs; bill of costs to be attached.

When costs are not paid by the party from whom they are due, the clerk of superior court shall issue an execution for the costs, and attach a bill of costs to each execution. The sheriff shall levy the execution as in other cases. (R.C., c. 102, s. 24; Code, s. 3762; Rev., s. 1252; C.S., s. 1228; 1969, c. 44, s. 17; 1971, c. 269, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Every execution presupposes a judgment of some sort, and the right given by this section to issue the one implies the existence of the other. Sheppard v. Bland, 87 N.C. 163 (1882).

Order to pay costs. — Trial court's order that an employee pay costs in the first case he brought against an agency was a civil judgment, and the trial court was not authorized to dismiss the employee's second case against the agency for his failure to pay costs ordered in first case; however, the agency's motion to dismiss was well founded, and the trial court's refusal to award sanctions was affirmed. Leverette v. Batts Temp. Servs. , 165 N.C. App. 328, 598 S.E.2d 192, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 1174 (2004), cert. denied, 359 N.C. 69, 604 S.E.2d 666 (2004).

§ 6-7. Clerk to enter costs in case file.

The clerk of superior court shall enter in the case file, after judgment, the costs allowed by law. (Code, s. 532; Rev., s. 1255; C.S., s. 1231; 1971, c. 269, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Revision by Trial Judge. — The act of the superior court clerk of taxing costs is ministerial and is subject to revision by the trial judge. Leary v. Nantahala Power & Light Co., 76 N.C. App. 165, 332 S.E.2d 703 (1985).

Authority of Assistant Clerk to Tax Cost of Deposition. — An assistant clerk of the superior court had the authority to tax the cost of a deposition against a plaintiff who took a voluntary dismissal of his case before it reached the trial calendar. Thigpen v. Piver, 37 N.C. App. 382, 246 S.E.2d 67, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 653, 248 S.E.2d 257 (1978).

Costs Properly Adjudged After Decision of Appellate Court. — After decision of the appellate court modifying and affirming a judgment of the superior court on appeal from the referee, allowances constituting items of costs may be adjudged as provided by this section. Clark v. Cagle, 226 N.C. 230, 37 S.E.2d 672 (1946).

Referee's Fee as Part of Costs. — In Young v. Connelly, 112 N.C. 646, 17 S.E. 424 (1893), the court cited this section to the following statement: "The referee's fee was a part of the costs. It was necessary for the clerk to tax the costs and insert the amount in the entry of judgment in addition to the sum adjudged by his honor."

Applied in Thigpen v. Piver, 37 N.C. App. 382, 246 S.E.2d 67 (1978).

Article 2.

When State Liable for Costs.

§ 6-13. Civil actions by the State; joinder of private party.

In all civil actions prosecuted in the name of the State, by an officer duly authorized for that purpose, the State shall be liable for costs in the same cases and to the same extent as private parties. If a private person be joined with the State as plaintiff, he shall be liable in the first instance for the defendant's costs, which shall not be recovered of the State till after execution is issued therefor against such private party and returned unsatisfied. (Code, s. 536; Rev., s. 1259; C.S., s. 1236.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — In State ex rel. Blount v. Simmons, 119 N.C. 50, 25 S.E. 789 (1896), it was held that nothing in the Constitution deprived the legislature of power to enact this section.

Judgment May Be Rendered Against State for Costs. — Upon the failure of the litigation, the State is, under this section, liable for the costs of an action authorized by act of the General Assembly and prosecuted in its name by the district attorney, and judgment may be rendered in such action against the State for such costs. State ex rel. Blount v. Simmons, 119 N.C. 50, 25 S.E. 789 (1896).

State's Liability Dependent upon Statute. — The general statutes giving costs do not include the sovereign, and the State is only liable for costs in the event of express statutory provisions. State ex rel. Blount v. Simmons, 120 N.C. 19, 26 S.E. 649 (1897).

Disbarment Proceedings. — Where the proceedings for disbarment of an attorney have not been sustained, the costs are taxable against the State under the provisions of this section, and an order erroneously taxing them against the county in which the matter was tried will be vacated. State ex rel. Committee on Grievances v. Strickland, 201 N.C. 619, 161 S.E. 76 (1931).

Actions to Vacate Oyster-Bed Entry. — Where, in an action by the district attorney in the name of the State to vacate an oyster-bed entry, the plaintiff was nonsuited, it was error to tax the costs against the county, which was not a party to the action. State ex rel. Blount v. Simmons, 118 N.C. 9, 23 S.E. 923 (1896).

Under this section the State is liable for the costs of an action instituted by the district attorney solicitor to vacate an oyster-bed entry. In such case, it seems that the persons making the required affidavit, alleging that the entry is a fraud upon the State, might be held liable as relators if it should appear that the action was for their benefit and at their instance. State ex rel. Blount v. Simmons, 120 N.C. 19, 26 S.E. 649 (1897).

§ 6-14. Civil action by and against State officers.

In all civil actions depending, or which may be instituted, by any of the officers of the State, or which have been or shall be instituted against them, when any such action is brought or defended pursuant to the advice of the Attorney General, and the same is decided against such officers, the cost thereof shall be paid by the State Treasurer upon properly drawn warrants. (1874-75, c. 154; Code, s. 3373; Rev., s. 1260; C.S., s. 1237; 1971, c. 269, s. 4.)

§ 6-15. Actions by State for private persons, etc.

In an action prosecuted in the name of the State for the recovery of money or property, or to establish a right or claim for the benefit of any county, city, town, village, corporation or person, costs awarded against the plaintiff shall be a charge against the party for whose benefit the action was prosecuted, and not against the State. (Code, s. 537; Rev., s. 1261; C.S., s. 1238.)

§ 6-17. Costs of State on appeals to federal courts.

In all cases, whether civil or criminal, to which the State of North Carolina is a party, and which are carried from the courts of this State, or from the district court of the United States, by appeal or writ of error, to the United States circuit court of appeals, or to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the State is adjudged to pay the costs, it is the duty of the Attorney General to certify the amount of such costs to the Treasurer, who shall pay them upon properly drawn warrants. (1871-2, c. 26; Code, s. 538; Rev., s. 1263; C.S., s. 1240; 1971, c. 269, s. 5.)

§ 6-17.1. Costs and expenses of State in connection with federal litigation arising out of State cases.

In all cases of litigation in any court of the United States arising out of or by reason of any cases pending or tried in any court of the State of North Carolina, or in any action originally instituted in any court of the United States, the expenses for State court costs, securing of court records and transcripts, and other necessary expenses in representing the State of North Carolina or any of its departments, officials or agencies shall be allocated from and paid out of the State Contingency and Emergency Fund. (1963, c. 844.)

Article 3.

Civil Actions and Proceedings.

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "Awarding Attorney Fees Against Adversaries: Introducing the Problem," see 1986 Duke L.J. 435.

§ 6-18. When costs allowed as of course to plaintiff.

Costs shall be allowed of course to the plaintiff, upon a recovery, in the following cases:

(1) In an action for the recovery of real property, or when a claim of title to real property arises on the pleadings, or is certified by the court to have come in question at the trial.

(2) In an action to recover the possession of personal property.

(3) In an action for assault, battery, false imprisonment, libel, slander, malicious prosecution, criminal conversation or seduction, if the plaintiff recovers less than fifty dollars ($50.00) damages, he shall recover no more costs than damages.

(4) When several actions are brought on one bond, recognizance, promissory note, bill of exchange or instrument in writing, or in any other case, for the same cause of action against several parties who might have been joined as defendants in the same action, no costs other than disbursements shall be allowed to the plaintiff in more than one of such actions, which shall be at his election, provided the party or parties proceeded against in such other action or actions were within the State and not secreted at the commencement of the previous action or actions.

(5) In an action brought under Article 1 of Chapter 19A. (R.C., c. 31, s. 78; 1874-5, c. 119; Code, s. 525; Rev., s. 1264; C.S., s. 1241; 1971, c. 269, s. 6; 1979, c. 808, s. 5.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Actions for Recovery of Real Property, etc.
III. Recovery of Personalty.
IV. Costs When Damages Are Less than $50.00.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

In North Carolina costs are taxed on the basis of statutory authority. Estate of Smith ex rel. Smith v. Underwood, 127 N.C. App. 1, 487 S.E.2d 807 (1997), cert. denied, 347 N.C. 398, 494 S.E.2d 410 (1997).

G.S. 6-20 followed G.S. 6-18 and G.S. 6-19, which required an award of costs to one of the parties in certain types of actions, and the costs to be awarded under G.S. 6-18 and G.S. 6-19 were the costs specifically delineated in G.S. 7A-305(d). DOT v. Charlotte Area Manufactured Hous., Inc., 160 N.C. App. 461, 586 S.E.2d 780, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1822 (2003).

G.S. 6-20 Governs Where This Section Inapplicable. — Where the action is not of such a nature that it falls within any of the subdivisions of this section or of the following section, it comes within the terms of and is included by G.S. 6-20. Parton v. Boyd, 104 N.C. 422, 10 S.E. 490 (1889); Yates v. Yates, 170 N.C. 533, 87 S.E. 317 (1915).

Negligence cases were not listed among the types of actions in which costs had to be awarded to a prevailing party pursuant to either G.S. 6-18 or G.S. 6-19; therefore, the trial court's costs ruling was governed by G.S. 6-20, and costs could be allowed or not, in the discretion of the court. Smith v. Cregan, 178 N.C. App. 519, 632 S.E.2d 206, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 1568 (2006).

Section Inapplicable to Contempt Proceeding. — Although labeled "civil" contempt, a proceeding as for contempt is by no means a civil action or proceeding to which this section or G.S. 6-20, allowing costs in discretion of court, would apply. United Artists Records, Inc. v. Eastern Tape Corp., 18 N.C. App. 183, 196 S.E.2d 598, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 666, 197 S.E.2d 880 (1973); Green v. Crane, 96 N.C. App. 654, 386 S.E.2d 757 (1990).

A North Carolina court has no authority to award damages in the form of costs to a private party in a contempt proceeding. Green v. Crane, 96 N.C. App. 654, 386 S.E.2d 757 (1990).

When the trial court found plaintiff in contempt under G.S. 5A-21, it erred in awarding attorney fees to defendant as sanctions; such an award was not authorized by statute, as G.S. 6-18 and G.S. 6-20, governing costs, did not apply to a contempt proceeding. Sea Ranch II Owners Ass'n v. Sea Ranch II, Inc., — N.C. App. —, 636 S.E.2d 307, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 2246 (2006).

But Attorney's Fees Permissible. — Although neither the provisions of this section or G.S. 6-20 are applicable to an action for civil contempt a trial court may properly award attorney's fees to a plaintiff who prevails in a civil contempt action. The Appellate Court has approved the allowance of attorney's fees in contempt actions where such fees were expressly authorized by statute as in the case of child support. Smith v. Smith, 121 N.C. App. 334, 465 S.E.2d 52 (1996).

Meaning of Recovery. — The recovery referred to in this section is a final determination upon the merits, and success in the appellate court is by no means equivalent to a recovery in the court below. Williams v. Hughes, 139 N.C. 17, 51 S.E. 790 (1905).

A recovery within the meaning of the section cannot be predicated upon anything coming to the plaintiff which was not in the contemplation of the plaintiff when he filed his complaint, and especially of a thing to which he virtually disclaimed any right or title. Patterson v. Ramsey, 136 N.C. 561, 48 S.E. 811 (1904).

In order to determine who should pay the costs, the general result must be considered and inquiry made as to who has, in the view of the law, succeeded in the action. Patterson v. Ramsey, 136 N.C. 561, 48 S.E. 811 (1904).

Partial Recovery. — There is no provision that limits the allowance of costs in favor of the plaintiff in case of only a partial recovery. The language of the statute as to them is comprehensive and without exceptive provision. In Wall v. Covington, 76 N.C. 150 (1877), it was held that no part of the costs in such actions can be taxed against the party recovering. And in Horton v. Horne, 99 N.C. 219, 5 S.E. 927 (1888), it was decided in an action to recover personal property, that if the plaintiff establishes his title to only a portion of the property delivered to him under claim and delivery proceedings, he will be entitled to costs. Wooten v. Walters, 110 N.C. 251, 14 S.E. 734 (1892); Ferrabow v. Green, 110 N.C. 414, 14 S.E. 973 (1892); Kinston Cotton Mills v. Rocky Mount Hosiery Co., 154 N.C. 462, 70 S.E. 910 (1911).

Action by Executor. — Where the action involves the question as to the recovery of a portion of the estate of a deceased person, and judgment is rendered in favor of the executor, the plaintiff, he is entitled to a judgment for costs under this section. White v. Mitchell, 196 N.C. 89, 144 S.E. 526 (1928).

Applied in Wolfe v. Montgomery Ward & Co., 211 N.C. 295, 189 S.E. 772 (1937); Williams v. Boylan-Pearce, Inc., 69 N.C. App. 315, 317 S.E.2d 17 (1984); Delta Envtl. Consultants of N.C., Inc. v. Wysong & Miles Co., 132 N.C. App. 160, 510 S.E.2d 690 (1999); Coffman v. Roberson, 153 N.C. App. 618, 571 S.E.2d 255 (2002), cert. denied, 356 N.C. 668, 577 S.E.2d 111 (2003).

County of Haywood, 168 N.C. App. 1, 607 S.E.2d 25, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 148 (2005); Morgan v. Steiner, 173 N.C. App. 577, 619 S.E.2d 516, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2105 (2005).

II. ACTIONS FOR RECOVERY OF REAL PROPERTY, ETC.

Section States Common-Law Rule. — Subdivision (1) of the section is in affirmance of the principle established before its enactment. Moore v. Angel, 116 N.C. 843, 21 S.E. 699 (1895).

Construed with G.S. 6-19. — Costs were properly awarded to the animal shelter pursuant to G.S. 6-19, as G.S. 6-19 permitted the shelter, as a defendant, to recover costs in the same way as a plaintiff could pursuant to this section in an action for the recovery of real property. County of Moore v. Humane Soc'y of Moore County, Inc., 157 N.C. App. 293, 578 S.E.2d 682, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 644 (2003).

Construed with G.S. 6-21. — This section, allowing plaintiffs' costs as of course, upon recovery, in an action involving title to real estate, and G.S. 6-21, providing apportionment of costs in a special proceeding for the division or sale of realty or personalty are related sections, pertain to the same subject matter, and must be construed in pari materia. Bailey v. Hayman, 222 N.C. 58, 22 S.E.2d 6 (1942).

Actions to Recover Both Realty and Personalty. — Under this section, the plaintiff in an action to recover both real and personal property is entitled to recover costs, even if he recovers only the real property. Wooten v. Walters, 110 N.C. 251, 14 S.E. 734 (1892).

Jurisdiction for Award Under G.S. 50-20(i). — Trial court was not without jurisdiction at the time it entered its G.S. 50-20(i) order, and therefore the court had jurisdiction to award attorney's fees under that section, but not under subsection (2) of this section. McKissick v. McKissick, 129 N.C. App. 252, 497 S.E.2d 711 (1998).

Partial Recovery. — Where the plaintiff is adjudged entitled to a part of the land sued for, whether such land is a portion of one tract or is one of several tracts for which the action is brought, then the plaintiff is exonerated as to costs and no part thereof should be found against him. Ferrabow v. Green, 110 N.C. 414, 14 S.E. 973 (1892); Moore v. Angel, 116 N.C. 843, 21 S.E. 699 (1895); Field v. Wheeler, 120 N.C. 264, 26 S.E. 812 (1897); Vanderbilt v. Johnson, 141 N.C. 370, 54 S.E. 298 (1906). See Staley v. Staley, 174 N.C. 640, 94 S.E. 407 (1917).

Where the plaintiff has been required to introduce evidence of his title to the whole of the locus in quo, and then the defendant consents that the court charge the jury to find for the plaintiff if they believe the evidence as to a certain part, and the issue is found for the defendant as to the remaining land, the costs of the action are properly awarded against the defendant. Swain v. Clemmons, 175 N.C. 240, 95 S.E. 489 (1918).

When There Is More Than One Issue. — In an action of trespass to real property, where the plaintiff's title and the fact of trespass are both put in issue by the defendant's answer, and the jury find the issue as to the title in favor of the plaintiff, and the issue as to the trespass in favor of the defendant, the defendant is entitled to judgment for costs. To entitle the plaintiff to recover costs, both issues must be found in his favor. Murray v. Spencer, 92 N.C. 264 (1885).

Boundary Dispute. — Where, in an action in ejectment and for damages for cutting of timber, defendant files an answer defending plaintiffs' title to the land in dispute, and verdict is entered in favor of plaintiffs, plaintiffs, as a matter of law, are not liable for any of the costs, notwithstanding that upon the trial each party admitted the title of the other within the boundaries of their respective grants, and the only controversy was as to the location of the boundary between their respective grants. Cody v. England, 221 N.C. 40, 19 S.E.2d 10 (1942).

Necessity for Disclaimer in Order to Avoid Costs. — A defendant in an action concerning land should enter a disclaimer if he does not claim the land in controversy, or does not intend to litigate with the plaintiff, in order to escape the payment of costs. Swain v. Clemmons, 175 N.C. 240, 95 S.E. 489 (1918).

Where, in an action in trespass, the defendant failed to disclaim title to all the land declared for by plaintiff, but recovered according to the boundaries set up in his answer, with a greater amount for damages on his counterclaim than was allowed the plaintiff, plaintiff was nevertheless held entitled to costs. Moore v. Angel, 116 N.C. 843, 21 S.E. 699 (1895).

If the defendant disclaims title to all the land declared for, except that for which he proves his right, no issue as to the plaintiff's title will arise, and the findings that the defendant's title, disputed by the plaintiff, is good and that the defendant has sustained greater damages than his adversary, upon both necessarily, perhaps on either, will entitle the defendant to costs. Moore v. Angel, 116 N.C. 843, 21 S.E. 699 (1895).

In ejectment, where the defendant denies the right to possession and denies that the plaintiff holds the title in trust for him, and judgment is rendered that the defendant is entitled to the land upon payment of an amount found due the plaintiff, no part of the cost is taxable against the defendant. Patterson v. Ramsey, 136 N.C. 561, 48 S.E. 811 (1904).

It would seem that in order to escape potential liability for costs the defendant must enter his disclaimer of all the lands declared for, and that a disclaimer of half the locus in quo will not suffice to enable him to escape upon the unfavorable adjudication of the other half. See In re Hurley, 185 N.C. 422, 117 S.E. 345 (1923).

One who successfully maintains an equitable defense against the recovery of land on the bare legal title is entitled to judgment for his costs. Vestal v. Sloan, 83 N.C. 555 (1880).

Liability of Intervener. — Where the defendant intervenes in an action to recover real property, files a joint answer with his codefendant, and makes a joint defense, the plaintiff is entitled to the costs. Having joined in the controversy, and made common cause in the defense, interveners must abide the result. Spruill v. Arrington, 109 N.C. 192, 13 S.E. 779 (1891). See Willis v. Coleburn, 169 N.C. 670, 86 S.E. 596 (1915).

III. RECOVERY OF PERSONALTY.

Partial Recovery. — There is no exception to the partial recovery rule when the action is for the recovery of personalty, and when the plaintiff establishes title to any part of the property sued for, he is entitled to judgment for costs. Wooten v. Walters, 110 N.C. 251, 14 S.E. 734 (1892); Field v. Wheeler, 120 N.C. 264, 26 S.E. 812 (1897). This is not the case where some of the defendants recover judgment, in which case, of course, they recover costs. Phillips v. Little, 147 N.C. 282, 61 S.E. 49 (1908).

As an example of the application of this rule to claims for personal property, it has been held that the plaintiff on being adjudged entitled to only a portion of a crop in a suit for claim and delivery was entitled to costs. Field v. Wheeler, 120 N.C. 264, 26 S.E. 812 (1897).

Claim and Delivery. — Judgment in an action of claim and delivery carries all costs under this section. Rawlings v. Neal, 126 N.C. 271, 35 S.E. 597 (1900).

Enforcement of Lien. — Where controversy depended upon right of mechanic to repossess an automobile that he repaired, in order that he could enforce his lien thereon, and the jury found in the plaintiff's favor upon determinative issues, but in the defendant's favor upon an issue of fraud, the question of taxing the cost did not depend upon the finding of the jury on the issue of the defendant's fraud, and the plaintiff, having established his right to the possession, was entitled to recover the costs under this section. Maxton Auto Co. v. Rudd, 176 N.C. 497, 97 S.E. 477 (1918).

IV. COSTS WHEN DAMAGES ARE LESS THAN $50.00.

In General. — In a civil action, if the provocation is great, the jury will usually see fit to return nominal or small damages, and if the amount is less than $50.00 the plaintiff, under this section, recovers no more costs than damages. Palmer v. Winston-Salem Ry. & Elec. Co., 131 N.C. 250, 42 S.E. 604 (1902).

For case in which the recovery for slander was less than $50.00, see Smith v. Myers, 188 N.C. 551, 125 S.E. 178 (1924).

For case in which one dollar damages were sustained by the erection of a mill, see Bridgers v. Purcell, 23 N.C. 232 (1840).

The former rule as to slander is stated in Coates v. Stephenson, 52 N.C. 124 (1859), where it was held that the costs of the plaintiff, under R.C., c. 31, G.S. 78, could not be taxed against the defendant.

Where the plaintiff is entitled to nominal damages, such damages will carry with it the costs under this section. Wilson v. Forbes, 13 N.C. 30 (1828); Britton v. Ruffin, 123 N.C. 67, 31 S.E. 271 (1898).

Instructed Verdict for One Penny Damages and One Penny Costs. — For a case where an instructed verdict for one penny damages and one penny costs, under this section, was held erroneous because actual and not nominal damage was shown, see Osborn v. Leach, 135 N.C. 628, 47 S.E. 811 (1904).

§ 6-19. When costs allowed as of course to defendant.

Costs shall be allowed as of course to the defendant, in the actions mentioned in G.S. 6-18 unless the plaintiff be entitled to costs therein. In all actions where there are several defendants not united in interest, and making separate defenses by separate answers, and the plaintiff fails to recover judgment against all, the court may award costs to such of the defendants as have judgment in their favor or any of them. (C.C.P., s. 277; Code, ss. 526, 527; Rev., s. 1266; C.S., s. 1242; 2007-212, s. 1.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2007-212, s. 1, effective August 1, 2007, and applicable to all motions for costs filed on or after that date, substituted "G.S. 6-18" for "the preceding section" in the first sentence.

CASE NOTES

Where plaintiff fails to recover in an action involving title to real property in which a court survey is ordered, the clerk is without authority to tax the surveyor's fees in the bill of costs, but on appeal from the clerk's order, the superior court, while properly affirming the clerk's order, should pass upon the motion for taxing such fees as a part of the costs as a matter of right. Ipock v. Miller, 245 N.C. 585, 96 S.E.2d 729 (1957). See § 38-4 and note.

Costs were properly awarded to the animal shelter pursuant to this section, as this section permitted the shelter, as a defendant, to recover costs in the same way as a plaintiff could pursuant to G.S. 6-18 in an action for the recovery of real property. County of Moore v. Humane Soc'y of Moore County, Inc., 157 N.C. App. 293, 578 S.E.2d 682, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 644 (2003).

Not Applicable to Negligence Actions. — Negligence cases were not listed among the types of actions in which costs had to be awarded to a prevailing party pursuant to either G.S. 6-18 or G.S. 6-19; therefore, the trial court's costs ruling was governed by G.S. 6-20, and costs could be allowed or not, in the discretion of the court. Smith v. Cregan, 178 N.C. App. 519, 632 S.E.2d 206, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 1568 (2006).

Where the plaintiff fails in an action upon a covenant, the defendant recovers costs under this section. Britton v. Ruffin, 123 N.C. 67, 31 S.E. 271 (1898).

Unsuccessful Action to Set Aside Deed. — Costs were properly awarded to the grantee in a deed in an unsuccessful action to set aside such deed. D. B. Brisco & Co. v. Norris, 112 N.C. 671, 16 S.E. 850 (1893).

In an action for ejectment, this section was applicable, and therefore, the list of costs recoverable by a prevailing party in a civil action under G.S. 7A-305 was controlling. Minton v. Lowe's Food Stores, 121 N.C. App. 675, 468 S.E.2d 513 (1996).

In North Carolina costs are taxed on the basis of statutory authority. Estate of Smith ex rel. Smith v. Underwood, 127 N.C. App. 1, 487 S.E.2d 807 (1997), cert. denied, 347 N.C. 398, 494 S.E.2d 410 (1997).

G.S. 6-20 followed G.S. 6-18 and G.S. 6-19, which required an award of costs to one of the parties in certain types of actions, and the costs to be awarded under G.S. 6-18 and G.S. 6-19 were the costs specifically delineated in G.S. 7A-305(d). DOT v. Charlotte Area Manufactured Hous., Inc., 160 N.C. App. 461, 586 S.E.2d 780, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1822 (2003).

Taxing Costs. — Trial court did not err in taxing costs of defendant bakery company and its defendant driver to the mother and minor son personal injury plaintiffs, as the bakery company and its driver were found not liable to the mother and minor son and the decision to tax the costs was made pursuant to a motion under G.S. 6-19, not this section. Sterling v. Gil Soucy Trucking, Ltd., 146 N.C. App. 173, 552 S.E.2d 674, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 868 (2001).

§ 6-19.1. Attorney's fees to parties appealing or defending against agency decision.

In any civil action, other than an adjudication for the purpose of establishing or fixing a rate, or a disciplinary action by a licensing board, brought by the State or brought by a party who is contesting State action pursuant to G.S. 150B-43 or any other appropriate provisions of law, unless the prevailing party is the State, the court may, in its discretion, allow the prevailing party to recover reasonable attorney's fees, including attorney's fees applicable to the administrative review portion of the case, in contested cases arising under Article 3 of Chapter 150B, to be taxed as court costs against the appropriate agency if:

(1) The court finds that the agency acted without substantial justification in pressing its claim against the party; and

(2) The court finds that there are no special circumstances that would make the award of attorney's fees unjust. The party shall petition for the attorney's fees within 30 days following final disposition of the case. The petition shall be supported by an affidavit setting forth the basis for the request.

Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorize the assessment of attorney's fees for the administrative review portion of the case in contested cases arising under Article 9 of Chapter 131E of the General Statutes.

Nothing in this section grants permission to bring an action against an agency otherwise immune from suit or gives a right to bring an action to a party who otherwise lacks standing to bring the action.

Any attorney's fees assessed against an agency under this section shall be charged against the operating expenses of the agency and shall not be reimbursed from any other source. (1983, c. 918, s. 1; 1987, c. 827, s. 1; 2000-190, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

The legislature, in enacting this section, obviously sought to curb unwarranted, ill-supported suits initiated by State agencies. Crowell Constructors, Inc. v. State, 342 N.C. 838, 467 S.E.2d 675 (1996).

State Tort Claim. — Counterclaim brought by the State in the content of a tort claim is the equivalent to "any civil action brought by the State pursuant to any other appropriate provisions of law" as intended under G.S. 6-19.1 and, therefore, the North Carolina Industrial Commission is justified to award attorney's fees under § 6-19.1. Sprinkle v. N.C. Wildlife Res. Comm'n, 165 N.C. App. 721, 600 S.E.2d 473, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 1513 (2004).

Administrative Hearings. — Pursuant to this section, an administrative hearing under G.S. 150B-22 et seq. is not a civil action brought pursuant to G.S. 150B-43. Walker v. North Carolina Coastal Resources Comm'n, 124 N.C. App. 1, 476 S.E.2d 138 (1996), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 185, 486 S.E.2d 220 (1997).

Award to petitioners for counsel fees and costs applicable to the "administrative review" portion of the case was reversed; award of counsel fees and costs for the "judicial review" portion of the case was affirmed. Walker v. North Carolina Coastal Resources Comm'n, 124 N.C. App. 1, 476 S.E.2d 138 (1996), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 185, 486 S.E.2d 220 (1997).

G.S. 6-19.1 authorizes a superior court to award fees to the employee of a county Department of Social Services who has prevailed under the State Personnel Act, G.S. 126-1 et seq.; therefore, a trial court was authorized to award fees for representation of a plaintiff during the administrative proceedings contesting her termination while on medical leave, which was adjudged without cause and wrongful. Early v. County of Durham Dep't of Soc. Servs., 172 N.C. App. 344, 616 S.E.2d 553, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 1788 (2005).

Services Performed Prior to Judicial Review. — This section allows for an award of attorney's fees in State Personnel Commission cases only for services rendered on judicial review, not for services performed prior to judicial review. Morgan v. North Carolina DOT, 124 N.C. App. 180, 476 S.E.2d 431 (1996).

Motion Timely. — Petitioner's motion for attorney's fees, filed well before final judgment, was timely; therefore, the trial court had jurisdiction to hear the matter. Whiteco Indus., Inc. v. Harrelson, 111 N.C. App. 815, 434 S.E.2d 229 (1993); Whiteco Indus., Inc. v. Harrington, 111 N.C. App. 839, 434 S.E.2d 234 (1993), cert. granted, 335 N.C. 565, 441 S.E.2d 135 (1994).

Motion Untimely. — Trial court lacked jurisdiction to award attorney's fees because an employee did not file his motion within 30 days of the final disposition of his case against the North Carolina Department of Transportation; because a petition is a formal written application to a court requesting judicial action on a certain matter, a request for attorney's fees contained within a complaint's prayer for relief does not constitute a "petition" within the meaning of G.S. 6-19.1(2). Hodge v. N.C. DOT , 161 N.C. App. 726, 589 S.E.2d 737, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 2276 (2003), cert. denied, 358 N.C. 234, 595 S.E.2d 151 (2004).

Superior court was time barred under G.S. 6-19.1 from considering the attorney's petition for attorney's fees where the statute required the attorney to petition for fees within the 30-day time frame following final disposition of the underlying action; the attorney did not make his petition for well over a year from that date. McIntyre v. Forsyth County Dep't of Soc. Servs., 162 N.C. App. 94, 589 S.E.2d 745, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 52 (2004), cert. denied, 358 N.C. 377, 598 S.E.2d 136 (2004).

Findings of Fact Required. — Although the award of attorney's fees is within the discretion of the trial judge under this section, the trial court must make findings of fact as to the time and labor expended, the skill required, the customary fee for like work, and the experience or ability of the attorney. North Carolina Dep't of Cors. v. Harding, 120 N.C. App. 451, 462 S.E.2d 671 (1995).

Accurate Calculations Required. — The trial court erred in calculating the attorney's fee which was reasonably found to be one fourth of the present value of the future benefits recovered by his client. Thornburg v. Consolidated Judicial Ret. Sys., 137 N.C. App. 150, 527 S.E.2d 351, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 262 (2000).

Jurisdiction of Superior Court. — Where permit holder petitioned the superior court for review of Department of Transportation revocation of permit for highway sign, this gave the superior court jurisdiction to determine the whole case including the taxing of costs including section providing for attorney's fees to be taxed as costs in some instances. Able Outdoor, Inc. v. Harrelson, 341 N.C. 167, 459 S.E.2d 626 (1995).

Substantial Justification. — In order to further the legislature's purpose of reining in wanton, unfounded litigation, the State's action for purposes of this section is measured by the phrase "substantial justification". Thus, the agency is required to demonstrate that its position, at and from the time of its initial action, was rational and legitimate to such degree that a reasonable person could find it satisfactory or justifiable in light of the circumstances then known to the agency. Crowell Constructors, Inc. v. State, 342 N.C. 838, 467 S.E.2d 675 (1996).

Where stockpiles of sand as high as 25 feet tall were placed upon surface soil and 24 years later the sand was covered with new surface soil which grew vegetation, including pine trees, the Department of Environment, Health and Natural Resources (now the Department of Environment and Natural Resources) was not "without substantial justification" in its position that the landowner was engaged in mining by removing the sand. Crowell Constructors, Inc. v. State, 342 N.C. 838, 467 S.E.2d 675 (1996).

To demonstrate that it acted with substantial justification an agency must show that its position, from the time of its initial action, was rational and legitimate such that a reasonable person could find it satisfactory or justifiable in light of the circumstances. North Carolina Div. of Sons of Confederate Veterans v. Faulkner, 131 N.C. App. 775, 509 S.E.2d 207 (1998).

The respondent was without "substantial justification" for denying the petitioner's retirement benefits and the trial court, therefore, reasonably awarded the petitioner attorney's fees pursuant to this section. The respondent accepted the petitioner's contributions after she began to take half year leaves of absence as part of a job sharing agreement and continued to represent to her that she was a full-fledged member of the retirement system until she prepared to collect her benefits at which time the respondent first informed petitioner that she was not a retirement system member although the North Carolina Administrative Code allowed for periods of interrupted employment. Wiebenson v. Board of Tr., 138 N.C. App. 489, 531 S.E.2d 500, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 627 (2000).

Plaintiffs Not Entitled to Attorneys' Fees. — Plaintiffs were not entitled to attorneys' fees under G.S. 6-19.1 and 42 U.S.C.S. § 1988, or the private attorney general doctrine as in the absence of express statutory authority, attorneys' fees were not allowable as part of the court costs in civil actions; Bailey v. State, 500 S.E.2d 54 (1998), was distinguishable as: (1) there was no common fund resulting from the litigation; (2) Bailey involved a class action in which the attorneys' fees borne by the class representatives were shared or equally distributed to the class from the recovery; and (3) plaintiffs sought to shift the burden of attorney fees to the State, instead of to a resulting fund. Stephenson v. Bartlett, 177 N.C. App. 239, 628 S.E.2d 442, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 870 (2006).

Applied in Tay v. Flaherty, 100 N.C. App. 51, 394 S.E.2d 217 (1990); State ex rel. Envtl. Mgt. Comm'n v. House of Raeford Farms, Inc., 101 N.C. App. 433, 400 S.E.2d 107 (1991); Able Outdoor, Inc. v. Harrelson, 113 N.C. App. 483, 439 S.E.2d 245 (1994).

§ 6-20. Costs allowed or not, in discretion of court.

In actions where allowance of costs is not otherwise provided by the General Statutes, costs may be allowed in the discretion of the court. Costs awarded by the court are subject to the limitations on assessable or recoverable costs set forth in G.S. 7A-305(d), unless specifically provided for otherwise in the General Statutes. (Code, s. 527; Rev., s. 1267; C.S., s. 1243; 2007-212, s. 2.)

Cross References. — As to costs where new trial is granted, see G.S. 6-33 and the note thereto.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2006-248, ss. 12.1 through 12.5, provide: "12.1. A House of Representatives Task Force on the Recovery of Costs in Civil Cases is established to review and recommend a resolution to the conflict in North Carolina law regarding the recovery of costs in a civil case. Specifically, the Task Force on the Recovery of Costs in Civil Cases shall study the conflict that exists between G.S. 6-20 and G.S. 7A-305, and the appellate cases interpreting those statutes, and recommend revisions to one or both statutes to resolve that conflict.

"12.2. The Speaker of the House of Representatives shall appoint to serve on the Task Force six members of the House of Representatives and three public members: one member of the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers, one member of the North Carolina Association of Defense Attorneys, and one member of the North Carolina Bar Association. The Speaker shall appoint a chair from the Task Force membership. The Task Force shall meet upon the call of its chair. A quorum of the Committee shall be a majority of its members.

"12.3. Members of the Task Force shall receive per diem, subsistence, and travel allowances in accordance with G.S. 120-3.1, 138-5, or 138-6, as appropriate. Upon the prior approval of the Legislative Services Commission, the Legislative Services Officer shall assign professional and clerical staff to the Task Force to aid in its work. The Task Force may contract for professional, clerical, or consultant services as provided by G.S. 120-32.02. The Task Force may meet at various locations around the State to promote greater public participation in its deliberations. Subject to the approval of the Legislative Services Commission, the Task Force may meet in the Legislative Building or the Legislative Office Building. The Task Force, while in the discharge of its official duties, may exercise all the powers provided under the provisions of G.S. 120-19 and G.S. 120-19.1 through G.S. 120-19.4, including the power to request all officers, agents, agencies, and departments of the State to provide any information, data, or documents within their possession, ascertainable from their records, or otherwise available to them and the power to subpoena witnesses.

"12.4. The Task Force shall report the results of its review and its recommended resolution to the conflict to the Speaker of the House of Representatives by December 31, 2006.

"12.5. From funds appropriated to the General Assembly, the Legislative Services Commission shall allocate funds for the purpose of conducting the study provided for in this Part."

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2007-212, s. 2, effective August 1, 2007, and applicable to all motions for costs filed on or after that date, rewrote the section, which read: "In other actions, costs may be allowed or not, in the discretion of the court, unless otherwise provided by law."

CASE NOTES

The purpose of this provision is to give the court authority to allow costs, as the justice of the case may require. Gulley v. Macy, 89 N.C. 343 (1883); Parton v. Boyd, 104 N.C. 422, 10 S.E. 490 (1889).

In North Carolina costs are taxed on the basis of statutory authority, etc. Estate of Smith ex rel. Smith v. Underwood, 127 N.C. App. 1, 487 S.E.2d 807 (1997), cert. denied, 347 N.C. 398, 494 S.E.2d 410 (1997).

Plain meaning of G.S. 7A-320, and of G.S. 6-1, and G.S. 6-20 precluded a finding that any reasonable and necessary litigation expenses could be taxed as costs against a non-prevailing opposing party; pursuant to North Carolina Supreme Court precedent, the only expenses which could be taxed as costs were those specifically authorized by statute. DOT v. Charlotte Area Manufactured Hous., Inc., 160 N.C. App. 461, 586 S.E.2d 780, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1822 (2003).

In a condemnation action, the prevailing landowner's map expenses were not taxable as costs against the opposing condemning authority because G.S. 7A-305(d) did not mention maps, and G.S. 6-20 did not, on its face, make map expenses taxable. DOT v. Charlotte Area Manufactured Hous., Inc., 160 N.C. App. 461, 586 S.E.2d 780, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1822 (2003).

Section Inapplicable to Contempt Proceeding. — Although labeled "civil" contempt, a proceeding as for contempt is by no means a civil action or proceeding to which G.S. 6-18, providing when costs shall be allowed to plaintiff as a matter of course, or this section would apply. United Artists Records, Inc. v. Eastern Tape Corp., 18 N.C. App. 183, 196 S.E.2d 598, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 666, 197 S.E.2d 880 (1973); Green v. Crane, 96 N.C. App. 654, 386 S.E.2d 757 (1990).

A North Carolina court has no authority to award damages in the form of costs to a private party in a contempt proceeding. Green v. Crane, 96 N.C. App. 654, 386 S.E.2d 757 (1990).

When the trial court found plaintiff in contempt under G.S. 5A-21, it erred in awarding attorney fees to defendant as sanctions; such an award was not authorized by statute, as G.S. 6-18 and G.S. 6-20, governing costs, did not apply to a contempt proceeding. Sea Ranch II Owners Ass'n v. Sea Ranch II, Inc., — N.C. App. —, 636 S.E.2d 307, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 2246 (2006).

But Attorney's Fees Permissible. — Although neither the provisions of G.S. 6-18 or this section are applicable to an action for civil contempt a trial court may properly award attorney's fees to a plaintiff who prevails in a civil contempt action. The Appellate Court has approved the allowance of attorney's fees in contempt actions where such fees were expressly authorized by statute as in the case of child support. Smith v. Smith, 121 N.C. App. 334, 465 S.E.2d 52 (1996).

Attorney's Fees Must Be Permitted by Another Section. — This section does not authorize a trial court to include attorney's fees as a part of the costs awarded unless specifically permitted by another statute. Lee Cycle Ctr., Inc. v. Wilson Cycle Ctr., Inc., 143 N.C. App. 1, 545 S.E.2d 745, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 228 (2001).

In a suit for the breach of a commercial lease, the trial court did not err in not awarding attorney fees under G.S. 6-20; section 6-20 did not authorize a trial court to include attorney fees as a part of the costs awarded under that section, unless specifically permitted by another statute, and plaintiff had not pointed to any statute that allowed an award of attorney fees in breach of contract cases. N.C. Indus. Capital, LLC v. Clayton, — N.C. App. —, 649 S.E.2d 14, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1825 (2007).

Construction with Other Law. — The trial court did not abuse its discretion and violate G.S. 7A-305 in taxing the expert witness fees to appellant patient pursuant to this section after he voluntarily dismissed his negligence suit pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 41 on the day of trial; costs which are to be taxed under Rule 41(d) include those costs enumerated in G.S. 7A-305(d), and that section does not preclude liability for other costs such as those outlined in this section. Lewis v. Setty, 140 N.C. App. 536, 537 S.E.2d 505, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1216 (2000).

Trial court's decision finding that it did not have the authority to award a successful litigant in a condemnation case the appraisal fees incurred by the litigant as costs taxable against the non-prevailing condemning authority was consistent with precedent of the North Carolina Supreme Court, as well as G.S. 6-20. DOT v. Charlotte Area Manufactured Hous., Inc., 160 N.C. App. 461, 586 S.E.2d 780, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1822 (2003).

G.S. 7A-320 Does Not Abrogate Court's

Authority Under This Section. — Under G.S. 7A-305, which specifies in subsection (d) the costs recoverable in civil actions, and also provides in subsection (e) that nothing in this section shall affect the liability of the respective parties for costs as provided by law, the authority of trial courts to tax deposition expenses as costs pursuant to G.S. 6-20 remains undisturbed, regardless of the language of G.S. 7A-320. Alsup v. Pitman, 98 N.C. App. 389, 390 S.E.2d 750 (1990).

Award of Costs Discretionary, Not Mandatory. — Where plaintiff took voluntary dismissal, and then refiled, defendants were not entitled to expert witness fees, deposition transcripts, court reporter fees, or attorney travel costs under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 41(a); assuming, arguendo, that all the expenses denied by the trial court were recoverable as common law costs under G.S. 6-20, such an award was permissive, not mandatory. Cosentino v. Weeks, 160 N.C. App. 511, 586 S.E.2d 787, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1830 (2003).

Negligence cases were not listed among the types of actions in which costs had to be awarded to a prevailing party pursuant to either G.S. 6-18 or G.S. 6-19; therefore, the trial court's costs ruling was governed by G.S. 6-20, and costs could be allowed or not, in the discretion of the court. Smith v. Cregan, 178 N.C. App. 519, 632 S.E.2d 206, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 1568 (2006).

Exercise of Discretion Presumed. — Nothing to the contrary appearing, it will be taken that the court gave judgment in the exercise of its discretion as provided in this section. Gulley v. Macy, 89 N.C. 343 (1883); Wooten v. Walters, 110 N.C. 251, 14 S.E. 734 (1892).

Discretion Not Reviewable. — By this section the taxing of costs is placed in the discretion of the trial judge, which discretion is not reviewable. Kluttz v. Allison, 214 N.C. 379, 199 S.E. 395 (1938); Chriscoe v. Chriscoe, 268 N.C. 554, 151 S.E.2d 33 (1966).

The exercise of the court's discretionary authority is not reviewable. Hoskins v. Hoskins, 259 N.C. 704, 131 S.E.2d 326 (1963); Dixon, Odom & Co. v. Sledge, 59 N.C. App. 280, 296 S.E.2d 512 (1982).

Taxation of costs against the plaintiff is within the court's discretion and is not reviewable on appeal, the action being equitable in nature. Bumgarner & Bowman Bldrs. v. Hollar, 7 N.C. App. 14, 171 S.E.2d 60 (1969).

Trial court's taxing costs of costs to an injured party under G.S. 6-20 was not reviewable on appeal as the trial court specifically stated that the costs were awarded in the trial court's discretion. Griffis v. Lazarovich, 164 N.C. App. 329, 595 S.E.2d 797, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 821 (2004).

Appellate court did not review a trial court's decision to award costs as that award was made in the trial court's discretion. Castle McCulloch, Inc. v. Freedman, 169 N.C. App. 497, 610 S.E.2d 416, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 604 (2005), aff'd, 360 N.C. 57, 620 S.E.2d 674 (2005).

Costs Discretionary in Actions of An Equitable Nature. — In equity there was a broad discretion on the subject of costs, Little v. Lockman, 50 N.C. 433 (1858), and the allowance rested with the court. Worthy v. Brower, 93 N.C. 492 (1885); Hooper v. Davies, 166 N.C. 236, 81 S.E. 1063 (1914).

Even since the abolition of the courts of equity in this State, it is held that where the case partakes of an equitable nature, the question of costs is in the court's discretion. Thus where the jury found that each party was entitled to an undivided half in land, and the appeal was from taxing the defendant with costs, there being no element of an action in ejectment, neither party was permitted to recover costs from the other, especially as the question was of an equitable nature, and the taxing of costs was, under this section, in the sound discretion of the court. Hare v. Hare, 183 N.C. 419, 111 S.E. 620 (1922).

In actions of an equitable nature the costs are in the discretion of the court. Yates v. Yates, 170 N.C. 533, 87 S.E. 317 (1915).

If an action is equitable in nature the taxing of the costs is within the discretion of the court, and the court may allow costs in favor of one party or the other or require the parties to share the costs. Hoskins v. Hoskins, 259 N.C. 704, 131 S.E.2d 326 (1963).

Taxing Costs in Personal Injury Cases. — Trial court did not err in taxing costs of defendant bakery company and its defendant driver to mother and minor son personal injury plaintiffs, as the bakery company and its driver were found not liable to the mother and minor son and taxing the costs to them was done within the court's discretion under G.S. 6-20. Sterling v. Gil Soucy Trucking, Ltd., 146 N.C. App. 173, 552 S.E.2d 674, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 868 (2001).

Although the trial court did not err when it awarded a pedestrian who was awarded $7,000 in damages after he was struck by a truck over $32,000 in attorneys' fees, it did err when it granted the pedestrian's request for reimbursement of costs he incurred to make photocopies, telephone calls, photographs, trial diagrams and exhibits, and to obtain medical reports and records, because those expenses were not recoverable as costs, pursuant to G.S. 7A-305. Overton v. Purvis, 162 N.C. App. 241, 591 S.E.2d 18, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 120 (2004).

Trial court erred in awarding numerous costs not authorized for medical reports, deposition costs, filing fees, travel costs, trial exhibits, color copies, and photocopies; there was statutory authority, however, for the following awards: mediation fees pursuant to G.S. 7A-305(d)(7); expert witness fees pursuant to G.S. 7A-305(d)(1); and service of process fees pursuant to G.S. 7A-305(d)(6). Oakes v. Wooten, 173 N.C. App. 506, 620 S.E.2d 39, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2100 (2005).

Apportionment of Costs. — Where a jury found that the allegations of the complaint with respect to the maintenance of the nuisance were true, the trial court, when it ordered the personal property sold, had discretionary power with respect to the apportionment of the costs. State ex rel. Morris v. Shinn, 262 N.C. 88, 136 S.E.2d 244 (1964).

A consolidated action, tried before the referee, in which judgments are rendered, is not an equitable proceeding, in which costs may be allowed or not, in the discretion of the court under this section. Highland Cotton Mills v. Ragan Knitting Co., 194 N.C. 80, 138 S.E. 428 (1927).

Creditor's Bill. — It is within the discretion of the trial court to tax the costs accruing upon either of the parties litigant, in an action in the nature of a creditor's bill, brought by materialmen, claiming under the statutory lien, the unpaid balance due by the owner of a dwelling, etc., to his contractor for its erection; and the action of the judge in taxing the trust funds in the owner's hands with the cost is commended in this suit. Bond v. Pickett Cotton Mills, Inc., 166 N.C. 20, 81 S.E. 936 (1914).

Specific Performance Generally. — Where the purpose of an action was simply to compel the specific performance of an executory contract, and to adjust certain rights involved in an account of moneys collected and certain indebtedness incident to that contract, it was clearly within this section. Parton v. Boyd, 104 N.C. 422, 10 S.E. 490 (1889).

In a class action for injunctive and declaratory relief against the collection of taxes on retirement benefits of certain state and local government retirees, creation of a "common fund" for the payment of attorney's fees and other costs incurred by the class representatives was proper. Bailey v. State, 348 N.C. 130, 500 S.E.2d 54 (1998).

Where one of the defendants in an injunction suit seeks affirmative relief by way of specific performance, the taxing of costs is in the discretion of the trial court, since the controversy is of an equitable nature. Consequently the order of the court apportioning the costs will not ordinarily be disturbed on appeal upon affirmance of the judgment. Chandler v. Cameron, 229 N.C. 62, 47 S.E.2d 528, 3 A.L.R.2d 571 (1948).

Setting Aside Proceedings of Probate Court. — Where the action is to set aside certain proceedings in the probate court, the court is vested with discretion in the matter of allowing costs, under this section; each party is ordered to pay his own and each to pay one half of the allowance to the referee. Gulley v. Macy, 89 N.C. 343 (1883).

Deposition Expenses. — As a general rule, recoverable costs may include deposition expenses unless it appears that the depositions were unnecessary. Even though deposition expenses do not appear expressly in the statutes they may be considered as part of "costs" and taxed in the trial court's discretion. Dixon, Odom & Co. v. Sledge, 59 N.C. App. 280, 296 S.E.2d 512 (1982); Alsup v. Pitman, 98 N.C. App. 389, 390 S.E.2d 750 (1990).

This section authorizes trial courts to tax deposition expenses as costs. Alsup v. Pitman, 98 N.C. App. 389, 390 S.E.2d 750 (1990).

Trial court had full authority to tax, in its discretion, deposition expenses as costs pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 41(d) and 6-20. Alsup v. Pitman, 98 N.C. App. 389, 390 S.E.2d 750 (1990).

Award of costs made to an engineering firm, after a trial court granted the firm a directed verdict, was modified to remove the award of deposition costs because, while G.S. 7A-305 permitted the court to award the firm costs for mediation fees, expert witness fees, and service of process fees for trial subpoenas, it did not grant the court statutory authority to award the deposition costs. Handex of the Carolinas, Inc. v. County of Haywood, 168 N.C. App. 1, 607 S.E.2d 25, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 148 (2005).

In a negligence case, deposition costs were recoverable as trial expenses under G.S. 6-20 because they were established by case law prior to the enactment of G.S. 7A-320 in 1983. Morgan v. Steiner, 173 N.C. App. 577, 619 S.E.2d 516, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2105 (2005).

When, in a personal injury case, a trial court ruled that it did not have discretion to tax a landowner's deposition costs against alleged injured parties, this was error, as the trial court had such discretion under G.S. 6-20, so the trial court's judgment was reversed to allow it to exercise this discretion. Walden v. Morgan, — N.C. App. —, 635 S.E.2d 616, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 2169 (2006).

Costs were properly allowed to a successful driver even though the driver's insurer paid all of his costs, as: (1) the judgment was entered for the driver and the costs award did not violate G.S. 6-1; (2) the driver incurred the expenses; (3) the award of an arbitration fee was specifically allowed in G.S. 7A-305(d)(7); (4) it was not an abuse of discretion under G.S. 6-20 to award the deposition fee; and (5) the preparation time fees of a driver's reconstruct expert were properly allowed. Hoffman v. Oakley, — N.C. App. —, 647 S.E.2d 117, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1628 (2007).

Cost of an Independent Appraiser's Valuation Report. — The trial court acted within its discretion when it taxed the entire cost of an independent appraiser's valuation report to the defendants/majority stockholders of a closely-held corporation, as allowed under G.S. 7A-305(d), and ignored or effectually amended the court's pre-trial case management order, in which the court stated that appraisal costs would be shared by both parties. Royals v. Piedmont Elec. Repair Co., 137 N.C. App. 700, 529 S.E.2d 515, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 497 (2000).

Other Reasonable and Necessary Costs. — While case law has found that deposition costs are allowable under this section, it has in no way precluded the trial court from taxing other costs that may be reasonable and necessary. Minton v. Lowe's Food Stores, 121 N.C. App. 675, 468 S.E.2d 513 (1996).

Line of decisions from the North Carolina Court of Appeals holding that trial courts have broad authority under G.S. 6-20 to tax any expenses deemed "reasonable and necessary" were not consistent with the context and plain meaning of G.S. 6-20 or with controlling precedent of the North Carolina Supreme Court. DOT v. Charlotte Area Manufactured Hous., Inc., 160 N.C. App. 461, 586 S.E.2d 780, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1822 (2003).

Award of Costs for Expert Witnesses. — For case upholding award to plaintiffs as costs of charges of expert witnesses for time spent outside trial and expenses for expert witnesses who testified about the standard of care applicable to nurses in similar communities, see Campbell ex rel. McMillan v. Pitt County Mem. Hosp., 84 N.C. App. 314, 352 S.E.2d 902, aff'd, 321 N.C. 260, 362 S.E.2d 273 (1987), overruled on other grounds, Johnson v. Ruark Ob. & Gyn. Assocs., 327 N.C. 283, 395 S.E.2d 85 (1990), rehearing denied, 327 N.C. 644, 399 S.E.2d 133 (1990).

Trial court did not exceed its discretionary authority in assessing expert witness fees for the testimony of three physicians, even though they all were used to prove identical facts in issue. Brown v. Flowe, 128 N.C. App. 668, 496 S.E.2d 830 (1998), rev'd on other grounds, 349 N.C. 520, 507 S.E.2d 894 (1998).

Denial of Costs for Expert Witnesses. — Since the trial court's costs ruling was governed by G.S. 6-20, and thus could be allowed at the discretion of the court, and the doctors had not alleged, and there appeared to the appellate court to be no abuse of discretion in the denial of their request to be reimbursed for the expert witness fees where the verdict was in their favor, the judgment was affirmed. Smith v. Cregan, 178 N.C. App. 519, 632 S.E.2d 206, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 1568 (2006).

Costs for Trial Exhibits in a Negligence Action. — The trial court rightly exercised its discretion and allowed costs for trial exhibits to be taxed to the appellant patient where the appellee doctor did not receive notice of his voluntary dismissal until the day of trial; the costs were reasonable and necessary pursuant to this section although trial exhibit costs are not enumerated in G.S. 7A-305(d). Lewis v. Setty, 140 N.C. App. 536, 537 S.E.2d 505, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1216 (2000).

While decisions of the North Carolina Court of Appeals had found a trial court had the discretion, under G.S. 6-20, to order the reimbursement of a party for trial expenses, this was contrary to precedent of the North Carolina Supreme Court, limiting a trial court's authority concerning tax costs to those expenses specifically statutorily authorized, and the North Carolina General Statutes did not explicitly authorize a trial court to tax expenses related to trial exhibits. DOT v. Charlotte Area Manufactured Hous., Inc., 160 N.C. App. 461, 586 S.E.2d 780, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1822 (2003).

The authority of the court to tax costs in an action to recover under uninsured motorist provisions of an insurance policy is not dependent on either the insurance policy or G.S. 20-279.21(b)(3). Ensley v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 80 N.C. App. 512, 342 S.E.2d 567, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 414, 349 S.E.2d 594 (1986).

Experts Must Be Subpoenaed. — Where one expert was not served with a subpoena and another was unsure as to what a subpoena was, the trial court did not have the authority to order defendants to pay expert witness expenses as costs. Rogers v. Sportsworld of Rocky Mount, Inc., 134 N.C. App. 709, 518 S.E.2d 551 (1999).

Travel expenses of a party are not an assessable cost. Crist v. Crist, 145 N.C. App. 418, 550 S.E.2d 260, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 660 (2001).

Estates. — Where questions regarding inheritance arise concerning the estate of the deceased, a court may award attorney's fees if legitimate claims exist. Batcheldor v. Boyd, 119 N.C. App. 204, 458 S.E.2d 1 (1995).

Bond Premium Tax. — This section, which vests the trial judge with discretionary authority to allow costs as justice may require, provided statutory authority for judge's decision to tax defendant's bond premiums, paid pursuant to G.S. 1-111, against plaintiff. Minton v. Lowe's Food Stores, 121 N.C. App. 675, 468 S.E.2d 513 (1996).

Unable to Recover Litigation Costs or Attorney's Fees. — Inmate, who had obtained a verdict against a deputy sheriff with regard to an assault and battery suit, was unable to recover litigation costs or attorney's fees, because no statutory authority existed allowing such recovery to a prevailing party in a civil assault case. Cunningham v. Riley, — N.C. App. —, — S.E.2d —, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 511 (Mar. 15, 2005).

Jurisdiction of Trial Court to Award. — Pursuant to G.S. 1-294, a trial court did not have jurisdiction to decide the issue of attorney fees after a county and its board of commissioners had filed their notice of appeal from the judgment in favor of a chairman of a county airport authority who had been improperly removed from his position; an exception did not apply, as the award of attorney fees under G.S. 6-1, G.S. 6-20, G.S. 6-19.1, G.S. 7A-314, and G.S. 143-318.16B was based upon the chairman being the prevailing party. McClure v. County of Jackson, — N.C. App. —, 648 S.E.2d 546, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1814 (2007).

§ 6-21. Costs allowed either party or apportioned in discretion of court.

Costs in the following matters shall be taxed against either party, or apportioned among the parties, in the discretion of the court:

(1) Application for years' support, for surviving spouse or children.

(2) Caveats to wills and any action or proceeding which may require the construction of any will or trust agreement, or fix the rights and duties of parties thereunder; provided, that in any caveat proceeding under this subdivision, the court shall allow attorneys' fees for the attorneys of the caveators only if it finds that the proceeding has substantial merit.

(3) Habeas corpus; and the court shall direct what officer shall tax the costs thereof.

(4) In actions for divorce or alimony; and the court may both before and after judgment make such order respecting the payment of such costs as may be incurred by either spouse from the sole and separate estate of either spouse, as may be just.

(5) Application for the establishment, alteration or discontinuance of a public road, cartway or ferry. The board of county commissioners may order the costs incurred before them paid in their discretion.

(6) The compensation of referees and commissioners to take depositions.

The word "costs" as the same appears and is used in this section shall be construed to include reasonable attorneys' fees in such amounts as the court shall in its discretion determine and allow: provided that attorneys' fees in actions for alimony shall not be included in the costs as provided herein, but shall be determined and provided for in accordance with G.S. 50-16.4. (Code, ss. 533, 1294, 1323, 1422, 1660, 2039, 2056, 2134, 2161; 1889, c. 37; 1893, c. 149, s. 6; Rev., s. 1268; C.S., s. 1244; 1937, c. 143; 1955, c. 1364; 1965, c. 633; 1967, c. 993, s. 2; c. 1152, s. 5; 1977, c. 576; 1979, c. 110, s. 3; 1981, c. 809, s. 1; c. 890, s. 2.)

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Attorneys' Fees Generally. — Ordinarily attorneys' fees are taxable as costs only when expressly authorized by statute. Horner v. Chamber of Commerce, 236 N.C. 96, 72 S.E.2d 21 (1952). For note commenting on this case see 31 N.C.L. Rev. 115 (1952).

Except as otherwise provided by this section, attorneys' fees are not now regarded as part of the court costs in North Carolina. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Schneider, 235 N.C. 446, 70 S.E.2d 578 (1952); Horner v. Chamber of Commerce, 236 N.C. 96, 72 S.E.2d 21 (1952); Rider v. Lenoir County, 238 N.C. 632, 78 S.E.2d 745 (1953); Hoskins v. Hoskins, 259 N.C. 704, 131 S.E.2d 326 (1963); Perkins v. American Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 4 N.C. App. 466, 167 S.E.2d 93 (1969).

This section authorizes attorneys' fees in certain enumerated actions to be taxed as a part of the costs, to be paid out of the fund which is the subject matter of the action. Rider v. Lenoir County, 238 N.C. 632, 78 S.E.2d 745 (1953).

In the types of cases enumerated in this section, attorneys' fees may be included as a part of the costs in such amounts as the court in its discretion determines and allows. Hoskins v. Hoskins, 259 N.C. 704, 131 S.E.2d 326 (1963).

Fees for Services Pursuant to Void Contract. — A trial court has no discretion to award statutory legal fees for services rendered in a child custody and support action pursuant to a contract void as against public policy. Davis v. Taylor, 81 N.C. App. 42, 344 S.E.2d 19, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 414, 349 S.E.2d 593 (1986).

Attorneys' Fees and Costs in Drainage Law. — Assuming that G.S. 105-374(i) is incorporated by reference into Chapter 156, because the section provides for attorneys' fees for taxing authorities does not mean that it prohibits attorneys' fees being taxed as part of the costs for members of drainage districts. Northampton County Drainage Dist. Number One v. Bailey, 326 N.C. 742, 392 S.E.2d 352 (1990).

This section provides for an award of costs in all actions under the drainage chapter and authorizes award of attorneys' fees to members of drainage district in action brought by district seeking to collect unpaid assessments and G.S. 105-374(i) even if incorporated by reference into Chapter 156 does not prohibit attorneys' fees from being taxed as part of the costs for members of drainage districts. Northampton County Drainage Dist. Number One v. Bailey, 326 N.C. 742, 392 S.E.2d 352 (1990).

Jurisdiction to Award Fees After Appeal Filed. — The trial court lacked jurisdiction to award attorney fees to the trust settlor's adopted grandchildren after the settlor's natural grandchildren filed an appeal of the judgment deciding that the adopted grandchildren were entitled to share in distribution of the trust. Gibbons v. Cole, 132 N.C. App. 777, 513 S.E.2d 834 (1999).

As to award of attorneys' fees in particular actions, see annotations under analysis lines II (A)-(F).

Application in Trade Secrets Cases. — Trial court's denial of defendants' motion for attorney fees was proper in a trade secrets case because attorney fees may have been awarded to the prevailing party if a claim of misappropriation was made in bad faith or if willful and malicious misappropriation existed regardless of the language of G.S. 6-21. Bruning & Federle Mfg. Co. v. Mills, — N.C. App. —, 647 S.E.2d 672, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1717 (2007).

As to the difference between including attorneys' fees in the costs taxed against a party to a lawsuit and in ordering the payment of attorneys' fees, see Smith v. Price, 315 N.C. 523, 340 S.E.2d 408 (1986).

Judicial Review. — The exercise of the court's discretionary authority is not reviewable. Hoskins v. Hoskins, 259 N.C. 704, 131 S.E.2d 326 (1962); Davis v. Davis, 58 N.C. App. 25, 293 S.E.2d 268, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 127, 297 S.E.2d 399 (1982).

The decision to award counsel fees is within the discretion of the trial court, and the Court of Appeals will not disturb what it deems to be a sound exercise of that discretion.

If the findings of the superior court regarding an award of attorney's fees in a caveat proceeding are supported by the evidence the reviewing court cannot disturb them. Dyer v. State, 331 N.C. 374, 416 S.E.2d 1 (1992).

Applied in Field v. Wheeler, 120 N.C. 264, 26 S.E. 812 (1897); Tyser v. Sears, 252 N.C. 65, 112 S.E.2d 750 (1960); Dillon v. North Carolina Nat'l Bank, 6 N.C. App. 584, 170 S.E.2d 571 (1969); Citizens Nat'l Bank v. Grandfather Home for Children, Inc., 280 N.C. 354, 185 S.E.2d 836 (1972); Keener v. Korn, 46 N.C. App. 214, 264 S.E.2d 829 (1980); Wake County ex rel. Denning v. Ferrell, 71 N.C. App. 185, 321 S.E.2d 913 (1984); National Medical Enters., Inc. v. Sandrock, 72 N.C. II. COSTS IN PARTICULAR ACTIONS.

A. Caveats to Wills.

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases below were decided prior to the amendment to subdivision (2) of this section by Session Law 1981, c. 809, s. 1.

Discretion of Court. — It is within the discretionary power of the court before which an issue of devisavit vel non is tried to direct the payment of the costs out of the estate. Mayo v. Jones, 78 N.C. 406 (1878). See In re Will of Hargrove, 206 N.C. 307, 173 S.E. 577 (1934), for dicta on this point.

Subdivision (2) of this section leaves the taxing of court costs and the apportionment thereof to be made in the discretion of the court. Moreover, the fixing of reasonable attorneys' fees in applicable cases is likewise a matter within the sound discretion of the trial court. Godwin v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 259 N.C. 520, 131 S.E.2d 456 (1963).

Where appellant did not contend that the fees allowed counsel were unreasonable and nothing to the contrary appeared in the record, it was taken that the court taxed the costs and attorneys' fees in the exercise of its discretion and that there was no abuse of this discretion. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Dodson, 260 N.C. 22, 131 S.E.2d 875 (1963).

When an executor's right to qualify is contested and judicially denied, whether the court will exercise its discretion to award costs, including attorneys' fees, incurred in his unsuccessful litigation, will depend in each case upon the grounds for the opposition and the reasonableness of his resistance to it, his good faith in pressing his appointment and whether his efforts were in the interest of the estate. In re Estate of Moore, 292 N.C. 58, 231 S.E.2d 849 (1977).

Albeit subdivision (2) authorizes the trial judge in his discretion to award costs, including attorneys' fees, in the instances specified therein, it is quite clear (1) that he should not award costs and attorneys' fees to an executor-designate whose claim for appointment is rejected unless the claim was reasonable, made in good faith and prima facie in the interest of the estate; and (2) that the judge has no discretion to tax costs against an estate when the nominated executor was disqualified to act as a matter of law. Estate of Moore, 292 N.C. 58, 231 S.E.2d 849 (1977).

Where a surviving spouse is forced to engage in litigation to determine whether a right of dissent from the will of the deceased spouse exists, the discretionary power given the trial judge under this section includes the power to award attorney's fees for the surviving spouse when, in the opinion of the trial court, the proceeding was one of substantial merit. In re Kirkman, 302 N.C. 164, 273 S.E.2d 712 (1981).

Taxing of Costs Where Caveat Is Unsuccessful. — Under this section, even though judgment is entered in favor of propounders, the trial court may tax the costs, including an allowance to counsel representing caveators, against the estate upon finding that the filing of the caveat was apt and proper and done in good faith. In re Will of Slade, 214 N.C. 361, 199 S.E. 290 (1938).

Allowance of Attorneys' Fees. — The allowance of attorneys' fees to counsel for the propounders is in the sound discretion of the trial court. In re Will of Coffield, 216 N.C. 285, 4 S.E.2d 870 (1939).

Same — Where Caveat Is Unsuccessful. — This statute authorizes the trial court in its discretion to allow attorneys' fees to counsel for unsuccessful caveators to a will. In re Will of Ridge, 47 N.C. App. 183, 266 S.E.2d 766 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 302 N.C. 375, 275 S.E.2d 424 (1981).

It is a matter in the discretion of the court, both as to whether to allow attorneys' fees to counsel for unsuccessful caveators to a will and the amount of such fees. In re Will of Ridge, 47 N.C. App. 183, 266 S.E.2d 766 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 302 N.C. 375, 275 S.E.2d 424 (1981).

This section does not require the court to award attorneys' fees to counsel for unsuccessful caveators to a will, but clearly authorizes the court to do so; thus, it is a matter in the discretion of the court, both as to whether to allow fees and the amount of such fees. In re Ridge, 302 N.C. 375, 275 S.E.2d 424 (1981).

As long as a dissent has substantial merit, the court may exercise its discretion in awarding reasonable attorneys' fees. In re Estate of Tucci, 104 N.C. App. 142, 408 S.E.2d 859 (1991), cert. dismissed, 331 N.C. 748, 417 S.E.2d 236 (1992).

The substantial merit requirement under subdivision (2) of this section does not mean success on the merits; in its sound discretion, the trial court may award attorneys' fees even to unsuccessful caveators. In re Estate of Tucci, 104 N.C. App. 142, 408 S.E.2d 859 (1991), cert. dismissed, 331 N.C. 748, 417 S.E.2d 236 (1992).

Attorneys' Fees as Costs Paid by Executor. — The language of subdivision (2) of this section is sufficient to vest in the trial court the discretionary authority to tax reasonable attorneys' fees as a part of the costs to be paid by the executor. McWhirter v. Downs, 8 N.C. App. 50, 173 S.E.2d 587 (1970).

Attorneys' Fees Fixed by Mutual Agreement Not Taxable Costs. — Fees for services rendered by attorneys to the parties in a caveat to a will do not automatically become costs of the proceeding merely because they are incurred and paid. This section commits the allowance and apportionment of the fees and the determination of the amounts thereof to the discretion of the court. Where the court had made no determination of the matter, but the amounts were fixed by contingent agreement between attorneys and clients prior to suit and the allowance of the fees as part of the costs of the proceeding was intentionally excluded from the judgment of the court, the amounts paid to the attorneys did not and could not become part of the taxable costs of the suit under this section. Commercial Nat'l Bank v. United States, 196 F.2d 182 (4th Cir. 1952).

Expense of Caveat Not Cost of Administration. — Costs of administration, as used in G.S. 29-2(5), means those ordinary, usual, and necessary expenses of administering a decedent's estate; a will caveat and its expense is neither of these, for a will caveat is a claim that the will involved is invalid, and its expense is a cost of court taxable against either party, or apportioned among the parties, in the discretion of the court. In re Estate of Ward, 97 N.C. App. 660, 389 S.E.2d 441 (1990).

"Common Fund" Not Prerequisite to Award of Costs. — There is no requirement in subdivision (2) of this section that a "common fund be available before costs may be awarded." McNaull v. McNaull, 94 N.C. App. 547, 380 S.E.2d 590, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 546, 385 S.E.2d 498 (1989).

No Authority to Award Fees Which Were Postponed Pending Retrial After Judgment Erroneously Set Aside. — Where the court's refusal to award attorneys' fees was based on its decision to postpone any award until the matter was retried, and the court erred when it set aside the judgment and ordered a new trial, and since the appellate court directed that the consent judgment be reinstated, the trial court was without authority to order the payment of attorneys' fees as a part of the costs of the caveat proceedings. In re Baity, 65 N.C. App. 364, 309 S.E.2d 515 (1983), cert. denied, 311 N.C. 401, 319 S.E.2d 266 (1984).

Standing to Stipulate to Payment of Attorneys' Fees. — Where estate was taxed with the payment of attorneys' fees pursuant to subdivision (2) of this section, the attorneys' fees were considered to be an item of costs, and since the clerk's order indicated that the attorneys' fees should be paid directly to the law firm involved, and not to the dissenter, only the law firm could stipulate that the clerk's order had been satisfied. In re Estate of Tucci, 104 N.C. App. 142, 408 S.E.2d 859 (1991), cert. dismissed, 331 N.C. 748, 417 S.E.2d 236 (1992).

Caveators Should Have Been Apprised of Court's Determination Regarding Fees. — Where the trial court permitted an attorney for all the named caveators to withdraw as counsel of record for certain caveators, implicit in that decision was permission for these caveators to retain their own counsel; therefore, if at the outset of the trial, the court determined that there was duplicity on the part of all counsel in its representation of the caveators, then the caveators should have been apprised that such a determination by the trial court might result in the denial of attorney fees pursuant to subsection (2) of this section, rather than for the trial court to summarily deny a successor law firm's request for fees at the conclusion of the matter. Hill v. Cox, 108 N.C. App. 454, 424 S.E.2d 201 (1993).

Trial court did not err in denying a propounder's motion for attorney's fees and costs, because the court was not required to enter findings of fact on whether the propounder's position, although unsuccessful, was supported by substantial merit, under G.S. 6-21; the statute required that prior to awarding attorney's fees to a caveator, the trial court had to make a finding of fact that the proceeding had substantial merit, under G.S. 6-21(2), but the statute did not require the trial court make any such findings in the case of a propounder. In re Will of McDonald, 156 N.C. App. 220, 577 S.E.2d 131, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 126 (2003).

Trial Court Abused Its Discretion. — The trial court abused its discretion by denying a petition of a law firm for approval and award of legal expenses where the trial court implicitly found that the caveat proceeding had substantial merit and where there was evidence that the law firm performed substantial services on behalf of the caveators it represented. Hill v. Cox, 108 N.C. App. 454, 424 S.E.2d 201 (1993).

Trial Court Did Not Abuse Its Discretion. — Caveators failed to show that the court abused its discretion when it awarded costs, including attorneys' fees, to propounders. In re Will of Sechrest, 140 N.C. App. 464, 537 S.E.2d 511, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1206 (2000).

B. Construction of Will or Trust.

Sale of Trust Property. — The trial court had authority to tax a reasonable attorneys' fee as part of the costs and to apportion it among the parties in an action for a declaratory judgment and for instructions to the trustees in connection with the sale of certain trust property. Tripp v. Tripp, 17 N.C. App. 64, 193 S.E.2d 366 (1972).

Testamentary Trusts. — In an action pursuant to the Uniform Declaratory Judgment Act for construction of certain trust provisions of a will, the taxing of costs, the inclusion therein of attorneys' fees, and the fixing of reasonable counsel fees, are matters within the sound discretion of the trial court. Little v. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 252 N.C. 229, 113 S.E.2d 689 (1960).

C. Habeas Corpus.

A reasonable allowance for attorneys' fees may be made as a part of the costs in habeas corpus proceedings, but not until there is a proper hearing or an opportunity for defendant to be heard. Murphy v. Murphy, 261 N.C. 95, 134 S.E.2d 148 (1964).

D. Divorce or Alimony.

Husband Formerly Always Liable for His Own Costs. — Prior to the 1977 amendment to this section, in actions for divorce the husband, whether successful or unsuccessful, was liable for his own costs, and whether he should pay the wife's costs was in all cases in the discretion of the court. Broom v. Broom, 130 N.C. 562, 41 S.E. 673 (1902).

Guardian Ad Litem Fees. — Having properly appointed guardian ad litem, the trial court was within its discretion to assess as an item of costs the fees of the guardian ad litem and to tax those fees to either party or apportion them between the parties. Van Every v. McGuire, 125 N.C. App. 578, 481 S.E.2d 377 (1997), aff'd, 348 N.C. 58, 497 S.E.2d 689 (1998).

E. Compensation of Referees.

Subdivision (6) must be considered in pari materia with at least two other statutes, G.S. 1-7 and 1A-1, Rule 41(d). Thigpen v. Piver, 37 N.C. App. 382, 246 S.E.2d 67, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 653, 248 S.E.2d 257 (1978).

Referees' Fees — May Be Apportioned. — Originally, under the Code of 1883, § 533, referees' fees were taxed, like other costs, against the losing party, but by amendment (Laws 1889, ch. 37) the court was authorized to apportion them in its discretion. Cobb v. Rhea, 137 N.C. 295, 49 S.E. 161 (1904).

Where, in a suit to obtain advice and instruction of the court for the proper distribution of the assets of the estate, the cause is referred to a referee, the taxing of the referee's fee is within the discretion of the court, and order of the court prorating the referee's fee between the funds derived from sale of realty to make assets and the personal property of the estate will not be disturbed. Williams v. Johnson, 230 N.C. 338, 53 S.E.2d 277 (1949).

The apportionment of the compensation for a referee and the court reporter employed by him is within the discretionary power given the court by this section. Hoskins v. Hoskins, 259 N.C. 704, 131 S.E.2d 326 (1963).

Same — Analogy to Allowance to Receiver. — The allowance to the receiver is a part of the costs of the action, and usually taxable against the losing party. Whether the receiver's fees should be divided is a matter in the discretion of the presiding judge, as is now the case also with referees' fees. Simmons v. Allison, 119 N.C. 556, 26 S.E. 171 (1896).

Apportionment Not Precluded by Former Judgment. — A former judgment, Homer v. Oxford Water & Elec. Co., 153 N.C. 535, 65 S.E. 607, 138 Am. St. R. 681 (1910), appealed from and affirmed by the Supreme Court, "that the defendants do recover against the plaintiff and the surety on his prosecution bond the costs of this action," did not preclude a subsequent trial judge from taxing the cost of reference against either party or apportioning it among the parties in his discretion under this section. Horner v. Oxford Water & Elec. Co., 156 N.C. 494, 72 S.E. 624 (1911).

Award of Costs on Appeal Does Not Include Referee's Fee. — Where, upon the trial in the superior court upon appeal from the referee, judgment is entered in the superior court in favor of plaintiffs, entitling plaintiffs to recover costs in the trial, such recovery does not include compensation of the referee. Cody v. England, 221 N.C. 40, 19 S.E.2d 10 (1942).

Fee Ordered Paid by Estate Not to Be Taxed Against Executor. — Ordinarily, in litigation over a fund in the nature of an in rem proceeding, such items of costs as referee's allowances and stenographic reporter's bills are paid out of the fund, although taxable in the discretion of the court, but in Lighter v. Boone, 222 N.C. 421, 23 S.E.2d 313 (1942), it was held that when such costs have been ordered paid from the estate, they cannot afterwards be taxed against an executor personally.

Authority of Assistant Clerk to Tax Cost of Deposition. — An assistant clerk of the superior court had the authority to tax the cost of a deposition against a plaintiff who took a voluntary dismissal of his case before it reached the trial calendar. Thigpen v. Piver, 37 N.C. App. 382, 246 S.E.2d 67, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 653, 248 S.E.2d 257 (1978).

F. Partition or Sale of Property.

Costs in Partition. — The taxing of costs among the parties to proceedings to partition land is left in the discretion of the court, and will not be reviewed on appeal. Fortune v. Hunt, 152 N.C. 715, 68 S.E. 213 (1910).

Where, in a petition for partition, defendant pleads sole seizin, and the trial of such issue results in a verdict for plaintiffs, and in judgment that the parties are tenants in common and appointing a commissioner to make sale, plaintiff is entitled to all costs from the filing of the answer through the final judgment below, that is, while the case is pending on the civil issue docket. This does not include costs of reference, which may be taxed in the discretion of the court. Costs of the partition proceeding, exclusive of the issue of sole seizin, may be apportioned. Bailey v. Hayman, 222 N.C. 58, 22 S.E.2d 6 (1943).

G. Actions Not Covered by This Section.

A civil action to enjoin the issuance of county bonds and to restrain the disbursement of county funds is not one of the actions enumerated by this section in which attorneys' fees may be taxed as part of the costs. Rider v. Lenoir County, 238 N.C. 632, 78 S.E.2d 745 (1953).

Defense of Tort Action. — The expense of employing attorneys in the successful defense of a suit for damages for tort is not allowable as part of the costs or recoverable in the absence of an express agreement therefor. Queen City Coach Co. v. Lumberton Coach Co., 229 N.C. 534, 50 S.E.2d 288 (1948).

Specific Performance of Property Agreement. — An action between husband and wife seeking specific performance of an agreement between them to "pool" their property and assets, to declare a resulting trust, and for an accounting, did not involve construction of a trust agreement, and the attorneys' fees of the respective parties did not come within the statutory exceptions to the general rule and could not be taxed as a part of the costs. Hoskins v. Hoskins, 259 N.C. 704, 131 S.E.2d 326 (1963).

Writing Insufficient as Trust Instrument. — In a declaratory judgment action in which the paper writing in question was insufficient as a trust instrument and was not executed as a will, the trial judge erred in ordering that plaintiff's counsel fees should be taxed against decedent's estate, since the action did not involve a caveat or the construction of a trust instrument within the purview of this section. Baxter v. Jones, 283 N.C. 327, 196 S.E.2d 193 (1973).

Court's order that defendant pay legal fees incurred by executor after defendant's default at judicial sale of estate's real and personal property held unauthorized. Parker v. Lippard, 87 N.C. App. 43, 359 S.E.2d 492, modified, 87 N.C. App. 487, 361 S.E.2d 395 (1987).

In declaratory judgment action in which plaintiff sought division of a federal income tax refund pursuant to G.S. 28A-15-6 and 28A-15-9, plaintiff was not entitled to attorney's fees under this section. Brantley v. Watson, 115 N.C. App. 393, 445 S.E.2d 53 (1994).

H. Illegitimate Children.

Attorneys' fees incurred in prosecuting paternity actions may not be awarded under G.S. 50-13.6, but may only be assessed as costs under subdivision (10) of this section. Napowsa v. Langston, 95 N.C. App. 14, 381 S.E.2d 882, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 709, 388 S.E.2d 460 (1989).

III. PROCEDURE.

Caveat Proceeding. — A caveat proceeding has substantial merit if there is substantial evidence to support the claim. Dyer v. State, 102 N.C. App. 480, 402 S.E.2d 464, rev'd on other grounds, Dyer v. State, 331 N.C. 374, 416 S.E.2d 1 (1992).

Whether a caveat proceeding has substantial merit is a legal question reviewable by the appellate courts de novo. Dyer v. State, 102 N.C. App. 480, 402 S.E.2d 464, rev'd on other grounds, Dyer v. State, 331 N.C. 374, 416 S.E.2d 1 (1992).

§ 6-21.1. Allowance of counsel fees as part of costs in certain cases.

In any personal injury or property damage suit, or suit against an insurance company under a policy issued by the defendant insurance company and in which the insured or beneficiary is the plaintiff, upon a finding by the court that there was an unwarranted refusal by the defendant insurance company to pay the claim which constitutes the basis of such suit, instituted in a court of record, where the judgment for recovery of damages is ten thousand dollars ($10,000) or less, the presiding judge may, in his discretion, allow a reasonable attorney fee to the duly licensed attorney representing the litigant obtaining a judgment for damages in said suit, said attorney's fee to be taxed as a part of the court costs. (1959, c. 688; 1963, c. 1193; 1967, c. 927; 1969, c. 786; 1979, c. 401; 1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 976.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Who May Make Award.
III. Procedure.
IV. Settlement.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

The obvious purpose of this section is to provide relief for a person who has sustained injury or property damage in an amount so small that, if he must pay his attorney out of his recovery, he may well conclude that it is not economically feasible to bring suit on his claim. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973); Hubbard v. Lumbermen's Mut. Cas. Co., 24 N.C. App. 493, 211 S.E.2d 544, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 723, 213 S.E.2d 721 (1975); In re Kirkman, 302 N.C. 164, 273 S.E.2d 712 (1981); Purdy v. Brown, 307 N.C. 93, 296 S.E.2d 459 (1982); Hillman v. United States Liab. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 145, 296 S.E.2d 302, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 468, 299 S.E.2d 221 (1982); McDaniel v. North Carolina Mut. Life Ins. Co., 70 N.C. App. 480, 319 S.E.2d 676, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 84, 321 S.E.2d 897 (1984); Boykin v. Morrison, 148 N.C. App. 98, 557 S.E.2d 583, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 1287 (2001).

In such a situation the legislature apparently concluded that the defendant, though at fault, would have an unjustly superior bargaining power in settlement negotiations. A great majority of such claims arise out of automobile accidents in which the alleged wrongdoer is insured and his insurance carrier controls the litigation. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

The policy behind this section is to provide relief for an injured party where it might not be feasible to bring suit if that party had to pay an attorney out of the proceeds. Martin v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co., 68 N.C. App. 534, 316 S.E.2d 126, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 760, 321 S.E.2d 140, 321 S.E.2d 141 (1984).

The purpose of G.S. 6-21.1 is to provide relief for a person who has sustained injury or property damage in an amount so small that, if he must pay his attorney out of his recovery, he may well conclude that it is not economically feasible to bring suit on his claim, but the discretion accorded the trial court in awarding attorney fees pursuant to G.S. 6-21.1 is not unbridled. Phillips v. Warren, 152 N.C. App. 619, 568 S.E.2d 230, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 959 (2002).

This section refers only to the amount of the judgment, not to the amount of the verdict. Wells v. Jackson, 85 N.C. App. 718, 355 S.E.2d 837 (1987).

Applicability Governed by Amount Obtained. — The amount of the judgment obtained, not the amount of the judgment sought, governs applicability of this section. Purdy v. Brown, 56 N.C. App. 792, 290 S.E.2d 397, rev'd on other grounds, 307 N.C. 93, 296 S.E.2d 459 (1982).

It was the amount of the judgment obtained, not the amount sought, that governed the applicability G.S. 6-21.1; an attorney's fees award was affirmed where judgment was rendered for $3,829.98, and the trial court considered the factors listed in Washington v. Horton, 132 N.C. App. 347, 513 S.E.2d 331 (1999), in making the award. Phillips v. Brackett, 156 N.C. App. 76, 575 S.E.2d 805, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 27 (2003).

G.S. 6-21.1 applies when a plaintiff recovers a judgment for zero dollars or less than zero dollars becase the precise amount of damages awarded is of no consequence as long as it is less than $10,000. Reinhold v. Lucas, 167 N.C. App. 735, 606 S.E.2d 412, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 10 (2005).

Amount Obtained Means Compensatory Damages. — "Damages" as used in G.S. 6-21.1 applied only to the compensatory damage amounts when determining whether the judgment amount was equal to or less than $10,000. Boykin v. Morrison, 148 N.C. App. 98, 557 S.E.2d 583, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 1287 (2001).

Trial court erred in including costs and prejudgment interest in a calculation of a "judgment obtained" by plaintiff in a personal injury suit for purposes of determining whether plaintiff was entitled to attorney's fees for a judgment not to exceed $10,000. Brown v. Millsap, 161 N.C. App. 282, 588 S.E.2d 71, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 2041 (2003).

Construing the phrase "judgment for recovery of damages" to include punitive damage award would decrease the number of cases to which G.S. 6-21.1 would apply. Boykin v. Morrison, 148 N.C. App. 98, 557 S.E.2d 583, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 1287 (2001).

This section, being remedial, should be construed liberally to accomplish the purpose of the legislature and to bring within it all cases fairly falling within its intended scope. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973); Hubbard v. Lumbermen's Mut. Cas. Co., 24 N.C. App. 493, 211 S.E.2d 544, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 723, 213 S.E.2d 721 (1975); In re Kirkman, 302 N.C. 164, 273 S.E.2d 712 (1981); Hillman v. United States Liab. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 145, 296 S.E.2d 302, cert. denied, 307 N.C. 468, 299 S.E.2d 221 (1982); McDaniel v. North Carolina Mut. Life Ins. Co., 70 N.C. App. 480, 319 S.E.2d 676, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 84, 321 S.E.2d 897 (1984); West ex rel. Farris v. Tilley, 120 N.C. App. 145, 461 S.E.2d 1 (1995).

This section should be construed liberally by the presiding judge to accomplish the obvious purpose to provide relief for a person who has a claim so small that, if he must pay an attorney out of his recovery, it may not be economically feasible to bring suit. DeBerry v. American Motorists Ins. Co., 33 N.C. App. 639, 236 S.E.2d 380 (1977).

Attorneys' Fees Not Recoverable as Costs in Absence of Statute. — Attorneys' fees are not now regarded as part of court costs in this jurisdiction, except as otherwise provided by statute. Perkins v. American Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 4 N.C. App. 466, 167 S.E.2d 93 (1969).

Ordinarily, attorneys' fees are not recoverable as an item of damages or part of the costs in litigation. U.S. Piping, Inc. v. Travelers Indem. Co., 9 N.C. App. 561, 176 S.E.2d 835 (1970); Hicks v. Albertson, 18 N.C. App. 599, 197 S.E.2d 624, aff'd, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

In the absence of statutory authority therefor, a court may not include an allowance of attorneys' fees as part of the costs recoverable by the successful party to an action or proceeding. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

Inmate, who had obtained a verdict against a deputy sheriff with regard to an assault and battery suit, was unable to recover litigation costs or attorney's fees, because no statutory authority existed allowing such recovery to a prevailing party in a civil assault case. Cunningham v. Riley, — N.C. App. —, — S.E.2d —, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 511 (Mar. 15, 2005).

But the legislature has enacted an exception to this general rule and allows the trial judge to award attorneys' fees in certain situations under this section. U.S. Piping, Inc. v. Travelers Indem. Co., 9 N.C. App. 561, 176 S.E.2d 835 (1970).

This section creates an exception to the general rule that attorneys' fees are not allowable as part of the costs in civil actions. Hill v. Jones, 26 N.C. App. 168, 215 S.E.2d 168, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 240, 217 S.E.2d 664 (1975).

This statute is an exception to the general rule that counsel fees may not be included in costs recoverable to a successful party in an action or proceeding. West ex rel. Farris v. Tilley, 120 N.C. App. 145, 461 S.E.2d 1 (1995).

Section Does Not Guarantee Compensation in All Cases. — While this section is aimed at encouraging injured parties to press their meritorious but pecuniarily small claims, it was not intended to encourage parties to refuse reasonable settlement offers and give rise to needless litigation by guaranteeing that counsel will, in all cases, be compensated. Harrison v. Herbin, 35 N.C. App. 259, 241 S.E.2d 108, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 90, 244 S.E.2d 258 (1978).

Discretion of Judge. — The allowance of counsel fees under the authority of this section is, by express language of this section, in the discretion of the presiding judge. Callicutt v. Hawkins, 11 N.C. App. 546, 181 S.E.2d 725 (1971); Hubbard v. Lumbermen's Mut. Cas. Co., 24 N.C. App. 493, 211 S.E.2d 544, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 723, 213 S.E.2d 721 (1975); Black v. Standard Guar. Ins. Co., 42 N.C. App. 50, 255 S.E.2d 782, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 293, 259 S.E.2d 910 (1979); Yates Motor Co. v. Simmons, 51 N.C. App. 339, 276 S.E.2d 496, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 320, 281 S.E.2d 660 (1981).

Without a showing of any abuse of the trial judge's discretion, an assignment of error to a denial of a motion for allowance of attorneys' fees will be overruled. Callicutt v. Hawkins, 11 N.C. App. 546, 181 S.E.2d 725 (1971).

Because this section provides for the award of "a reasonable attorney fee," the court has a large measure of discretion in fixing or recommending the amount to be paid. Hill v. Jones, 26 N.C. App. 168, 215 S.E.2d 168, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 240, 217 S.E.2d 664 (1975).

Decision to award attorney's fees pursuant to G.S. 6-21.1 is discretionary, but the trial court's discretion is not unbridled; if the trial court is shown to have abused its discretion, its decision will be overturned. House v. Stone, 163 N.C. App. 520, 594 S.E.2d 130, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 507 (2004).

To overturn trial judge's determination, defendant must show abuse of discretion. Hillman v. United States Liab. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 145, 296 S.E.2d 302 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 468, 299 S.E.2d 221 (1983).

Without a showing of abuse of trial judge's discretion, trial judge's determination to award counsel fees will not be overturned. Whitfield v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 86 N.C. App. 466, 358 S.E.2d 92 (1987).

Trial Court's Award of Attorney's Fees Supported by the Whole Record. — Absence from a trial court's findings regarding an award of attorney's fees, under G.S. 6-21.1, of a finding regarding unjust exercise of superior bargaining power did not require reversal when the trial court made adequate findings on the whole record to support an award of attorney's fees. Messina v. Bell, 158 N.C. App. 111, 581 S.E.2d 80, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 978 (2003).

Section Contemplates Inquiry Before Awarding Fee to Counsel. — The wording of this section contemplates some type of inquiry by the presiding judge before the court may exercise its discretion in awarding a fee to plaintiff's counsel. Hillman v. United States Liab. Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 145, 296 S.E.2d 302 (1982), cert. denied, 307 N.C. 468, 299 S.E.2d 221 (1983).

Reasonableness as Key Factor. — Reasonableness, not arbitrary classification of attorney activity, is the key factor under all the attorneys' fees statutes. Coastal Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Goodson Farms, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 221, 319 S.E.2d 650, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

Order denying motion pending remand to arbitrator was error. — Judge's order denying plaintiff's motion for attorney's fees "pending remand to the Arbitrator for a further determination" was error. This section requires the judge upon motion made to award attorney's fees as a part of the costs. Bass v. Goss, 105 N.C. App. 242, 412 S.E.2d 145 (1992).

This section permits the judge to allow the successful plaintiff a reasonable attorneys' fee in a suit against an insurance company upon a finding by the court that there was an unwarranted refusal by the insurer to pay the claim of plaintiff-insured which constitutes the basis of the suit, where the judgment is $5,000 or less. Martin v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co., 68 N.C. App. 534, 316 S.E.2d 126, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 760, 321 S.E.2d 140, 321 S.E.2d 141 (1984).

Denial of Attorney's Fee Held Proper. — Doctor who sued insurer for settlement proceeds owed to him under a valid medical lien was not entitled to attorney's fees, pursuant to this section, where he was not the "beneficiary" under the insurer's policy, and he did not bring his suit under the policy issued, but instead alleged that the insurer breached its duty to him by failing to retain sufficient funds from the settlement proceeds to satisfy his lien. Smith v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 157 N.C. App. 596, 580 S.E.2d 46, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 933 (2003), cert. denied, 357 N.C. 507, 587 S.E.2d 674 (2003).

Grant of Attorneys' Fee Held Proper. — Trial court properly considered the factors required by North Carolina case law before it awarded over $32,000 in attorneys' fees to a pedestrian who recovered $7,000 in damages after he was struck by a truck, and the appellate court found that the award was not excessive. Overton v. Purvis, 162 N.C. App. 241, 591 S.E.2d 18, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 120 (2004).

Insurer's Refusal Unwarranted. — The automobile insurer's refusal to pay at least the undisputed amount of loss to the plaintiff was unwarranted, and the trial court properly awarded attorneys' fees. PHC, Inc. v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 129 N.C. App. 801, 501 S.E.2d 701 (1998), cert. denied, 348 N.C. 694, 511 S.E.2d 648 (1998).

Insurer's Refusal Not "Unwarranted". — Insurer's refusal to pay the claim of an insured covered by a group medical insurance policy incident to an in-vitro fertilization procedure until approximately two months after insured filed suit was not "unwarranted" so as to authorize the imposition of attorneys' fees against the insurer under this section. Michael v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 631 F. Supp. 451 (W.D.N.C. 1986).

Trial Court Need Not Make a Finding of Insurance Company's Refusal to Pay Policy. — Trial court's finding, when awarding attorney's fees, under G.S. 6-21.1, of an insurance company's unwarranted refusal to pay an insurance policy was not necessary in a suit involving an automobile accident which was not a suit directly against an insurance policy. Messina v. Bell, 158 N.C. App. 111, 581 S.E.2d 80, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 978 (2003).

Merit Bonus. — It is true that the quality of services rendered is properly considered in awarding fees, as well as the nature of the services required, and hence the scope and complexity of the case. However, there is no North Carolina authority for an award of a "merit bonus." Even assuming such bonuses are allowed, as under federal practice, that should occur only in the "rare case" where the applicant specifically shows superior quality representation and exceptional success. Coastal Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Goodson Farms, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 221, 319 S.E.2d 650, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

Additional Attorneys' Fees on Appeal. — Authority to award additional attorneys' fees for an appeal falls within the purview of this section. Heins Tel. Co. v. Grain Dealers Mut. Ins. Co., 57 N.C. App. 695, 292 S.E.2d 281 (1982).

Trial court, in its discretion and upon appropriate findings of fact, could award reasonable attorney's fees for service performed during an appeal, under G.S. 6-21.1. Messina v. Bell, 158 N.C. App. 111, 581 S.E.2d 80, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 978 (2003).

Additional Attorneys' Fees on Reward. — Trial court's award of attorney fees to injured party in personal injury case was not an abuse of discretion as the trial court considered all the relevant factors, including the Washington factors, in making its decision; and the trial court had the discretion, after the case was remanded, to award appellate attorney fees, if it found such fees were warranted. Furmick v. Miner, 154 N.C. App. 460, 573 S.E.2d 172, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 1474 (2002).

Former G.S. 25-8 Became Part of Contracts. — Provisions in notes executed prior to the repeal in 1965 of former G.S. 25-8 that required the debtors to pay reasonable attorneys' fees for collection of the notes were rendered unenforceable by that section, notwithstanding the enactment in 1967 of this section permitting such provisions, since the former section became a part of the contracts between the parties and this section could not vary the terms of those contracts. Register v. Griffin, 10 N.C. App. 191, 178 S.E.2d 95 (1970).

When Insurance Company Not Required to Defend. — Where an insurance company utilized G.S. 20-279.21 (b)(3)a to provide a defense to the insured party, it was a party in the tort actions, although unnamed; therefore, although it was not required to defend the lawsuit, but chose to do so, by so doing it became a defendant and liable for attorney's fees and costs. Turnage ex rel. Turnage v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 109 N.C. App. 300, 426 S.E.2d 433, aff'd per curiam, 335 N.C. 168, 435 S.E.2d 772 (1993).

Section Not Applicable to Workers' Compensation Cases. — This section refers to personal injury damage suits and property damage suits tried in a court where there is a presiding trial judge and is not applicable in workers' compensation cases. Bowman v. Comfort Chair Co., 271 N.C. 702, 157 S.E.2d 378 (1967).

Action Heard Before Arbitrator. — In a civil action heard before an arbitrator where the plaintiff was awarded less than $10,000, a judge had discretion whether to and in what amount to award attorney's fees. Bass v. Goss, 105 N.C. App. 242, 412 S.E.2d 145 (1992).

The Uniform Arbitration Act does not forbid an award of attorney's fees for services provided by an attorney before the case is referred to binding arbitration. Lucas v. City of Charlotte, 123 N.C. App. 140, 472 S.E.2d 203 (1996).

Since former G.S. 1-567.11 has no application to work performed by an attorney before a case is referred to arbitration, the award of attorney's fees under this section was proper. Lucas v. City of Charlotte, 123 N.C. App. 140, 472 S.E.2d 203 (1996).

Attorney's Fees in Personal Injury Suit. — Trial court's findings supported its award of attorney's fees, in a personal injury suit, when those findings included (1) offers of settlement by both parties before and after suit was filed, (2) the defending motorist's offer of judgment, which was less than the judgment finally obtained, (3) no findings of an unjust exercise of superior bargaining power, which did not require reversal in light of adequate findings on the whole record supporting the award, (4) no findings of an unwarranted refusal to pay an insurance policy, which were not required as the suit involved an automobile accident and was not directly against an insurance policy, (5) the dates of either party's offers to settle before suit, in arbitration and mediation, in offers of judgment, and during trial, and (6) the amounts of the jury verdict, the judgment finally obtained, and the motorist's offers to settle. Messina v. Bell, 158 N.C. App. 111, 581 S.E.2d 80, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 978 (2003).

Attorneys' Fees in Actions Under Tort Claims Act. — The Industrial Commission has jurisdiction and authority to award attorneys' fees pursuant to this section for actions brought under the Tort Claims Act. Karp v. University of N.C., 88 N.C. App. 282, 362 S.E.2d 825 (1987), aff'd, 323 N.C. 473, 373 S.E.2d 430 (1988).

Costs and attorney fees were awarded to a property owner in error as, when read by themselves, G.S. 143-291 and G.S. 143-291.1 did not grant the North Carolina Industrial Commission the authority to award attorney fees; when read together with G.S. 6-21.1, the Commission had jurisdiction and authority to award attorney fees in a North Carolina Tort Claims Act case, but the owner's damages far exceeded the statutory maximum of $10,000. Watts v. N.C. Dep't of Env't & Natural Res., — N.C. App. —, 641 S.E.2d 811, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 595 (2007).

Defendants Prevailing on Counterclaim for Less Than Amount Sought. — Plaintiff's contention that the legislature did not intend for defendants to be able to collect attorneys' fees when they have prevailed on counterclaims for less than the stated amount was without merit. Mickens v. Robinson, 103 N.C. App. 52, 404 S.E.2d 359 (1991).

Abuse of Discretion. — Because defendant was not entitled to recover attorney's fees for defending against plaintiff's claim and because the amount of attorney's fees sought by defendant represented the cost for defending against plaintiff's claim as well as prosecuting defendant's counterclaim, the trial court necessarily abused its discretion in awarding defendant the full amount sought. Mishoe v. Sikes, 115 N.C. App. 697, 446 S.E.2d 114 (1994), aff'd, 340 N.C. 256, 456 S.E.2d 308 (1995).

To Receive Fees Party Must Be Litigant. — Although the court's amended judgment provided separately for recovery by plaintiff of $9,000.00 and by plaintiff's mother of $1,301.00, as the record reflected no formal motion by either plaintiff or defendant to add the mother as a party she did not function as a "litigant" therein and her recovery was not considered with daughter's for purposes of awarding attorney fees. West ex rel. Farris v. Tilley, 120 N.C. App. 145, 461 S.E.2d 1 (1995).

Section Not Applicable to Breach of Contract Case. — Attorney fees were not awardable in breach of contract case where homeowners received money damages from an exterminating firm for failure to detect termites. Hicks v. Clegg's Termite & Pest Control, Inc., 132 N.C. App. 383, 512 S.E.2d 85 (1999).

In taxpayers' suit against county commissioners for entering into a contract that benefitted one of the commissioners, it was within the trial court's discretion to allow or deny attorney's fees after hearing the taxpayers' evidence. Gibbs v. Mayo, 162 N.C. App. 549, 591 S.E.2d 905, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 252 (2004), cert. denied, 358 N.C. 543, 599 S.E.2d 45 (2004).

Award of Attorney's Fees Held Proper. — In an action for damages for personal injuries and medical expenses by the injured party and her parents, the trial court had the discretion to award attorney's fees since the damages awarded to the injured party and her parents were separate and each was less than $10,000. Moquin v. Hedrick, 163 N.C. App. 345, 593 S.E.2d 435, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 372 (2004).

Trial court did not err in awarding attorney's fees to a passenger pursuant to G.S. 6-21.1 in her action for personal injuries sustained in an automobile collision because she obtained a judgment against defendant for damages and was the prevailing party, notwithstanding the subsequent reduction of her judgment pursuant to G.S. 1B-4 by the amount of her settlement with a third-party defendant. Reinhold v. Lucas, 167 N.C. App. 735, 606 S.E.2d 412, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 10 (2005).

Trial court's denial of attorney fees was affirmed where the trial court made sufficient findings on the record, where it properly considered whether the judgment awarded was more favorable than offers of judgment made prior to trial, and where it properly considered the entire record before making a decision. House v. Stone, 163 N.C. App. 520, 594 S.E.2d 130, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 507 (2004).

II. WHO MAY MAKE AWARD.

"Presiding Judge" Means Judge Presiding over Court in Which Action Is Instituted. — The term "presiding judge" means the judge presiding over the court in which the action is instituted. Such judge can, without danger of injustice, fix a reasonable fee for the attorney of the party recovering damages by settlement prior to trial. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

The legislature contemplated that the judge who presided at the trial would determine whether a fee for the attorney of the party recovering damages should be allowed and, if so, the amount. Such judge would be in a better position than any other to make this determination. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

When Judge Other Than Trial Judge May Make Allowance. — While it is proper that the trial judge in an action which proceeds to trial may allow a reasonable attorney fee to the successful litigant under this section, the presiding judge of the court in which the suit is instituted may allow such fee when judgment is obtained without the necessity for trial. In cases where the judge who presided at the trial is unable because of death, disability, or other valid reason to make such allowance, the presiding judge of the court in which the suit is instituted would have such authority. Hicks v. Albertson, 18 N.C. App. 599, 197 S.E.2d 624, aff'd, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

Presiding judge may award compensation for legal services rendered on appeal. Hill v. Jones, 26 N.C. App. 168, 215 S.E.2d 168, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 240, 217 S.E.2d 664 (1975).

The clerk has no authority to determine whether a fee should be allowed as part of the costs or to fix the amount of such fee. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

State Tort Claim. — Under G.S. 6-21.1, both the determination of whether to award attorney's fees and the amount of the attorney's fees is in the considerable discretion of a presiding judge; in the case of a state tort claim, the same discretion lies in the North Carolina Industrial Commission. Sprinkle v. N.C. Wildlife Res. Comm'n, 165 N.C. App. 721, 600 S.E.2d 473, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 1513 (2004).

III. PROCEDURE.

Plaintiff Need Not Plead for Award in Complaint. — This section does not require that a plaintiff seeking attorneys' fees under the statute affirmatively plead for such an award as a separate claim in the complaint. Black v. Standard Guar. Ins. Co., 42 N.C. App. 50, 255 S.E.2d 782, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 293, 259 S.E.2d 910 (1979).

Findings of Fact Required. — In awarding reasonable counsel fees under this section, the judge presiding must make some findings of fact to support the award. Hill v. Jones, 26 N.C. App. 168, 215 S.E.2d 168, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 240, 217 S.E.2d 664 (1975).

Findings Regarding the Allocation of Time. — Although a trial court is not necessarily required to make specific findings as to the allocation of time for attorney's fees in its award of attorney's fees under this section, the court must still carefully review the attorney's hours and determine the amount of fees to be awarded that represents, in the court's opinion, the legal fees to be awarded for obtaining a judgment whether from a complaint or a counterclaim. Mishoe v. Sikes, 115 N.C. App. 697, 446 S.E.2d 114 (1994), aff'd, 340 N.C. 256, 456 S.E.2d 308 (1995).

And Such Findings May Be Limited. — Since this section determines the nature of an action and limits the amount involved, the findings of fact may be limited to the quantity and quality of all the services rendered by the attorney for his client until the final determination of the action for which the judge presiding, in his discretion, allows an attorneys' fee. Hill v. Jones, 26 N.C. App. 168, 215 S.E.2d 168, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 240, 217 S.E.2d 664 (1975).

Because this statute defines the circumstances under which attorneys' fees may be awarded, the trial court is not required to make specific findings as to the plaintiff's entitlement to such an award. Epps v. Ewers, 90 N.C. App. 597, 369 S.E.2d 104 (1988).

Trial court was not required to make findings of fact allocating the time spent on a case between work required to defend against plaintiff's claim and that required to forward defendant's counterclaim when awarding attorneys' fees to defendant. Mickens v. Robinson, 103 N.C. App. 52, 404 S.E.2d 359 (1991).

But Separate Findings Under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 52(a) Not Required. — This section does not require the trial judge to make separate findings and conclusions to support an award of attorney fees in accordance with G.S. 1A-1, Rule 52(a). Black v. Standard Guar. Ins. Co., 42 N.C. App. 50, 255 S.E.2d 782, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 293, 259 S.E.2d 910 (1979).

When Finding of Unwarranted Refusal to Pay Claim Required. — It is only when suit is brought against an insurance company by the insured or beneficiary, as plaintiff, under a policy issued by such insurance company, that there must be a finding by the court that there was an unwarranted refusal by the defendant insurance company to pay the claim before attorneys' fees may be allowed as a part of the costs when the judgment for recovery of damages is for $1,000 or less (now $5,000 or less). Rogers v. Rogers, 2 N.C. App. 668, 163 S.E.2d 645 (1968).

A trial court improperly awarded attorneys' fees to a judgment holder in the latter's action against an automobile liability insurer, where it made no finding that there was an unwarranted refusal by the insurer to pay the claim constituting the basis of the judgment holder's suit against the insured. U.S. Piping, Inc. v. Travelers Indem. Co., 9 N.C. App. 561, 176 S.E.2d 835 (1970).

Under this section, to support an award for an attorneys' fee from an insurance company the presiding judge must first find "an unwarranted refusal" to pay the claim. DeBerry v. American Motorists Ins. Co., 33 N.C. App. 639, 236 S.E.2d 380 (1977).

A finding of an unwarranted refusal by defendants to pay plaintiff's claim is required only in suits by an insured or beneficiary against an insurance company. Yates Motor Co. v. Simmons, 51 N.C. App. 339, 276 S.E.2d 496, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 320, 281 S.E.2d 660 (1981).

Where an insurance company is not a named defendant, there is no requirement that the trial court make a finding that there was an unwarranted refusal to pay by the insurer in order to award attorneys' fees under G.S. 6-21.1. McDaniel v. McBrayer, 164 N.C. App. 379, 595 S.E.2d 784, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 817 (2004).

When Finding of Unwarranted Refusal to Pay Not Required. — In a damage action arising out of a motor vehicle collision, since the suit was not on an insurance policy, a finding that refusal to pay was unwarranted was not required. Crisp v. Cobb, 75 N.C. App. 652, 331 S.E.2d 255 (1985).

The trial court was not required to make an "unwarranted refusal" finding to award attorney fees in an automobile accident case, since such a finding is required only in suits brought by an insured or a beneficiary against an insurance company defendant. Washington v. Horton, 132 N.C. App. 347, 513 S.E.2d 331 (1999).

When Finding of Unfair Bargaining Power Not Required. — Trial court's failure to make a finding as to a defendant's exercise of unfair bargaining power in awarding attorneys' fees under G.S. 6-21.1 was not grounds for reversal. McDaniel v. McBrayer, 164 N.C. App. 379, 595 S.E.2d 784, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 817 (2004).

The trial court is to consider the entire record in properly exercising its discretion under this section, including but not limited to the following factors: (1) settlement offers made before institution of the action; (2) offers of judgment and whether the judgment finally obtained was more favorable than such offers; (3) whether defendant unjustly exercised superior bargaining power; (4) in the case of an unwarranted refusal by an insurance company, the context in which the dispute arose; (5) the timing of settlement offers; and (6) the amounts of the settlement offers as compared to the jury verdict. Washington v. Horton, 132 N.C. App. 347, 513 S.E.2d 331 (1999).

Trial court property excluded $6,180 in costs and attorney fees which plaintiff incurred to obtain judgment awarding her damages in the amount of $4,950 in a personal injury action, and trial court did not err by ordering the defendant to pay the plaintiff's attorney's fee. Sowell v. Clark, 151 N.C. App. 723, 567 S.E.2d 200, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 897 (2002).

When deciding whether to award attorneys' fees under G.S. 6-21.1, a trial court must examine the entire record, including but not limited to: (1) settlement offers made prior to institution of the action; (2) offers of judgment made pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, N.C. R. Civ. P. 68 and whether the judgment finally obtained was more favorable than such offers; (3) whether defendant unjustly exercised superior bargaining power; (4) in the case of an unwarranted refusal by an insurance company, the context in which the dispute arose; (5) the timing of settlement offers; and (6) the amounts of settlement offers as compared to the jury verdict. Phillips v. Warren, 152 N.C. App. 619, 568 S.E.2d 230, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 959 (2002).

In determining whether to award attorneys' fees, the trial court must consider the entire record, including: (1) settlement offers made prior to the institution of the action; (2) offers of judgment pursuant to N.C. R. Civ. P. 68, and whether the judgment finally obtained was more favorable than such offers; (3) whether the defendant unjustly exercised superior bargaining power;(4) in the case of an unwarranted refusal by an insurance company, the context in which the dispute arose; (5) the timing of settlement offers; and (6) the amounts of the settlement offers as compared to the jury verdict. McDaniel v. McBrayer, 164 N.C. App. 379, 595 S.E.2d 784, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 817 (2004).

Trial Court Failed to Appreciate the Significance of Settlement Offers. — The trial court abused its discretion in awarding attorney's fees to counsel for plaintiff without considering the guidelines established by Horton; the trial court is required to make additional findings of fact regarding the timing and amount of any settlement offers, the bargaining position of the parties, and the amount of the settlement offers as compared to the jury verdict. Culler v. Hardy, 137 N.C. App. 155, 526 S.E.2d 698, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 251 (2000).

Trial Court's Discretion. — Trial court's decision to award attorneys' fees under G.S. 6-21.1 is discretionary and will not be overturned absent a showing of abuse of discretion. McDaniel v. McBrayer, 164 N.C. App. 379, 595 S.E.2d 784, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 817 (2004).

The plaintiff may properly move for an award of attorneys' fees after a verdict has been returned in its favor. Black v. Standard Guar. Inc., 42 N.C. App. 50, 255 S.E.2d 782, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 293, 259 S.E.2d 910 (1979).

No Fees Where Plaintiff Awarded New Trial. — Under this section, attorneys' fees are taxed as a part of the court costs, and where plaintiff was awarded a new trial by the appellate court, no judgment for damages was obtained, and, consequently, no attorneys' fees would be awarded as part of the cost. Craven v. Chambers, 56 N.C. App. 151, 287 S.E.2d 905 (1982).

Factors to Be Considered. — Several factors exist, denominated the "Washington factors," that a trial court must examine when determining whether to award attorney's fees. The trial court must consider the entire record in properly exercising its discretion, including but not limited to the following factors: (1) settlement offers made prior to the institution of the action; (2) offers of judgment pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, N.C. R. Civ. P. 68, and whether the judgment finally obtained was more favorable than such offers; (3) whether defendant unjustly exercised superior bargaining power; (4) in the case of an unwarranted refusal by an insurance company, the context in which the dispute arose; (5) the timing of settlement offers; (6) the amounts of the settlement offers as compared to the jury verdict; and (7) the whole record. House v. Stone, 163 N.C. App. 520, 594 S.E.2d 130, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 507 (2004).

Finding Insufficient to Award Attorneys' Fees. — Where the only findings of fact in support of the amount of the award for attorneys' fees were that plaintiff's attorney "provided good and valuable services"; that the reasonable value of the services provided by plaintiff's attorney was $2,000.00; and that plaintiff's fee contract with her attorney provided for a contingent fee of one-third of the damage award, those findings were not sufficient to support an award of $2,000. Epps v. Ewers, 90 N.C. App. 597, 369 S.E.2d 104 (1988).

The court abused its discretion in failing to make the required findings of fact to support the fee award pursuant to this section where no findings appear in the written judgment, and the hearing transcript reveals, at most, findings that a settlement offer "right prior to trial" was rejected and no meaningful negotiations were held due to the parties' intransigence. Porterfield v. Goldkuhle, 137 N.C. App. 376, 528 S.E.2d 71, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 320 (2000).

Award Upheld. — Where defendant's attorneys presented evidence tending to show that they were entitled to a fee of $8000 for their work, and the trial court, after having carefully reviewed petitioner's hours, awarded $5000, there was no abuse of discretion in the award. Mickens v. Robinson, 103 N.C. App. 52, 404 S.E.2d 359 (1991).

Attorney's fee award in a suit arising from an automobile accident was proper; although the jury's verdict was less than an offer of judgment, the offer did not exceed the amount of the judgment finally obtained, which included costs and attorney's fees. Robinson v. Shue, 145 N.C. App. 60, 550 S.E.2d 830, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 572 (2001).

Award Reversed. — The trial court erred in awarding $5,000 in attorney's fees to counsel for plaintiff after the jury returned a verdict for plaintiff in the amount of $62; the court failed to consider the guidelines established by Washington v. Horton, 132 N.C. App. 347, 513 S.E.2d 331 (1999). Williams v. Manus, 142 N.C. App. 384, 542 S.E.2d 680, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 98 (2001).

Interest Not Allowed on Attorney Fee Awards. — There is no provision for interest on court costs, and since attorney fees are taxed as part of court costs under this section, the trial court erred in awarding prejudgment and postjudgment interest on an award of attorney fees. Washington v. Horton, 132 N.C. App. 347, 513 S.E.2d 331 (1999).

IV. SETTLEMENT.

Effect of Settlement or Offer. — To hold that use of the adjective "presiding" shows that the legislature intended that no fee be allowed in any case settled without actual trial is to give this word an unreasonably strict construction and would defeat its purpose. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

This section refers specifically to the "institution" of a suit, not its trial, and allows an attorneys' fee to be awarded without regard to how that judgment is obtained. To permit an offer of judgment, or indeed any settlement prior to a completed trial, to avoid the payment of a reasonable attorneys' fee in the discretion of the court would defeat in large measure the purpose of the statute. Hicks v. Albertson, 18 N.C. App. 599, 197 S.E.2d 624, aff'd, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

In referring to the "presiding" judge in this section as the official to assess attorneys' fees, the General Assembly did not contemplate that attorneys' fees would be properly allowed only if the case could not be settled prior to trial. Yates Motor Co. v. Simmons, 51 N.C. App. 339, 276 S.E.2d 496, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 320, 281 S.E.2d 660 (1981).

Attorneys' Fees Where Settlement Offer Made. — Attorneys' fees which were incurred prior to the time the offer of judgment was made are recoverable. The G.S. 1A-1, Rule 68 sanctions only provide protection against the costs incurred after the offer has been made. Purdy v. Brown, 307 N.C. 93, 296 S.E.2d 459 (1982).

Attorneys' fees may be awarded pursuant to this statute even when damages are recovered by settlement prior to trial. Epps v. Ewers, 90 N.C. App. 597, 369 S.E.2d 104 (1988); Benton v. Thomerson, 113 N.C. App. 293, 438 S.E.2d 434 (1994), rev'd on other grounds, 339 N.C. 598, 453 S.E.2d 161 (1995).

Attorneys' fees and costs were properly awarded to the plaintiff, notwithstanding that the defendant twice offered to settle the action for $5,000, where the jury awarded the plaintiff $5,000, plus $555 in costs, and attorneys' fees were also taxed as costs. Tew v. West, 143 N.C. App. 534, 546 S.E.2d 183, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 314 (2001).

Attorney's fees award was proper even though the tortfeasor made an offer of judgment which exceeded the jury's verdict because the jury's verdict was properly modified by adding the injured party's attorney's fees and costs in arriving at the "judgment finally obtained," which exceeded the tortfeasor's judgment offer. Thorpe v. Perry-Riddick, 144 N.C. App. 567, 551 S.E.2d 852, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 525 (2001).

Attorney fees upheld where a settlement offer was made but refused in personal injury case brought by an injured driver. Davis v. Kelly, 147 N.C. App. 102, 554 S.E.2d 402, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 1072 (2001).

Award of attorneys' fees and costs of $5,937 under G.S. 6-21.1 was upheld in favor of a personal injury plaintiff who was awarded $800 by a jury, although defendant made two offers of judgment for $5,000. McDaniel v. McBrayer, 164 N.C. App. 379, 595 S.E.2d 784, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 817 (2004).

Amount of Settlement Irrelevant to Determination to Award Attorneys' Fees. — The amount of the final settlements in a civil suit was irrelevant in determining whether to award attorneys' fees. Epps v. Ewers, 90 N.C. App. 597, 369 S.E.2d 104 (1988).

Offer of Judgment Exceeding $5,000. — An offer of judgment for more than $5,000, together with costs then accrued, but excluding attorneys' fees, is valid. This section would not apply in this case and "costs then accrued" would therefore not include attorneys' fees incurred after the offer of judgment was made. The mere fact that judgment for less than $5,000 is later obtained should have no bearing on costs accrued at the time the offer was made. The trial judge would have had no discretion to award an attorneys' fee, even if the defendant had not inserted language excluding them in his offer of judgment. Purdy v. Brown, 307 N.C. 93, 296 S.E.2d 459 (1982).

Refusal of Reasonable Settlement Offer May Affect Award of Attorney's Fees. — Where a substantial settlement offer was made well before trial, and that offer was increased through negotiations to an amount more than four times that recovered by plaintiff at trial, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying plaintiff's request for attorney's fees under this section. Blackmon v. Bumgardner, 135 N.C. App. 125, 519 S.E.2d 335 (1999).

The fact that third party plaintiff ultimately agreed to accept a judgment for less than the amount offered her by third party defendants' insurance carrier before plaintiff's suit and her cross-claim were filed did not ipso facto deny her the benefit of this section, and the trial judge did not abuse his discretion in awarding a reasonable attorneys' fee to third party plaintiff in her action against third party defendant. Yates Motor Co. v. Simmons, 51 N.C. App. 339, 276 S.E.2d 496, cert. denied, 303 N.C. 320, 281 S.E.2d 660 (1981).

Attorneys' Fees Allowed. — Where there is a clear indication in the record that an application for attorneys' fees as a part of the costs was to be considered by the court, and the settlement was effected with knowledge of this proposed application, allowance should be made for fees. Hicks v. Albertson, 18 N.C. App. 599, 197 S.E.2d 624, aff'd, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

Fee Is Allowed as Part of Costs. — This section does not provide for the recovery of a reasonable attorneys' fee in addition to the court costs but "as a part of the court costs." Where the acceptance by the plaintiff of an offer of judgment for a specified sum plus "costs" proceeded from a reasonable interpretation by the plaintiff that "costs" included attorneys' fees, then if such interpretation was not intended by the defendant, the misunderstanding was due to ambiguous language used by the defendant in making his offer and the defendant must bear any loss resulting therefrom. Hicks v. Albertson, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

If a party wishes to avoid payment of attorneys' fees in cases in which this section may be applicable, he should make his offer of settlement before the suit is instituted. Hicks v. Albertson, 18 N.C. App. 599, 197 S.E.2d 624, aff'd, 284 N.C. 236, 200 S.E.2d 40 (1973).

There was no unwarranted refusal to settle where insurance company settled within four months of the accident and for a reasonable amount, as evidenced by the similarity between the jury verdict and the settlement amount. Benton v. Thomerson, 113 N.C. App. 293, 438 S.E.2d 434 (1994), rev'd on other grounds, 339 N.C. 598, 453 S.E.2d 161 (1995).

Section is applicable to actions against hospital service corporation organized under G.S. 57-1 (now G.S. 58-65-1). See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Bobby H. Griffin, Union County Attorney, 43 N.C.A.G. 357 (1974).

§ 6-21.2. Attorneys' fees in notes, etc., in addition to interest.

Obligations to pay attorneys' fees upon any note, conditional sale contract or other evidence of indebtedness, in addition to the legal rate of interest or finance charges specified therein, shall be valid and enforceable, and collectible as part of such debt, if such note, contract or other evidence of indebtedness be collected by or through an attorney at law after maturity, subject to the following provisions:

(1) If such note, conditional sale contract or other evidence of indebtedness provides for attorneys' fees in some specific percentage of the "outstanding balance" as herein defined, such provision and obligation shall be valid and enforceable up to but not in excess of fifteen percent (15%) of said "outstanding balance" owing on said note, contract or other evidence of indebtedness.

(2) If such note, conditional sale contract or other evidence of indebtedness provides for the payment of reasonable attorneys' fees by the debtor, without specifying any specific percentage, such provision shall be construed to mean fifteen percent (15%) of the "outstanding balance" owing on said note, contract or other evidence of indebtedness.

(3) As to notes and other writing(s) evidencing an indebtedness arising out of a loan of money to the debtor, the "outstanding balance" shall mean the principal and interest owing at the time suit is instituted to enforce any security agreement securing payment of the debt and/or to collect said debt.

(4) As to conditional sale contracts and other such security agreements which evidence both a monetary obligation and a security interest in or a lease of specific goods, the "outstanding balance" shall mean the "time price balance" owing as of the time suit is instituted by the secured party to enforce the said security agreement and/or to collect said debt.

(5) The holder of an unsecured note or other writing(s) evidencing an unsecured debt, and/or the holder of a note and chattel mortgage or other security agreement and/or the holder of a conditional sale contract or any other such security agreement which evidences both a monetary obligation and a security interest in or a lease of specific goods, or his attorney at law, shall, after maturity of the obligation by default or otherwise, notify the maker, debtor, account debtor, endorser or party sought to be held on said obligation that the provisions relative to payment of attorneys' fees in addition to the "outstanding balance" shall be enforced and that such maker, debtor, account debtor, endorser or party sought to be held on said obligation has five days from the mailing of such notice to pay the "outstanding balance" without the attorneys' fees. If such party shall pay the "outstanding balance" in full before the expiration of such time, then the obligation to pay the attorneys' fees shall be void, and no court shall enforce such provisions.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, however, if debtor has defaulted or violated the terms of the security agreement and has refused, on demand, to surrender possession of the collateral to the secured party as authorized by G.S. 25-9-609, with the result that said secured party is required to institute an ancillary claim and delivery proceeding to secure possession of said collateral; no such written notice shall be required before enforcement of the provisions relative to payment of attorneys' fees in addition to the outstanding balance. (1967, c. 562, s. 4; 2000-169, s. 27.)

Purpose. — Some of the purposes underlying the enactment of this section are to simplify, clarify, and modernize the law governing commercial transactions among the various jurisdictions, and to permit the continued expansion of commercial practices through custom, usage, and agreement of the parties. Stillwell Enters., Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 S.E.2d 812 (1980).

The purpose of this section is to allow the debtor a last chance to pay the outstanding balance without attorneys' fees. Coastal Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Goodson Farms, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 221, 319 S.E.2d 650, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

Written Agreement Required. — This section does not apply in the absence of a written agreement. Jacobs v. Central Transp., Inc., 891 F. Supp. 1120 (E.D.N.C. 1995).

This Section Compared to former G.S.

1-567.11. — This section generally relates to and concerns the subject of attorneys' fees for legal work performed in the collection of indebtedness under various contractual arrangements and, unlike former G.S. 1-567.11, does not specifically address or relate to the subject of arbitration or attorneys' fees through arbitration. Nucor Corp. v. General Bearing Corp., 333 N.C. 148, 423 S.E.2d 747 (1992), reh'g denied, 333 N.C. 349, 426 S.E.2d 708 (1993).

Reasonableness is the key factor under all attorney's fees statutes. Institution Food House, Inc. v. Circus Hall of Cream, Inc., 107 N.C. App. 552, 421 S.E.2d 370 (1992).

Supplements Principles Applicable to Commercial Transactions. — Although this section was not itself codified as a constituent section of Chapter 25 (the Uniform Commercial Code), its legislative history clearly demonstrates that it was intended to supplement those principles of law generally applicable to commercial transactions. Stillwell Enters., Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 S.E.2d 812 (1980).

Liberal Construction. — This section, being remedial, should be construed liberally to accomplish the purpose of the legislature and to bring within it all cases fairly falling within its intended scope. Stillwell Enters., Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 S.E.2d 812 (1980).

Section Not Applicable for Recovery upon Default of Purchase Money Deed of Trust. — This section deals in general and comprehensive terms with the propriety of attorneys' fees arising from the collection of indebtedness and, therefore, was not controlling in a case in which a seller of real property had accepted a purchase money deed of trust from his buyer and then sought recovery upon default; G.S. 45-21.38 deals with just such a particular situation. Merritt v. Ridge, 323 N.C. 330, 372 S.E.2d 559 (1988).

This section does not apply to arbitration proceedings; thus, in arbitration proceedings, both the arbitrator or arbitration panel and the superior courts upon confirmation are limited to applying only former G.S. 1-567.11 in determining whether attorneys' fees should be or were properly awarded. Nucor Corp. v. General Bearing Corp., 333 N.C. 148, 423 S.E.2d 747 (1992), reh'g denied, 333 N.C. 349, 426 S.E.2d 708 (1993).

Attorneys' Fees of Purchase Money Creditor Not Secured Obligation. — Where a promissory note states on its face that it is "given as purchase money, and is secured by a purchase money deed of trust," and the note is incorporated by reference into the deed of trust, attorneys' fees are not part of the purchase price. Hence, even if the trustee were to foreclose on the purchase money deed of trust, the purchase money creditor's attorneys' fees would not be a secured obligation. Colson & Colson Constr. Co. v. Maultsby, 103 N.C. App. 424, 405 S.E.2d 779 (1991).

Attorneys' fees provided for in an agreement to settle litigation already underway were not "obligations to pay attorneys' fees upon any note ... or other evidence of indebtedness" under this section. Without undermining the intent or force of this section, parties may, in settling disputes, agree to the payment of attorneys' fees; such a case is not controlled by this section. Carter v. Foster, 103 N.C. App. 110, 404 S.E.2d 484 (1991).

Choice of Law. — The issue of a party's entitlement to attorneys' fees is a question of substantive law. Tolaram Fibers, Inc. v. Tandy Corp., 92 N.C. App. 713, 375 S.E.2d 673, cert. denied, 324 N.C. 436, 379 S.E.2d 249 (1989).

Attorneys' fees are not now regarded as part of court costs in this jurisdiction, except as otherwise provided by statute. Perkins v. American Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 4 N.C. App. 466, 167 S.E.2d 93 (1969).

This section represents a far reaching exception to the well-established rule against attorneys' fees obligations. State Whsle. Supply, Inc. v. Allen, 30 N.C. App. 272, 227 S.E.2d 120 (1976).

This section represents a far-reaching exception to the well-established rule against attorneys' fees obligations, and approves specifically an obligation to pay reasonable attorneys' fees found in any note or other evidence of indebtedness. Reavis v. Ecological Dev., Inc., 53 N.C. App. 496, 281 S.E.2d 78 (1981).

But this section only validates attorneys' fees obligations in certain carefully defined instances and imposes a ceiling on the amount of attorneys' fees a party can obtain. State Whsle. Supply, Inc. v. Allen, 30 N.C. App. 272, 227 S.E.2d 120 (1976).

Attorneys' Fees Provisions Enforceable When Specifically Authorized. — Although provisions calling for a debtor to pay attorneys' fees incurred by a creditor in the collection of a debt have long been considered against public policy, such provisions are enforceable when specifically authorized by statute. Reavis v. Ecological Dev., Inc., 53 N.C. App. 496, 281 S.E.2d 78 (1981).

Counsel fees are not a subject of arbitration, even where the contract provides that the owner will pay reasonable attorneys' fees incurred by the contractor for the collection of any defaulted payment due to the contractor by the owner as a result of the contract. In North Carolina, such attorneys' fees are collectible only under this section. G.L. Wilson Bldg. Co. v. Thorneburg Hosiery Co., 85 N.C. App. 684, 355 S.E.2d 815 (1987), cert. denied, 320 N.C. 798, 361 S.E.2d 75 (1987), aff'd, 94 N.C. App. 769, 381 S.E.2d 718 (1989).

Recovery of Attorneys' Fees Pursuant to

Promissory Note Not a Deficiency. — Where a provision for attorneys' fees in a promissory note given by defendant to plaintiffs and incorporated in deeds of trust is properly authorized by this section, recovery of the fees does not represent a deficiency in violation of G.S. 45-21.38. Reavis v. Ecological Dev., Inc., 53 N.C. App. 496, 281 S.E.2d 78 (1981).

Award in Proceeding Under G.S. 105-374 Unaffected. — The amount of an attorneys' fee awarded in a tax foreclosure proceeding under G.S. 105-374 is to be determined pursuant to subsection (i) of that section in the discretion of the trial court and is not limited by the provisions of this section. Town of Sylva v. Gibson, 51 N.C. App. 545, 277 S.E.2d 115, appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 303 N.C. 319, 281 S.E.2d 659 (1981).

Fees in Amount Less than 15 Percent of Damages Award Proper. — Trial court did not err in granting attorney fees in an amount less than 15 percent of the damages award under a stock sales contract; attorney testimony, affidavits, and billing statements supported the attorney fees award. Bombardier Capital, Inc. v. Lake Hickory Watercraft, Inc., 178 N.C. App. 535, 632 S.E.2d 192, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 1570 (2006).

Meaning of "Evidence of Indebtedness". — The term "evidence of indebtedness," as used in this section, has reference to any printed or written instrument, signed or otherwise executed by the obligor(s), which evidences on its face a legally enforceable obligation to pay money. Stillwell Enters., Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 N.E.2d 812; Four Seasons Homeowners Ass'n v. Sellers, 72 N.C. App. 189, 323 S.E.2d 735 (1984); G.L. Wilson Bldg. Co. v. Thorneburg Hosiery Co., 85 N.C. App. 684, 355 S.E.2d 815, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 798, 361 S.E.2d 75 (1987), aff'd, 94 N.C. App. 769, 381 S.E.2d 718 (1989).

Evidence of indebtedness within the meaning of this section signifies a written agreement or acknowledgment of debt, such as a promissory note or conditional sales contract, which is executed and signed by the party obligated under the terms of the instrument. State Whsle. Supply, Inc. v. Allen, 30 N.C. App. 272, 227 S.E.2d 120 (1976).

Landlord was properly awarded attorney fees as a lease was evidence of indebtedness under G.S. 6-21.2 since "evidence of indebtedness" as used in G.S. 6-21.2 referred to any printed or written instrument, signed or otherwise executed by the obligors, which evidenced on its face a legally enforceable obligation to pay money, and the appellate court had applied G.S. 6-21.2 to disputes regarding the lease of real property. WRI/Raleigh, L.P. v. Shaikh, — N.C. App. —, 644 S.E.2d 245, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1039 (2007).

Same — Paragraph of a construction contract providing for a 10 percent attorneys' fee in the event of litigation was held not to be "other evidence of indebtedness" within the meaning of this section. Yeargin Constr. Co. v. Futren Dev. Corp., 29 N.C. App. 731, 225 S.E.2d 623, cert. denied, 290 N.C. 660, 228 S.E.2d 459 (1976). But see Stillwell Enters., Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 S.E.2d 812 (1980).

Same — "Note" and "conditional sales contract" are the primary types of "evidence of indebtedness" contemplated by this section. State Whsle. Supply, Inc. v. Allen, 30 N.C. App. 272, 227 S.E.2d 120 (1976).

Same — Sales receipt and three-day invoice containing provision for attorneys' fees is not an "evidence of indebtedness" within the meaning of this section. State Whsle. Supply, Inc. v. Allen, 30 N.C. App. 272, 227 S.E.2d 120 (1976). But see Stillwell Enters., Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 S.E.2d 812 (1980).

Same — Formal credit agreement executed by the parties prior to the establishment of the open account would suffice as an evidence of indebtedness; and if such an agreement contains a provision for attorneys' fees, it will be valid and enforceable pursuant to this section. State Whsle. Supply, Inc. v. Allen, 30 N.C. App. 272, 227 S.E.2d 120 (1976); W.S. Clark & Sons v. Ruiz, 87 N.C. App. 420, 360 S.E.2d 814 (1987).

Same — Lease Contract. — A contract for the lease of personalty constitutes an "evidence of indebtedness" within the meaning of this section, since the contract acknowledges a legally enforceable obligation by the lessee to remit rental payments to the lessor as they become due in exchange for the use of the property which is the subject of the lease. Therefore, a provision of the lease allowing the lessor reasonable attorneys' fees should the lease obligation be collected by an attorney after maturity is enforceable under this section. Stillwell Enters., Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 S.E.2d 812 (1980).

A lease does not constitute evidence of indebtedness within the meaning of this section, and attorneys' fees may not be allowed, even though they were expressly provided for in the contract. Equitable Leasing Co. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240 (1980). But see Stillwell Enters., Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 S.E.2d 812 (1980).

Same — Stock Purchase Agreement. — A stock purchase agreement was an "evidence of indebtedness" within the contemplation of this section. Nucor Corp. v. General Bearing Corp., 103 N.C. App. 518, 405 S.E.2d 776 (1991), rev'd on other grounds, 333 N.C. 148, 423 S.E.2d 747 (1992), reh'g denied, 333 N.C. 349, 426 S.E.2d 708 (1993).

Meaning of "Security Agreement". — As used in the Commercial Code, the general term "security agreement" is ordinarily understood to embrace chattel mortgages, conditional sales contracts, assignments of accounts receivable, trust receipts, etc. The term has a similar connotation in subdivision (5) of this section. EAC Credit Corp. v. Wilson, 281 N.C. 140, 187 S.E.2d 752 (1972).

A guaranty contract is not a "security agreement" within the language of subdivision (5) of this section. EAC Credit Corp. v. Wilson, 281 N.C. 140, 187 S.E.2d 752 (1972).

Guaranty of Payment Alone Does Not Render Guarantors Liable for Attorneys' Fees. — This section does not authorize collection of attorneys' fees if the guaranty contract sued upon does not so provide. Guaranty of payment alone does not render the guarantors liable for attorneys' fees which the principal debtor, by the terms of the note, is bound to pay. EAC Credit Corp. v. Wilson, 281 N.C. 140, 187 S.E.2d 752 (1972).

Nor Does Provision in Promissory Note Requiring Debtor to Pay Attorneys' Fees. — Where a promissory note contained a provision requiring the debtor to pay reasonable attorneys' fees of the creditor in collection of the note, but a guaranty of payment of the note contained no such provision, the guarantors were not liable under this section for attorneys' fees incurred by the creditor in an action on the guaranty contract. EAC Credit Corp. v. Wilson, 281 N.C. 140, 187 S.E.2d 752 (1972).

This section contemplates liability on the part of endorsers of a note since it provides for the giving of notice to endorsers by the holder or his attorney that the provision for attorneys' fees, in addition to the outstanding balance, shall be enforced. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Peace Broadcasting Corp., 32 N.C. App. 655, 233 S.E.2d 687, cert. denied, 292 N.C. 734, 235 S.E.2d 788 (1977).

Specific Percentage Not Specified in Unsecured Promissory Note. — Where an unsecured promissory note provided for the payment of reasonable attorneys' fees upon default by the debtor, without specifying any specific percentage, the trial court properly allowed the plaintiff to recover as reasonable attorneys' fees 15% of the balance due on the note, as provided by this section. Binning's, Inc. v. Roberts Constr. Co., 9 N.C. App. 569, 177 S.E.2d 1 (1970).

Notice Need Not Be Given Prior to Institution of Action. — The only requirement in this section as to when notice is to be given is that it be given "after maturity of the obligation by default or otherwise." This does not mean that the notice must be given prior to the institution of an action. Binning's, Inc. v. Roberts Constr. Co., 9 N.C. App. 569, 177 S.E.2d 1 (1970).

Construction of Subdivision (2). — The General Assembly apparently intended subdivision (2) of this section as a fall-back only in case the agreement contained nothing regarding the parties' intent as to what constituted a reasonable percentage. It apparently did not intend it as a means of legislating a total end to hearings on attorneys' fees. Coastal Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Goodson Farms, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 221, 319 S.E.2d 650, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

Limits on Attorney's Fees. — The trial court exceeded its statutory authority in awarding plaintiff an attorneys' fee which exceeded 32% of the recovery allowed and was clearly excessive and not permissible under this statute. Southland Amusements & Vending, Inc. v. Rourk, 143 N.C. App. 88, 545 S.E.2d 254, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 231 (2001).

Award of Percentage Specified in Subdivision (2). — Subdivision (2) of section expressly provides that when a contract authorizing attorneys' fees does not specify the fee percentage, that it shall be construed to mean 15% of the "outstanding balance" owed on the obligation involved. A court which, in setting the fee, merely followed the statutory mandate would not be reversed. Nucor Corp. v. General Bearing Corp., 103 N.C. App. 518, 405 S.E.2d 776 (1991), rev'd on other grounds, 333 N.C. 148, 423 S.E.2d 747 (1992), reh'g denied, 333 N.C. 349, 426 S.E.2d 708 (1993).

If a lease refers to "reasonable attorney's fees" and does not stipulate a specific percentage, subdivision (2) applies and the amount of attorneys' fees is 15% of the outstanding balance. Devereux Properties, Inc. v. BBM & W, Inc., 114 N.C. App. 621, 442 S.E.2d 555, cert. denied, 337 N.C. 690, 448 S.E.2d 519 (1994).

When reasonable attorneys' fees are authorized in property owners' association's bylaws without specifying a certain percentage, the provision shall be construed to mean 15% of the balance outstanding on the assessments. McGinnis Point Owners Ass'n v. Joyner, 135 N.C. App. 752, 522 S.E.2d 317, 1999 N.C. App. LEXIS 1242 (1999).

Subdivision (5) Is Mandatory. — The statutory use of "shall" renders the provision in subdivision (5) of this section requiring notice mandatory. Although the form of notice required is not specified by the statute, it is clear that the notice must be written and that such notice must advise the debtor of his right under subdivision (5) to pay the outstanding balance on the note without incurring attorneys' fees. Blanton v. Sisk, 70 N.C. App. 70, 318 S.E.2d 560 (1984).

Construction of Subdivision (5). — The notice provision of subdivision (5) of this section simply provides that the obligor will have five days' notice to pay any outstanding balance on the debt before the claimant goes to the expense of employing counsel to collect the balance due. G.L. Wilson Bldg. Co. v. Thorneburg Hosiery Co., 85 N.C. App. 684, 355 S.E.2d 815, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 458, 356 S.E.2d 75 (1987), aff'd, 94 N.C. App. 769, 381 S.E.2d 718 (1989).

Notice Prerequisite to Collection of Attorneys' Fees Under Subdivision (5). — Subdivision (5) of this section allows recovery of attorneys' fees incurred in the collection of a note, provided written notice is sent to the debtor advising him of his right under the statute to pay the outstanding balance on the note without incurring the attorneys' fees; but where the record failed to contain any evidence of such notice to the debtor, attorneys' fees were improperly granted. Northwestern Bank v. Barber, 79 N.C. App. 425, 339 S.E.2d 452, cert. denied, 316 N.C. 733, 345 S.E.2d 391 (1986).

The case law is clear that a party seeking to collect attorneys' fees incurred in the enforcement of a note must notify in writing the opposing party of this intent. Thomas v. Miller, 105 N.C. App. 589, 414 S.E.2d 58, cert. denied, 331 N.C. 557, 417 S.E.2d 807 (1992).

Summary judgment was inappropriate where there were genuine issues of material fact with respect to plaintiff's claim for attorney's fees, specifically, the forecast of evidence produced by both parties did not establish whether plaintiff complied with the statutory notice requirement in G.S. 6-21.2(5). Davis Lake Cmty. Ass'n v. Feldmann, 138 N.C. App. 292, 530 S.E.2d 865, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 598 (2000).

Subdivision (5) of this section sets no time limit on the giving of the notice required. First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Larson, 22 N.C. App. 371, 206 S.E.2d 775, cert. denied, 286 N.C. 214, 209 S.E.2d 315 (1974); Gillespie v. DeWitt, 53 N.C. App. 252, 280 S.E.2d 736, cert. denied, 304 N.C. 390, 285 S.E.2d 832 (1981).

Findings on Notice Requirements. — Where nothing in the record indicated that plaintiffs/property owners' association did or did not provide defendants/property owners written notice in accord with this section, the trial court was unauthorized to award attorneys' fees and case was remanded for findings on the issue of notice. McGinnis Point Owners Ass'n v. Joyner, 135 N.C. App. 752, 522 S.E.2d 317, 1999 N.C. App. LEXIS 1242 (1999).

Reasonableness as Key Factor. — Reasonableness, not arbitrary classification of attorney activity, is the key factor under all the attorneys' fees statutes. Coastal Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Goodson Farms, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 221, 319 S.E.2d 650, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

Where a lease agreement provided for the payment of "reasonable attorney's fees" should the landlord have needed to employ an attorney to collect rent or enforce its other rights and remedies under the lease, but did not refer to any specific percentage, subdivision (2) of this section predetermined that fifteen percent (15%) was a reasonable amount. RC Assocs. v. Regency Ventures, Inc., 111 N.C. App. 367, 432 S.E.2d 394 (1993).

Notice Held Sufficient. — Notice of intent to enforce attorneys' fees provision of note held sufficient. Federal Land Bank v. Lieben, 86 N.C. App. 342, 357 S.E.2d 700 (1987).

Language in a guaranty contract was sufficient to put a guarantor on notice that he would be liable for attorney's fees if he failed to make the guaranteed payment before the creditor found it necessary to employ an attorney to collect the debt. RC Assocs. v. Regency Ventures, Inc., 111 N.C. App. 367, 432 S.E.2d 394 (1993).

Where an agreement only mentioned reasonable attorneys' fees and did not specify an exact amount to be paid, this section governed, and the trial court properly allowed the plaintiff to recover reasonable fees amounting to 15% of the outstanding balance owed on defendants' account. W.S. Clark & Sons v. Ruiz, 87 N.C. App. 420, 360 S.E.2d 814 (1987).

Demand by Obligor for Arbitration. — The notice provisions of subdivision (5) of this section have no application in a situation where the obligor has refused to pay obligee's claim and demanded arbitration pursuant to the terms of the contract. Moreover, when obligee filed its response to obligor's demand for arbitration, and its own claim for the balance due on the contract, it clearly notified obligor that it was demanding attorneys' fees under the terms of the contract. G.L. Wilson Bldg. Co. v. Thorneburg Hosiery Co., 85 N.C. App. 684, 355 S.E.2d 815, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 798, 361 S.E.2d 75 (1987), aff'd, 94 N.C. App. 769, 381 S.E.2d 718 (1989).

Evidence of Indebtedness Held Sufficient. — Credit application signed by partner was sufficient evidence of indebtedness under this section to obligate partnership to pay attorneys' fees. Hedgecock Bldrs. Supply Co. v. White, 92 N.C. App. 535, 375 S.E.2d 164 (1989).

Notice in Bankruptcy Case. — Where the notice issue was first raised on appeal it was not too late for the creditor to give notice that it was seeking attorneys' fees for involvement in bankruptcy case. Three Sisters Partners v. Harden (In re Shangra-La, Inc.), 167 F.3d 843 (4th Cir. 1999).

No Award of Attorneys' Fees Where Plaintiff Failed to Notify. — Where provision in note provided for payment of note holder's costs and expenses in enforcing note if makers failed to pay as required, and these costs and expenses specifically included "reasonable" attorneys' fees, but there was no evidence that plaintiff notified defendants of its intention to collect attorneys' fees pursuant to this section, award of attorneys' fees was in error. Raleigh Fed. Sav. Bank v. Godwin, 99 N.C. App. 761, 394 S.E.2d 294 (1990).

There was sufficient evidence to support award of attorneys' fee of $24,308.00 where the award was supported by the affidavit of plaintiff's attorney, and billing statements showing the actual work performed and the attorneys' hourly rates, and the trial court made findings of fact as to the reasonable amount of time required for the services and the reasonableness of the hourly rates. Barker v. Agee, 93 N.C. App. 537, 378 S.E.2d 566 (1989), rev'd on other grounds, 326 N.C. 470, 389 S.E.2d 803 (1990).

The defendants/homeowners pled a valid state law counter-claim of unfair debt collector's practices, and a violation of this section, against the plaintiff/homeowners' association where the defendants were consumers who incurred a debt which the homeowners' association was trying to collect, where the defendants claimed that the amount collected included an excessive attorneys' fee, and where the plaintiffs' dues collecting activities affected commerce. Davis Lake Cmty. Ass'n v. Feldmann, 138 N.C. App. 292, 530 S.E.2d 865, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 598 (2000).

Attorney's Fees Provision in Credit Agreement Held Enforceable. — Where, although no supporting affidavit was presented, there was a formal credit agreement which provided for reasonable attorney's fees for the collection of past due debts, and the trial court had before it the pleadings, depositions, and interrogatories, enabling it to make a determination as to the extent of work performed by counsel and the reasonableness of the fees assessed, the attorney's fees provision was legally enforceable. Institution Food House, Inc. v. Circus Hall of Cream, Inc., 107 N.C. App. 552, 421 S.E.2d 370 (1992).

Recovery of Percentage of Outstanding Balance. — Where contract provided that owner would pay reasonable attorneys' fees incurred by the contractor for the collection of any defaulted payment, under the provisions of this section, contractor could recover as attorneys' fees 15% of the "outstanding balance" due on the contract. G.L. Wilson Bldg. Co. v. Thorneburg Hosiery Co., 85 N.C. App. 684, 355 S.E.2d 815, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 798, 361 S.E.2d 75 (1987).

Fees in Related Actions. — Since attorneys may engage in an infinite variety of activities to bring a case to successful settlement or verdict, when other actions are reasonably related to the collection of the underlying note sued upon, attorneys' fees incurred therein may properly be awarded under this section. Coastal Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Goodson Farms, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 221, 319 S.E.2d 650, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

When the trial court awarded a lessee attorney fees for the breach of a commercial lease, it was not required to award attorney fees for an underlying summary ejectment action; a reasonable relationship between actions did not require an award of fees. N.C. Indus. Capital, LLC v. Clayton, — N.C. App. —, 649 S.E.2d 14, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1825 (2007).

Fee Where Percentage Not Specified. — Where a credit agreement between the creditor and the grocery store and an indemnity agreement between the creditor and the debtor did not specify the percentage of the outstanding balance that would be allowable as reasonable attorney fees for the enforcement of the agreements, reasonable attorney fees would be construed to mean 15 percent of the outstanding balance under the agreement. MEMO Money Order Co. v. Davis (In re Davis), 371 B.R. 127, 2007 Bankr. LEXIS 1786 (Bankr. E.D.N.C. 2007).

No Error in Fee Calculation. — In a suit for the breach of a commercial lease, the trial court did not err in calculating the amount of attorney fees owed to the lessor; because the lessee presented testimonial and documentary evidence that raised doubts about the extent of the lessor's damages under the contract, the "outstanding balance" due under the lease was a question for the jury. N.C. Indus. Capital, LLC v. Clayton, — N.C. App. —, 649 S.E.2d 14, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1825 (2007).

Third Party Must Be Transactionally Related. — This section does not authorize attorneys' fees against a third party who is not transactionally related to the document containing the fees provision. Mountain Farm Credit Serv. v. Purina Mills, Inc., 119 N.C. App. 508, 459 S.E.2d 75 (1995).

Merit Bonus. — It is true that the quality of services rendered is properly considered in awarding fees, as well as the nature of the services required, and hence the scope and complexity of the case. However, there is no North Carolina authority for an award of a "merit bonus." Even assuming such bonuses are allowed, as under federal practice, that should occur only in the "rare case" where the applicant specifically shows superior quality representation and exceptional success. Coastal Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Goodson Farms, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 221, 319 S.E.2d 650, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

Attorney Fees Permitted. — Fees incurred by bank's attorneys in prior foreclosure proceeding or in any action "connected" with the collection of debt owed by plaintiff were permissible under this section. Trull v. Central Carolina Bank & Trust, 124 N.C. App. 486, 478 S.E.2d 39 (1996), aff'd in part and discretionary review improvidently allowed in part, 347 N.C. 262, 490 S.E.2d 238 (1997).

In an action regarding the purchase and sale of a business, when the sellers counterclaimed on the promissory note executed by the buyer, the sellers were entitled to attorney's fees under the provisions of that note, and G.S. 6-21.2(1), as the amount of the note was clear, the buyer defaulted, and the mandatory notice requirement of G.S. 6-21.2(5) was satisfied. Kindred of N.C., Inc. v. Bond, 160 N.C. App. 90, 584 S.E.2d 846, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1765 (2003).

Guaranty agreement was written, signed by the trustee, and, in the event of the principal obligor's default, was a legally enforceable obligation to pay money; therefore, the agreement constituted evidence of indebtedness under G.S. 6-21.2, and the award of attorneys fees was appropriate. FNB Southeast v. Lane, 160 N.C. App. 535, 586 S.E.2d 530, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1821 (2003), cert. denied, 358 N.C. 153, 592 S.E.2d 558 (2004).

Qualification As Prevailing Party Not Required. — This section does not require that a party seeking attorneys' fees under this section qualify as a "prevailing party" in litigation. Trull v. Central Carolina Bank & Trust, 124 N.C. App. 486, 478 S.E.2d 39 (1996), aff'd in part and discretionary review improvidently allowed in part, 347 N.C. 262, 490 S.E.2d 238 (1997).

Not Applicable to Condominium Act. — Had the General Assembly wished that the recovery of attorney's fees under the Condominium Act be governed by this section, they could have included language to that effect. Brookwood Unit Ownership Ass'n v. Delon, 124 N.C. App. 446, 477 S.E.2d 225 (1996).

This section could not form the statutory basis to award plaintiffs attorneys' fees, where the defendants, the parties owed the debt, were not seeking to recover attorneys' fees and where the debt had not matured. Lee Cycle Ctr., Inc. v. Wilson Cycle Ctr., Inc., 143 N.C. App. 1, 545 S.E.2d 745, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 228 (2001).

Citing Provision Did Not Waive Parties' Choice of Law Election. — National bank did not elect to apply North Carolina law by citing G.S. 6-21.2 in its complaint, as the parties clearly intended federal law and South Dakota law to govern, the bank charged the customer interest and fees in accordance with federal and South Dakota law, and the presumption of lex loci contractus was not rebutted; further, the bank did not waive its right to apply federal or South Dakota law. Citibank, S.D., N.A. v. Palma, — N.C. App. —, 646 S.E.2d 635, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1425 (2007).

§ 6-21.3. Remedies for returned check.

(a) Notwithstanding any criminal sanctions that may apply, a person, firm, or corporation who knowingly draws, makes, utters, or issues and delivers to another any check or draft drawn on any bank or depository that refuses to honor the same because the maker or drawer does not have sufficient funds on deposit in or credit with the bank or depository with which to pay the check or draft upon presentation, and who fails to pay the same amount, any service charges imposed on the payee by a bank or depository for processing the dishonored check, and any processing fees imposed by the payee pursuant to G.S. 25-3-506 in cash to the payee within 30 days following written demand therefor, shall be liable to the payee (i) for the amount owing on the check, the service charges, and processing fees and (ii) for additional damages of three times the amount owing on the check, not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00) or to be less than one hundred dollars ($100.00). If the amount claimed in the first demand letter is not paid, the claim for the amount of the check, the service charges and processing fees, and the treble damages provided for in this subsection may be made by a subsequent letter of demand prior to filing an action. In an action under this section the court or jury may, however, waive all or part of the additional damages upon a finding that the defendant's failure to satisfy the dishonored check or draft was due to economic hardship.

The initial written demand for the amount of the check, the service charges, and processing fees shall be mailed by certified mail to the defendant at the defendant's last known address and shall be in the form set out in subsection (a1) of this section. The subsequent demand letter demanding the amount of the check, the service charges, the processing fees, and treble damages shall be mailed by certified mail to the defendant at the defendant's last known address and shall be in the form set out in subsection (a2) of this section. If the payee chooses to send the demand letter set out in subsection (a2) of this section, then the payee may not file an action to collect the amount of the check, the service charges, the processing fees, or treble damages until 30 days following the written demand set out in subsection (a2) of this section.

(a1) The first notification letter shall be substantially in the following form:

This letter is written pursuant to G.S. 6-21.3 to inform you that on ______________________, you made and delivered to the business listed above a check payable to this business containing your name and address in the sum of $__________, drawn upon ____________________ (bank or institution), account #__________. [If the check was received in a face-to-face transaction insert this sentence: This check contained a drivers license identification number from a card with your photograph and mailing address, which was used to identify you at the time the check was accepted.] [If the check was delivered by mail insert this sentence: We have compared your name, address, and signature on the check with the name, address, and signature on file in the account previously established by you or on your behalf, and the signature on the check appears to be genuine.] Also, we have received no information that this was a stolen check, if that is the circumstance.

The check has been dishonored by the bank for the following reasons:

As acceptor of the check, we give you notice to rectify any bank error or other error in connection with the transaction, and to pay the face value of the check, plus the fees as authorized under G.S. 25-3-506 and G.S. 6-21.3(a) as follows:

Face value of the check #	$ ______________
Processing fee authorized under G.S. 25-3-506	$ ______________
Bank service fees authorized under G.S. 6-21.3	$ ______________
Total amount due:	$ ______________

If the total amount due listed above is not paid within 30 days of the mailing of this letter, thereafter we may file a civil action to seek civil damages of three times the amount of the check (with a minimum damage of one hundred dollars ($100.00) and a maximum damage of five hundred dollars ($500.00)) for allegedly giving a worthless check in violation of law (G.S. 6-21.3), in addition to the amount of the check and the fees specified above.

Appropriate relief will then be sought before a court of proper jurisdiction for full payment of the check plus all costs, treble damages, and witness fees.

If you do not believe you are liable for these amounts, you will have a right to present your defense in court. To pay the check or obtain information, contact the undersigned at the above business location. Cash or a bank official check will be the only acceptable means of redeeming the dishonored check.

If you do not believe that you owe the amount claimed in this letter or if you believe you have received this letter in error, please notify the undersigned at the above business location as soon as possible.

(a2) If the total amount due in subsection (a1) has not been paid within 30 days after the mailing of the notification letter, a subsequent demand letter may be sent and shall be substantially in the following form:

On ____________________, we informed you that we received a check payable to this business containing your name and address in the sum of $__________, drawn upon ____________________ (bank or institution), account #______________________________. This check contained identification information which was used to identify you as the maker of the check. Also, we have received no information that this was a stolen check, if that is the circumstance.

The check has been dishonored by the bank for the following reasons:

We notified you that you were responsible for the face value of the check ($__________) plus the fees authorized under G.S. 25-3-506 ($__________) and G.S. 6-21.3(a) ($__________) for a total amount due of $__________. Thirty days have passed since the mailing of that notification letter, and you have not made payment to us for that total amount due.

Under G.S. 6-21.3, we claim you are now liable for the face value of the check, the fees, and treble damages. The damages we claim are three times the amount of the check or one hundred dollars ($100.00), whichever is greater, but cannot exceed five hundred dollars ($500.00). The total amount we claim now due is:

Processing fee authorized under G.S. 25-3-506 $ ____________________
Bank service fees authorized under G.S. 6-21.3 $ ____________________
Three times the face value of the check, with a minimum of $100.00 and a maximum of $500.00 $ ____________________
Total amount due: $ ____________________

Payment of the total amount claimed above within 30 days of the mailing of this letter shall satisfy this civil remedy for the returned check.

If payment has not been received within this 30-day period, we will seek appropriate relief before a court of proper jurisdiction for full payment of the check plus all costs, treble damages, and witness fees.

If you do not believe you are liable for these amounts, you will have a right to present your defense in court. To pay the check or obtain information, contact the undersigned at the above business location. Cash or a bank official check will be the only acceptable means of redeeming the dishonored check.

If you do not believe that you owe the amount claimed in this letter or if you believe you have received this letter in error, please notify the undersigned at the above business location as soon as possible.

(b) In an action under subsection (a) of this section, the presiding judge or magistrate may award the prevailing party, as part of the court costs payable, a reasonable attorney's fee to the duly licensed attorney representing the prevailing party in such suit.

(c) It shall be an affirmative defense, in addition to other defenses, to an action under this section if it is found that: (i) full satisfaction of the amount of the check or draft was made prior to the commencement of the action, or (ii) that the bank or depository erred in dishonoring the check or draft, or (iii) that the acceptor of the check knew at the time of acceptance that there were insufficient funds on deposit in the bank or depository with which to cause the check to be honored.

(d) The remedy provided for herein shall apply only if the check was drawn, made, uttered or issued with knowledge there were insufficient funds in the account or that no credit existed with the bank or depository with which to pay the check or draft upon presentation. (1975, c. 129, s. 1; 1981, c. 781, s. 2; 1985, c. 643; 1993, c. 374, s. 1; 1995, c. 356, s. 1; 1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 742, s. 5.)

§ 6-21.4. Allowance of counsel fees and costs in certain cases involving principals or teachers.

In any civil action brought against a public school principal or teacher as defined in G.S. 115C-390 arising or resulting from the use of corporal punishment, upon a determination that the principal or teacher has prevailed and that the plaintiff's action was frivolous or without substantial merit, the presiding judge may, in his discretion, allow a reasonable attorney fee to the duly licensed attorney representing the principal or teacher. The attorney's fee shall be taxed as part of the court costs. (1981, c. 381, s. 1; c. 682, s. 22.)

CASE NOTES

Reasonableness as Key Factor. — Reasonableness, not arbitrary classification of attorney activity, is the key factor under all the attorneys' fees statutes. Coastal Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Goodson Farms, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 221, 319 S.E.2d 650, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

Merit Bonus. — It is true that the quality of services rendered is properly considered in awarding fees, as well as the nature of the services required, and hence the scope and complexity of the case. However, there is no North Carolina authority for an award of a "merit bonus." Even assuming such bonuses are allowed, as under federal practice, that should occur only in the "rare case" where the applicant specifically shows superior quality representation and exceptional success. Coastal Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Goodson Farms, Inc., 70 N.C. App. 221, 319 S.E.2d 650 (1984).

§ 6-21.5. Attorney's fees in nonjusticiable cases.

In any civil action, special proceeding, or estate or trust proceeding, the court, upon motion of the prevailing party, may award a reasonable attorney's fee to the prevailing party if the court finds that there was a complete absence of a justiciable issue of either law or fact raised by the losing party in any pleading. The filing of a general denial or the granting of any preliminary motion, such as a motion for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 12, a motion to dismiss pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6), a motion for a directed verdict pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 50, or a motion for summary judgment pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 56, is not in itself a sufficient reason for the court to award attorney's fees, but may be evidence to support the court's decision to make such an award. A party who advances a claim or defense supported by a good faith argument for an extension, modification, or reversal of law may not be required under this section to pay attorney's fees. The court shall make findings of fact and conclusions of law to support its award of attorney's fees under this section. (1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1039, s. 1; 2006-259, s. 13(l).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2006-259, s. 13(s), provides: "This section becomes effective October 1, 2006, and applies to (i) all trusts created before, on, or after that date; (ii) all judicial proceedings concerning trusts commenced on or after that date; and (iii) all judicial proceedings concerning trusts commenced before that date unless the court finds that application of a particular provision of this act would substantially interfere with the effective conduct of the judicial proceedings or prejudice the rights of the parties, in which case the law as it existed on September 30, 2006, shall apply."

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2006-259, s. 13(l), effective October 1, 2006, substituted "civil action, special proceeding, or estate or trust proceeding," for "civil action or special proceeding" in the first sentence. For applicability provisions, see Editor's note.

CASE NOTES

The purpose of this statute is not served by treating those who bring frivolous suits against indigent parties differently from those who bring frivolous suits against parties who can afford to retain their own counsel; therefore, the trial court's limitation of the attorneys' fee award to the court-appointed rate of $35.00 per hour was error. Clark v. Williamson, 91 N.C. App. 668, 373 S.E.2d 317 (1988).

Absence of Justiciable Issue. — To recover attorneys' fees under G.S. 6-21.5, the party claiming attorney fees must be the "prevailing party," and there must be "a complete absence of a justiciable issue of either law or fact raised by the losing party in any pleading." Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

The mere filing of an affirmative defense without more is not sufficient to establish the absence of a justiciable issue, nor is the grant of a G.S. 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6) motion, nor the entry of summary judgment. These events may only be evidence of the absence of a justiciable issue. However, action by the losing party which perpetuated litigation in the face of events substantially establishing that the pleadings no longer presented a justiciable controversy may also serve as evidence for purposes of G.S. 6-21.5. Sunamerica Fin. Corp. v. Bonham, 328 N.C. 254, 400 S.E.2d 435 (1991).

When defendant's answer raising the statute of limitations defense was filed and served, it should have become apparent to plaintiff that, barring circumstances permitting the statute of limitations to be tolled, the complaint no longer contained a justiciable issue. Sunamerica Fin. Corp. v. Bonham, 328 N.C. 254, 400 S.E.2d 435 (1991).

Absence of Justiciable Controversy. — It is possible that a pleading which, when read alone set forth a justiciable controversy, may, when read with a responsive pleading, no longer present a justiciable controversy. Sunamerica Fin. Corp. v. Bonham, 328 N.C. 254, 400 S.E.2d 435 (1991).

Section Not Limited to Initial Pleadings. — The legislative purpose of this section is to discourage frivolous legal action, and that purpose may not be circumvented by limiting the section's application to initial pleadings. Short v. Bryant, 97 N.C. App. 327, 388 S.E.2d 205 (1990).

Strict Construction of This Section. — Because statutes awarding an attorneys' fee to the prevailing party are in derogation of the common law, this section must be strictly construed. Sunamerica Fin. Corp. v. Bonham, 328 N.C. 254, 400 S.E.2d 435 (1991).

Reasonable Attorneys' Fee. — Since this section authorizes the court to award "a reasonable attorney's fee," the trial court was not limited to the amount fixed by the district court in its payment of counsel appointed to indigent parties. Clark v. Williamson, 91 N.C. App. 668, 373 S.E.2d 317 (1988).

The only basis for the award of attorneys' fees under this section is the complete absence of a justiciable issue. Bryant v. Short, 84 N.C. App. 285, 352 S.E.2d 245, cert. denied, 319 N.C. 458, 356 S.E.2d 2 (1987), upholding order awarding attorneys' fees.

Before a court may tax attorneys' fees against a losing party under G.S. 6-21.5 based upon the complete absence of a justiciable legal issue, the prevailing party must provide proof that the losing party should reasonably have been aware of the complaint's legal deficiencies. Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Limiting Damages Pursuant to This Section. — The case was remanded to the trial court for findings as to when plaintiffs should have reasonably determined that their claim against the employer of defendant driver was not justiciable so as to limit an award of attorneys' fees pursuant to this section from that point forward. Fox-Kirk v. Hannon, 142 N.C. App. 267, 542 S.E.2d 346, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 92 (2001), review denied, 353 N.C. 725, 551 S.E.2d 437 (2001), review dismissed, 353 N.C. 725, 551 S.E.2d 437 (2001).

A motion for attorney's fees pursuant to pursuant to G.S. 1A-1-11(a) or this section is not a continuation of adversary proceedings. VSD Communications, Inc. v. Lone Wolf Publishing Group, Inc., 124 N.C. App. 642, 478 S.E.2d 214 (1996).

With regard to determining whether attorneys' fees may be awarded under this section, the first issue is whether the pleading, when read in conjunction with all the responsive pleadings, facially presents a justiciable issue of law. If not, the second issue is whether the losing party should reasonably have been aware that the pleading he filed contained no justiciable issue of law. dePasquale v. O'Rahilly, 102 N.C. App. 240, 401 S.E.2d 827 (1991).

Instead of acknowledging that the defendant's answer raised a virtually unassailable defense which foreclosed any reasonable expectation of an affirmative recovery by plaintiff, plaintiff forged on frivolously attempting to create a controversy. Under these facts the trial court could have found that such frivolous litigation constitutes a reckless waste of judicial resources as well as the time and money of the prevailing litigants. Sunamerica Fin. Corp. v. Bonham, 328 N.C. 254, 400 S.E.2d 435 (1991).

This section appears to be based on deterring frivolous and bad faith lawsuits by the use of attorneys' fees. Daniels v. Montgomery Mut. Ins. Co., 81 N.C. App. 600, 344 S.E.2d 847 (1986), rev'd in part, aff'd in part, 320 N.C. 669, 360 S.E.2d 772 (1987).

"Justiciable issues" are those which are real and present, as opposed to imagined or fanciful. Sprouse v. North River Ins. Co., 81 N.C. App. 311, 344 S.E.2d 555, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 284, 348 S.E.2d 344 (1986).

"Complete absence of a justiciable issue" suggests that it must conclusively appear that such issues are absent, even giving the losing party's pleadings the indulgent treatment which they receive on motions for summary judgment or to dismiss. Sprouse v. North River Ins. Co., 81 N.C. App. 311, 344 S.E.2d 555, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 284, 348 S.E.2d 344 (1986).

Justiciable Issue Found. — Defendants were not entitled to attorney's fees because there was not a complete absence of a justiciable issue of either law or fact raised by plaintiffs' complaint even though the action was dismissed. Brittain v. Cinnoca, 111 N.C. App. 656, 433 S.E.2d 244 (1993), cert. denied, 339 N.C. 736, 454 S.E.2d 646 (1995).

Where plaintiffs' complaint contained a justiciable issue, the court erred in granting defendants' motions for attorneys' fees pursuant to this section. Village Creek Property Owners Ass'n v. Town of Edenton, 135 N.C. App. 482, 520 S.E.2d 793, 1999 N.C. App. LEXIS 1159 (1999).

Where a contractor unsuccessfully asserted claims against a surety for bad faith and deceptive trade practices based on the surety's status as an insurer, the contractor's claims, although weak, were not frivolous, and the surety was not entitled to an award of attorney fees; the distinction between a relationship of insurance and a relationship of suretyship was an unsettled area of state law, and a finding that the one state case on point was determined to be controlling did not render the contractor's claims contrary to settled law. Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. Dynamic Dev. Group, LLC, 336 F. Supp. 2d 552, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19181 (M.D.N.C. 2004).

Denial of attorney fees to a former employee after the employer voluntarily dismissed its action for breach of a non-competition agreement against him with prejudice was not an abuse of discretion; the employee did not establish the lack of any justiciable issues of law and fact in the action. Kohler Co. v. McIvor, 177 N.C. App. 396, 628 S.E.2d 817, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 981 (2006).

Court Required to Make Findings. — Trial court was required to evaluate whether the losing party persisted in litigating the case after a point where he should reasonably have become aware that the pleading he filed no longer contained a justiciable issue. Winston-Salem Wrecker Ass'n v. Barker, 148 N.C. App. 114, 557 S.E.2d 614, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 1282 (2001).

Costs and attorney fees were awarded to a property owner in error as the North Carolina Industrial Commission made no findings to support a conclusion that the North Carolina Department of Environment and Natural Resources presented no justiciable issue; G.S. 6-21.5 was inapplicable. Watts v. N.C. Dep't of Env't & Natural Res., — N.C. App. —, 641 S.E.2d 811, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 595 (2007).

Specific Findings Not Required Absent Justiciable Issue. — The sufficiency of a pleading is a question of law for the court, and the trial court need not make its findings more detailed if it states that the pleading raised no justiciable issue of law or fact. Bryant v. Short, 84 N.C. App. 285, 352 S.E.2d 245, cert. denied, 319 N.C. 458, 356 S.E.2d 2 (1987).

Failure to Participate in Arbitration in Good Faith. — Failure of defendant in auto accident case to appear at arbitration hearing, and lack of evidence regarding attorney's authority, resulted in conclusion that defendant failed to participate in arbitration hearing in good faith and meaningful manner; the failure or refusal to participate in an arbitration proceeding in good faith and meaningful manner was subject to sanctions by the court on motion of a party, or report of the arbitrator. Bledsole v. Johnson, 150 N.C. App. 619, 564 S.E.2d 902, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 652 (2002), cert. granted, 356 N.C. 297, 570 S.E.2d 498 (2002).

The granting of defendants' motion for summary judgment was not in itself a sufficient reason for the court's decision to award attorney's fees under this section; it could be evidence to support the court's decision to make such an award. Brooks v. Giesey, 334 N.C. 303, 432 S.E.2d 339 (1993).

Appeals. — Under a statute such as this section, which contains "prevailing party" requirement, the parties should not be required to litigate fees when the appeal could moot the issue. Furthermore, upon filing of a notice of appeal, a trial court in North Carolina is divested of jurisdiction with regard to all matters embraced within or affected by the judgment which is the subject of the appeal. Brooks v. Giesey, 106 N.C. App. 586, 418 S.E.2d 236 (1992), aff'd, 334 N.C. 303, 432 S.E.2d 339 (1993).

Award of attorneys' fees under this section held proper. Sprouse v. North River Ins. Co., 81 N.C. App. 311, 344 S.E.2d 555, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 284, 348 S.E.2d 344 (1986); Clark v. Williamson, 91 N.C. App. 668, 373 S.E.2d 317 (1988).

Trial court's findings of fact and conclusions of law, which established that from the initiation of this suit, there was never any factual or legal basis for finding defendants liable for any alleged injury suffered by plaintiffs from purchase of real property, were sufficient to uphold order awarding defendants costs (including reasonable attorney's fees) under this section. Brooks v. Giesey, 334 N.C. 303, 432 S.E.2d 339 (1993).

Court's order that defendant pay legal fees incurred by executor after defendant's default at judicial sale of estate's real and personal property held unauthorized. Parker v. Lippard, 87 N.C. App. 43, 359 S.E.2d 492, modified, 87 N.C. App. 487, 361 S.E.2d 395 (1987).

Fees Not Authorized Where Case Settled by Arbitration. — Where, although building owner filed complaint in civil court, case had already been submitted for arbitration and was settled by the award of the arbitrators, this section did not apply to authorize the trial court to award attorneys' fees incurred in the arbitration hearing; in order for the trial court to make such an award, the "civil action" or "special proceeding" providing the basis for the award must have been held before that tribunal or pursuant to its authority, and no order other than the order which placed the case in inactive status had been entered, nor had any action been taken in the superior court. Thorneburg Hosiery Co. v. G.L. Wilson Bldg. Co., 94 N.C. App. 769, 381 S.E.2d 718 (1989).

Collateral Issues. — Attorneys' fee requests under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 11 and G.S. 6-21.5 raise collateral issues which often require consideration by the trial court after the action has been terminated, and a voluntary dismissal under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 41(a) does not deprive the trial court of jurisdiction to determine these collateral issues. To hold otherwise would allow a litigant or attorney to purge his violation of Rule 11 or G.S. 6-211.5 merely by taking a dismissal, and thereby lose all incentive to stop, think and investigate more carefully before serving and filing papers. Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

Voluntary Dismissal. — Where the plaintiffs filed a voluntary dismissal with prejudice pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1), the trial court was not deprived of jurisdiction to determine the appropriateness of attorneys' fees under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 11 or G.S. 6-21.5. Bryson v. Sullivan, 102 N.C. App. 1, 401 S.E.2d 645 (1991), modified on other grounds, 330 N.C. 644, 412 S.E.2d 327 (1992).

After a voluntary dismissal the broad limitation on the trial court's power to enter orders does not extend so far as to bar the trial court from awarding attorney's fees pursuant to 1A-1-11(a) or this section. VSD Communications, Inc. v. Lone Wolf Publishing Group, Inc., 124 N.C. App. 642, 478 S.E.2d 214 (1996).

§ 6-22. Petitioner to pay costs in certain cases.

The petitioner shall pay the costs in the following proceedings:

(1) In petitions for draining or damming lowlands where the petitioner alone is benefited.

(2) In petitions for condemnation of water millsites when the petitioner is allowed to erect the mill; but when he is not allowed to erect the mill, the costs shall be paid by the person who is allowed to do so.

(3) In petitions for condemnation of land for railroads, street railways, telegraph, telephone or electric power or light companies, or for water supplies for public institutions, or for the use of other quasi-public or municipal corporations; unless in the opinion of the superior court the defendant improperly refused the privilege, use or easement demanded, in which case the costs must be adjudged as to the court may appear equitable and just.

(4) When the petition is refused. (Code, ss. 1299, 1855, 2013; 1893, c. 63; 1903, c. 562; Rev., s. 1269; C.S., s. 1245; 1945, c. 635.)

CASE NOTES

Condemnation Proceedings. — In proceedings brought by a railroad, where it was found by the jury on appeal that the defendant's benefit exceeded his damages and then found they were equal, it was held that the plaintiff was taxable with costs up to the time of appeal. Madison County Ry. v. Gahagan, 161 N.C. 190, 76 S.E. 696 (1912).

§ 6-23. Defendant unreasonably defending after notice of no personal claim to pay costs.

In case of a defendant, against whom no personal claim is made, the plaintiff may deliver to such defendant with the summons, a notice subscribed by the plaintiff or his attorney, setting forth the general object of the action, a brief description of the property affected by it, if it affects real or personal property, and that no personal claim is made against such defendant. If a defendant on whom such notice is served unreasonably defends the action, he shall pay costs to the plaintiff. (Code, s. 216; Rev., s. 1270; C.S., s. 1246.)

§ 6-24. Suits by an indigent; payment of costs by an indigent.

A person who sues as an indigent is not required to advance the required court costs and no officer shall require any fee of the person. If a court enters a judgment in favor of a person suing as an indigent and does not require another party to the suit to pay the costs of the suit, the court may require the indigent person to pay any costs of the suit that were not required to be paid because the person was indigent. (1868-9, c. 96, s. 3; Code, s. 212; 1895, c. 149; Rev., s. 1265; C.S., s. 1247; 1993, c. 435, s. 5.)

CASE NOTES

Right Not Extended Beyond Trial. — The leave to sue as a pauper does not extend in civil actions beyond the trial in the superior court. Speller v. Speller, 119 N.C. 356, 26 S.E. 160 (1896).

Costs of Witnesses Not to Be Recovered. — One suing in forma pauperis is not entitled to recover costs of his witnesses. Draper v. Buxton, 90 N.C. 182 (1884). This section does not excuse the pauper from liability for his witnesses. Bailey v. Brown, 105 N.C. 127, 10 S.E. 1054 (1890).

This provision deprives all officers of costs, and the last clause is very sweeping, and manifestly embraces the costs of witnesses. Compensation to witnesses is part of the cost of an action, as much so as any other statutory charges in and about the same. Booshee v. Surles, 85 N.C. 90 (1881); Hall v. Younts, 87 N.C. 285 (1882); Draper v. J.A. Buxton & Co., 90 N.C. 182 (1884).

§ 6-25. Party seeking recovery on usurious contracts; no costs.

No costs shall be recovered by any party, whether plaintiff or defendant, who may endeavor to recover upon any usurious contract. (1895, c. 69; Rev., s. 1271; C.S., s. 1248.)

The costs and expenses of appraising and laying off the homestead or personal property exemptions, when the same is made under execution, shall be charged and included in the officer's bill of fees upon such execution or other final process; and when made upon the petition of the owner, they shall be paid by such owner, and the latter costs shall be a lien on said homestead. CASE NOTES

Payment of Fees as Condition. — Where the judgment debtor claims his personal property from execution, the sheriff is justified in refusing to proceed further till such exemptions are properly set apart, and the payment of his fees for the purpose by the plaintiff in the action, except when the suit is brought in forma pauperis. Whitmore-Ligon Co. v. Hyatt, 175 N.C. 117, 95 S.E. 38 (1918).

§ 6-29. Costs of reassessment of homestead.

If the superior court at term shall confirm the appraisal or assessment, or shall increase the exemption allowed the debtor or claimant, the levy shall stand only upon the excess remaining, and the creditor shall pay all the costs of the proceeding in court. If the amount allowed the debtor or claimant is reduced, the costs of the proceeding in court shall be paid by the debtor or claimant, and the levy shall cover the excess then remaining. When costs are adjudged against an infant plaintiff, the guardian by whom he appeared in the action shall be responsible therefor. (Code, s. 534; Rev., s. 1276; C.S., s. 1253.)

§ 6-31. Costs where executor, administrator, trustee of express trust, or person authorized by statute a party.

In an action prosecuted or defended by an executor, administrator, trustee of an express trust, or a person expressly authorized by statute, costs shall be recovered as in an action by and against a person prosecuting or defending in his own right; but such costs shall be chargeable only upon or collected out of the estate, fund or party represented, unless the court directs the same to be paid by the plaintiff or defendant, personally, for mismanagement or bad faith in such action or defense. And when any claim against a deceased person is referred, the prevailing party shall be entitled to recover the fees of referees and witnesses, and other necessary disbursements, to be taxed according to law. (Code, s. 535; Rev., s. 1277; C.S., s. 1254.)

CASE NOTES

When Fiduciary Personally Liable. — By virtue of this section costs should be taxed against the estate in the hands of a trustee, and not against him personally, except when the court adjudges that the trustee has been guilty of mismanagement or bad faith in an action or defense. Smith v. King, 107 N.C. 273, 12 S.E. 57 (1890); Sugg v. Bernard, 122 N.C. 155, 29 S.E. 221 (1898); Lance v. Russell, 165 N.C. 626, 81 S.E. 922 (1914).

The same rule is applied to actions against administrators and executors, State v. Roberts, 106 N.C. 662, 10 S.E. 900 (1890); Varner v. Johnston, 112 N.C. 570, 17 S.E. 483 (1893), with the additional limitation prescribed by G.S. 28-115 (see now G.S. 28A-19-18), Whitaker v. Whitaker, 138 N.C. 205, 50 S.E.2d 630 (1905). See G.S. 28A-19-18 and note.

This Section Includes Next Friends. — While "next friends" may not be embraced in the strict letter of this section, they come within its purview. Smith v. Smith, 108 N.C. 365, 12 S.E. 1045, 13 S.E. 113 (1891). It is error to tax "next friends" who are not parties without a finding of mismanagement or bad faith. Hockoday v. Lawrence, 156 N.C. 319, 72 S.E. 387 (1911).

Limitation on Payment of Costs. — A trustee, as against those for whose benefit the trust is created, will be allowed to apply so much of the funds to the payment of costs and expenses, including counsel fees, as may be necessary to protect it, but he will not be allowed such disbursements against one who establishes an adverse title to the property. Chemical Co. v. Johnson, 101 N.C. 223, 7 S.E. 770 (1888).

Cited in Will of Hargrove, 206 N.C. 307, 173 S.E. 577 (1934).

§ 6-32. Costs against assignee after action brought.

In actions in which the cause of action becomes by assignment after the commencement of the action, or in any other manner, the property of a person not a party to the action, such person shall be liable for the costs in the same manner as if he were a party. (Code, s. 539; Rev., s. 1278; C.S., s. 1255.)

CASE NOTES

Assignments Must Be Absolute and Complete. — The assignments contemplated by this section are only such as are absolute, and such as are intended to be a collateral security only for a continuing obligation or claim are not within the purview of the section. Nor does the section apply when the assignment is only of a part and not of the whole cause of action. Davis & Schenck v. Higgins, 92 N.C. 203 (1885).

Article 4.

Costs on Appeal.

§ 6-33. Costs on appeal generally.

On appeal from a magistrate or any court of the General Court of Justice, if the appellant recovers judgment, he shall recover the costs of the appeal and also those costs he ought to have recovered below had the judgment of that court been correct. If in any court of appeal there is judgment for a new trial, or for a new jury, or if the judgment appealed from is not wholly reversed, but partly affirmed and partly disaffirmed, the costs shall be in the discretion of the appellate court. (Code, s. 540; Rev., s. 1279; C.S., s. 1256; 1969, c. 44, s. 19; 1971, c. 269, s. 7.)

CASE NOTES

Judgment Prerequisite to Awarding of Costs. — The first part of this section manifestly refers not only to a reversal of the judgment below, but to a judgment in favor of the appellant on the merits and not merely to an order for a new trial. The trial court cannot ordinarily tax the costs of an action in favor of either party unless there is a judgment, costs being an incident of the judgment. Williams v. Hughes, 139 N.C. 17, 51 S.E. 790 (1905).

Where the subject matter of the action is destroyed before the appeal is heard, the judgment below is presumed to be correct until reversed, and no part of the costs should be adjudged against the appellee. Taylor v. Vann, 127 N.C. 243, 37 S.E. 263 (1900).

Where Lower Court Judgment Modified. — In McLean v. Breece, 113 N.C. 390, 18 S.E. 694 (1893), where the judgment was modified in the Supreme Court, the costs were taxed against the appellee. And where the plaintiffs recovered a part judgment on their demand, by establishing a mechanic's lien, they were entitled to costs of appeal. See Hogsed v. Gloucester Lumber Co., 170 N.C. 529, 87 S.E. 337 (1915).

Where the judgment of the court below is modified and affirmed, the appellate division may apportion the costs on appeal between the parties in the exercise of its discretion. Hoskins v. Hoskins, 259 N.C. 704, 131 S.E.2d 326 (1963).

The superior court is without power to modify former orders of the appellate court taxing costs on former appeals, as costs thus incurred are no part of superior court costs, but are taxed by, and executions issue out of, the appellate court. Bailey v. Hayman, 222 N.C. 58, 22 S.E.2d 6 (1942).

Partial Affirmance and Partial Reversal. — Where the judgment appealed from is partly affirmed and partly reversed, in the exercise of the discretion permitted by this section, the costs in the appellate court may be divided so that each party pays his own costs. Smith v. Old Dominion Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 119 N.C. 249, 26 S.E. 41 (1896); Hawkins v. Richmond Cedar Works, 122 N.C. 87, 30 S.E. 13 (1898).

Reversal Necessary to Tax Costs Against Appellee. — Unless the court upon the merits reverses the judgment below, it cannot adjudge any part of the costs against the appellee. Commissioners of Vance County v. Gill, 126 N.C. 86, 35 S.E. 228 (1900).

Case Remanded. — Where an appellant fails to show that he was prejudiced by the order appealed from, he may be taxed with the costs of the appeal, though the case be remanded. Harrington v. Rawls, 136 N.C. 65, 48 S.E. 571 (1904).

New Trial. — The taxing of the costs on appeal, by partial new trial being granted, is in the discretion of the court. Satterthwaite v. Goodyear, 137 N.C. 302, 49 S.E. 205 (1904).

Under this section, where the appellant was awarded a partial new trial only, as to one issue only out of several, the costs of the appeal are in the discretion of the court. Rayburn v. Casualty Co., 142 N.C. 376, 55 S.E. 296 (1906).

Where a new trial is granted, the awarding of costs is discretionary. Universal Metal Co. v. Durham & C.R.R., 145 N.C. 293, 59 S.E. 50 (1907).

Motion in Superior Court to Recover Costs of Appellate Transcript Prohibited. — The cost of preparing the transcription of the record is a part of the costs in the appellate division, and the judge of the superior court upon the subsequent trial is without jurisdiction to entertain a motion for the recovery of such costs. Ward v. Cruse, 236 N.C. 400, 72 S.E.2d 835 (1952).

Applied in Kincaid v. Graham, 92 N.C. 154 (1885); Ebert v. Disher, 216 N.C. 546, 5 S.E.2d 716 (1939).

Liability of Counties in Criminal Actions.

§§ 6-36 through 6-39: Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 269, s. 15.

§ 6-40. Liability of counties, where trial removed from one county to another.

When a prisoner is sent from one county to another to be held for trial, or for any other cause or purpose, the county from which he is sent shall pay his jail expenses, unless they are collected from the prisoner. (1889, c. 354; 1901, c. 718; Rev., s. 1285; C.S., s. 1263; 1971, c. 269, s. 8.)

ARTICLE 6.

Liability of Defendant in Criminal Actions.

§ 6-47. Judgment confessed; bond given to secure fine and costs.

In cases where a court permits a defendant convicted of any criminal offense to give bond or confess judgment, with sureties to secure the fine and costs which may be imposed, the acceptance of such security shall be upon the condition that it shall not operate as a discharge of the original judgment against the defendant nor as a discharge of his person from the custody of the law until the fine and costs are paid. (1879, c. 264; Code, s. 749; 1885, c. 364; Rev., s. 1293; C.S., s. 1269; 1971, c. 269, s. 9.)

CASE NOTES

The power of the courts to suspend judgment in criminal cases should only be upheld when sanctioned by usage, and where the consent of the defendant was expressly given or would be implied from the fact that the order was made in the defendant's presence without his objection and that its evident purpose was to save the defendant from a more grievous penalty permitted or required by law. State v. Hilton, 151 N.C. 687, 65 S.E. 1011 (1909).

§ 6-48. Arrest for nonpayment of fine and costs.

In default of payment of such fine and costs, it is the duty of the court at any subsequent term thereof, on motion of the solicitor of the State, to order a capias to issue to the end that such defendant may be again arrested and held for the fine and costs until discharged according to law. (1879, c. 264; Code, s. 750; 1885, c. 364; Rev., s. 1294; C.S., s. 1270; 1971, c. 269, s. 10.)

Liability of Prosecuting Witness for Costs.

§ 6-49. Prosecuting witness liable for costs in certain cases; court determines prosecuting witness.

In all criminal actions in any court, if the defendant is acquitted, nolle prosequi entered, or judgment against him is arrested, or if the defendant is discharged from arrest for want of probable cause, the costs, including the fees of all witnesses whom the judge before whom the trial took place shall certify to have been proper for the defense and prosecution, shall be paid by the prosecuting witness, whether marked on the bill or warrant or not, whenever the judge is of the opinion that there was not reasonable ground for the prosecution, or that it was not required by the public interest. If a greater number of witnesses have been summoned than were, in the opinion of the court, necessary to support the charge, the court may, even though it is of the opinion that there was reasonable ground for the prosecution, order the prosecuting witness to pay the attendance fees of such witnesses, if it appear that they were summoned at the prosecuting witness's special request.

Every judge is authorized to determine who the prosecuting witness is at any stage of a criminal proceeding, whether before or after the bill of indictment has been found, or the defendant acquitted: Provided, that no person shall be made a prosecuting witness after the finding of the bill, unless he shall have been notified to show cause why he should not be made the prosecuting witness of record. (1799, c. 4, s. 19, P.R.; 1880, c. 558, P.R.; R.C., c. 35, s. 37; 1868-9, c. 277; 1874-5, c. 151; 1879, c. 49; Code, s. 737; 1889, c. 34; Rev., s. 1295; C.S., s. 1271; 1947, c. 781; 1953, c. 675, s. 1; 1971, c. 269, s. 11.)

CASE NOTES

This section was intended to enlarge the power of the courts over the question of costs in criminal actions. State v. Norwood, 84 N.C. 794 (1881).

Enactment of this section was within the power of the legislature. State v. Cannady, 78 N.C. 539 (1878).

Standing to Challenge Constitutionality of Section. — The plaintiff lacks standing to put in issue the constitutionality of this section where he is under no present threat of prosecution under these statutes, the likelihood that he will run afoul of them in the future is remote and speculative in the extreme, and it can be safely assumed that he does not contemplate either presently or in the future the institution of a prosecution in this State. Fowler v. Alexander, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

The mere fact that earlier the plaintiff was caught in the net of the challenged statutes gives him no standing, where his earlier encounter with the statutes has become moot, the costs assessed have been paid, and he is no longer restrained. Fowler v. Alexander, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

Intervention by Federal Court in Operation of Section. — The taxing of costs to a prosecuting witness is a constituent part of the criminal procedure of North Carolina. Comity precludes not only the injunction of criminal proceedings in the state courts, but also any disruptive interference thereof. Therefore only when the whole proceeding may be enjoined does the federal district court have jurisdiction to intervene in any way in the operation of this section. Fowler v. Alexander, 340 F. Supp. 168 (M.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

Declaratory Judgment as to Validity of Section Denied. — A grant of declaratory relief that this section was invalid and unconstitutional was held to be outside the equitable jurisdiction of the court, for the reasons that no bad faith had been alleged, nor any harassment, nor was there shown any impediment to the resolution of the constitutional validity of this section in the general district courts of North Carolina. Fowler v. Alexander, 340 F. Supp. 168 (M.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

Certifying Witnesses as Proper for Defense. — Where the court below taxed the costs of an unsuccessful prosecution against the prosecutor without finding that the defendant's witnesses were proper for the defense, as required by this section, judgment would still be allowed to stand if the court below would make and certify the requisite finding that the said witnesses were proper for the defense. State v. Jones, 117 N.C. 768, 23 S.E. 247 (1895).

In State v. Owens, 87 N.C. 565 (1882), it was stated that this section included such witnesses for the defense as were certified by the counsel to have been proper for the defense, and the Supreme Court approved that judgment. But this was not the point in the appeal, and was only incidentally presented. See State v. Massey, 104 N.C. 877, 10 S.E. 608 (1889). In State v. Roberts, 106 N.C. 662, 10 S.E. 900 (1890), which was a judgment taxing the prosecutor with the costs, the judge did not find and certify that the prosecution was frivolous, malicious or was not for the public good. The Supreme Court held that this judgment was erroneous, and that the statute only allowed a party to be taxed as prosecutor with the costs upon the findings of these facts. State v. Jones, 117 N.C. 768, 23 S.E. 247 (1895).

Notice to Prosecutor Prior to Taxing Costs. — It is necessary for the trial court, in order to adjudge the prosecution of a criminal action to be frivolous and malicious and tax the costs against the prosecutors who have employed attorneys to assist the solicitor, to give the prosecutors notice of such action and hear the matter according to the "law of the land." State v. Collins, 169 N.C. 323, 84 S.E. 1049 (1915).

The object of notice is only to give the party a day in court, and it matters not how he gets the notice, if he appears and defends under it. This may be done on motion of the defendant's counsel or by the court of its own motion. State v. Hughes, 83 N.C. 665 (1880); State v. Hamilton, 106 N.C. 660, 10 S.E. 854 (1890). The court should find the facts, and when this is done the findings are not reviewable in the appellate court. State v. Owens, 87 N.C. 565 (1882); State v. Roberts, 106 N.C. 662, 10 S.E. 900 (1890); State v. Jones, 117 N.C. 768, 23 S.E. 247 (1895).

A notice to mark one as prosecutor under this section need not be in writing. Where it was announced in open court, upon the calling and continuance of a State case, that a motion would be made at the next term to mark a witness as prosecutor (all the witnesses being present), and on the argument of the motion it was announced that all the parties were present, it was held to be sufficient evidence that such notice was given, and warranted the court in ordering the witness to be marked as prosecutor. State v. Norwood, 84 N.C. 794 (1881).

Not Required by the Public Interest. — A finding by the trial judge that a prosecution of a criminal action "was not for the public interest" is equivalent to a finding that it "was not required by the public interest." State v. Baker, 114 N.C. 812, 19 S.E. 145 (1894).

Conclusiveness of Court Finding. — A judgment that a prosecution is frivolous and not required by the public interest, and that the prosecutor pay the costs, is conclusive and not appealable. State v. Hamilton, 106 N.C. 660, 10 S.E. 854 (1890).

The finding by the judge below that a criminal prosecution was frivolous and malicious is conclusive, and will support a judgment that the prosecutor pay costs, or in default thereof be imprisoned. State v. Lance, 109 N.C. 789, 14 S.E. 110 (1891).

Order Set Aside. — Where the trial judge has dismissed a criminal action as being frivolous and malicious, and taxed the prosecutors with costs, and it appears from his findings of record that he has done so without any proper consideration of their affidavits in support of their position and relevant to the issue, so as to deprive them of the benefits of due process of law, his order will be set aside on appeal, leaving the matter open for proper adjudication. State v. Collins, 169 N.C. 323, 84 S.E. 1049 (1915).

Liability of County When Prosecutor Is Insolvent. — When a judge below orders an insolvent prosecutor to pay costs, and he fails or is unable to pay, the county in which the offense was committed becomes liable to pay the same. Pegram v. Commissioners of Guilford County, 75 N.C. 120 (1876).

Applied in State v. Darr, 63 N.C. 516 (1869).

Findings of Fact Required. — The presiding judge, prior to taxing costs against a prosecuting witness, is required to make specific findings of fact. See opinion of Attorney General to the Hon. Gary B. Tash, Judge, 21st Judicial District Court, 49 N.C.A.G. 142 (1980).

Mere Failure to Convict Not Ground for Assessment. — This section does not empower the court to assess costs against the prosecuting witness solely because prosecution does not result in a conviction of the accused. See opinion of Attorney General to the Hon. Gary B. Tash, Judge, 21st Judicial District Court, 49 N.C.A.G. 142 (1980).

§ 6-50. Imprisonment of prosecuting witness for willful nonpayment of costs if prosecution frivolous.

Every such prosecuting witness may be adjudged not only to pay the costs, but he shall also be imprisoned for the willful nonpayment thereof, when the judge before whom the case was tried shall adjudge that the prosecution was frivolous or malicious. (1800, c. 558; R.C., c. 35, s. 37; 1879, c. 49; 1881, c. 176; Code, s. 738; Rev., s. 1297; C.S., s. 1272; 1971, c. 269, s. 11.1.)

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section is constitutional. State v. Cannady, 78 N.C. 539 (1878); State v. Hamilton, 106 N.C. 660, 10 S.E. 854 (1890).

Standing to Challenge Section. — The plaintiff lacked standing to put in issue the constitutionality of this section where he was under no present threat of prosecution under these statutes, the likelihood that he would run afoul of them in the future was remote and speculative in the extreme, and it could be safely assumed that he did not contemplate either presently or in the future the institution of a prosecution in North Carolina. Fowler v. Alexander, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

The mere fact that earlier the plaintiff was caught in the net of the challenged statutes gave him no standing, where his earlier encounter with the statutes had become moot, the costs assessed were paid, and he was no longer restrained. Fowler v. Alexander, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

The mere fact that the statutes may chill in some indefinable way the urge to prosecute is of no moment in the absence of any real likelihood that plaintiff has or will have reason to prosecute someone in North Carolina. Fowler v. Alexander, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

Jurisdiction of Federal Court. — A grant of a declaratory judgment that this section was invalid and unconstitutional was held to be outside the equitable jurisdiction of the federal court for the reasons that no bad faith had been alleged, nor any harassment, nor any impediment to the resolution of the constitutional validity in the General Court of Justice of North Carolina. Fowler v. Alexander, 340 F. Supp. 168 (M.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

The taxing of costs to a prosecuting witness is a constituent part of the criminal procedure of North Carolina. Comity precludes not only the injunction of criminal proceedings in the state courts, but also any disruptive interference thereof. Therefore, only when the whole proceeding may be enjoined does the federal district court have jurisdiction to intervene in any way in the operation of this section. Fowler v. Alexander, 340 F. Supp. 168 (M.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

Costs of Prosecution Not a Debt. — Costs of prosecution against a prosecutor (upon acquittal of the accused or nolle prosequi entered), or against the accused upon a verdict of guilty, or a fine imposed, do not constitute a debt within the meaning of N.C. Const., Art. I, § 16, (now N.C. Const., Art. 1, § 28) and hence the defendant may be imprisoned for nonpayment of the same. State v. Wallin, 89 N.C. 578 (1883).

Where Bill Ignored. — No power is conferred by this section to tax a prosecutor with costs when the bill is ignored. State v. Cockerham, 23 N.C. 381 (1841); State v. Horton, 89 N.C. 581 (1883); State v. Gates, 107 N.C. 832, 12 S.E. 319 (1890).

ARTICLE 8.

Fees of Witnesses.

§ 6-51. Not entitled to fees in advance.

Witnesses are not entitled to receive their fees in advance; but no witness in a civil action or special proceeding, unless summoned on behalf of the State or a municipal corporation, shall be compelled to attend more than one day, if the party by or for whom he was summoned shall, after one day's attendance, on request and presentation of a certificate, fail or refuse to pay what then may be due for traveling to the place of examination and for the number of days of attendance. (1868-9, c. 279, subch. 11, s. 3; Code, s. 1368; Rev., s. 1298; C.S., s. 1273.)

Cross References. — As to attendance of witnesses, see G.S. 8-63.

§ 6-53. Witness to prove attendance; action for fees.

Every person summoned, who shall attend as a witness in any suit, shall, before the clerk of the court, or before the referee or officer taking the testimony, ascertain by his own oath or affirmation the sum due for traveling to and from court, attendance and ferriage, which shall be certified by the clerk; and on failure of the party, at whose instance such witness was summoned (witnesses for the State and municipal corporations excepted), to pay the same previous to the departure of the witness from court, such witness may at any time sue for and recover the same from the party summoning him; and the certificate of the clerk shall be sufficient evidence of the debt. (1777, c. 115, s. 46, P.R.; 1796, c. 458, P.R.; R.C., c. 31, s. 73; 1868-9, c. 279, subch. 11, ss. 2, 4; Code, s. 1369; Rev., s. 1299; C.S., s. 1274; 1971, c. 269, s. 12.)

Cross References. — As to attendance of witnesses generally, see G.S. 8-59.

CASE NOTES

Right to Payment Statutory. — Payment of witnesses by the sovereign is neither given by common law nor is it an inherent right. It is granted at the discretion of the court and only within the limits authorized by statute. State v. Massey, 104 N.C. 877, 10 S.E. 608 (1889). See State v. Wheeler, 141 N.C. 773, 53 S.E. 358 (1906).

Assignment of Witness Tickets Not Necessary. — The party to an action summoning witnesses to testify in his behalf is liable for their witness fees which may be recovered in an action against him, and when it appears of record entry of the judgment by the clerk of the superior court that these fees have been taxed against the party recovering the judgment, and paid by him, such party is entitled to recover them against the losing party to the action without showing that the witnesses had transferred or assigned their tickets to him. McClure v. Fulbright, 196 N.C. 450, 146 S.E. 74 (1929).

A pauper is not excused from liability for his witnesses. Bailey v. Brown, 105 N.C. 127, 10 S.E. 1054 (1890).

§ 6-57: Repealed by Session Laws 1947, c. 781.

§ 6-60. No more than two witnesses may be subpoenaed to prove single material fact; liability for fees of such witnesses; one fee for day's attendance.

No district attorney shall direct that more than two witnesses be subpoenaed for the State to prove a single material fact, nor shall the State or defendant in any such prosecution be liable for the fees of more than two witnesses to prove a single material fact, unless the court, upon satisfactory reasons appearing, otherwise directs. And no witness subpoenaed in a criminal action shall be paid by the State for attendance in more than one case for any one day. Article 1.

Judicial Power and Organization.

This Chapter shall be known and may be cited as the "Judicial Department Act of 1965." (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2007-323, s. 14.17(b), provides: "The Administrative Office of the Courts may conduct a pilot project in multiple counties to evaluate a system for the electronic filing, case processing, and case management of civil cases and special proceedings filed in the General Court of Justice. The Administrative Office of the Courts may designate the case types that will be subject to mandatory electronic filing, case processing, and case management during the pilot project. No county may be selected without the concurrence of the senior resident superior court judge, the chief district court judge, and the clerk of superior court. Notwithstanding the requirements of Chapters 1A and Chapter 7A of the General Statutes, the North Carolina Supreme Court and the Administrative Office of the Courts shall establish rules, costs, procedures, and specifications for electronic filing, case processing, and case management under the pilot. However, Rule 4 of the Rules of Civil Procedure shall govern service of process of pleadings that are currently required to be served pursuant to Rule 4 of the Rules of Civil Procedure. The terms of any contract entered into for the purpose of implementing the provisions of this subsection shall provide that the State retains the ownership of all electronic data received by the vendor as part of the pilot project."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 1.2, provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations and Capital Improvements Appropriations Act of 2007'."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 32.3, provides: "Except for statutory changes or other provisions that clearly indicate an intention to have effects beyond the 2007-2009 fiscal biennium, the textual provisions of this act apply only to funds appropriated for, and activities occurring during, the 2007-2009 fiscal biennium."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 32.5 is a severability clause.

This Chapter is intended to implement Article IV of the Constitution of North Carolina and promote the just and prompt disposition of litigation by:

(1) Providing a new chapter in the General Statutes into which, at a time not later than January 1, 1971, when the General Court of Justice is fully operational in all counties of the State, all statutes concerning the organization, jurisdiction and administration of each division of the General Court of Justice may be placed;

(2) Amending certain laws with respect to the superior court division to conform them to the laws set forth in this Chapter, to the end that each trial division may be a harmonious part of the General Court of Justice;

(3) Creating the district court division of the General Court of Justice, and the Administrative Office of the Courts;
(4) Establishing in accordance with a fixed schedule the various district courts of the district court division;
(5) Providing for the organization, jurisdiction and procedures necessary for the operation of the district court division;
(6) Providing for the financial support of the judicial department, and for uniform costs and fees in the trial divisions of the General Court of Justice;
(7) Providing for an orderly transition from the present system of courts to a uniform system completely operational in all counties of the State not later than January 1, 1971;
(8) Repealing certain laws inconsistent with the foregoing purposes; and
(9) Effectuating other purposes incidental and supplemental to the foregoing enumerated purposes. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Except for the judicial power vested in the court for the trial of impeachments, and except for such judicial power as may from time to time be vested by the General Assembly in administrative agencies, the judicial power of the State is vested exclusively in the General Court of Justice. Provided, that all existing courts of the State inferior to the superior courts, including justice of the peace courts and mayor's courts, shall continue to exist and to exercise the judicial powers vested in them by law until specifically abolished by law, or until the establishment within the county of their situs of a district court, or until January 1, 1971, whichever event shall first occur. Judgments of inferior courts which cease to exist under the provisions of this section continue in force and effect as though the issuing court continued to exist, and the General Court of Justice is hereby vested with jurisdiction to enforce such judgments. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

The General Court of Justice constitutes a unified judicial system for purposes of jurisdiction, operation and administration, and consists of an appellate division, a superior court division, and a district court division. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Age Limits for Service as Justice or Judge.

§ 7A-4.20. Age limit for service as justice or judge: exception.

No justice or judge of the General Court of Justice may continue in office beyond the last day of the month in which he attains his seventy-second birthday, but justices and judges so retired may be recalled for periods of temporary service as provided in Subchapters II and III of this chapter. (1971, c. 508, s. 1; c. 1194; 1973, c. 248; 1977, c. 736, s. 5; 1981, c. 455, s. 1; 1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 873, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Resignation of District Judge Created Legal and Actual Vacancy. — Where a district court judge resigned upon the discovery of his legal infirmity, his resignation from office created an actual vacancy in that position. Hence, upon the resignation, there was no one legally entitled to hold office by virtue of an election, nor under G.S. 128-7 was there an incumbent with the legal right to continue in office until a successor was elected or appointed. The judge, therefore, created a legal as well as an actual vacancy in office under N.C. Const., Art. IV, § 19. People ex rel. Duncan v. Beach, 294 N.C. 713, 242 S.E.2d 796 (1978).

§ 7A-4.21. Validation of official actions of district court judges of twenty-fifth judicial district performed after mandatory retirement age.

No official action performed by any judge of the twenty-fifth judicial district of the district court division of the General Court of Justice shall be declared to be invalid by reason of the fact that the judge was beyond the mandatory retirement age set out in G.S. 7A-4.20 at the time of his performing any such act; provided this section shall only apply to those official actions performed prior to May 1, 1977. (1977, c. 389.)

SUBCHAPTER II. APPELLATE DIVISION OF THE GENERAL COURT OF JUSTICE.

ARTICLE 2.

Appellate Division Organization.

The appellate division of the General Court of Justice consists of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — As enacted in 1965, this article was designated "Article 1A. Appellate Division Organization and Terms," and consisted of former G.S. 7A-5, which read, "The appellate division of the General Court of Justice consists of the Supreme Court of North Carolina. (Chapter 7, subchapter I, articles 1-6, of the General Statutes, is applicable.)" The former section derived from c. 310, s. 1, Session Laws 1965.

(a) The Supreme Court shall appoint one or more reporters for the appellate division, to serve at its pleasure. It shall be the duty of the reporters to prepare for publication the opinions of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals. The salary of the reporters shall be fixed by the Administrative Officer of the Courts, subject to the approval of the Supreme Court.

(b) The Administrative Officer of the Courts shall contract for the printing of the reports of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, and for the advance sheets of each court. He shall select a printer for the reports and prescribe such contract terms as will insure issuance of the reports as soon as practicable after a sufficient number of opinions are filed. He shall make such contract after consultation with the Department of Administration and comparison of prices for similar work in other states to such an extent as may be practicable. He shall also sell the reports and advance sheets of the appellate division, to the general public, at a price not less than cost nor more than cost plus ten percent (10%), to be fixed by him in his discretion. Proceeds of such sales shall be remitted to the State treasury.

(b1) In addition to and as an alternative to the provisions for the publication and sale of the appellate division reports of subsection (a) and subsection (b) of this section, the Supreme Court may designate a commercial law publisher's reports and advance sheets of the opinions of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals as the Official Reports of the Appellate Division, or the Administrative Officer of the Courts, with the approval of the Supreme Court, may contract with a commercial law publisher or publishers to act as printer and vendor of the reports and advance sheets of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals upon such terms as the Supreme Court deems advisable after consultation with the Department of Administration.

(c) The Administrative Officer of the Courts shall furnish, without charge, one copy of the advance sheets of the appellate division to each justice and judge of the General Court of Justice, to each superior court district attorney, to each superior court clerk, to each district court prosecutor, to each special counsel at regional psychiatric facilities, and, in such numbers as may be reasonably necessary, to the Supreme Court library. § 7A-7. Law clerks; secretaries and stenographers.

(a) Each justice and judge of the appellate division is entitled to the services of not more than two research assistants, who must be graduates of an accredited law school. The salaries of research assistants shall be set by the Administrative Officer of the Courts, subject to the approval of the Supreme Court.

ARTICLE 3.

The Supreme Court.

§ 7A-10. Organization; compensation of justices.

(a) The Supreme Court shall consist of a Chief Justice and six associate justices, elected by the qualified voters of the State for terms of eight years. Before entering upon the duties of his office, each justice shall take an oath of office. Four justices shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of the business of the court. Except as otherwise provided in this subsection, sessions of the court shall be held in the city of Raleigh, and scheduled by rule of court so as to discharge expeditiously the court's business. The court may by rule hold sessions not more than twice annually in the Old Chowan County Courthouse (1767) in the Town of Edenton, which is a State-owned court facility that is designated as a National Historic Landmark by the United States Department of the Interior.

(b) The Chief Justice and each of the associate justices shall receive the annual salary provided in Current Operations Appropriations Act. Each justice is entitled to reimbursement for travel and subsistence expenses at the rate allowed State employees generally.

(b1) In addition to the reimbursement for travel and subsistence expenses authorized by subsection (b) of this section, and notwithstanding G.S. 138-6, each justice whose permanent residence is at least 50 miles from the City of Raleigh shall also be reimbursed for the mileage the justice travels each week to the City of Raleigh from the justice's home for business of the court. The reimbursement authorized by this subsection shall be calculated for each justice by multiplying the actual round-trip mileage from that justice's home to the City of Raleigh by a rate-per-mile established by the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts, but not to exceed the business standard mileage rate set by the Internal Revenue Service.

(c) In lieu of merit and other increment raises paid to regular State employees, the Chief Justice and each of the Associate Justices shall receive as longevity pay an annual amount equal to four and eight-tenths percent (4.8%) of the annual salary set forth in the Current Operations Appropriations Act payable monthly after five years of service, nine and six-tenths percent (9.6%) after 10 years of service, fourteen and four-tenths percent (14.4%) after 15 years of service, nineteen and two-tenths percent (19.2%) after 20 years of service, and twenty-four percent (24%) after 25 years of service. "Service" means service as a justice or judge of the General Court of Justice or as a member of the Utilities Commission. Service shall also mean service as a district attorney or as a clerk of superior court. (1967, c. 108, s. 1; 1983, c. 761, s. 242; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1034, s. 165; c. 1109, ss. 11, 13.1; 1985, c. 698, s. 10(a); 1997-56, s. 1; 2007-323, ss. 14.21(a), 28.18A(a).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2006-253, s. 29, provides: "The North Carolina General Assembly requests that the Chief Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court encourage the judges of this State to obtain continuing legal education on the laws of this State relating to driving while impaired offenses and related issues, and to promulgate any rules necessary to ensure that the judiciary receives necessary training and education on these laws."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 32.5 is a severability clause.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2007-323, ss. 14.21(a) and 28.18A(a), effective July 1, 2007, added subsection (b1) and in the first sentence of subsection (c), deleted "and" preceding "nineteen" and added "and twenty-four percent (24%) after 25 years of service" at the end.

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Length of Service of Supreme Court Justice. — Upon taking office as an Associate Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court, a justice was entitled to have his service as Director and Assistant Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts to be taken into account in calculating his service for longevity purposes, but his service as assistant district attorney could not be taken into account. See opinion of Attorney General to The Honorable Thomas W. Ross, Director, The Administrative Office of the Courts, 1999 N.C. AG LEXIS 28 (9/28/99).

§ 7A-10.1. Authority to prescribe standards of judicial conduct.

The Supreme Court is authorized, by rule, to prescribe standards of judicial conduct for the guidance of all justices and judges of the General Court of Justice. (1973, c. 89.)

CASE NOTES

Adoption of Rule Regarding Limitation of Proceedings Did Not Affect Action Already Pending. — Given the unique constitutional and statutory responsibilities of the Supreme Court of North Carolina to promulgate rules of appellate procedure, as well as rules and standards of conduct for the judiciary, the Supreme Court of North Carolina did not exceed its authority in adopting N.C. Code Jud. Conduct Limitation of Proceedings; however, where a judicial disciplinary action was already pending when N.C. Code Jud. Conduct Limitation of Proceedings came into effect, the action was not barred. In re Inquiry Concerning a Judge (Brown), 358 N.C. 711, 599 S.E.2d 502, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 910 (2004).

The clerk of the Supreme Court shall be appointed by the Supreme Court to serve at its pleasure. The annual salary of the clerk shall be fixed by the Administrative Officer of the Courts, subject to the approval of the Supreme Court. The clerk shall perform such duties as the Supreme Court may assign, and shall be bonded to the State, for faithful performance of duty, in the same manner as the clerk of the superior court, and in such amount as the Administrative Officer of the Courts shall determine. He shall adopt a seal of office, to be approved by the Supreme Court. A fee bill for services rendered by the clerk shall be fixed by rules of the Supreme Court, and all such fees shall be remitted to the State treasury. Charges to litigants for the reproduction of appellate records and briefs shall be fixed by rule of the Supreme Court and remitted to the Appellate Courts Printing and Computer Operations Fund established in G.S. 7A-343.3. The marshal may appoint such assistants, and at such salaries, as may be authorized by the Administrative Officer of the Courts. The Supreme Court, in its discretion, may appoint the Supreme Court librarian, or some other suitable employee of the court, to serve in the additional capacity of marshal. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

(a) The Supreme Court shall appoint a librarian of the Supreme Court library, to serve at the pleasure of the court. The annual salary of the librarian shall be fixed by the Administrative Officer of the Courts, subject to the approval of the Supreme Court. The librarian may appoint assistants in numbers and at salaries to be fixed by the Administrative Officer of the Courts.

(b) The primary function of the Supreme Court library is to serve the appellate division of the General Court of Justice, but it may render service to the trial divisions of the General Court of Justice, to State agencies, and to the general public, under such regulations as the librarian, subject to the approval of the library committee, may promulgate.

(c) The library shall be maintained in the city of Raleigh, except that if the Court of Appeals sits regularly in locations other than the city of Raleigh, branch libraries may be established at such locations for the use of the Court of Appeals.

(d) The librarian shall promulgate rules and regulations for the use of the library, subject to the approval of a library committee, to be composed of two justices of the Supreme Court appointed by the Chief Justice, and one judge of the Court of Appeals appointed by the Chief Judge.

(e) The librarian may adopt a seal of office.

(f) The librarian may operate a copying service by means of which he may furnish certified or uncertified copies of all or portions of any document, paper, book, or other writing in the library that legally may be copied. When a certificate is made under his hand and attested by his official seal, it shall be received as prima facie evidence of the correctness of the matter therein contained, and as such shall receive full faith and credit. The fees for copies shall be approved by the library committee, and the fees so collected shall be administered in the same manner as the charges to litigants for the reproduction of appellate records and briefs. The Supreme Court is authorized to have such of the Reports of the Supreme Court of the State of North Carolina as are not on hand for sale, republished and numbered consecutively, retaining the present numbers and names of the reporters and by means of star pages in the margin retaining the original numbering of the pages. The Supreme Court is authorized to have such Reports reprinted without any alteration from the original edition thereof, except as may be directed by the Supreme Court. The contract for such reprinting and republishing shall be made by the Administrative Office of the Courts in the manner prescribed in G.S. 7A-6. Such republication shall thus continue until the State shall have for sale all of such Reports; and hereafter when the editions of any number or volume of the Supreme Court Reports shall be exhausted, it shall be the duty of the Supreme Court to have the same reprinted under the provisions of this section and G.S. 7A-6. In reprinting the Reports that have already been annotated, the annotations and the additional indexes therein shall be retained. ARTICLE 4.

Court of Appeals.

The Court of Appeals is created effective January 1, 1967. It shall consist initially of six judges, elected by the qualified voters of the State for terms of eight years. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court shall designate one of the judges as Chief Judge, to serve in such capacity at the pleasure of the Chief Justice. Before entering upon the duties of his office, a judge of the Court of Appeals shall take the oath of office prescribed for a judge of the General Court of Justice.

The Governor on or after July 1, 1967, shall make temporary appointments to the six initial judgeships. The appointees shall serve until January 1, 1969. Their successors shall be elected at the general election for members of the General Assembly in November, 1968, and shall take office on January 1, 1969, to serve for the remainder of the unexpired term which began on January 1, 1967.

Upon the appointment of at least five judges, and the designation of a Chief Judge, the court is authorized to convene, organize, and promulgate, subject to the approval of the Supreme Court, such supplementary rules as it deems necessary and appropriate for the discharge of the judicial business lawfully assigned to it.

Effective January 1, 1969, the number of judges is increased to nine, and the Governor, on or after March 1, 1969, shall make temporary appointments to the additional judgeships thus created. The appointees shall serve until January 1, 1971. Their successors shall be elected at the general election for members of the General Assembly in November, 1970, and shall take office on January 1, 1971, to serve for the remainder of the unexpired term which began on January 1, 1969.

Effective January 1, 1977, the number of judges is increased to 12; and the Governor, on or after July 1, 1977, shall make temporary appointments to the additional judgeships thus created. The appointees shall serve until January 1, 1979. Their successors shall be elected at the general election for members of the General Assembly in November, 1978, and shall take office on January 1, 1979, to serve the remainder of the unexpired term which began on January 1, 1977.

On or after December 15, 2000, the Governor shall appoint three additional judges to increase the number of judges to 15.

The Court of Appeals shall sit in panels of three judges each. The Chief Judge insofar as practicable shall assign the members to panels in such fashion that each member sits a substantially equal number of times with each other member. He shall preside over the panel of which he is a member, and shall designate the presiding judge of the other panel or panels.

Three judges shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of the business of the court, except as may be provided in G.S. 7A-32.

In the event the Chief Judge is unable, on account of absence or temporary incapacity, to perform the duties placed upon him as Chief Judge, the Chief Justice shall appoint an acting Chief Judge from the other judges of the Court, to temporarily discharge the duties of Chief Judge. CASE NOTES

Amendment Held Unconstitutional. — Amendment to G.S. 7A-16 effected by Session Laws 2000-67, G.S. 15.5, which expanded the size of the state Court of Appeals from 12 judges to 15 and which allowed the newly appointed judges to serve until the year 2005 before being required to face a retention election, was unconstitutional to the extent that it conflicted with the provisions of N.C. Const., Art. IV, § 19, requiring a judge appointed to a judicial vacancy to stand for election at the next general election; remaining portions of the amendment by Session Laws 2000-67 were constitutional and could properly be severed from the unconstitutional clause. Pope v. Easley, 354 N.C. 544, 556 S.E.2d 265, 2001 N.C. LEXIS 1237 (2001).

In enacting the provisions in Session Laws 2000-67, G.S. 15.5, making the creation of the new judgeships effective upon gubernatorial appointment and allowing the appointees to serve for nearly four years before facing election, the General Assembly devised a statutory framework that does not comport with the limitation in N.C. Const. art. IV, § 19, requiring that judicial appointees hold their places only until the next election for members of the General Assembly; section 15.5.(a) operated to create a vacancy at the Court of Appeals, thereby requiring an election to fill the vacancy in the 2002 election cycle. Pope v. Easley, 354 N.C. 544, 556 S.E.2d 265, 2001 N.C. LEXIS 1237 (2001).

The addition of three new Court of Appeals judgeships by Session Laws 2000-67 was constitutionally permissible and severable from the unconstitutional provision of that act. Pope v. Easley, 354 N.C. 544, 556 S.E.2d 265, 2001 N.C. LEXIS 1237 (2001).

(a) The Chief Judge and each associate judge of the Court of Appeals shall receive the annual salary provided in the Current Operations Appropriations Act. Each judge is entitled to reimbursement for travel and subsistence expenses at the rate allowed State employees generally.

(a1) In addition to the reimbursement for travel and subsistence expenses authorized by subsection (a) of this section, and notwithstanding G.S. 138-6, each judge whose permanent residence is at least 50 miles from the City of Raleigh shall also be reimbursed for the mileage the judge travels each week to the City of Raleigh from the judge's home for business of the court. The reimbursement authorized by this subsection shall be calculated for each judge by multiplying the actual round-trip mileage from that judge's home to the City of Raleigh by a rate-per-mile established by the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts, but not to exceed the business standard mileage rate set by the Internal Revenue Service.

(b) In lieu of merit and other increment raises paid to regular State employees, a judge of the Court of Appeals shall receive as longevity pay an annual amount equal to four and eight-tenths percent (4.8%) of the annual salary set forth in the Current Operations Appropriations Act payable monthly after five years of service, nine and six-tenths percent (9.6%) after 10 years of service, fourteen and four-tenths percent (14.4%) after 15 years of service, nineteen and two-tenths percent (19.2%) after 20 years of service, and twenty-four percent (24%) after 25 years of service. "Service" means service as a justice or judge of the General Court of Justice or as a member of the Utilities Commission. Service shall also mean service as a district attorney or as a clerk of superior court. (1967, c. 108, s. 1; 1983, c. 761, s. 243; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1034, s. 165; c. 1109, ss. 11, 13.1; 1985, c. 698, s. 10(a); 2007-323, ss. 14.21(b), 28.18A(b).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2007-323, s. 1.2, provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations and Capital Improvements Appropriations Act of 2007'."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 32.5 is a severability clause.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2007-323, ss. 14.21(b) and 28.18A(b), effective July 1, 2007, added subsection (a1); in the first sentence of subsection (b), deleted "and" preceding "nineteen" and added "and twenty-four percent (24%) after 25 years of service" at the end.

§ 7A-19. Seats and sessions of court.

(a) The Court of Appeals shall sit in Raleigh, and at such other locations within the State as the Supreme Court may designate.

(b) The Department of Administration shall provide adequate quarters for the Court of Appeals.

(c) The Chief Judge shall schedule sessions of the court as required to discharge expeditiously the court's business. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

(a) The Court of Appeals shall appoint a clerk to serve at its pleasure. Before entering upon his duties, the clerk shall take the oath of office prescribed for the clerk of the Supreme Court, conformed to the office of clerk of the Court of Appeals, and shall be bonded, in the same manner as the clerk of superior court, in an amount prescribed by the Administrative Officer of the Courts, payable to the State, for the faithful performance of his duties. The salary of the clerk shall be fixed by the Administrative Officer of the Courts, subject to the approval of the Court of Appeals. The number and salaries of his assistants, and their bonds, if required, shall be fixed by the Administrative Officer of the Courts. The clerk shall adopt a seal of office, to be approved by the Court of Appeals.

(b) Subject to approval of the Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals shall promulgate from time to time a fee bill for services rendered by the clerk, and such fees shall be remitted to the State Treasurer. Charges to litigants for the reproduction of appellate records and briefs shall be fixed by rule of the Supreme Court and remitted to the Appellate Courts Printing and Computer Operations Fund established in G.S. 7A-343.3. The operations of the Court of Appeals shall be subject to the oversight of the State Auditor pursuant to Article 5A of Chapter 147 of the General Statutes. (1967, c. 108, s. 1; 1983, c. 913, s. 4; 2002-126, s. 2.2(k).)

The Court of Appeals may appoint a marshal to serve at its pleasure and to perform such duties as it may assign. The marshal shall have the criminal and civil powers of a sheriff and any additional powers necessary to execute the orders of the appellate division in any county of the State. His salary shall be fixed by the Administrative Officer, subject to the approval of the Court of Appeals. (1981, c. 485.)

Jurisdiction.

The Supreme Court has original jurisdiction to hear claims against the State, but its decisions shall be merely recommendatory; no process in the nature of execution shall issue thereon; the decisions shall be reported to the next session of the General Assembly for its action. The court shall by rule prescribe the procedures to be followed in the proper exercise of the jurisdiction conferred by this section. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Section Unconstitutional. — Even if the General Assembly did not intend to repeal this section by ratification of the 1971 revision of N.C. Const., Art. IV, this section is unconstitutional. Smith v. State, 289 N.C. 303, 222 S.E.2d 412 (1976).

This section was rendered null and void when the electorate approved revised N.C. Const., Art. IV, which deleted the provision granting the Supreme Court original jurisdiction of claims against the State. Smith v. State, 289 N.C. 303, 222 S.E.2d 412 (1976).

Legislative Intent to Repeal. — It was the intent of the General Assembly that upon the ratification of the 1971 revision of N.C. Const., Art. IV, this section be repealed, since the jurisdiction which this section purports to give to the Supreme Court exceeded that granted to it in the 1971 revision of N.C. Const., Art. IV. Smith v. State, 289 N.C. 303, 222 S.E.2d 412 (1976).

No Execution to Enforce Judgment Available from Supreme Court. — In the event a plaintiff is successful in establishing a claim for breach of contract against the State, he cannot obtain execution from the Supreme Court to enforce the judgment. Smith v. State, 289 N.C. 303, 222 S.E.2d 412 (1976).

The Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals respectively have jurisdiction to review upon appeal decisions of the several courts of the General Court of Justice and of administrative agencies, upon matters of law or legal inference, in accordance with the system of appeals provided in this Article. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Appeals in Civil Causes Distinguished from Appeals in Criminal Causes. — The constitutional and statutory structure of the General Court of Justice provides that, generally, appeals from the district court in civil causes go to the Court of Appeals, while appeals in criminal causes must first go to the superior court. State v. Killian, 25 N.C. App. 224, 212 S.E.2d 419 (1975).

Supreme Court Has Authority to Give Relief for Error of Law. — Supreme Court has authority to review the record on appeal and to give appropriate relief for an error of law committed by the trial court. State v. Lampkins, 286 N.C. 497, 212 S.E.2d 106 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 909, 96 S. Ct. 3220, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1216 (1976).

But No Authority to Grant Relief from Criminal Trial Free from Error of Law. — Supreme Court has no authority to grant relief to a defendant convicted of a criminal offense in a trial free from an error of law for the reason that it disagrees with the jury concerning the credibility of a witness for the State. State v. Lampkins, 286 N.C. 497, 212 S.E.2d 106 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 909, 96 S. Ct. 3220, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1216 (1976).

Supreme Court must accept as conclusive the verdict of the jury so far as the credibility of witnesses is concerned. State v. Lampkins, 286 N.C. 497, 212 S.E.2d 106 (1975), cert. denied, 428 U.S. 909, 96 S. Ct. 3220, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1216 (1976).

Objections and Exceptions Necessary to Preserve Legal Questions on Appeal. — Jurisdiction of the Supreme Court on appeal is limited to questions of law or legal inference, which ordinarily must be presented by objections duly entered and exceptions duly taken to the rulings of the lower court. State v. Hedrick, 289 N.C. 232, 221 S.E.2d 350 (1976).

When Findings of Trial Court Are Conclusive on Appeal. — Where evidence properly in the record fully supports the findings of fact which the trial court made, and the record itself does not disclose that these findings were based on information obtained by the trial judge in a manner violative of plaintiff's rights, the trial court's findings are conclusive on appeal. Horton v. Horton, 12 N.C. App. 526, 183 S.E.2d 794, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 727, 184 S.E.2d 884 (1971).

It is not the function of the Court of Appeals to make findings of fact. Horton v. Horton, 12 N.C. App. 526, 183 S.E.2d 794, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 727, 184 S.E.2d 884 (1971).

The Court of Appeals has no jurisdiction to entertain a motion for summary judgment made for the first time on appeal. Britt v. Allen, 12 N.C. App. 399, 183 S.E.2d 303 (1971).

Cited in State v. Colson, 274 N.C. 295, 163 S.E.2d 376 (1968); State v. Morris, 41 N.C. App. 164, 254 S.E.2d 241 (1979).

(a) Appeal lies of right directly to the Supreme Court in all cases in which the defendant is convicted of murder in the first degree and the judgment of the superior court includes a sentence of death.

(b) From any final judgment of a superior court, other than the one described in subsection (a) of this section, or one based on a plea of guilty or nolo contendere, including any final judgment entered upon review of a decision of an administrative agency, appeal lies of right to the Court of Appeals.

(c) From any final judgment of a district court in a civil action appeal lies of right directly to the Court of Appeals.

(d) From any interlocutory order or judgment of a superior court or district court in a civil action or proceeding which

(1) Affects a substantial right, or
(2) In effect determines the action and prevents a judgment from which appeal might be taken, or
(3) Discontinues the action, or
(4) Grants or refuses a new trial, appeal lies of right directly to the Court of Appeals.

(e) From any other order or judgment of the superior court from which an appeal is authorized by statute, appeal lies of right directly to the Court of Appeals. (1967, c. 108, s. 1; 1971, c. 377, s. 3; 1973, c. 704; 1977, c. 711, s. 4; 1987, c. 679; 1995, c. 204, s. 1.)

  B. Particular Orders.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

This section was not repealed or nullified by the enactment of Chapter 1A of the General Statutes prescribing the presently effective Rules of Civil Procedure. Wachovia Realty Invs. v. Housing, Inc., 292 N.C. 93, 232 S.E.2d 667 (1977).

There is no conflict between G.S. 15A-1444(e) and subsection (a) of this section. State v. Handy, 326 N.C. 532, 391 S.E.2d 159 (1990).

An order is immediately appealable if the order affects a substantial right and the loss of that right will injure the party appealing if not corrected prior to final judgment. Travco Hotels, Inc. v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 102 N.C. App. 659, 403 S.E.2d 593, aff'd, 332 N.C. 288, 420 S.E.2d 426 (1992).

Reliance upon a substantial rights analysis as the basis for appellate review appears contrary to the plain and unambiguous language of the statutes governing criminal appeals. State v. Shoff, 118 N.C. App. 724, 456 S.E.2d 875 (1995), appeal dismissed, 340 N.C. 572, 460 S.E.2d 328 (1995), aff'd, 342 N.C. 638, 466 S.E.2d 277 (1996).

The right to appeal is available through two channels. G.S. 1A-1, Rule 54(b) allows appeal if there has been a final judgment as to all of the claims and parties, or if the specific action of the trial court from which appeal is taken is final and the trial judge expressly determines that there is no just reason for delaying the appeal. The second channel to an appeal is by way of G.S. 1-277 or this section; an appeal will be permitted under these statutes if a substantial right would be affected by not allowing appeal before final judgment. Brown v. Brown, 77 N.C. App. 206, 334 S.E.2d 506, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 389, 338 S.E.2d 878 (1985).

Finality Requirement. — The statutes setting forth the appeals process do not include the same jurisdictional "finality" requirement as does the federal statute. Goldston v. AMC, 326 N.C. 723, 392 S.E.2d 735 (1990).

G.S. 1-277 and this section, considered together, provide that no appeal lies to an appellate court from an interlocutory judgment unless that ruling deprives the appellant of a substantial right which it would lose if the ruling were not reviewed before final judgment. State ex rel. Employment Sec. Comm'n v. IATSE Local 574, 114 N.C. App. 662, 442 S.E.2d 339 (1994).

There was no "substantial interest" exception present to permit appeal under G.S. 1-277 and this section of a court's order denying defendant's summary judgment. Cagle v. Teachy, 111 N.C. App. 244, 431 S.E.2d 801 (1993).

Appeals from other than final judgments are not absolutely barred by G.S. 1A-1, Rule 54(b) and subsection (c) of this section. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

For all practical purposes there is an unlimited right of appeal in North Carolina to the Appellate Division of the General Court of Justice from any final judgment of the superior court or the district court in civil and criminal cases. State v. Black, 7 N.C. App. 324, 172 S.E.2d 217 (1970).

The right to appeal must be exercised in accordance with the established rules of practice and procedure. State v. Black, 7 N.C. App. 324, 172 S.E.2d 217 (1970).

This statute should be strictly construed for the purpose of eliminating the unnecessary delay and expense of fragmented appeals and of presenting the whole case for determination in a single appeal from a final judgment. Buchanan v. Rose, 59 N.C. App. 351, 296 S.E.2d 508 (1982).

Particular Facts and Procedural Context Must Be Considered. — It is usually necessary to resolve the question of whether an appeal is premature in each case by considering the particular facts of that case and the procedural context in which the order from which appeal is sought was entered. Bernick v. Jurden, 306 N.C. 435, 293 S.E.2d 405 (1982).

No Appeal from Voluntary Election to Serve Sentence. — Where the trial court activated defendant's sentence upon his voluntary election to serve the sentence in lieu of the remainder of his probation and not "as a result of a finding of a violation of probation," defendant had no right to appeal from his activated sentence. State v. Ikard, 117 N.C. App. 460, 450 S.E.2d 927 (1994).

Right to Counsel. — G.S. 7A-450 et seq. has generally been construed to limit the right to appointed counsel in criminal cases to direct appeals taken as of right. Ross v. Moffitt, 417 U.S. 600, 94 S. Ct. 2437, 41 L. Ed. 2d 341 (1974).

Duty to Dismiss Appeal. — It is the duty of an appellate court to dismiss an appeal if there is no right to appeal. Pasour v. Pierce, 46 N.C. App. 636, 265 S.E.2d 652 (1980).

Where an appealing party has no right to appeal, an appellate court should on its own motion dismiss the appeal even though the question of appealability has not been raised by the parties themselves. Metcalf v. Palmer, 46 N.C. App. 622, 265 S.E.2d 484 (1980).

Court would address plaintiffs' appeal, which was not certified pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 54(b), finding that plaintiffs have a substantial right to have the liability of all defendants determined in one proceeding. Camp v. Leonard, 133 N.C. App. 554, 515 S.E.2d 909 (1999).

Substantial evidence in the record supported an administrative law judge's findings and its dismissal of a day care's petition for a contested case hearing where the day care filed nothing in nearly six months following the filing of the petition, despite receiving several orders from the administrative law judge to file and serve prehearing statements and other responses to motions. Lincoln v. N.C. HHS, 172 N.C. App. 567, 616 S.E.2d 622, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 1804 (2005).

Steps on Appeal. — While convictions that result in a judgment of death are automatically appealable to the Supreme Court of North Carolina, all other convictions are properly appealed to the Court of Appeals pursuant to G.S. 7A-27 and N.C. R. App. P. 4(d), and while neither party filed a motion to bypass the Court of Appeals as to defendant's non-capital conviction for burglary, when he appealed his conviction for murder and his death sentence, the Supreme Court of North Carolina, on its own initiative, and consistently with N.C. R. App. P. 2, considered defendant's assignments of error that concerned his burglary conviction under G.S. 14-51 because the issue also related to one of his arguments regarding an aggravating circumstance. State v. Elliott, 360 N.C. 400, 628 S.E.2d 735, 2006 N.C. LEXIS 46 (2006).

II. SENTENCE OF DEATH OR LIFE IMPRISONMENT.

Editor's Note. — The notes below were decided under subsection (a) of this section prior to the amendment in 1995, which deleted reference to life imprisonment from the subsection.*

The term "imprisonment for life" as it is used in this section means only a determinate life sentence and does not include an indeterminate sentence merely because the stated maximum is a life term. State v. Ferrell, 300 N.C. 157, 265 S.E.2d 210 (1980).

Death Sentence Affirmed. — Defendant's murder conviction and death sentence were affirmed as (1) there was no abuse of discretion in the trial court's decision to deny defendant's ex parte motion that a doctor be appointed as an expert on substance induced mood disorder; (2) the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion in limine seeking to exclude his prior conviction for malicious wounding; (3) there was no error in the trial court's refusal to peremptorily instruct the jury on the defendant's requested mitigating circumstances; (4) the evidence fully supported the aggravating circumstances found by the jury; (5) there was no indication the sentence of death was imposed under the influence of passion, prejudice, or any other arbitrary factor; and (6) the sentence of death was neither disproportionate nor excessive. Therefore, the defendant received a fair trial and capital sentencing proceeding, free from prejudicial error. State v. Brown, 357 N.C. 382, 584 S.E.2d 278, 2003 N.C. LEXIS 834 (2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1194, 124 S. Ct. 1447, 158 L. Ed. 2d 106 (2004).

Evidence supported the jury's findings that defendant acted with cruelty when he killed his wife with a shotgun while his stepson was sitting next to her, and then shot his stepson with the same shotgun shortly thereafter, and the state supreme court affirmed the trial court's judgments finding defendant guilty of two counts of first-degree murder and imposing the death penalty for each conviction. State v. Jones, 358 N.C. 330, 595 S.E.2d 124, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 341 (2004).

Petitions to Review Judgments in Habeas Corpus Proceedings. — By analogy, subsection (a) of this section, G.S. 15-180.2 (now repealed) and N.C.R.A.P., Rule 21(b) are logically applicable to petitions for certiorari to review judgments in habeas corpus proceedings involving the restraint of prisoners under sentences of death or life imprisonment. State v. Niccum, 293 N.C. 276, 238 S.E.2d 141 (1977).

Appeal to Supreme Court Under G.S. 15A-979 When Charge Is Death or Life Imprisonment. — G.S. 15A-979 does not specify whether an appeal lies to the Court of Appeals or to the Supreme Court. Subsection (a) of this section, however, stipulates that there is an appeal of right to the Supreme Court from a superior court judgment imposing a sentence of death or life imprisonment. When these two statutes are considered together, it is proper to appeal directly to the Supreme Court if the punishment for the charge(s) is either death or life imprisonment. State v. Silhan, 295 N.C. 636, 247 S.E.2d 902 (1978).

III. FINAL JUDGMENTS.

"Final Judgment" Defined. — A final judgment is one which disposes of the cause as to all the parties, leaving nothing to be judicially determined between them in the trial court. Atkins v. Beasley, 53 N.C. App. 33, 279 S.E.2d 866 (1981).

A party may properly appeal only from a final order, which disposes of all the issues as to all parties, or an interlocutory order affecting a substantial right of the appellant. Buffington v. Buffington, 69 N.C. App. 483, 317 S.E.2d 97 (1984).

Denial of Application for Certiorari Is Not Final Judgment. — A "judgment" of the superior court denying defendant's application to that court for a writ of certiorari to review the proceedings of the district court in a criminal case was not a final judgment within the meaning of subsection (b) of this section, and defendant was not authorized to appeal therefrom to the Court of Appeals as a matter of right; defendant's only remedy was by petition for certiorari to the Court of Appeals. State v. Flynt, 8 N.C. App. 323, 174 S.E.2d 120 (1970).

Appeal from Order of Superior Court Affirming Annexation Ordinance. — By this section initial appellate jurisdiction of an appeal from an order of the superior court affirming an annexation ordinance is given to the Court of Appeals, subject, however, to the provisions of G.S. 7A-31. Adams-Millis Corp. v. Town of Kernersville, 281 N.C. 147, 187 S.E.2d 704 (1972).

Appeal from Decision of Board of Medical Examiners. — Court of Appeals is proper court to determine appeals taken from decisions of superior court in proceedings for judicial review of decisions of the Board of Medical Examiners under G.S. 7A-27(b); Court of Appeals erred in dismissing appeal under G.S. 90-14.11, since generally accepted rule is that where there is irreconcilable conflict between two statutes, later statute controls as the last expression of legislative intent, and therefore, later enacted statute, G.S. 7A-27(b), controlled in case. In re Guess, 324 N.C. 105, 376 S.E.2d 8 (1989), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1047, 111 S. Ct. 754, 112 L. Ed. 2d 774 (1991).

The fact that plaintiff waived her right to appeal order granting summary judgment to one of three defendants in no way affected her statutory right to appeal from the final judgment, since although she could have appealed the entry of summary judgment as to that defendant, she was not required to do so. Ingle v. Allen, 71 N.C. App. 20, 321 S.E.2d 588 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 508, 329 S.E.2d 391 (1985).

Order Was Final Judgment Despite Reserving Issue for Jury. — Where the trial court in its "order and partial summary judgment" reserved for the jury the "issue as to whether defendant has waived any objection to, or is estopped to deny, the tenant's renewal of the lease," the order left no further action for the trial court to dispose of the case. Although the order reserved an issue for the jury, the trial court determined that it was irrelevant whether notice was received; therefore, there was no requirement for a trial on the issues of waiver or estoppel, and the order was effectively a final judgment and affected a substantial right. Janus Theatres of Burlington, Inc. v. Aragon, 104 N.C. App. 534, 410 S.E.2d 218 (1991).

Judgment Was Final Where Plaintiff Voluntarily Dismissed Remaining Claims. — Case was not dismissed because the employee's appeal was from a final judgment and was not interlocutory; the employee voluntarily dismissed the remaining claims as part of a settlement agreement. Tarrant v. Freeway Foods of Greensboro, Inc., 163 N.C. App. 504, 593 S.E.2d 808, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 409 (2004), cert. denied, 358 N.C. 739, 603 S.E.2d 126 (2004).

IV. INTERLOCUTORY ORDERS.

A. Generally.

"Interlocutory Order" Defined. — An order is interlocutory if it does not determine the issues but directs some further proceeding preliminary to final decree. Waters v. Qualified Personnel, Inc., 294 N.C. 200, 240 S.E.2d 338 (1978); Blackwelder v. State Dep't of Human Resources, 60 N.C. App. 331, 299 S.E.2d 777 (1983); Heavner v. Heavner, 73 N.C. App. 331, 326 S.E.2d 78, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 601, 330 S.E.2d 610 (1985).

Appeals of Right from Interlocutory Orders. — G.S. 62-90(a) and (d) provide for appeals of final orders of the North Carolina Utilities Commission, G.S. 7A-29(a) and (b) provide for appeals of right from certain administrative agencies, and subsection (d) of this section provides for appeals of right from certain interlocutory orders of the superior or district courts. State ex rel. Utils. Comm'n v. Buck Island, Inc., 158 N.C. App. 536, 581 S.E.2d 122, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1186 (2003).

Where only the issue of damages remained, no final judgment had been made and no substantial right had been affected, the appellate court found the trial court's certification ineffective and saw no impediment to the trial court's sorting out the various claims and affirmative defenses intertwined with the damages issue. CBP Resources, Inc. v. Mountaire Farms of N.C., Inc., 134 N.C. App. 169, 517 S.E.2d 151 (1999).

When Interlocutory Order Is Appealable Generally. — Ordinarily, an appeal lies only from a final judgment, but an interlocutory order which will work injury if not corrected before final judgment is appealable. Wachovia Realty Invs. v. Housing, Inc., 292 N.C. 93, 232 S.E.2d 667 (1977); Atkins v. Beasley, 53 N.C.

App. 33, 279 S.E.2d 866 (1981); Perry v. Aycock, 68 N.C. App. 705, 315 S.E.2d 791 (1984); Jenkins v. Wheeler, 69 N.C. App. 140, 316 S.E.2d 354, cert. denied, 311 N.C. 758, 321 S.E.2d 136 (1984); Stafford v. Stafford, 133 N.C. App. 163, 515 S.E.2d 43 (1999), aff'd, 351 N.C. 94, 520 S.E.2d 785 (1999).

Ordinarily, an appeal from an interlocutory order will be dismissed as fragmentary and premature unless the order affects some substantial right and will work injury to appellant if not corrected before appeal from final judgment. Wachovia Realty Invs. v. Housing, Inc., 292 N.C. 93, 232 S.E.2d 667 (1977); Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979); Sims v. Ritter Constr., Inc., 62 N.C. App. 52, 302 S.E.2d 293 (1983); Adair v. Adair, 62 N.C. App. 493, 303 S.E.2d 190, cert. denied, 309 N.C. 319, 307 S.E.2d 162 (1983).

This section in effect provides that no appeal lies to an appellate court from an interlocutory order or ruling of the trial judge unless such ruling or order deprives the appellant of a substantial right which he would lose if the ruling or order is not reviewed before final judgment. Waters v. Qualified Personnel, Inc., 294 N.C. 200, 240 S.E.2d 338 (1978); Citicorp Person-to-Person Fin. Center, Inc. v. Stallings, 49 N.C. App. 187, 270 S.E.2d 567 (1980); A.E.P. Indus., Inc. v. McClure, 308 N.C. 393, 302 S.E.2d 754 (1983); Heavner v. Heavner, 73 N.C. App. 331, 326 S.E.2d 78, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 601, 330 S.E.2d 610 (1985); Thompson v. Newman, 74 N.C. App. 597, 328 S.E.2d 597 (1985).

An appeal does not lie from an interlocutory order unless such order affects some substantial right claimed by the appellant and will work an injury to him if not corrected before an appeal from the final judgment. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979); Ball v. Ball, 55 N.C. App. 98, 284 S.E.2d 555 (1981); Fraser v. Di Santi, 75 N.C. App. 654, 331 S.E.2d 217, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 183, 337 S.E.2d 856 (1985); Jenkins v. Maintenance, Inc., 76 N.C. App. 110, 332 S.E.2d 90 (1985); Brown v. Brown, 77 N.C. App. 206, 334 S.E.2d 506, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 389, 338 S.E.2d 878 (1985).

For a defendant to have a right of appeal from a mandatory preliminary injunction, substantial rights of the appellant must be adversely affected. Otherwise, an appeal from such an interlocutory order is subject to being dismissed. Dixon v. Dixon, 62 N.C. App. 744, 303 S.E.2d 606 (1983).

No appeal lies to an appellate court from an interlocutory order unless the order deprives the appellant of a substantial right which he would lose absent a review prior to final determination. Thus, the threshold question presented by a purported appeal from an order granting a preliminary injunction is whether the appellant has been deprived of any substantial right which might be lost should the order escape appellate review before final judgment. Robins & Weill, Inc. v. Mason, 70 N.C. App. 537, 320 S.E.2d 693, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 495, 322 S.E.2d 559 (1984).

For an interlocutory order to be immediately appealable under North Carolina law, it must: (1) affect a substantial right, and (2) work injury if not corrected before final judgment. Goldston v. AMC, 326 N.C. 723, 392 S.E.2d 735 (1990).

Trial court's dismissal of plaintiffs' claims against aircraft manufacturer affected a substantial right to have determined in a single proceeding, i.e., whether plaintiffs were damaged by the actions of one, some or all defendants where their claims arise upon the same series of transactions, and the appeal from an interlocutory order was considered. Driver v. Burlington Aviation, Inc., 110 N.C. App. 519, 430 S.E.2d 476 (1993).

An interlocutory order not appealable under Rule 54(b) of the Rules of Civil Procedure may nevertheless be appealed pursuant to G.S. 1-277 and subsection (d) of this section which permit an appeal of an interlocutory order which (1) affects a substantial right, or (2) in effect determines the action and prevents a judgment from which appeal might be taken, or (3) discontinues the action, or (4) grants or refuses a new trial. Dalton Moran Shook, Inc. v. Pitt Dev. Co., 113 N.C. App. 707, 440 S.E.2d 585 (1994).

An appeal of an interlocutory order or judgment is permitted if the trial court's decision deprives the appellant of a substantial right which would be lost absent immediate review. North Carolina DOT v. Page, 119 N.C. App. 730, 460 S.E.2d 332 (1995).

There are two avenues by which an interlocutory judgment or order can be immediately appealed. First, if the order is final as to some but not all of the claims or parties and the trial court certifies there is no just reason to delay the appeal, and second, an interlocutory order can be immediately appealed under G.S. 1-277(a) and subdivision (d)(1) of this section if the trial court's decision deprives the appellant of a substantial right which would be lost absent immediate review. Bartlett v. Jacobs, 124 N.C. App. 521, 477 S.E.2d 693 (1996).

There are two avenues by which a party may immediately appeal an interlocutory order of judgment. First, if the order or judgment is final as to some but not all of the claims or parties, and the trial court certifies the case for appeal pursuant to G.S. 1A-1-54(b) an immediate appeal may lie. Second, an appeal is permitted under subdivision (d)(1) of this section and G.S. 1-277 (a) if the trial court's decision deprives the appellant of a substantial right which would be lost absent immediate review. Tinch v. Video Indus. Servs., Inc., 124 N.C. App.

391, 477 S.E.2d 193 (1996), rev'd on other grounds, 347 N.C. 380, 493 S.E.2d 426 (1997).

An interlocutory order can be immediately appealed under G.S. 1A-1-54(b) if the order is final as to some but not all of the claims, or an interlocutory order can be appealed under G.S. 1-277(a) and this subsection if the trial court's decision deprives the appellant of a substantial right which would be lost absent immediate review. First Atl. Mgt. Corp. v. Dunlea Realty Co., 131 N.C. App. 242, 507 S.E.2d 56 (1998).

Trial court's order granting a partial new trial and its judgment fixing the issue of liability were interlocutory and they were not appealable under the exceptions allowed by G.S. 1A-1, Rule 54(b), G.S. 1-277(a), or G.S. 7A-27(d), where the trial court did not certify either the order granting a partial new trial or the underlying judgment for immediate review, and where defendant failed to argue why the order and judgment appealed affected a substantial right. Loy v. Martin, 144 N.C. App. 414, 547 S.E.2d 843, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 424 (2001).

Where an interlocutory appeal affected a substantial right of one of the parties, such an appeal could be brought pursuant to G.S. 1-277 and 7A-27(d), and whether or not an appeal affected a substantial right had to be decided on a case by case basis. Ussery v. Taylor, 156 N.C. App. 684, 577 S.E.2d 159, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 326 (2003).

Arbitration Order in Particular. — An order denying arbitration, although interlocutory, is immediately appealable because it involves a substantial right which might be lost if appeal is delayed. Miller v. Two State Constr. Co., 118 N.C. App. 412, 455 S.E.2d 678 (1995).

Particular Facts and Procedural History Must Be Considered. — In determining which interlocutory orders are appealable and which are not, the Supreme Court must consider the particular facts of each case and the procedural history of the order from which an appeal is sought. Travco Hotels, Inc. v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 332 N.C. 288, 420 S.E.2d 426 (1992).

Under this section, whether a substantial right will be prejudiced by delaying an appeal must be determined on a case by case basis. Stafford v. Stafford, 133 N.C. App. 163, 515 S.E.2d 43 (1999), aff'd, 351 N.C. 94, 520 S.E.2d 785 (1999).

In deciding whether an appeal is interlocutory, G.S. 1-277 and this section require a two-part test: (1) does the trial court's order affect a substantial right; and (2) if so, will the loss of that right injure the party appealing if it is not corrected prior to final judgment. Travco Hotels, Inc. v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 102 N.C. App. 659, 403 S.E.2d 593, aff'd, 332 N.C. 288, 420 S.E.2d 426 (1992).

Separation of Property in Divorce Cases. — Because a partial summary judgment giving a wife two parcels of land, before the divorcing parties' property was equitably divided, was an interlocutory order, a husband was not required to file an appeal from the interlocutory order; no substantial right of either party was involved, and the partial summary judgment was appealable when the husband filed his appeal from the equitable distribution judgment. Davis v. Davis, 360 N.C. 518, 631 S.E.2d 114, 2006 N.C. LEXIS 593 (2006).

The Appellate Division Rules on Interlocutory Nature of Appeals. — The trial court's determination that there is no just reason to delay an appeal, while accorded great deference, cannot bind the appellate courts because ruling on the interlocutory nature of appeals is properly a matter for the appellate division, not the trial court. First Atl. Mgt. Corp. v. Dunlea Realty Co., 131 N.C. App. 242, 507 S.E.2d 56 (1998).

No Appeal from Interlocutory Order in Criminal Proceeding Absent Statutory Provision. — In light of the legislature's enactment of G.S. 15A-1444(d) and the decision in State v. Henry, 318 N.C. 408, 348 S.E.2d 593 (1986), G.S. 1-277, the statutory basis for the holding in State v. Childs, 265 N.C. 575, 144 S.E.2d 653 (1965) (per curiam) and dictum in State v. Bryant, 280 N.C. 407, 185 S.E.2d 854 (1972) is no longer relevant to the appeal of interlocutory orders in criminal proceedings; accordingly, the court of appeals declines to follow State v. Jones, 67 N.C. App. 413, 313 S.E.2d 264 (1984); State v. Montalbano, 73 N.C. App. 259, 326 S.E.2d 634, disc. rev. denied, 313 N.C. 608, 332 S.E.2d 182 (1985); and State v. Major, 84 N.C. App. 421, 352 S.E.2d 862 (1987) insofar as they might allow interlocutory appeals in criminal proceedings based on Childs, Bryant, or G.S. 1-277. State v. Joseph, 92 N.C. App. 303, 374 S.E.2d 132 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 115, 377 S.E.2d 241 (1989).

For discussion of apparent doctrinal inconsistency concerning the requirements for appealing interlocutory orders, which may produce irreconcilable results in cases which include counterclaims, see J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

Fragmentary Appeals from Interlocutory Orders Not Permitted. — The appeal from a preliminary injunction restraining defendant bank from disposing of shares of corporate stock it held as executor under the will of a stockholder who died owning 88% of the capital stock of a North Carolina corporation was unauthorized and was dismissed since it was fragmentary; piecemeal appeals from interlocutory orders are not usually permitted in this State and the preliminary injunction appealed from in this case was such an order, as its effect was temporary rather than permanent. Shuping v. NCNB Nat'l Bank, 93 N.C. App. 338, 377 S.E.2d 802 (1989).

Standing to Appeal. — In an action brought by payee against makers to enforce acceleration clause in note, where third-party defendant bank not only had an opportunity to participate, but in fact did fully participate in the determination of third-party plaintiff's liability and was bound by the judgment in favor of plaintiff entered against defendants as third-party plaintiffs, bank qualified as an aggrieved party within the meaning of G.S. 1-271 and the bank had standing to appeal entry of summary judgment in favor of payee. Barker v. Agee, 326 N.C. 470, 389 S.E.2d 803 (1990).

The General Assembly did not restrict the right of appeal provided by G.S. 1-277 and subsection (d) of this section by engrafting G.S. 1A-1, Rule 54(b) requirements upon them. Oestreicher v. American Nat'l Stores, Inc., 290 N.C. 118, 225 S.E.2d 797 (1976).

G.S. 1-277 and this section prevent fragmentary, premature and unnecessary appeals by permitting the trial divisions to be done with a case fully and finally before it is presented to the appellate division. Blackwelder v. State Dep't of Human Resources, 60 N.C. App. 331, 299 S.E.2d 777 (1983).

The reason for the rules embodied in G.S. 1-277(a) and subdivision (d)(1) of this section is to prevent fragmentary, premature and unnecessary appeals by permitting the trial divisions to have done with a case fully and finally before it is presented to the appellate division. Appellate procedure is designed to eliminate the unnecessary delay and expense of repeated fragmentary appeals, and to present the whole case for determination in a single appeal from the final judgment. McKinney v. Royal Globe Ins. Co., 64 N.C. App. 370, 307 S.E.2d 390 (1983).

Appellate court refused to review the neighbors' interlocutory appeal of the trial court's grant of partial summary judgment, where the neighbors failed to comply with N.C. R. App. P. 28(b)(4) by failing to state in their brief the substantial right that would have been lost if the appeal was not heard, as was required under G.S. 1-277(a), 7A-27(d)(1). Munden v. Courser, 155 N.C. App. 217, 574 S.E.2d 110, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 1582 (2002).

If appellant's rights would be fully and adequately protected by an exception to an interlocutory order that could then be assigned as error on appeal after final judgment, there is no right to an immediate appeal. Horne v. Nobility Homes, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 476, 363 S.E.2d 642 (1988); Howell v. Howell, 89 N.C. App. 115, 365 S.E.2d 181 (1988).

No Appeal from Interlocutory Order Where Substantial Right Not Affected. — An interlocutory order which does not affect a "substantial right" of one of the parties under G.S. 1-277 and subsection (d) of this section is not appealable, and the avoidance of a rehearing or trial is not considered to be such a "substantial right." Davis v. Mitchell, 46 N.C. App. 272, 265 S.E.2d 248 (1980).

No appeal lies from an interlocutory order unless it affects a substantial right and will result in injury if not reviewed before final judgment. Horne v. Nobility Homes, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 476, 363 S.E.2d 642 (1988); Howell v. Howell, 89 N.C. App. 115, 365 S.E.2d 181 (1988). But see, State v. Joseph, 92 N.C. App. 203, 374 S.E.2d 132 (1988), cert. denied, 324 N.C. 115, 377 S.E.2d 241 (1989), annotated above.

Court of appeals held that where a trial court dismissed a company's contract claims, but stayed the tort claims: (1) this was an interlocutory order; (2) there was no certification; and (3) the company failed to show a substantial right at stake on appeal. Mitsubishi Elec. & Elecs. USA, Inc. v. Duke Power Co., 155 N.C. App. 555, 573 S.E.2d 742, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 1602 (2002).

But Interlocutory Order May Be Appealed If It Affects a Substantial Right. — Orders which are technically interlocutory may properly be appealed, regardless of lack of certification under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 54(b) if they affect a substantial right. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

Although it is the general rule that no appeal lies from an interlocutory order, G.S. 1-277 and subsection (d) of this section permit an immediate appeal from an interlocutory order which affects a substantial right. Fox v. Wilson, 85 N.C. App. 292, 354 S.E.2d 737 (1987).

Interlocutory order affects a substantial right so that it is appealable under G.S. 1-277(a) and subdivision (d)(1) of this section if the right affected is substantial and the right will be lost, prejudiced, or less than adequately protected if order is not reviewed before final judgment. T'ai Co. v. Market Square Ltd. Partnership, 92 N.C. App. 234, 373 S.E.2d 885 (1988).

Appeal Is Permitted Where a Substantial Right Would Be Affected. — Where a trial court granted plaintiff summary judgment as to liability on a criminal conversation claim, and granted defendant summary judgment as to an alienation of affections claim, though no final judgment was entered as to the issue of damages for the criminal conversation claim, nor was certification granted under G.S. 1A-1, N.C. R. Civ. P. 54(b) as to the alienation of affections claim, the appeal affected a substantial right that would be lost absent immediate review, because the elements of damages were so closely related that they did not support separate awards for each tort. McCutchen v.

McCutchen, 170 N.C. App. 1, 612 S.E.2d 162, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 904 (2005).

Because a physician's assertions of statutory privilege related directly to the matters to be disclosed under a trial court's interlocutory discovery order, the challenged discovery order affected a substantial right and the physician's interlocutory appeal was properly before the appellate court under G.S. 1-277(a) and G.S. 7A-27(d)(1). Armstrong v. Barnes, 171 N.C. App. 287, 614 S.E.2d 371, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 1262 (2005), cert. denied, 360 N.C. 60, 621 S.E.2d 173 (2005).

North Carolina Court of Appeals accepted the appeal brought by third-party defendants, the North Carolina Division of Forest Resources and North Carolina Department of Environment and Natural Resources, in a wrongful death suit, asserting negligence on the third-party defendants with regard to a forest fire obscuring the vision of travelers on a highway, which led to a multiple vehicle accident, killing a passenger, because the trial court's denial of the third-party defendants' motions to dismiss raised the issues of sovereign immunity and the public duty doctrine, which affected a substantial right sufficient to warrant immediate appellate review. Myers v. McGrady, 170 N.C. App. 501, 613 S.E.2d 334, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 1087 (2005), , rev'd and remanded, review improvidently allowed, 350 N.C. 460, 628 S.E.2d 761 (2006).

A substantial right is one which will clearly be lost or irremediably adversely affected if the order is not reviewable before final judgment. In other words, the right to immediate appeal is reserved for those cases in which the normal course of procedure is inadequate to protect the substantial right affected by the order sought to be appealed. Blackwelder v. State Dep't of Human Resources, 60 N.C. App. 331, 299 S.E.2d 777 (1983).

The "substantial right" test for appealability of interlocutory orders is more easily stated than applied. It is usually necessary to resolve the question in each case by considering the particular facts of that case and the procedural context in which the order from which appeal is sought was entered. Blackwelder v. State Dep't of Human Resources, 60 N.C. App. 331, 299 S.E.2d 777 (1983).

No hard and fast rules exist for determining which appeals affect a substantial right. Rather, such decisions usually require consideration of the facts of the particular case. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

Whether a substantial right is affected usually depends on the facts and circumstances of each case and the procedural context of the orders appealed from. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

There has evolved a two-part test of the appealability of interlocutory orders under the "substantial right" exception provided in G.S. 1-277(a) and subdivision (d)(1) of this section. First, the right itself must be "substantial," and second, the enforcement of the substantial right must be lost, prejudiced or less than adequately protected by exception to entry of the interlocutory order. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

The appealability of interlocutory orders pursuant to the "substantial right" exception is determined by a two-step test. The right itself must be substantial and the deprivation of that substantial right must potentially work injury to plaintiff if not corrected before appeal from final judgment. Miller v. Swann Plantation Dev. Co., 101 N.C. App. 394, 399 S.E.2d 137 (1991).

Awards Pendente Lite. — Awards pendente lite are interlocutory decrees which necessarily do not affect a substantial right from which lies an immediate appeal pursuant to this section. Browne v. Browne, 101 N.C. App. 617, 400 S.E.2d 736 (1991).

Facts and circumstances of each case and the procedural context of the orders appealed from are the determinative factors in deciding whether a "substantial right" is affected. Schneider v. Brunk, 72 N.C. App. 560, 324 S.E.2d 922 (1985).

Avoidance of a rehearing or trial is not a "substantial right" entitling a party to an immediate appeal. Blackwelder v. State Dep't of Human Resources, 60 N.C. App. 331, 299 S.E.2d 777 (1983).

Denial of a motion to dismiss is interlocutory because it simply allows an action to proceed and will not seriously impair any right of defendants that cannot be corrected upon appeal from final judgment, and the avoidance of a trial is not a "substantial right" that would make such an interlocutory order appealable under G.S. 1-277 or subsection (d) of this section. Howard v. Ocean Trail Convalescent Ctr., 68 N.C. App. 494, 315 S.E.2d 97 (1984).

Avoidance of a trial is not a substantial right entitling plaintiff to an immediate appeal. Horne v. Nobility Homes, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 476, 363 S.E.2d 642 (1988).

Court found that the only possible "injury" defendant would suffer if not permitted immediate appellate review was the necessity of proceeding to trial before the matter was reviewed by the appellate court, not the deprivation of a substantial right under this section. Anderson v. Atlantic Cas. Ins. Co., 134 N.C. App. 724, 518 S.E.2d 786 (1999).

The necessity of a second trial, standing alone, does not affect a substantial right. However, in certain cases the appellate courts have held that a plaintiff's right to have all his claims heard before the same jury affects a substantial right. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C.

App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

A party has a "substantial right" to avoid separate trials of the same legal issues. Whitehurst v. Corey, 88 N.C. App. 746, 364 S.E.2d 728 (1988).

Right to avoid possibility of two trials on same issues can be a substantial right. Davidson v. Knauff Ins. Agency, Inc., 93 N.C. App. 20, 376 S.E.2d 488, cert. denied, 324 N.C. 577, 381 S.E.2d 772 (1989).

In a suit for malicious prosecution, in which defendant counterclaimed requesting a constructive trust, a factual issue of whether plaintiff forged defendant's name on a check was central to both actions; denial of appeal from summary judgment against defendant could have resulted in two juries in separate trials reaching different resolutions of this same issue if subsequent trial on the merits and appeal were successful. Consequently, the order dismissing defendant's counterclaim affected a substantial right and appeal was granted. Lamb v. Lamb, 92 N.C. App. 680, 375 S.E.2d 685 (1989).

The right to avoid the possibility of two trials on the same issues can be a substantial right that permits an appeal of an interlocutory order when there are issues of fact common to the claim appealed and remaining claims. Allen v. Sea Gate Ass'n, 119 N.C. App. 761, 460 S.E.2d 197 (1995).

Under circumstances in which a patient's suit alleged multiple, overlapping acts of medical malpractice resulting in harm, it was best that one jury hear the case to avoid inconsistent verdicts; accordingly, a summary judgment in favor of a radiologist affected a substantial right and the appeal from the summary judgment was considered, despite the fact that the summary judgment was granted as to one but not all of the defendants and the trial court did not certify that there was "no just reason for delay." Burgess v. Campbell, — N.C. App. —, 642 S.E.2d 478, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 692 (2007).

But Avoiding Separate Trials of Different Issues Is Not a Substantial Right. — Simply having all claims determined in one proceeding is not a substantial right. A party has instead the substantial right to avoid two separate trials of the same "issues," but avoiding separate trials of different issues is not a substantial right. J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

Appellate Court as Dispatcher of Appeals. — To the extent that judgments as to one or more but fewer than all parties are determined by the appellate courts of this State to affect a "substantial right" of one of the litigants under G.S. 1-277 and subsection (d) of this section, the procedure for trial court certification of such judgments as appealable established in G.S. 1A-1, Rule 54(b) is bypassed and the appellate court is substituted as the true dispatcher of appeals. Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240 (1980).

Rule Against Allowing Appeal from Interlocutory Orders Strictly Construed. — Strict construction of the rule against allowing appeal from an interlocutory order of the trial court serves the purpose of eliminating the unnecessary delay and expense of fragmented appeals and of presenting the whole case for determination in a single appeal from a final judgment. Funderburk v. Justice, 25 N.C. App. 655, 214 S.E.2d 310 (1975).

Effect of Procedures for Staying Execution of Judgment. — The existence of procedures under G.S. 1-269, 1-289 and 1A-1, Rule 62, for staying execution on judgment does not prevent the entry of the judgment from affecting a substantial right of the judgment debtor. Wachovia Realty Invs. v. Housing, Inc., 292 N.C. 93, 232 S.E.2d 667 (1977).

No Appeal as Matter of Right from Interlocutory Orders in Criminal Cases. — This section makes no provision for an appeal as a matter of right from interlocutory orders in criminal cases. State v. Lance, 1 N.C. App. 620, 162 S.E.2d 154 (1968); State v. Smith, 4 N.C. App. 491, 4 N.C. App. 591, 166 S.E.2d 870, 166 S.E.2d 870 (1969); State v. Bryant, 12 N.C. App. 530, 183 S.E.2d 824 (1971), rev'd on other grounds, 280 N.C. 407, 185 S.E.2d 854 (1972).

In a criminal case there is no provision in the statute for an appeal to the Court of Appeals as a matter of right from an interlocutory order entered therein. State v. Black, 7 N.C. App. 324, 172 S.E.2d 217 (1970); State v. Thompson, 56 N.C. App. 439, 289 S.E.2d 132 (1982).

Dismissal of Interlocutory Appeals. — The appellate division possesses sufficient authority to dispose of interlocutory appeals which do not affect a substantial right by dismissal. It has express authority to do so on motion of the parties if the appeal is frivolous or is taken solely for purposes of delay. Or it may exercise its general authority in response to motions filed under the general motions provision. Or the appellate division may dismiss upon its own motion as part of its general duty to apply the laws governing the right to appeal. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

In a workers' compensation proceeding, an appeal by an employer and its insurance carrier was dismissed as interlocutory where the North Carolina Industrial Commission specifically reserved the issue of the amount of the compensation award for the employee. Watts v. Hemlock Homes of the Highlands, Inc., 160 N.C. App. 81, 584 S.E.2d 97, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1666 (2003).

Because the trial court did not rule on the merits of an employee's claim for unemployment benefits, but found that the Employment Security Commission's order did not address all of the relevant issues raised by the record, and the findings were incomplete and failed to set out the sequence of events regarding the timing and notification of the employee's discharge, the order was clearly interlocutory; hence, without evidence that the employee's substantial rights were affected, or that any criteria for an immediate appeal was required, the employee's appeal was dismissed. Reeves v. Yellow Transp., Inc., 170 N.C. App. 610, 613 S.E.2d 350, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 1076 (2005), review denied, — N.C. —, 619 S.E.2d 511 (2005).

Filing of Motion to Dismiss. — Ruling on the interlocutory nature of appeals is properly a matter for the appellate division, not the trial court. Since this often requires consideration of the merits, motions to dismiss appeals on grounds of being interlocutory should properly be filed after the record on appeal is filed in the appellate court. Estrada v. Jaques, 70 N.C. App. 627, 321 S.E.2d 240 (1984).

Possibility of Two Trials. — The right to avoid the possibility of two trials on the same issues can be a substantial right so as to warrant an immediate appeal under G.S. 1-277 and subsection (d) of this section. Dalton Moran Shook, Inc. v. Pitt Dev. Co., 113 N.C. App. 707, 440 S.E.2d 585 (1994).

Where dismissal of appeal as interlocutory could result in two different trials on the same issues, creating the possibility of inconsistent verdicts, a substantial right was prejudiced; therefore, defendant's motion for summary judgment which was granted by the trial court was immediately appealable by plaintiff. Hartman v. Walkertown Shopping Ctr., Inc., 113 N.C. App. 632, 439 S.E.2d 787, cert. denied, 336 N.C. 780, 447 S.E.2d 422 (1994).

Where denial of Rule 60(b) motion was in the nature of an interlocutory order because plaintiff's voluntary dismissal resulted in there being no action pending, and defendants would not suffer the loss of a substantial right absent an appeal, in the court's discretion pursuant to Rules 2 and 21 the appeal was treated as a writ of certiorari. Troy v. Tucker, 126 N.C. App. 213, 484 S.E.2d 98 (1997).

B. Particular Orders.

Order Impacting Sovereign Immunity. — Denial of a city's summary judgment motion in a wrongful death action, an interlocutory order, was immediately appealable pursuant to G.S. 7A-27(d)(1) because the appeal raised an issue of sovereign immunity. Williams v. Scotland County, 167 N.C. App. 105, 604 S.E.2d 334, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 2076 (2004), cert. denied, 359 N.C. 327, 611 S.E.2d 168 (2005).

Denial of an officer's and department's motion for summary judgment grounded on the defense of governmental immunity affected a substantial right and was immediately appealable; with respect to the balance of their arguments, however, the officer and the department showed no substantial right that would have been lost or irreparably prejudiced if the order was not reviewed before final judgment and those arguments were premature. Showalter v. N.C. Dep't of Crime Control & Pub. Safety, — N.C. App. —, 643 S.E.2d 649, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 836 (2007).

Although a trial court's denial of a county board of education's summary judgment motion was an interlocutory order that was generally not appealable at that point in the litigation, as the board was claiming sovereign immunity as a complete defense to an action by a student's mother after the student was denied placement at a school, the order was immediately appealable under G.S. 7A-27(d)(1). Craig v. New Hanover County Bd. of Educ., — N.C. App. —, 648 S.E.2d 923, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1941 (2007).

Order granting a motion for a change of venue is interlocutory and not immediately appealable. Kennon v. Kennon, 72 N.C. App. 161, 323 S.E.2d 741 (1984).

Order Denying Motion for Change of Venue. — Defendant's purported appeal from an interlocutory order denying defendant's motion for a change of venue pursuant to G.S. 1-83(2) for the convenience of the witnesses and the ends of justice was dismissed as premature. Furches v. Moore, 48 N.C. App. 430, 269 S.E.2d 635 (1980).

In cases where a trial court's decision deprives an appellant of a substantial right which would be lost absent immediate review, an appellate court was allowed to review the appeal; motions for change of venue because the county designated was not proper affected a substantial right and were immediately appealable. Hawley v. Hobgood, 174 N.C. App. 606, 622 S.E.2d 117, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2478 (2005).

Appeal of the denial of a subcontractor's motions to consolidate actions and to change venue was proper because the right to venue established by statute is a substantial right, the denial of which is immediately appealable; further, a substantial right was affected when the same factual issues would be present in both trials and the possibility of inconsistent verdicts on those issues existed. Barrier Geotechnical Contractors, Inc. v. Radford Quarries of Boone, Inc., — N.C. App. —, 646 S.E.2d 840, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1599 (2007).

Order Regarding Interrogatories. — Trial court's order sustaining objections to, and granting a motion to strike, certain interrogatories, denying defendants' motion to compel answers to those interrogatories, and also denying defendants' motion to permit them to respond to plaintiff's request for admissions was interlocutory, and defendants' appeal was fragmentary and premature. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Olive, 42 N.C. App. 574, 257 S.E.2d 100 (1979).

In a wrongful death action, the defendant declined to answer certain interrogatories on the grounds of self-incrimination, but was ordered to do so by the court, and he appealed. Although this appeal was from an interlocutory order, it was nevertheless authorized, because if some of the interrogatories were incriminating and the defendant was compelled to answer them, his constitutional rights could have been lost beyond recall, and his appeal at the end of the trial would have been of no value. Shaw v. Williamson, 75 N.C. App. 604, 331 S.E.2d 203, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 669, 335 S.E.2d 496 (1985).

Refusal to grant permissive intervention is an interlocutory order. Howell v. Howell, 89 N.C. App. 115, 365 S.E.2d 181 (1988).

Underinsured Motorist Carrier's Right to Appear as Unnamed Defendant. — An underinsured motorist carrier could appeal from an order denying its motion to appear unnamed in the liability phase of a trial against its insured, since the right of an underinsured motorist carrier to defend unnamed is substantial. Church v. Allstate Ins. Co., 143 N.C. App. 527, 547 S.E.2d 458, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 315 (2001).

Order Granting Motion to Amend. — An order of the trial court allowing a motion to amend a complaint is interlocutory and is not immediately appealable. Barber v. Woodmen of World Life Ins. Soc'y, 88 N.C. App. 666, 364 S.E.2d 715 (1988).

Class Action. — Because no substantial right was involved in a trial court's determination that the case met the prerequisites to utilizing a class action, the general rule disallowing interlocutory appeals of such orders applied. Frost v. Mazda Motor of Am., 353 N.C. 188, 540 S.E.2d 324, 2000 N.C. LEXIS 903 (2000).

Order Granting Intervention. — Although the rule is not absolute, ordinarily no appeal will lie from an order permitting intervention of parties unless the order adversely affects a substantial right which the appellant may lose if not granted an appeal before final judgment. The rule applies with equal vigor without regard to whether the trial court grants a motion to intervene as a matter of right pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 24(a) or as permissive intervention pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 24(b). Wood v. City of Fayetteville, 35 N.C. App. 738, 242 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 295 N.C. 264, 245 S.E.2d 781 (1978).

Order Denying Intervention. — An interlocutory order was immediately appealable, where substantial rights were affected by the trial court's denial of a motion by a physician and his employer to intervene in a declaratory judgment action brought by an infant patient's estate to determine which potential heirs would share in the proceeds, if any, of the underlying wrongful death action. Alford v. Davis, 131 N.C. App. 214, 505 S.E.2d 917 (1998).

Denial of Motion to Dismiss. — Ordinarily, there is no right of appeal from the refusal of a motion to dismiss. The refusal to dismiss the action generally will not seriously impair any right of defendant that cannot be corrected upon appeal from final judgment. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

An order denying defendant's motion to dismiss plaintiff's claim for punitive damages is not immediately appealable. Williams v. East Coast Sales, Inc., 50 N.C. App. 565, 274 S.E.2d 276 (1981).

Where defendant was ordered by the trial court through an interlocutory order to pay plaintiff's legal fees, and where defendant did not perfect his appeal from such judgment, defendant did not lose his right to attack the judgment, since the record indicated that the appeal was not taken because of an agreement between the parties' counsel to vacate the order in question. Stroupe v. Stroupe, 301 N.C. 656, 273 S.E.2d 434 (1981).

The order entered by the trial court denying the defendants' motion to dismiss and motion for summary judgment was not a final determination of the defendants' rights, even though the trial court stated that "there is no just reason to delay the appeal," and did not affect the defendants' substantial rights. The appeal of the order, therefore, could not lie as of right. Fraser v. Di Santi, 75 N.C. App. 654, 331 S.E.2d 217, cert. denied, 315 N.C. 183, 337 S.E.2d 856 (1985).

The trial court's denial of defendant's motion to dismiss clearly represented an interlocutory order, which was not properly before the Court of Appeals. Southern Uniform Rentals, Inc. v. Iowa Nat'l Mut. Ins. Co., 90 N.C. App. 738, 370 S.E.2d 76 (1988).

Where the trial court denied employer's motion to dismiss employee's breach of contract suit on the ground of a forum selection clause, finding that the clause was a product of unequal bargaining power, the motion to dismiss was immediately appealable. Cox v. Dine-A-Mate, Inc., 129 N.C. App. 773, 501 S.E.2d 353 (1998), cert. denied, 349 N.C. 355 (1998).

Same — Failure to State Claim. — The trial court's refusal to allow defendant's motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 12 (b)(6) did not put an end to the action or seriously impair any substantial right of defendant that could not be corrected upon appeal from final judgment. Godley Auction Co.

v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

Same — Failure to Join Necessary Party. — No substantial right of the defendant was impaired by the trial court's denial of the motion to dismiss for failure to join a necessary party pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(7). The trial court did not rule that other parties were not necessary to be joined. It ruled that the action should not be dismissed for that purpose. Defendant still had adequate opportunity in the trial court for a determination on the question of joinder of parties. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

Same — Expiration of Statute of Limitations. — The denial of plaintiff's motion to dismiss the defendant railroad's counterclaim for being filed beyond the three-year statute of limitations did not affect a substantial right and therefore was not appealable. Thompson v. Norfolk S. Ry., 140 N.C. App. 115, 535 S.E.2d 397, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1100 (2000).

Immunity as Basis for Summary Adjudication. — Denial of a motion to dismiss or for summary judgment is interlocutory and not immediately appealable. However, recent case law clearly establishes that if immunity is raised as a basis in the motion for summary adjudication, a substantial right is affected and the denial is immediately appealable. EEE-ZZZ Lay Drain Co. v. North Carolina Dep't of Human Resources, 108 N.C. App. 24, 422 S.E.2d 338 (1992), overruled on other grounds, Meyer v. Walls, 347 N.C. 97, 489 S.E.2d 880 (1997).

Denial of defendant's motion to dismiss on the basis of res judicata did not affect a substantial right entitling defendant to immediate appeal, where no possibility of inconsistent verdicts existed and no manifest injustice would result absent immediate appeal. Country Club of Johnston County, Inc. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 135 N.C. App. 159, 519 S.E.2d 540 (1999).

Same — Collateral Estoppel. — The denial of a motion for summary judgment based on the defense of collateral estoppel may affect a substantial right. McCallum v. North Carolina Coop. Extension Serv., 142 N.C. App. 48, 542 S.E.2d 227, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 51 (2001), cert. denied, 353 N.C. 452, 548 S.E.2d 527 (2001).

Summary Judgment Based on Governmental Immunity. — Generally, denial of a motion for summary judgment is interlocutory and not immediately appealable; however, if the defense of governmental immunity is asserted as grounds for the summary judgment motion, the denial of the motion has been held to affect a substantial right, and the order is immediately appealable pursuant to G.S. 1-277(a) and subsection (d). Hallman v. Charlotte-Mecklenburg Bd. of Educ., 124 N.C. App. 435, 477 S.E.2d 179 (1996).

Order denying a motion to amend a complaint is interlocutory, for it does not determine the entire controversy and requires further action by the trial court. Mauney v. Morris, 73 N.C. App. 589, 327 S.E.2d 248, rev'd on other grounds, 316 N.C. 67, 340 S.E.2d 397 (1986).

Order Granting Motion to Amend and Denying Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings. — An order granting a motion to amend and denying a motion for judgment on the pleadings is obviously not a final judgment but is interlocutory. Consequently, no appeal lies of right. Funderburk v. Justice, 25 N.C. App. 655, 214 S.E.2d 310 (1975).

Order Regarding Counterclaims. — The trial court's order for partial summary judgment in favor of the plaintiff employee suing for payment of a commission as to the defendant employer's four counterclaims—wrongful attachment, negligence, breach of contract, and breach of fiduciary duty—was interlocutory; no overlapping factual issues existed between the plaintiff's complaint and the defendant's counterclaims, and the order appealed from did not deprive the defendant of a substantial right which would be jeopardized absent a review prior to a final determination on the merits. Murphy v. Coastal Physician Group, 139 N.C. App. 290, 533 S.E.2d 817, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 893 (2000).

Order Dismissing Counterclaims Except as Set-Offs. — In an action arising out of a contract between the parties whereby defendants agreed to construct a house on a piece of property owned by them and to convey the completed house and property to plaintiffs, the trial court's order dismissing defendants' counterclaims for overages, interest expenses, liquidated damages, attorneys' fees and trespass but allowing defendants to assert these counterclaims as set-offs to plaintiff's claim was not a final judgment; however, the judgment in question affected a substantial right of defendants, their right to recover on their claims based on the contract, and the absence of an immediate appeal would work an injury to them, the possibility of being forced to undergo two full trials on the merits and to incur the expense of litigating twice, if not corrected before an appeal from a final judgment. Roberts v. Heffner, 51 N.C. App. 646, 277 S.E.2d 446 (1981).

Denial of motion to amend answer to allege compulsory counterclaim affects a substantial right and is immediately appealable. Hudspeth v. Bunzey, 35 N.C. App. 231, 241 S.E.2d 119, appeal dismissed, 294 N.C. 736, 244 S.E.2d 154 (1978).

Order allowing estates to amend their complaint in a medical malpractice suit was not immediately appealable where the issues of a hospital's claim that, without immediate review, it lost the right to avoid trial altogether by (1) raising the statute of limitations, (2) raising "estoppel by laches" as an affirmative defense, or (3) having the amended complaint dismissed for failure to comply with G.S. 1A-1, N.C. R. Civ. P. 9(j), were not brought before the trial court, and no substantial right was lost by the failure to allow immediate review; the estates were also entitled to sanctions against the hospital. Estate of Spell v. Ghanem, 175 N.C. App. 191, 622 S.E.2d 725, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2717 (2005).

Order Denying Motion to Permit Contact with Treating Physician. — A discovery order which prohibited the defendant hospital from contact with the defendant doctor other than through "the statutorily recognized methods of discovery enumerated in" G.S. 1A-1, Rule 26 was not immediately appealable because the order in no way precluded the hospital from "meeting with and discussing the case with" the doctor in the context of the multi-varied discovery methods detailed in G.S. 1A-1, Rule 26 and, therefore, did not affect a substantial right. Norris v. Sattler, 139 N.C. App. 409, 533 S.E.2d 483, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 894 (2000).

Contempt Order. — See Willis v. Duke Power Co., 291 N.C. 19, 229 S.E.2d 191 (1976).

Possibility of Inconsistent Verdicts. — Plaintiffs' appeal is reviewable under the substantial right exception where a dismissal would raise the possibility of inconsistent verdicts in later proceedings. Hoots v. Pryor, 106 N.C. App. 397, 417 S.E.2d 269, cert. denied, 332 N.C. 344, 421 S.E.2d 148 (1992).

When a patient sued a pharmacy for negligence, breach of implied warranties, liability under G.S. 99B-6, and to pierce the pharmacy's corporate veil and hold its president liable, and the warranty claim and claim to pierce the corporate veil were dismissed, the patient did not show, in an interlocutory appeal of that dismissal, that she would lose a substantial right if she could not immediately appeal the dismissal. Rauch v. Urgent Care Pharm., Inc., 178 N.C. App. 510, 632 S.E.2d 211, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 1566 (2006).

Order Granting Summary Judgment. — An order granting summary judgment denied plaintiff a jury trial on the issue of its claim against the bank and, in effect, determined the claim in favor of the bank. Thus the order affected a substantial right and was appealable under G.S. 1-277 and this section. Nasco Equip. Co. v. Mason, 291 N.C. 145, 229 S.E.2d 278 (1976).

In an action seeking to quiet title to property which plaintiffs, the original owners, alleged was secured by two of the three defendants by fraud or by mutual mistake and conveyed by general warranty deed to the other defendant, the current owner, summary judgment in favor of the current owner precluded plaintiffs from obtaining reformation of the deed and reconveyance of the property, thereby affecting a substantial right, and therefore the interlocutory order was appealable. Jenkins v. Maintenance, Inc., 76 N.C. App. 110, 332 S.E.2d 90 (1985).

In an action by a discharged employee seeking to recover accumulated vacation leave, a "substantial right" of the plaintiff was affected by the granting of summary judgment for the defendant, so that the order granting the motion for summary judgment was appealable, despite the defendant's pending counterclaim for wrongful conversion of company funds, and despite the absence of a determination by the trial judge under N.C.R.C.P., Rule 54(b), that "there was no just reason for delay." Narron v. Hardee's Food Sys., 75 N.C. App. 579, 331 S.E.2d 205, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 542, 335 S.E.2d 316 (1985).

Where summary judgment is allowed for fewer than all the defendants and the judgment does not contain a certification pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 54(b), that there is "no just reason for delay," an appeal is premature unless the order allowing summary judgment affects a substantial right. Bernick v. Jurden, 306 N.C. 435, 293 S.E.2d 405 (1982).

Where the possibility of an inconsistent verdict in defendants' counterclaim trial could irreparably prejudice any subsequent trial of plaintiff's negligence and contract claims, the trial court's summary judgment dismissing plaintiff's claims affected a substantial right such that it was immediately appealable under subdivision (d)(1) of this section and G.S. 1-277(a). J & B Slurry Seal Co. v. Mid-South Aviation, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 1, 362 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

Where defendants' defense to plaintiff's promissory note claim, as well as their counterclaims, were both founded on proving plaintiff's breach of a fiduciary relationship with defendants, defendants' substantial right to avoid separate trials of the same issue would be prejudiced absent immediate review of the trial court's grant of summary judgment on plaintiff's claim. Whitehurst v. Corey, 88 N.C. App. 746, 364 S.E.2d 728 (1988).

Summary judgment on complaint was not appealable before counterclaim for attorneys' fees had been adjudicated by the trial court. There was no possibility of inconsistent results in complaint and counterclaim because an award for counterclaim could only have been granted if defendants were prevailing parties in the plaintiff's action; therefore, as parties did not address any other substantial right which could have been affected, no substantial right was involved which would have been "lost, prejudiced, or less than adequately protected" if court did not review appeal before final judgment. T'ai Co. v. Market Square Ltd. Partnership, 92 N.C. App. 234, 373 S.E.2d 885 (1988).

Appeal from the grant of summary judgment for a psychiatric hospital in a medical malpractice action against the hospital and independent contractor physicians was premature, where the remaining defendants had separate and distinct contracts and each owed a different duty to the patient. Myers v. Barringer, 101 N.C. App. 168, 398 S.E.2d 615 (1990).

Since plaintiff's claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress, on which defendant was granted summary judgment, involved the issue of defendant's negligence as well as the separate factual issues of the existence of severe emotional distress and foreseeability of injury, if at trial a jury determined defendant's conduct to have been negligent, then plaintiff would only have to prove severe emotional distress and foreseeability of injury at a second trial in the event of a proper successful appeal of the summary judgment. Since a second trial would not require plaintiff to retry the negligence issue, there were no overlapping issues to justify an immediate appeal of the interlocutory order. Jarrell v. Coastal Emergency Servs. of Carolinas, Inc., 121 N.C. App. 198, 464 S.E.2d 720 (1995).

While an order granting summary judgment was interlocutory, it was appealable because the cause of action for criminal conversation, which was still before the trial court, was so connected with the claim for alienation of affections that only one issue of damages should be submitted to the jury, and thus, a substantial right was at stake to have the same jury hear the wife's two claims. McCutchen v. McCutchen, 360 N.C. 280, 624 S.E.2d 620, 2006 N.C. LEXIS 2 (2006).

When, in a personal injury case, a trial court granted summary judgment in favor of some of the parties sued, the judgment was appealable, under G.S. 1-277(a) and G.S. 7A-27(d)(1), because it was alleged that the parties as to whom summary judgment was granted were joint tortfeasors with the remaining parties, so many of the same factual issues would apply to the claims against the parties awarded summary judgment and to the remaining parties, and separate trials could result in inconsistent judgments, so the alleged injured parties who brought suit asserted a substantial right to immediate review, and their appeals were properly before the appellate court. Walden v. Morgan, — N.C. App. —, 635 S.E.2d 616, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 2169 (2006).

Appeal of Order of Summary Judgment. — Where dismissal of an appeal of a summary judgment could result in two different trials on the same issues, thereby creating the possibility of inconsistent verdicts, a substantial right is prejudiced and the summary judgment is immediately appealable. Taylor v. Brinkman, 108 N.C. App. 767, 425 S.E.2d 429, cert. denied, 333 N.C. 795, 431 S.E.2d 30 (1993).

The court denied the plaintiff—the administrator of the estates of his wife and two children, and guardian ad litem of a surviving injured child, who sued defendants/railroad company and engineering firm—the right to an immediate interlocutory appeal of a summary judgment on his contract claim where his tort claim survived the summary judgment and the trial court reserved the right to rule on matters of evidence which that judge considered competent, relevant and admissible on the remaining issues; the plaintiff failed to show that the court's separate treatment of the two claims would injure a substantial right where the evidence and the issues differed. Turner v. Norfolk S. Corp., 137 N.C. App. 138, 526 S.E.2d 666, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 256 (2000).

Under G.S. 1-277(a) and subsection (d) of this section, although an interlocutory order is ordinarily not immediately appealable, an interlocutory order may be immediately appealed if it affects a substantial right; the subcontractors' interlocutory appeal was supported by their assertion of a substantial right to have the case heard in a particular county and to have the liability of all of the defendants determined in one proceeding, which would have been lost without appellate review. Cencomp, Inc. v. Webcon, Inc., 157 N.C. App. 501, 579 S.E.2d 482, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 731 (2003).

Denial of a motion for summary judgment based on the defense of res judicata may affect a substantial right, making the order immediately appealable. Bockweg v. Anderson, 333 N.C. 486, 428 S.E.2d 157 (1993).

Interlocutory appeal of the denial of defendants' motion for summary judgment in a constructive trust action was allowed; the basis of the motion for summary judgment was that res judicata barred the constructive trust action and in such a case, the failure to allow an appeal might affect a substantial right in that the possibility existed that without an immediate appeal, they would be required to twice defend against the same claim by plaintiffs. Tiber Holding Corp. v. DiLoreto, 170 N.C. App. 662, 613 S.E.2d 346, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 1081 (2005), cert. denied, — N.C. —, 623 S.E.2d 263 (2005).

Summary Judgment on Issue of Liability. — Ordinarily, an order granting summary judgment on the issue of liability and reserving for trial the issue of damages is not immediately appealable. Smith v. Watson, 71 N.C. App. 351, 322 S.E.2d 588 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 509, 329 S.E.2d 394 (1985).

Order Granting Partial Summary Judgment. — The trial court's entry of summary judgment for a monetary sum against one of two defendants affected a "substantial right" of that defendant, and such judgment was therefore immediately appealable under G.S. 1-277 and this section, notwithstanding the absence of an express determination by the trial judge that there was "no just reason for delay" as required by G.S. 1A-1, Rule 54(b). Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240 (1980).

Order allowing summary judgment as to fewer than all defendants held to affect a substantial right. Federal Land Bank v. Lieben, 86 N.C. App. 342, 357 S.E.2d 700 (1987).

An order of partial summary judgment dismissing a punitive damages claim was appealable, though interlocutory, since claims for compensatory and punitive damages depended upon the same evidence and plaintiff's right to try them before the same jury and avoid the possible travesty of different juries rendering conflicting verdicts was a substantial one. Nance v. Robertson, 91 N.C. App. 121, 370 S.E.2d 283, cert. denied, 323 N.C. 477, 373 S.E.2d 865 (1988).

Where trial court's summary judgment determined fewer than all claims between parties, plaintiff could maintain interlocutory appeals from court's judgment, since trial court's dismissal of plaintiff's negligence, fraud and unfair trade practice claims against defendant insurance company and unfair trade claim against defendant insurance agency affected substantial right since there were factual issues common to claims dismissed by trial court and negligence claim which it did not dismiss. Davidson v. Knauff Ins. Agency, Inc., 93 N.C. App. 20, 376 S.E.2d 488, cert. denied, 324 N.C. 577, 381 S.E.2d 772 (1989).

Where plaintiff claimed that defendants, husband and wife, were negligent, and where summary judgment was granted in favor of wife, and where a possibility existed that inconsistent verdicts would be rendered in separate trials on the issue of husband and wife's joint and concurrent negligence if plaintiff's appeal ultimately was successful, judgment was appealable because it affected a substantial right of plaintiff to have determined, in a single action, the question of whether plaintiff was injured by the acts of one, both, or neither of the defendants, especially since the claims against them arose from the same series of events. DeHaven v. Hoskins, 95 N.C. App. 397, 382 S.E.2d 856 (1989), cert. denied, 325 N.C. 705, 388 S.E.2d 452 (1989), overruled on other grounds, Nelson v. Freeland, 349 N.C. 615, 507 S.E.2d 882 (1998).

The appellate court eliminated specifically the application of the doctrine of substantial rights to cases wherein partial summary judgment has been granted denying a claim for punitive damages. Moose v. Nissan of Statesville, Inc., 115 N.C. App. 423, 444 S.E.2d 694 (1994).

There were no factual issues common to the claims determined by summary judgments or the claims remaining, so that no substantial right was affected and plaintiff was not entitled to interlocutory appeal of summary judgments, since plaintiff did not present identical factual issues creating the possibility of two trials on the same issue. Jarrell v. Coastal Emergency Servs. of Carolinas, Inc., 121 N.C. App. 198, 464 S.E.2d 720 (1995).

The trial court's partial grant of summary judgment on the issue of breach of contract was interlocutory with no immediate right of appeal because it did not affect substantial rights. Alexander Hamilton Life Ins. Co. of Am. v. J&H Marsh & McClennan, Inc., 142 N.C. App. 699, 543 S.E.2d 898, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 186 (2001).

Same — Where Injunction Is Part of Order. — While ordinarily, the allowance of a motion for summary judgment on the issue of liability, reserving for trial the issue of damages, will not be appealable, where a mandatory injunction was part of the order for partial summary judgment, it clearly affected a "substantial right" of the defendant and the allowance of the motion for partial summary judgment was appealable. English v. Holden Beach Realty Corp., 41 N.C. App. 1, 254 S.E.2d 223, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 609, 257 S.E.2d 217 (1979), overruled on other grounds, 319 N.C. 274, 354 S.E.2d 459 (1987).

Where defendants would immediately suffer the consequences of complying with mandatory injunction ordering that they remove anchors and boat slips constructed on plaintiff's submerged lands, this affected a substantial right of defendants, giving them the right to appeal from the interlocutory order granting summary judgment for plaintiffs except on the issue of damages. Steel Creek Dev. Corp. v. Smith, 300 N.C. 631, 268 S.E.2d 205 (1980).

Appeal of Order Denying Partial Summary Judgment. — Defendant's appeal of an order denying its motion for partial summary judgment on the issue of punitive damages was interlocutory. Travco Hotels, Inc. v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 102 N.C. App. 659, 403 S.E.2d 593, aff'd, 332 N.C. 288, 420 S.E.2d 426 (1992).

When a landowner sued a developer and a land grader for, inter alia, negligence and trespass for conducting activities on a lot adjacent to the landowner's lot that allegedly caused flooding on the landowner's lot, a trial court's denial of the landowner's partial summary judgment motion on the issue of liability was not immediately appealable because the landowner did not show any substantial right that would be lost by a delay of his appeal from this denial. Williams v. Allen, — N.C. App. —, 641 S.E.2d 391, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 483 (2007).

Order Requiring Jury Trial. — If an order denying a jury trial is appealable, an order requiring a jury trial should be appealable. If denial of a jury trial affects a substantial right, which would be lost absent review prior to final determination, the requirement that a case will be tried by a jury should have the same effect. Faircloth v. Beard, 320 N.C. 505, 358 S.E.2d 512 (1987), overruled in part, Jacobs v. City of Asheville, 137 N.C. App. 441, 528 S.E.2d 905 (2000).

Generally, the right to avoid a trial is not a substantial right; however, while avoidance of two trials on the same issues may be. This would require that a party show that the same factual issues would be present in both trials and that the possibility of inconsistent verdicts on those issues exists. Stafford v. Stafford, 133 N.C. App. 163, 515 S.E.2d 43 (1999), aff'd, 351 N.C. 94, 520 S.E.2d 785 (1999).

Partial summary judgment holding that third-party defendant must indemnify defendant for any judgment on plaintiff's claim is interlocutory and not appealable under G.S. 1-277 or subsection (d) of this section, since the judgment will not work injury to third-party defendant if not corrected before appeal from a final judgment. Cook v. Export Leaf Tobacco Co., 47 N.C. App. 187, 266 S.E.2d 754 (1980).

Partial Summary Judgment in Favor of Defendant Who Is Only Secondarily Liable. — Plaintiffs had no right to an immediate appeal from summary judgment granted to defendant attorney where plaintiffs sought to recover against defendant attorney only if they were unable to recover against the other defendants on their primary claims. Blue Ridge Sportcycle Co. v. Schroader, 53 N.C. App. 354, 280 S.E.2d 799 (1981).

Interlocutory summary judgments in favor of third-party and fourth-party defendants in a negligence action were appealable as to the question of negligence, which presented common factual issues with the remaining claim of plaintiff against defendant, but not as to the issue of indemnity, which did not. Britt v. American Hoist & Derrick Co., 97 N.C. App. 442, 388 S.E.2d 613 (1990).

Arbitration Order. — An order denying arbitration, although interlocutory, is immediately appealable because it involves a substantial right which might be lost if appeal is delayed. Prime S. Homes, Inc. v. Byrd, 102 N.C. App. 255, 401 S.E.2d 822 (1991); Hackett v. Bonta, 113 N.C. App. 89, 437 S.E.2d 687 (1993).

Where evidence showed that plaintiff knew that the terms of a dispute resolution agreement would apply to her should she continue her employment, and she did continue, sufficient consideration existed to support the agreement, plaintiff relinquished the right to pursue disputes in court, and the trial court's refusal to compel arbitration deprived defendants of a substantial right entitling them to immediate appeal. Howard v. Oakwood Homes Corp., 134 N.C. App. 116, 516 S.E.2d 879, 1999 N.C. App. LEXIS 671 (1999), cert. denied, 350 N.C. 832, 539 S.E.2d 288 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1155, 120 S. Ct. 1161, 145 L. Ed. 2d 1072 (2000).

Trial court's order denying a home inspector's motion to compel arbitration pursuant to a written agreement was immediately appealable, under G.S. 1-277 and G.S. 7A-27(d)(l), because it affected a substantial right of the home inspector. Edwards v. Taylor, — N.C. App. —, 643 S.E.2d 51, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 805 (2007).

Arbitration. — There is no immediate right of appeal from an order compelling arbitration. Bluffs, Inc. v. Wysocki, 68 N.C. App. 284, 314 S.E.2d 291 (1984).

Order compelling arbitration was interlocutory and did not affect a substantial right. North Carolina Elec. Membership Corp. v. Duke Power Co., 95 N.C. App. 123, 381 S.E.2d 896, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 709, 388 S.E.2d 461 (1989).

An order compelling arbitration is interlocutory, does not affect a substantial right, and is not immediately appealable. Laws v. Horizon Hous., Inc., 137 N.C. App. 770, 529 S.E.2d 695, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 534 (2000).

Order Allowing Reinstatement of Lawsuits. — Defendant's appeal of an order granting plaintiffs' motions for reinstatement of their lawsuits for payment of materials provided on a county improvement project was interlocutory and not appealable, although a denial of review might force them "to continue the defense of th[e] action." Interior Distribs., Inc. v. Autry, 140 N.C. App. 541, 536 S.E.2d 853, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1217 (2000), cert denied, 353 N.C. 375, 547 S.E.2d 411 (2001).

Order Appointing Guardian Ad Litem. — For plaintiff to have been entitled to appeal of right from order granting defendant's motions for the appointment of a guardian ad litem, plaintiff was required to establish that it either (1) affected a substantial right, or (2) in effect determined the action and prevented a judgment from which appeal might be taken, or (3) discontinued the action, or (4) granted or refused a new trial. Culton v. Culton, 327 N.C. 624, 398 S.E.2d 323 (1990).

Order of partial summary judgment which included a mandatory injunction directing the defendant to remove a roadway affected a substantial right of the defendant and was thus immediately appealable pursuant to G.S. 1-277 and this section. Smith v. Watson, 71 N.C. App. 351, 322 S.E.2d 588 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 509, 329 S.E.2d 394 (1985).

The denial of summary judgment is interlocutory in nature and not appealable under G.S. 1-277 and this section, unless a substantial right of one of the parties would be affected if the appeal were not heard prior to final judgment. Equitable Leasing Corp. v. Myers, 46 N.C. App. 162, 265 S.E.2d 240 (1980).

An order setting aside without prejudice a summary judgment on the grounds of procedural irregularity, is interlocutory and not immediately appealable. Waters v. Qualified Personnel, Inc., 294 N.C. 200, 240 S.E.2d 338 (1978).

Order Limiting Scope of Lis Pendens in Action to Quiet Title. — In an action to quiet title to property which defendants have incorporated into a residential subdivision, an order limiting the scope of lis pendens filed by plaintiffs only to the area of the subdivision which they claim was interlocutory and not immediately appealable. Whyburn v. Norwood, 37 N.C. App. 610, 246 S.E.2d 540 (1978).

Order Allowing Surveyor to Enter upon Land. — An interlocutory order by which defendants are simply ordered to allow a neutral third party, a surveyor, to enter upon their land for the purpose of completing an accurate survey of the property is not appealable. Ball v. Ball, 55 N.C. App. 98, 284 S.E.2d 555 (1981).

An order denying a motion to cancel a notice of lis pendens is not immediately appealable where the property owner fails to show that a substantial right of his has been impaired. Godley Auction Co. v. Myers, 40 N.C. App. 570, 253 S.E.2d 362 (1979).

An order requiring defendant husband to vacate premises which had been occupied by him and his wife as their home affected a substantial right and was appealable to the Court of Appeals, where the order was made after a hearing and before the case was tried. Musten v. Musten, 36 N.C. App. 618, 244 S.E.2d 699 (1978).

Orders Regarding Condemnation Proceedings. — The trial court's denial of defendants' constitutional challenge and its conclusion that the defendants' four tracts formed a physically unified parcel affected by condemnation proceedings were interlocutory and did not affect any substantial rights, so the defendants were not required to appeal the trial court's orders immediately. DOT v. Rowe, 351 N.C. 172, 521 S.E.2d 707 (1999).

Orders and awards pendente lite are interlocutory decrees which necessarily do not affect a substantial right from which an immediate appeal lies pursuant to subsection (d) of this section. Peeler v. Peeler, 7 N.C. App. 456, 172 S.E.2d 915 (1970) and other prior decisions recognizing a right of immediate appeal from orders and awards pendente lite are overruled. Thus, where husband in a divorce action appealed an order by the trial court for alimony pendente lite, child support pendente lite, and attorneys' fees pendente lite, the appeal was premature and therefore was dismissed. See Stephenson v. Stephenson, 55 N.C. App. 250, 285 S.E.2d 281 (1981).

Order which clearly affected the right of plaintiff to receive support on behalf of minor children from defendant on a monthly basis as needed and in the amount which had been found reasonably necessary for the support and maintenance of the children involved a substantial right, and therefore the order in question was immediately appealable. Appert v. Appert, 80 N.C. App. 27, 341 S.E.2d 342 (1986).

Denial of Attorneys' Motion for Admission Pro Hac Vice. — Order denying plaintiff's motion to reconsider order denying attorneys' motion for admission pro hac vice was an interlocutory order and was not immediately appealable; it did not come within the statutory appeals in G.S. 1-277(a) or subsection (d) of this section. Leonard v. Johns-Manville Sales Corp., 57 N.C. App. 553, 291 S.E.2d 828, cert. denied, 306 N.C. 558, 294 S.E.2d 371 (1982).

Preliminary Injunction Against Operation of Business. — Defendant could appeal trial court's issuance of a preliminary injunction enjoining defendant from operating a used car lot in violation of plaintiff town's zoning ordinance, where although defendant's appeal was from an interlocutory order, defendant would have been deprived of a substantial right, the right to operate his business, absent a review prior to determination on the merits. Town of Knightdale v. Vaughn, 95 N.C. App. 649, 383 S.E.2d 460 (1989).

Denial of Preliminary Injunction. — Court of appeals found that deciding if operating video games in arcade was a substantial right was not necessary where a trial court's denial of a preliminary injunction did not strip the operators of a substantial right and the operators' appeal was interlocutory. Bessemer City Express, Inc. v. City of Kings Mt., 155 N.C. App. 637, 573 S.E.2d 712, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 1605 (2002), cert. denied, 357 N.C. 61, 579 S.E.2d 384 (2003).

Trial court's order granting a preliminary injunction restraining the sale of real property was immediately appealable; the merits of the underlying special proceeding between an executor and a widow in which the executor's right to partition property and to sell the widow's interest therein were decided by the entry of the widow's default nearly 10 years before, and there could have been no final order confirming a sale of the widow's allotted portion of the farm until a sale, which the trial court's order enjoined, was accomplished. Revelle v. Chamblee, 168 N.C. App. 227, 606 S.E.2d 712, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 158 (2005).

Preliminary Injunction Pursuant to Covenant Not to Compete. — Preliminary injunction entered by the trial court against defendant, pursuant to a covenant not to compete, was appealable prior to final determination on the merits, as it deprived defendant of a substantial right which he would lose absent review prior to a final determination. Masterclean of N.C., Inc. v. Guy, 82 N.C. App. 45, 345 S.E.2d 692 (1986).

In an action for injunctive relief and damages based on alleged breach of a covenant not to compete, defendant's appeal of trial court's preliminary injunction barring him from participating in any employment that competed with plaintiff's business in certain geographic locations would be dismissed as interlocutory, where there was no evidence in the record to show that defendant was presently working in any of those areas, as the injunction did not deprive defendant of any substantial right which he would lose absent a review prior to final determination. Automated Data Sys. v. Myers, 96 N.C. App. 624, 386 S.E.2d 432 (1989).

Where a former employer sued a former employee for violating a covenant not to compete, the employee was entitled to interlocutory review of the trial court's decision to issue a preliminary injunction which, inter alia, prohibited the employee from working for the employer's competitors in North Carolina or South Carolina, as the injunction adversely affected the employee's substantial right to earn a living and to practice the employee's livelihood. Precision Walls, Inc. v. Servie, 152 N.C. App. 630, 568 S.E.2d 267, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 980 (2002).

When a party asserts a statutory privilege, such as that set out by G.S. 90-21.22(e) (right to non-disclosure of confidential information), which directly relates to the matter to be disclosed under an interlocutory discovery order, and the assertion is not otherwise frivolous or insubstantial, the challenged order affects a substantial right under G.S. 1-277(a) and subdivision (d)(1) of this section and is immediately reviewable; to the extent that cases like Kaplan v. Prolife Action League of Greensboro, 123 N.C.App. 677, 474 S.E.2d 408 (1996) differ, they are overruled. Sharpe v. Worland, 351 N.C. 159, 522 S.E.2d 577 (1999).

Attorney-Client Privilege. — The trial court's orders requiring that the defendants-insurers produce material protected by the attorney-client privilege affected a substantial right and entitled them to a hearing on appeal. Evans v. United Servs. Auto. Ass'n, 142 N.C. App. 18, 541 S.E.2d 782, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 48 (2001), cert. denied, 353 N.C. 371, 547 S.E.2d 810 (2001).

An order that denied a motion to invalidate appellee's request for a jury trial was interlocutory, and no appeal lay to an appellate court therefrom, as such order did not deprive the appellants of a substantial right. Faircloth v. Beard, 83 N.C. App. 235, 349 S.E.2d 609 (1986).

Where superior court's refusal to invalidate plaintiffs' demand for a jury trial in a stockholder's derivative action amounted to a ruling that plaintiffs were entitled to a jury trial, denial of defendants' motion to invalidate the demand was appealable. Faircloth v. Beard, 320 N.C. 505, 358 S.E.2d 512 (1987), overruled in part, Jacobs v. City of Asheville, 137 N.C. App. 441, 528 S.E.2d 905 (2000).

Dismissal of Claim Against One Defendant. — Dismissal of Count II of plaintiff's amended complaint, resulting in dismissal of plaintiff's claim against defendant professional corporation, affected her substantial right to have determined in a single proceeding the issues of whether she had been damaged by the actions of one, some or all of the defendants, especially since her claims against all of them arose upon the same series of transactions. Therefore, her appeal therefrom was not premature. Fox v. Wilson, 85 N.C. App. 292, 354 S.E.2d 737 (1987).

Injured party's appeal from the trial court's judgment dismissing the injured party's claims against a church and a landowner was interlocutory because the trial court did not dismiss the injured party's claims against the landowner's son; however, the judgment was appealable under G.S. 1-277 and subsection (d) of this section because the injured party had a substantial right in having the case against all defendants tried by the same jury. Clontz v. St. Mark's Evangelical Lutheran Church, 157 N.C. App. 325, 578 S.E.2d 654, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 537 (2003), cert. denied, 357 N.C. 249, 582 S.E.2d 29 (2003).

The trial court's dismissal of all claims against defendant/insurer and some but not all claims against defendant-landlords affected a substantial right where plaintiff sought relief against them based on negligence, violation of the statutory duty of a landlord to repair premises, unfair and deceptive trade practices, and wrongful death, all arising from the single occurrence of a fire in a rental home and where she had the right to have all her claims adjudicated in a single proceeding. Prince v. Wright, 141 N.C. App. 262, 541 S.E.2d 191, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1389 (2000).

Discovery Orders. — Order from which defendant first appealed, which contained no enforcement sanctions, and only ordered defendant to answer questions by a certain date, was not properly appealable, and its attempted appeal was a nullity, notwithstanding the fact that the judge signed the appeal entries. Accordingly, such appeal did not divest the trial court of jurisdiction to subsequently enter sanctions against defendant. Benfield v. Benfield, 89 N.C. App. 415, 366 S.E.2d 500 (1988).

Denial of the caveators' motion to compel the decedent's former attorney to answer deposition questions was an interlocutory order that was not appealable, because the order did not affect a substantial right pursuant to G.S. 1-277(a) and subdivision (d)(1) of this section; the caveators failed to demonstrate that the attorney, who was discharged prior to the drafting of the will at issue in the case, possessed relevant information concerning the decedent's health or relationship with the propounder of the will at the time the will was drafted. In re Will of Johnston, 157 N.C. App. 258, 578 S.E.2d 635, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 642 (2003).

When defendants contended that nursing home incident reports were protected by the peer review privilege, the trial court's interlocutory order compelling production of the reports affected a substantial right and thus was immediately appealable. Hayes v. Premier Living, Inc., — N.C. App. —, 641 S.E.2d 316, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 370 (2007).

Sanctions for Noncompliance with Discovery Order. — Where a party is adjudged to be in contempt for noncompliance with a discovery order or has been assessed with certain other sanctions, the order is immediately appealable, since it affects a substantial right under G.S. 1-277 and subdivision (d)(1) of this section. Benfield v. Benfield, 89 N.C. App. 415, 366 S.E.2d 500 (1988).

Order holding defendant in contempt of court for his failure to comply with discovery order was appealable and tested the validity both of the original discovery order and the contempt order. Benfield v. Benfield, 89 N.C. App. 415, 366 S.E.2d 500 (1988).

Order Setting Aside Judgment. — The avoidance of having to affirmatively prove claim was not a "substantial" right, where plaintiff was affected by inability to immediately appeal order setting aside judgment only to the extent that it would have to establish defendants' liability and the amount thereof by proper evidence, rather than by relying upon a purported confession of judgment. First Am. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Satterfield, 87 N.C. App. 160, 359 S.E.2d 812 (1987).

Order setting aside a default judgment is interlocutory, as it does not finally dispose of the case and requires further action by the trial court. Horne v. Nobility Homes, Inc., 88 N.C. App. 476, 363 S.E.2d 642 (1988).

Order Denying Motion for Stay. — The denial of defendant's motion for stay did not dispose of any of the claims or parties, the trial court did not certify the case for immediate appeal under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 54(b), and defendants did not show that the trial court's decision deprived them of a substantial right which would be lost absent immediate review. Howerton v. Grace Hosp., 124 N.C. App. 199, 476 S.E.2d 440 (1996).

Order Requiring Posting of Bond. — Where brothers were equal shareholders in company, and company could no longer be conducted to the advantage of both of the shareholders, and where judge ordered the brothers to post a secured bond to ensure compliance with any judgment rendered, the appeal of the order by one of the brothers was interlocutory and would be dismissed; no substantial right of his was affected, since the amount of the bond reasonably approximated the value of the assets in his possession, and the bond would be cancelled if the opposing brother was unsuccessful in obtaining judgment in his favor. Stancil v. Stancil, 94 N.C. App. 760, 381 S.E.2d 720 (1989).

Order Increasing Attachment Bond Where No Findings Were Made. — Because the trial court was not required to make findings of fact in order to modify the plaintiffs' attachment bond on the motion of the defendant pursuant to G.S. 1-440.40(a), and where the plaintiffs failed to request such findings, they could not assert that the order had affected their substantial rights and they were not entitled to review. Collins v. Talley, 135 N.C. App. 758, 522 S.E.2d 794, 1999 N.C. App. LEXIS 1228 (1999).

Order Removing Attorney. — Plaintiff had a substantial right to have attorney of her choice, properly admitted pro hac vice under G.S. 84-4.1, represent her in her lawsuit, and order removing him as counsel affected a substantial right of the plaintiff and was immediately appealable. Goldston v. AMC, 326 N.C. 723, 392 S.E.2d 735 (1990).

Denial of Motion to Disqualify Counsel. — An order granting disqualification of counsel seriously disrupts the progress of litigation while new counsel is obtained, but one refusing such relief merely allows the action to proceed and has no permanent effect of any kind. Travco Hotels, Inc. v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 332 N.C. 288, 420 S.E.2d 426 (1992).

Ruling striking attorney's charging lien was not a final order, since a charging lien is not available until there is a final judgment or decree to which the lien can attach, and no final judgment had yet been entered in the underlying divorce action. Howell v. Howell, 89 N.C. App. 115, 365 S.E.2d 181 (1988).

Where trial court's entry of summary judgment against plaintiff included an award of attorneys' fees, it affected a substantial right; consequently, the order was immediately appealable pursuant to G.S. 1-277(a) and subsection (d) of this section. K & K Dev. Corp. v. Columbia Banking Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 96 N.C. App. 474, 386 S.E.2d 226 (1989).

Denial of attorneys' fees under G.S. 50-16.4 was not a final order of the trial court, where at the time appellant's motion was filed there had been no determination that his client, defendant, was entitled to alimony pendente lite under G.S. 50-16.3, so that appellant was not yet entitled to attorneys' fees under

G.S. 50-16.4, and as appellant could appeal the denial of his motion after final judgment, or could bring a separate lawsuit to collect fees, no substantial right of appellant was affected by the Court of Appeals' failure to entertain an interlocutory appeal on this issue. Howell v. Howell, 89 N.C. App. 115, 365 S.E.2d 181 (1988).

Orders awarding child support, alimony, and attorneys' fees pendente lite are interlocutory decrees which necessarily do not affect a substantial right from which lies an immediate appeal pursuant to G.S. 7A-27(d). Berry v. Berry, 87 N.C. App. 624, 361 S.E.2d 771 (1987).

Child support order which was not expressly designated pendente lite by the court, but which was nevertheless a temporary one, entered provisionally pending a final determination to be made at a later date, was not subject to review by appeal. Berry v. Berry, 87 N.C. App. 624, 361 S.E.2d 771 (1987).

Termination of Temporary Alimony. — Appeal of an order terminating dependent spouse's right to receive temporary alimony was not premature, as the question of plaintiff's continued entitlement to the previously ordered alimony pendente lite until such time as her prayer for permanent alimony could be heard affected a "substantial right" of the dependent spouse. Brown v. Brown, 85 N.C. App. 602, 355 S.E.2d 525, cert. denied, 320 N.C. 511, 358 S.E.2d 516 (1987).

Equitable Distribution Order. — Permitting an immediate appeal from an interim equitable distribution order would be contrary to the policy of this state discouraging fragmentary appeals. Hunter v. Hunter, 126 N.C. App. 705, 486 S.E.2d 244 (1997).

Order Barring Defendant from Equitable Distribution. — Trial court's order denying defendant's motion to amend his answer in divorce action, which he filed following grant of absolute divorce to plaintiff, had the effect of forever barring defendant from asserting a claim for equitable distribution, and thus affected a substantial right; it was therefore appealable as a matter of right. Goodwin v. Zeydel, 96 N.C. App. 670, 387 S.E.2d 57 (1990).

Order Dismissing Equitable Distribution Claim. — Given the factual issues overlapping husband's company's contract claim retained by the court and wife's equitable distribution counterclaim which it dismissed, wife could appeal the dismissal of the equitable distribution counterclaim as a matter of right, since a substantial right would otherwise be affected. Small v. Small, 93 N.C. App. 614, 379 S.E.2d 273, cert. denied, 325 N.C. 273, 384 S.E.2d 519 (1989).

Order Granting Absolute Divorce While Reserving Equitable Distribution Issues. — While the trial court's determination of the parties' date of separation might have an effect on the unresolved issue of equitable distribution, the same factual issues would not be involved and no threat of inconsistent verdicts was involved, and thus, no substantial right of the husband was affected so as to entitle him to appeal the trial court's grant of an absolute divorce to the wife while reserving equitable distribution issues for a later hearing. Stafford v. Stafford, 133 N.C. App. 163, 515 S.E.2d 43 (1999), aff'd, 351 N.C. 94, 520 S.E.2d 785 (1999).

Ruling Disposing of a Plea in Bar. — Court's ruling on a separation/property settlement agreement did not dispose of plaintiff's claims for equitable distribution and alimony but only disposed of defendant's plea in bar to those claims: The court's ruling was thus interlocutory, and although the court's order stated that its ruling affected a substantial right and was a proper subject of immediate appeal, the court's order could not be certified as a final appealable order under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 54(b). Garris v. Garris, 92 N.C. App. 467, 374 S.E.2d 638 (1988).

Appeal of Order Denying Motion to Disqualify Opponent's Counsel. — Where defendant maintained that because law firm representing plaintiff represented defendant in previous matters of a similar nature (but not involving plaintiff), that firm could not represent plaintiff in the present matter, it did have a substantial right to prevent prior counsel from using confidential information gleaned from a prior representation and utilizing it against the client in subsequent litigation, however, it cannot be found that the deprivation of this right would injure defendant if not corrected before a final judgment, and defendant's appeal of the trial court's order denying its motion to disqualify law firm was interlocutory. Travco Hotels, Inc. v. Piedmont Natural Gas Co., 102 N.C. App. 659, 403 S.E.2d 593, aff'd, 332 N.C. 288, 420 S.E.2d 426 (1992).

Appeal Regarding Waiver of Parental Consent. — No appeal of right lies to the Court of Appeals from an order of the superior court entered pursuant to G.S. 90-21.8(h); the exclusive appeal remedy is the appeal from the district court to the superior court. In re Doe, 126 N.C. App. 401, 485 S.E.2d 354 (1997).

Appeal of Order Denying Release of Escrow Funds. — The effect of an order denying the release of the funds held in escrow under G.S. 58-36-25 was temporary and not permanent where the Commissioner's order only determined that the funds are not to be released now, and did not purport to determine who is entitled to the money; for these reasons, an appeal of the order was interlocutory and was not immediately appealable under either G.S. 1A-1, Rule 54(b) or G.S. 1-277 or this section. State ex rel. Comm'r of Ins. v. North Carolina

Judgment That Leaves Issue of Damages Unresolved. — A judgment that determines only that there has in fact been a breach by defendant and leaves unresolved the issue of plaintiffs' damage is clearly an interlocutory order; an order determining only the issue of liability and leaving unresolved other issues such as that of damages cannot be held to affect a substantial right. Johnston v. Royal Indem. Co., 107 N.C. App. 624, 421 S.E.2d 170 (1992).

Order of North Carolina Industrial Commission Modifying Deputy Commissioner's Order. — Appeal from the North Carolina Industrial Commission's order that a deputy commissioner's dismissal of a workers' compensation claim was to be deemed to be without prejudice was dismissed; the Commission's order was an interlocutory order, from which there was no general right to immediate review, and the denial of immediate review would not affect the employers' substantial rights. Ward v. Wake Co. Bd. of Educ., 166 N.C. App. 726, 603 S.E.2d 896, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 2031 (2004), cert. denied, 359 N.C. 326, 611 S.E.2d 853 (2005).

Interlocutory Appeal Allowed Where Order Affected Potential Inheritance. — Interlocutory order denying siblings' motion to intervene in a G.S. 49-14 paternity action was permitted to be considered under G.S. 1-277 and G.S. 7A-27(a) (as the order adversely affected a substantial right which they could lose — part of their inheritance from their deceased father's estate), but denial of the motion was affirmed. Stockton v. Estate of Thompson, 165 N.C. App. 899, 600 S.E.2d 13, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 1515 (2004).

Interlocutory Appeal From Denial of Appointment of Receiver. — Shareholders were entitled to an interlocutory appeal of the trial court's denial of their motion for the appointment of a receiver because they established a substantial right to the preservation of what they alleged were their corporation's assets and opportunities under G.S. 1-277(a) and G.S. 7A-27(d)(1), which right was substantially affected by the trial court's denial of the appointment of a receiver. Barnes v. Kochhar, 178 N.C. App. 489, 633 S.E.2d 474, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 1574 (2006).

Trial court's denial of a motion to enforce a settlement did not resolve the underlying personal injury claim, and the order of denial was therefore interlocutory; since the trial court did not certify that there was no just reason to delay the appeal, and the denial did not affect a substantial right, there was no right to an immediate appeal since an appeal of the denial was still allowed once there was a final judgment. Milton v. Thompson, 170 N.C. App. 176, 611 S.E.2d 474, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 903 (2005).

§ 7A-28. Decisions of Court of Appeals on post-trial motions for appropriate relief final or valuation of exempt property.

(a) Decisions of the Court of Appeals upon review of motions for appropriate relief listed in G.S. 15A-1415(b) are final and not subject to further review in the Supreme Court by appeal, motion, certification, writ, or otherwise.

(b) Decisions of the Court of Appeals upon review of valuation of exempt property under G.S. 1C are final and not subject to further review in the Supreme Court by appeal, motion, certification, writ, or otherwise. (1981, c. 470, s. 1; 1981 (Reg. Sess., 1982), c. 1224, s. 16.)

Editor's Note. — The original G.S. 7A-28, which was substantially similar to this section, was enacted by Session Laws 1967, c. 108, s. 1, and repealed by Session Laws 1977, c. 711, s. 33.

CASE NOTES

New Trial Based upon Newly Discovered Evidence. — The State has the right to immediately appeal a superior court order granting a criminal defendant a new trial pursuant to G.S. 15A-1415(b)(6), on the ground of newly discovered evidence. State v. Monroe, 330 N.C. 433, 410 S.E.2d 913 (1991).

Exhaustion Requirement in Federal Habeas Corpus. — The fact that the respondent in an appeal from the order of a United States magistrate dismissing a claim for habeas corpus relief incorrectly pleaded that the appellant had exhausted his state court remedies and was entitled to adjudication on the merits was neither conclusive nor a waiver of the exhaustion requirement by the State. Strader v. Allsbrook, 656 F.2d 67 (4th Cir. 1981).

Jurisdiction of North Carolina Supreme Court. — Statute could not have restricted the Supreme Court of North Carolina's constitutional authority under N.C. Const., Art. IV, § 12(1) to exercise jurisdiction to review upon appeal any decision of the courts below, and as such, the Supreme Court of North Carolina did not hesitate to exercise its rarely used general supervisory authority when necessary to promote the expeditious administration of justice, and did so to consider questions that were not properly presented according to its rules; this exercise of supervisory authority was particularly appropriate when prompt and definitive resolution of an issue was necessary to ensure the uniform administration of North Carolina's criminal statutes. State v. Ellis, 361 N.C. 200, 639 S.E.2d 425, 2007 N.C. LEXIS 38 (2007).

(a) From any final order or decision of the North Carolina Utilities Commission not governed by subsection (b) of this section, the Department of Health and Human Services under G.S. 131E-188(b), the North Carolina Industrial Commission, the North Carolina State Bar under G.S. 84-28, the Property Tax Commission under G.S. 105-290 and G.S. 105-342, the Commissioner of Insurance under G.S. 58-2-80, the State Board of Elections under G.S. 163-127.6, or the Secretary of Environment and Natural Resources under G.S. 104E-6.2 or G.S. 130A-293, appeal as of right lies directly to the Court of Appeals.

(b) From any final order or decision of the Utilities Commission in a general rate case, appeal as of right lies directly to the Supreme Court. (1967, c. 108, s. 1; 1971, c. 703, s. 5; 1975, c. 582, s. 12; 1979, c. 584, s. 1; 1981, c. 704, s. 28; 1983, c. 526, s. 1; c. 761, s. 188; 1983 (Reg. Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1087, s. 7, made ss. 1 through 5 of the act, s. 2 of which amended this section, effective on the earlier of: (1) The date on which registration becomes effective in one of the states listed in G.S. 54B-48.2(16) which authorizes regional acquisitions of savings and loan associations and savings and loan holding companies on a reciprocal basis and which applies to savings and loan associations and savings and loan holding companies in North Carolina; or (2) July 1, 1986. Sections 1 through 5 of the act became effective July 1, 1985, when the legislation became effective in Virginia.

Session Laws 1995, c. 509, s. 2, amended this section in the coded bill drafting format prescribed by G.S. 120-20.1. Subsection (a) has been set out in the form above as directed by the Revisor of Statutes.

CASE NOTES

Appeals of Right from Certain Administrative Agencies. — G.S. 62-90(a) and (d) provide for appeals of final orders of the North Carolina Utilities Commission; subsections (a) and (b) of this section provide for appeals of right from certain administrative agencies, and G.S. 7A-27(d) provides for appeals of right from certain interlocutory orders of the superior or district courts. State ex rel. Utils. Comm'n v. Buck Island, Inc., 158 N.C. App. 536, 581 S.E.2d 122, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1186 (2003).

North Carolina DHHS, Division of Facility Services, Certificate of Need Section's issuance of a No Review letter to a hospice that sought to open a branch office in another service area was the issuance of an exemption for purposes of G.S. 131E-188(a); accordingly, G.S. 131E-188(b) conferred jurisdiction on the Court of Appeals of North Carolina to hear an appeal from a challenge to the letter. Hospice at Greensboro, Inc. v. N.C. HHS Div. of Facility Servs., — N.C. App. —, 647 S.E.2d 651, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1714 (2007).

Right of Appeal Expressly Granted. — The right of appeal from any final order or decision of the Utilities Commission is expressly granted by this section. Morgan v. Duke Power Co., 22 N.C. App. 497, 206 S.E.2d 507, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 759, 209 S.E.2d 282 (1974).

No appeal lies from an interlocutory order of the Industrial Commission. There is a right of appeal only from a final order. Vaughn v. North Carolina Dep't of Human Resources, 37 N.C. App. 86, 245 S.E.2d 892, aff'd, 296 N.C. 683, 252 S.E.2d 792 (1978); Lynch v. M.B. Kahn Constr. Co., 41 N.C. App. 127, 254 S.E.2d 236, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 298, 259 S.E.2d 914 (1979).

Only from a final order or decision of the Industrial Commission is there an appeal of right to the Court of Appeals. Ledford v. Asheville Hous. Auth., 125 N.C. App. 597, 482 S.E.2d 544 (1997).

Appeal of Decisions Under G.S. 143-166.4. — The Court of Appeals has no jurisdiction to review an appeal of a decision by the North Carolina Industrial Commission made pursuant to G.S. 143-166.4. In re Vandiford, 56 N.C. App. 224, 287 S.E.2d 912 (1982).

Appeal By State Bar of North Carolina. — Court of Appeals of North Carolina lacked jurisdiction to hear the State Bar of North Carolina's appeal of a grant of summary judgment to an attorney in a disciplinary proceeding because G.S. 84-28(h) provided no appeal from a final order that did not impose discipline and in the instant case no discipline had been imposed. N.C. State Bar v. Rudisill, 159 N.C. App. 704, 583 S.E.2d 413, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1527 (2003).

An order of the hearing commission of the State Bar denying defendant's motion to dismiss on the ground of lack of jurisdiction is interlocutory; therefore, defendant cannot appeal therefrom as a matter of right. North Carolina State Bar v. DuMont, 298 N.C. 564, 259 S.E.2d 280 (1979).

Interlocutory Appeal Dismissed. — Water and sewer processing facilities part-owner's appeal of interlocutory orders of the North Carolina Utilities Commission holding that the part-owner was a public utility under G.S. 62-3(23)a.2 and was subject to the Commission's jurisdiction was dismissed as the absence of any exceptions to G.S. 62-90 or this section, allowing review of interlocutory orders of the Commission, required the appellate court to conclude that it had no jurisdiction to consider appeals of interlocutory orders of the Commission; further, the appellate court did not have authority under G.S. 7A-32(c) to review the part-owner's issues as there was no final order of the Commission. State ex rel. Utils. Comm'n v. Buck Island, Inc., 158 N.C. App. 536, 581 S.E.2d 122, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1186 (2003).

Except as provided in G.S. 7A-28, an appeal lies of right to the Supreme Court from any decision of the Court of Appeals rendered in a case:

(1) Which directly involves a substantial question arising under the Constitution of the United States or of this State, or
(2) In which there is a dissent. (1967, c. 108, s. 1; 1983, c. 526, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

I. In General.
II. Constitutional Questions.
III. Dissent.

I. IN GENERAL.

Legislative Intent. — In establishing the North Carolina Court of Appeals, defining its jurisdiction, and providing a system of appeals, the General Assembly followed the basic principle that there should be only one trial on the merits and one appeal on the law, as of right, in every case. Consequently, double appeals as of right — first to the Court of Appeals and then to the Supreme Court — are authorized only in the instances specified by this section. State v. Cumber, 280 N.C. 127, 185 S.E.2d 141 (1971).

Had the General Assembly intended to limit double appeals in criminal cases to the defendant only, it would have said so. State v. Campbell, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752 (1972).

Scope of Review. — When the Supreme Court, after a decision of a cause by the Court of Appeals and pursuant to the petition of a party thereto as authorized by G.S. 7A-31, grants certiorari to review the decision of the Court of Appeals, only the decision of the Court of Appeals is before the Supreme Court for review. The Supreme Court inquires into proceedings in the trial court solely to determine the correctness of the decision of the Court of Appeals. Its inquiry is restricted to rulings of the Court of Appeals which are assigned as error in the petition for certiorari and which are preserved by arguments or the citation of authorities with reference thereto in the brief filed by the petitioner in the Supreme Court, except in those instances in which the Supreme Court elects to exercise its general power of supervision of courts inferior to the Supreme Court. Supreme Court review of a decision by the Court of Appeals upon an appeal from it to the Supreme Court as a matter of right, pursuant to this section, is similarly limited. State v. Williams, 274 N.C. 328, 163 S.E.2d 353 (1968).

Right to Counsel. — G.S. 7A-450 et seq. has generally been construed to limit the right to appointed counsel in criminal cases to direct appeals taken as of right. Ross v. Moffitt, 417 U.S. 600, 94 S. Ct. 2437, 41 L. Ed. 2d 341 (1974).

II. CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTIONS.

The constitutional question must be real and substantial rather than superficial and frivolous. It must be a constitutional question which has not already been the subject of conclusive judicial determination. State v. Colson, 274 N.C. 295, 163 S.E.2d 376 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1087, 89 S. Ct. 876, 21 L. Ed. 2d 780 (1969); Bundy v. Ayscue, 276 N.C. 81, 171 S.E.2d 1 (1969).

Dismissal Where Involvement of Substantial Constitutional Question Is Not Shown. — An appellant seeking a second review by the Supreme Court as a matter of right on the ground that a substantial constitutional question is involved must allege and show the involvement of such question or suffer dismissal. State v. Colson, 274 N.C. 295, 163 S.E.2d 376 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1087, 89 S. Ct. 876, 21 L. Ed. 2d 780 (1969); Bundy v. Ayscue, 276 N.C. 81, 171 S.E.2d 1 (1969).

This section requires that an appellant must either allege and show the existence of a real and substantial constitutional question which has not already been the subject of conclusive judicial determination or suffer dismissal. Thompson v. Thompson, 288 N.C. 120, 215 S.E.2d 606 (1975).

Respondent's appeal based solely on the assertion that the district court's allowance of an amendment to a juvenile petition deprived him of a constitutional right was dismissed by the Supreme Court, ex mero motu, because it did not directly involve a substantial constitutional question within the meaning of this section. In re Jones, 279 N.C. 616, 184 S.E.2d 267 (1971).

Mouthing of Constitutional Phrases Will Not Avoid Dismissal. — Mere mouthing of constitutional phrases like "due process of law" and "equal protection of the law" will not avoid dismissal. State v. Colson, 274 N.C. 295, 163 S.E.2d 376 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1087, 89 S. Ct. 876, 21 L. Ed. 2d 780 (1969); Bundy v. Ayscue, 276 N.C. 81, 171 S.E.2d 1 (1969).

Question Should Be Raised and Passed on in Trial Court. — Appellate courts will not ordinarily pass upon a constitutional question unless it affirmatively appears that such question was raised and passed upon in the trial court. State v. Mitchell, 276 N.C. 404, 172 S.E.2d 527 (1970); State v. Cumber, 280 N.C. 127, 185 S.E.2d 141 (1971).

And Preserved by Appropriate Objection, Assignment of Error and Argument in Brief. — The Supreme Court will not pass upon the merits of a litigant's contention that his constitutional right has been violated by a ruling or order of a lower court, unless, at the time the alleged violation of such right occurred or was threatened by a proposed procedure, ruling or offer of evidence, or at the earliest opportunity thereafter, the litigant made an appropriate objection, exception or motion and thereafter preserved the constitutional question at each level of appellate review by an appropriate assignment of error and by argument in his brief. State v. Mitchell, 276 N.C. 404, 172 S.E.2d 527 (1970).

Consideration of Other Matters. — Once involvement of a substantial constitutional question is established, the Supreme Court will retain the case and may, in its discretion, pass upon any or all assignments of error, constitutional or otherwise, allegedly committed by the Court of Appeals and properly presented for review. State v. Colson, 274 N.C. 295, 163 S.E.2d 376 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1087, 89 S. Ct. 876, 21 L. Ed. 2d 780 (1969); Bundy v. Ayscue, 276 N.C. 81, 171 S.E.2d 1 (1969).

III. DISSENT.

Legislative Intent. — The General Assembly intended to insure a review by the Supreme Court of questions on which there was a division in the intermediate appellate court; no such review was intended for claims joined or consolidated in the lower appellate court and on which that court rendered unanimous decision. Hendrix v. Alsop, 278 N.C. 549, 180 S.E.2d 802 (1971); State v. Campbell, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752 (1972); State v. Hageman, 307 N.C. 1, 296 S.E.2d 433 (1982); State v. Hooper, 318 N.C. 680, 351 S.E.2d 286 (1987).

Dissent Allows Appeal as a Matter of Right. — The aggrieved party, whether the State or the defendant, may appeal to the Supreme Court as of right from any decision of the Court of Appeals in which there is a dissent. State v. Campbell, 282 N.C. 125, 191 S.E.2d 752 (1972).

Supreme Court of North Carolina found that it could hear an appeal from a decision of the Court of Appeals of North Carolina that a defendant be resentenced because G.S. 7A-30(2) provided the state with an appeal of right as there was a dissent in the Court of Appeals. State v. Norris, 360 N.C. 507, 630 S.E.2d 915, 2006 N.C. LEXIS 592 (2006).

Concurring Opinions Labelled as Dissents. — Plaintiff had no right of appeal pursuant to subdivision (2) of this section, although two concurring opinions were labelled as dissents, where all three judges of the Court of Appeals agreed that the plaintiff's complaint and summonses should be dismissed, though for different reasons. Harris v. Maready, 311 N.C. 536, 319 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

Issues on Appeal Under Subdivision (2). — When an appeal is taken pursuant to subdivision (2) of this section, the only issues properly before the court are those on which the dissenting judge in the Court of Appeals based his dissent. Clifford v. River Bend Plantation, Inc., 312 N.C. 460, 323 S.E.2d 23 (1984); State v. Hooper, 318 N.C. 680, 351 S.E.2d 286 (1987); Steingress v. Steingress, 350 N.C. 64, 511 S.E.2d 298 (1999).

On appeal to the Supreme Court pursuant to subdivision (2) of this section by defendant from a decision of the Court of Appeals, one judge dissenting, in which a majority of the panel found no error in defendant's convictions, where the dissenting judge disagreed only with the majority's treatment of the second question presented to that court, and where defendant did not petition the Supreme Court for discretionary review of the other questions, only the second question was properly before the Supreme Court for review, notwithstanding defendant's attempt to bring forward other questions in his brief. State v. Reilly, 313 N.C. 499, 329 S.E.2d 381 (1985), considering, however, the additional question of the sufficiency of the evidence in order to prevent manifest injustice.

Under subdivision (2) of this section, only the issue raised in the dissent is properly before the Supreme Court for review. N.C.R.A.P., Rule 16 defines the permissible scope of review in such cases. Blumenthal v. Lynch, 315 N.C. 571, 340 S.E.2d 358 (1986), addressing, nevertheless, additional issues which arise frequently in the administration of estates, and must often be determined by the Department of Revenue under the Court's residual power or authority under N.C.R.A.P., Rule 2.

Waiver of Failure to Serve Notice of Appeal. — Failure to serve the notice of appeal is a defect in the record analogous to failure to serve process. Therefore, a party upon whom service of notice of appeal is required may waive the failure of service by not raising the issue by motion or otherwise and by participating without objection in the appeal, and the Court of Appeals thus had jurisdiction and could consider the case on its merits. Hale v. Afro-American Arts Int'l, Inc., 335 N.C. 231, 436 S.E.2d 588 (1993).

(a) In any cause in which appeal is taken to the Court of Appeals, except a cause appealed from the North Carolina Industrial Commission, the North Carolina State Bar pursuant to G.S. 84-28, the Property Tax Commission pursuant to G.S. 105-345, the Board of State Contract Appeals pursuant to G.S. 143-135.9, or the Commissioner of Insurance pursuant to G.S. 58-2-80, or a motion for appropriate relief or valuation of exempt property pursuant to G.S. 7A-28, the Supreme Court may, in its discretion, on motion of any party to the cause or on its own motion, certify the cause for review by the Supreme Court, either before or after it has been determined by the Court of Appeals. A cause appealed to the Court of Appeals from any of the administrative bodies listed in the preceding sentence may be certified in similar fashion, but only after determination of the cause in the Court of Appeals. The effect of such certification is to transfer the cause from the Court of Appeals to the Supreme Court for review by the Supreme Court. If the cause is certified for transfer to the Supreme Court before its determination in the Court of Appeals, review is not had in the Court of Appeals but the cause is forthwith transferred for review in the first instance by the Supreme Court. If the cause is certified for transfer to the Supreme Court after its determination by the Court of Appeals, the Supreme Court reviews the decision of the Court of Appeals.

Except in motions within the purview of G.S. 7A-28, the State may move for certification for review of any criminal cause, but only after determination of the cause by the Court of Appeals.

(b) In causes subject to certification under subsection (a) of this section, certification may be made by the Supreme Court before determination of the cause by the Court of Appeals when in the opinion of the Supreme Court:

(1) The subject matter of the appeal has significant public interest, or

(2) The cause involves legal principles of major significance to the jurisprudence of the State, or

(3) Delay in final adjudication is likely to result from failure to certify and thereby cause substantial harm, or

(4) The work load of the courts of the appellate division is such that the expeditious administration of justice requires certification.

(c) In causes subject to certification under subsection (a) of this section, certification may be made by the Supreme Court after determination of the cause by the Court of Appeals when in the opinion of the Supreme Court:

(1) The subject matter of the appeal has significant public interest, or

(2) The cause involves legal principles of major significance to the jurisprudence of the State, or

(3) The decision of the Court of Appeals appears likely to be in conflict with a decision of the Supreme Court.

Interlocutory determinations by the Court of Appeals, including orders remanding the cause for a new trial or for other proceedings, shall be certified for review by the Supreme Court only upon a determination by the Supreme Court that failure to certify would cause a delay in final adjudication which would probably result in substantial harm.

(d) The procedure for certification by the Supreme Court on its own motion, or upon petition of a party, shall be prescribed by rule of the Supreme Court. CASE NOTES

Scope of Review. — When the Supreme Court, after a decision of a cause by the Court of Appeals and pursuant to the petition of a party thereto as authorized by this section, grants certiorari to review the decision of the Court of Appeals, only the decision of the Court of Appeals is before the Supreme Court for review. The Supreme Court inquires into proceedings in the trial court solely to determine the correctness of the decision of the Court of Appeals. Its inquiry is restricted to rulings of the Court of Appeals which are assigned as error in the petition for certiorari and which are preserved by arguments or the citation of authorities with reference thereto in the brief filed by the petitioner in the Supreme Court, except in those instances in which the Supreme Court elects to exercise its general power of supervision of courts inferior to the Supreme Court. Supreme Court review of a decision by the Court of Appeals upon an appeal from it to the Supreme Court as a matter of right, pursuant to G.S. 7A-30, is similarly limited. State v. Williams, 274 N.C. 328, 163 S.E.2d 353 (1968); Peaseley v. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co., 282 N.C. 585, 194 S.E.2d 133 (1973); State v. Miller, 282 N.C. 633, 194 S.E.2d 353 (1973).

The Supreme Court reviews the decision of the Court of Appeals for errors of law allegedly committed by it and properly brought forward for review. State v. Parrish, 275 N.C. 69, 165 S.E.2d 230 (1969); State v. Miller, 282 N.C. 633, 194 S.E.2d 353 (1973).

The Supreme Court may review the entire proceedings and consider any errors which have occurred during the course of the litigation, provided that the parties have taken the proper steps to preserve the questions for appellate review. Spartan Leasing, Inc. v. Brown, 285 N.C. 689, 208 S.E.2d 649 (1974).

When the Supreme Court grants certiorari pursuant to this section, review is ordinarily restricted to the rulings of the Court of Appeals which are assigned as error in the petition for certiorari and brought forward in petitioner's brief. State v. Muse, 280 N.C. 31, 185 S.E.2d 214 (1971), cert. denied, 406 U.S. 974, 92 S. Ct. 2409, 32 L. Ed. 2d 674, rehearing denied, 409 U.S. 898, 93 S. Ct. 99, 34 L. Ed. 2d 157 (1972); Peaseley v. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co., 282 N.C. 585, 194 S.E.2d 133 (1973).

Jurisdiction Proper. — Statute could not have restricted the Supreme Court of North Carolina's constitutional authority under N.C. Const., Art. IV, § 12(1) to exercise jurisdiction to review upon appeal any decision of the courts below, and as such, the Supreme Court of North Carolina did not hesitate to exercise its rarely used general supervisory authority when necessary to promote the expeditious administration of justice, and did so to consider questions that were not properly presented according to its rules; this exercise of supervisory authority was particularly appropriate when prompt and definitive resolution of an issue was necessary to ensure the uniform administration of North Carolina's criminal statutes. State v. Ellis, 361 N.C. 200, 639 S.E.2d 425, 2007 N.C. LEXIS 38 (2007).

Departure from General Rule. — In a criminal case in which the State petitioned for certiorari and the Court of Appeals ruled on only one of defendant's assignments of error in granting a new trial, the Supreme Court elected to depart from the general rule that review under this section is ordinarily restricted to the rulings of the Court of Appeals which are assigned as error, and to consider the remaining assignments of error not considered by the Court of Appeals. State v. Muse, 280 N.C. 31, 185 S.E.2d 214 (1971), cert. denied, 406 U.S. 974, 92 S. Ct. 2409, 32 L. Ed. 2d 674, rehearing denied, 409 U.S. 898, 93 S. Ct. 99, 34 L. Ed. 2d 157 (1972).

Improvidently Allowed. — Discretionary review, pursuant to G.S. 7A-31, of three protective orders was improvidently allowed; under N.C. R. App. P. 15(b), a husband's petition for review of those orders was not timely filed. Davis v. Davis, 360 N.C. 518, 631 S.E.2d 114, 2006 N.C. LEXIS 593 (2006).

Under this section the Supreme Court is to review only those cases of substantial general or legal importance or in which review is necessary to preserve the integrity of precedent established by the Supreme Court. Peaseley v. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co., 282 N.C. 585, 194 S.E.2d 133 (1973).

Constitutional Questions. — The Supreme Court will not ordinarily pass upon a constitutional question unless it affirmatively appears that such question was timely raised and passed upon in the trial court if it could have been, or in the Court of Appeals if the question arose after trial. State v. Parrish, 275 N.C. 69, 165 S.E.2d 230 (1969).

The failure of plaintiff to petition for a writ of certiorari to review the interlocutory decree of the Court of Appeals does not preclude the Supreme Court from granting certiorari after final judgment and thereupon considering and rectifying any errors which occurred at any stage of the proceedings. Spartan Leasing, Inc. v. Brown, 285 N.C. 689, 208 S.E.2d 649 (1974).

The denial of a writ of certiorari imports no expression of opinion upon the merits of the case and such denial does not mean that the Supreme Court has determined that the decision of the Court of Appeals is correct. Denial may simply mean that in the opinion of the Supreme Court the case does not require further review under the provisions of this section. Peaseley v. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke Co., 282 N.C. 585, 194 S.E.2d 133 (1973).

G.S. 7A-451 Does Not Give Indigent Right to Counsel. — An indigent is entitled to have a lawyer at his trial, and for direct review of that trial, but G.S. 7A-451 is not intended to cover the discretionary power of the North Carolina Supreme Court to grant a writ of certiorari under this section. Ross v. Moffitt, 417 U.S. 600, 94 S. Ct. 2437, 41 L. Ed. 2d 341 (1974).

And Equal Protection Clause Does Not Require Free Counsel for Discretionary Appeals. — The equal protection clause does not require North Carolina to provide free counsel for indigent defendants seeking to take discretionary appeals to the North Carolina Supreme Court or to file petitions for certiorari to that court. Ross v. Moffitt, 417 U.S. 600, 94 S. Ct. 2437, 41 L. Ed. 2d 341 (1974).

The duty of the State is not to duplicate the legal arsenal that may be privately retained by a criminal defendant in a continuing effort to reverse his conviction, but only to assure the indigent defendant an adequate opportunity to present his claims fairly in the context of the State's appellate process. Ross v. Moffitt, 417 U.S. 600, 94 S. Ct. 2437, 41 L. Ed. 2d 341 (1974).

A defendant is not denied meaningful access to the North Carolina Supreme Court simply because the State does not appoint counsel to aid him in seeking discretionary review in that court. At that stage he will have a transcript or other record of trial proceedings, a brief on his behalf in the Court of Appeals setting forth his claims of error, and often an opinion by the Court of Appeals disposing of his case. These materials, supplemented by whatever submission respondent may make pro se, would appear to provide the Supreme Court with an adequate basis on which to base its decision to grant or deny review. Ross v. Moffitt, 417 U.S. 600, 94 S. Ct. 2437, 41 L. Ed. 2d 341 (1974).

Equally Divided Court. — Where one member of the Supreme Court does not participate in the consideration or decision of a case, and the remaining six justices are equally divided as to whether the decision of the Court of Appeals should be affirmed or reversed, the decision of the Court of Appeals is affirmed without becoming a precedent. Greenhill v. Crabtree, 301 N.C. 520, 271 S.E.2d 908 (1980); Wayfaring Home, Inc. v. Ward, 301 N.C. 518, 272 S.E.2d 121 (1980).

Exhaustion Requirement in Federal Habeas Corpus. — The fact that the respondent in an appeal from the order of a United States magistrate dismissing a claim for habeas corpus relief incorrectly pleaded that the appellant had exhausted his state court remedies and was entitled to adjudication on the merits was neither conclusive nor a waiver of the exhaustion requirement by the State. Strader v. Allsbrook, 656 F.2d 67 (4th Cir. 1981).

Substantially Similar Rules and Procedures. — The rules and procedures of the North Carolina Supreme Court regarding writs of certiorari are substantially similar to those of the United States Supreme Court. Felton v. Barnett, 912 F.2d 92 (4th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1032, 111 S. Ct. 693, 112 L. Ed. 2d 683, 502 U.S. 1007, 112 S. Ct. 644, 116 L. Ed. 2d 661 (1991).

Discretionary Review Granted. — Supreme Court took discretionary review of three issues in a criminal appeal of a rape conviction that was affirmed by the Court of Appeals; finding error in two of those issues regarding admission of hearsay evidence that affected whether the defendant committed first or second degree rape, the court reversed the conviction and remanded for a new trial. State v. Finney, 358 N.C. 79, 591 S.E.2d 863, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 10 (2004).

Applied in State v. Horton, 275 N.C. 651, 170 S.E.2d 466 (1969); State v. McBane, 276 N.C. 60, 170 S.E.2d 913 (1969); State v. Jennings, 276 N.C. 157, 171 S.E.2d 447 (1970); Whitley v. Redden, 276 N.C. 263, 171 S.E.2d 894 (1970); Hoyle v. City of Charlotte, 276 N.C. 292, 172 S.E.2d 1 (1970); King v. Baldwin, 276 N.C. 316, 172 S.E.2d 12 (1970); Smith v. § 7A-32. Power of Supreme Court and Court of Appeals to issue remedial writs.

(a) The Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals have jurisdiction, exercisable by any one of the justices or judges of the respective courts, to issue the writ of habeas corpus upon the application of any person described in G.S. 17-3, according to the practice and procedure provided therefor in chapter 17 of the General Statutes, and to rule of the Supreme Court.

(b) The Supreme Court has jurisdiction, exercisable by one justice or by such number of justices as the court may by rule provide, to issue the prerogative writs, including mandamus, prohibition, certiorari, and supersedeas, in aid of its own jurisdiction or in exercise of its general power to supervise and control the proceedings of any of the other courts of the General Court of Justice. The practice and procedure shall be as provided by statute or rule of the Supreme Court, or, in the absence of statute or rule, according to the practice and procedure of the common law.

(c) The Court of Appeals has jurisdiction, exercisable by one judge or by such number of judges as the Supreme Court may by rule provide, to issue the prerogative writs, including mandamus, prohibition, certiorari, and supersedeas, in aid of its own jurisdiction, or to supervise and control the proceedings of any of the trial courts of the General Court of Justice, and of the Utilities Commission and the Industrial Commission. The practice and procedure shall be as provided by statute or rule of the Supreme Court, or, in the absence of statute or rule, according to the practice and procedure of the common law. CASE NOTES

The Court of Appeals is authorized to treat an appeal as a petition for a writ of certiorari in order to clarify its position. Jerson v. Jerson, 68 N.C. App. 738, 315 S.E.2d 522 (1984).

Appellate court could exercise its discretion to treat pro se defendant's appeal as a petition for certiorari and grant the writ to address the merits of defendant's appeal for speeding and failure to produce a driver's license where defendant failed to include in the record on appeal a copy of the district court judgment establishing the derivative jurisdiction of the superior court. State v. Phillips, 149 N.C. App. 310, 560 S.E.2d 852, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 185 (2002), appeal dismissed, 355 N.C. 499, 564 S.E.2d 230 (2002).

Although the State cannot appeal from a verdict of not guilty, it may seek a writ of mandamus to compel a trial court to set aside action taken in excess of its authority. State v. Surles, 55 N.C. App. 179, 284 S.E.2d 738 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 307, 290 S.E.2d 707 (1982).

The State's attempted appeal of a district court's action in setting aside guilty verdicts in a misdemeanor case entered by it five months previously and entering verdicts of not guilty would be treated as a petition for a writ of mandamus pursuant to subsection (c) of this section and N.C.R.A.P., Rule 22. State v. Surles, 55 N.C. App. 179, 284 S.E.2d 738 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 307, 290 S.E.2d 707 (1982).

Appeal by Trustees of Charitable Trust. — Although an appeal by the trustees of a charitable trust was subject to dismissal on the ground that there were no parties aggrieved by the order of the superior court modifying the trust, the Court of Appeals nonetheless could consider the appeal, in the exercise of its supervisory power, where the order would affect the interests of a substantial number of public and private hospitals in the State, as well as thousands of persons who would be hospitalized as charity patients. Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. v. Morgan, 9 N.C. App. 460, 176 S.E.2d 860 (1970).

Exercise of Discretionary Duties by Public Official. — Neither mandamus nor a mandatory injunction may be issued to control the manner of a public official's exercise of a discretionary duty. White v. Pate, 58 N.C. App. 402, 293 S.E.2d 601 (1982), modified, 308 N.C. 759, 304 S.E.2d 199 (1983).

Review of Judicial Disciplinary Proceedings. — Under N.C. Const., Art. IV, § 12 and this section, the courts of the appellate division have power to review judicial disciplinary proceedings whether the attorney or the State has prevailed in the trial court. In re Palmer, 296 N.C. 638, 252 S.E.2d 784 (1979).

Review of Attorney Disciplinary Proceedings. — Court of Appeals of North Carolina lacked jurisdiction to hear the State Bar of North Carolina's appeal of a grant of summary judgment to an attorney in a disciplinary proceeding because G.S. 84-28(h) provided no appeal from a final order that did not impose discipline, and in the instant case no discipline had been imposed; further, certiorari was inappropriate because the case did not fall within the rubric of N.C. R. App. P. 21(a)(1) and the court declined to suspend the requirement of Rule 21(a)(1) using N.C. R. App. P. 2. N.C. State Bar v. Rudisill, 159 N.C. App. 704, 583 S.E.2d 413, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1527 (2003).

State Must Seek Review of Disciplinary Proceedings by Writ of Certiorari. — The State may seek review by the appellate division of proceedings disciplining attorneys under the judicial method. However, the State may not appeal in such cases as a matter of right, but must seek appellate review by petition for writ of certiorari. In re Palmer, 296 N.C. 638, 252 S.E.2d 784 (1979).

Relief Where Issue Not Presented in Brief. — Plaintiff's failure to present and argue in its brief to the Court of Appeals the propriety of the trial court's judgment as to attorneys' fees precluded plaintiff from obtaining relief on this point in the Court of Appeals as a matter of right; however, the Court of Appeals, in the exercise of its general supervisory powers under subsection (c) of this section or pursuant to N.C.R.A.P., Rule 2, could consider on its own initiative the question of the attorneys' fees award and give relief as a matter of appellate grace. Stillwell Enters., Inc. v. Interstate Equip. Co., 300 N.C. 286, 266 S.E.2d 812 (1980).

Or When Counsel Fails to Follow Statutory Procedures. — Even though counsel employed by defendant failed to follow the statutory procedure for appealing to the Court of Appeals, because of the important issues raised by the appeal, defendant's petition for writ of certiorari, pursuant to G.S. 7A-32(c), and pursuant to N.C.R.A.P., Rule 21, was allowed. State v. Hamrick, 110 N.C. App. 60, 428 S.E.2d 830, appeal dismissed, cert. denied, 334

The authority of a superior court to grant a writ of certiorari pursuant to Gen. Rules Prac., Rule 19 in appropriate cases is analogous to the Court of Appeals' power to issue a writ of certiorari pursuant to G.S. 7A-32(c). State v. Hamrick, 110 N.C. App. 60, 428 S.E.2d 830, appeal dismissed, cert. denied, 334 N.C. 436, 433 S.E.2d 181 (1993).

No Final Order to Review. — Where the only orders which had been were orders entered by a claims examiner and by a deputy commissioner, no final order or award had been entered by the Industrial Commission itself, and thus, the Commission had taken no action for the Court of Appeals to review, and the issuance of a writ of certiorari was improper. Martin v. Piedmont Asphalt & Paving, 337 N.C. 785, 448 S.E.2d 380 (1994).

Water and sewer processing facilities part-owner's appeal of interlocutory orders of the North Carolina Utilities Commission holding that the part-owner was a public utility under G.S. 62-3(23)a.2 and was subject to the Commission's jurisdiction was dismissed as the absence of any exceptions to G.S. 62-90 or G.S. 7A-29, allowing review of interlocutory orders of the Commission, required the appellate court to conclude that it had no jurisdiction to consider appeals of interlocutory orders of the Commission; further, the appellate court did not have authority under subsection (c) of this section to review the part-owner's issues as there was no final order of the Commission. State ex rel. Utils. Comm'n v. Buck Island, Inc., 158 N.C. App. 536, 581 S.E.2d 122, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1186 (2003).

The Supreme Court shall prescribe rules of practice and procedure designed to procure the expeditious and inexpensive disposition of all litigation in the appellate division. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Adoption of Procedural Rule Did Not Affect Action Already Pending. — Given the unique constitutional and statutory responsibilities of the Supreme Court of North Carolina to promulgate rules of appellate procedure, as well as rules and standards of conduct for the judiciary, the Supreme Court of North Carolina did not exceed its authority in adopting N.C. Code Jud. Conduct, Limitation of Proceedings; however, where a judicial disciplinary action was already pending when N.C. Code Jud. Conduct, Limitation of Proceedings came into effect, the action was not barred. In re Inquiry Concerning a Judge (Brown), 358 N.C. 711, 599 S.E.2d 502, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 910 (2004).

CASE NOTES

Provision of Rule of Practice Must Give Way to Statute. — Subsection (b) of G.S. 15A-1231 clearly contemplates that a defendant be required to request an instruction conference as a prerequisite for assigning error to the trial court's failure to conduct one. Under this section, the provision of Gen. Rules Prac., Rule 21 which requires the trial judge to conduct a jury instruction conference conflicts with subsection (b) of G.S. 15A-1231 and must give way to the provisions of the statute. § 7A-34.1. Unnecessary cover sheets.

A cover sheet summarizing the critical elements of the filing in a format prescribed by the Administrative Office of the Courts shall not be required for papers filed in civil actions subsequent to the initial filing if such subsequent filing contains:

(1) A caption including the file number, on the first page thereof.

(2) The name, address, and telephone number of the attorney filing the papers or, if the party filing the papers is not represented by an attorney, the name, address, and telephone number of the party filing the papers.

(3) A designation of the party represented by the attorney filing the papers, if an attorney is filing the papers.

(4) The name and designation of "plaintiff", "defendant", "petitioner", "respondent", or other relationship to the action of each other party to the action.

(5) The code or codes, set forth on the first page next to the title thereof, corresponding to the codes located on the cover sheet forms promulgated by the Administrative Office of the Courts which apply to the filing.

(6) The signature of the attorney or party filing the paper and the date signed. (2001-388, s. 2.)

(a) The General Assembly finds that court-ordered, nonbinding arbitration may be a more economical, efficient and satisfactory procedure to resolve certain civil actions than by traditional civil litigation and therefore authorizes court-ordered nonbinding arbitration as an alternative civil procedure, subject to these provisions.

(b) The Supreme Court of North Carolina may adopt rules governing this procedure and may supervise its implementation and operation through the Administrative Office of the Courts. These rules shall ensure that no party is deprived of the right to jury trial and that any party dissatisfied with an arbitration award may have trial de novo.

(c) This procedure may be employed in civil actions where claims do not exceed fifteen thousand dollars ($15,000), except that it shall not be employed in actions in which the sole claim is an action on an account, including appeals from magistrates on such actions.

(c1) In cases referred to nonbinding arbitration as provided in this section, a fee of one hundred dollars ($100.00) shall be assessed per arbitration, to be divided equally among the parties, to cover the cost of providing arbitrators.

Fees assessed under this section shall be paid to the clerk of superior court in the county where the case was filed and remitted by the clerk to the State Treasurer.

(d) This procedure may be implemented in a judicial district, in selected counties within a district, or in any court within a district, if the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts, and the cognizant Senior Resident Superior Court Judge or the Chief District Court Judge of any court selected for this procedure, determine that use of this procedure may assist in the administration of justice toward achieving objectives stated in subsection (a) of this section in a judicial district, county, or court. The Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts, acting upon the recommendation of the cognizant Senior Resident Superior Court Judge or Chief District Court Judge of any court selected for this procedure, may terminate this procedure in any judicial district, county, or court upon a determination that its use has not accomplished objectives stated in subsection (a) of this section.

(e) Arbitrators in this procedure shall have the same immunity as judges from civil liability for their official conduct. (1989, c. 301, s. 1; 2002-126, s. 14.3(a); 2003-284, s. 36A.1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1989, c. 301, s. 1, provided: "Nothing herein contained shall be construed to obligate the General Assembly to appropriate funds to implement the provisions of this act."

The exception in subsection (c), added by Session Laws 2002-126, s. 14.3(a), effective October 1, 2002, is applicable to actions and cases filed on or after that date.

CASE NOTES

Failure to Attend. — Unlike G.S. 7A-38.1, authorizing mediated settlement conferences in superior court civil actions, this section does not require the attendance of the parties, their attorneys and other persons or entities with authority, by law or by contract, to settle the parties' claims, nor does the court-ordered arbitration statute require sanctions as does the mediated settlement conference statute; thus, there was insufficient evidence to support the trial court's sanction based on the fact that defendant motorist appeared at the arbitration only through his counsel. § 7A-38: Repealed by Session Laws 1995, c. 500, s. 3.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1995, c. 500, s. 6, provided that s. 3, which repealed this section, became effective October 1, 1995, and shall apply, after the Supreme Court has adopted rules implementing the act, to all superior court civil actions filed in any county after the date the program is implemented in that county. The act also applies to all previously filed actions which are or have been specifically ordered to a mediated settlement conference by a senior resident superior court judge under G.S. 7A-38 prior to its repeal.

Session Laws 1995, c. 358, s. 3(b), as amended by Session Laws 1995, c. 437, s. 2(b), by Session Laws 1995, c. 467, s. 2(b), and by Session Laws 1995, c. 500, s. 2, authorized the use of funds for the purpose of operating the pilot program formerly provided under this section.

Former subsection (o) of this section, as enacted by Session Laws 1991, c. 207, s. 1, provided for expiration of the pilot program created by this section on June 30, 1995. This date was extended by Session Laws 1995, c. 358, s. 3(a) to July 14, 1995, by Session Laws 1995, c. 437, s. 2(a) to July 21, 1995, by Session Laws 1995, c. 467, s. 2(a) to July 28, 1995, and by Session Laws 1995, c. 500, s. 2 to October 1, 1995.

Session Laws 1995, c. 500, s. 5, contains a severability clause.

(a) Purpose. — The General Assembly finds that a system of court-ordered mediated settlement conferences should be established to facilitate the settlement of superior court civil actions and to make civil litigation more economical, efficient, and satisfactory to litigants and the State. Therefore, this section is enacted to require parties to superior court civil actions and their representatives to attend a pretrial, mediated settlement conference conducted pursuant to this section and pursuant to rules of the Supreme Court adopted to implement this section.

(b) Definitions. — As used in this section:

(1) "Mediated settlement conference" means a pretrial, court-ordered conference of the parties to a civil action and their representatives conducted by a mediator.

(2) "Mediation" means an informal process conducted by a mediator with the objective of helping parties voluntarily settle their dispute.

(3) "Mediator" means a neutral person who acts to encourage and facilitate a resolution of a pending civil action. A mediator does not make an award or render a judgment as to the merits of the action.

(c) Rules of procedure. — The Supreme Court may adopt rules to implement this section.

(d) Statewide implementation. — Mediated settlement conferences authorized by this section shall be implemented in all judicial districts as soon as practicable, as determined by the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts.

(e) Cases selected for mediated settlement conferences. — The senior resident superior court judge of any participating district may order a mediated settlement conference for any superior court civil action pending in the district. The senior resident superior court judge may by local rule order all cases, not otherwise exempted by the Supreme Court rule, to mediated settlement conference.

(f) Attendance of parties. — The parties to a superior court civil action in which a mediated settlement conference is ordered, their attorneys and other persons or entities with authority, by law or by contract, to settle the parties' claims shall attend the mediated settlement conference unless excused by rules of the Supreme Court or by order of the senior resident superior court judge. Nothing in this section shall require any party or other participant in the conference to make a settlement offer or demand which it deems is contrary to its best interests.

(g) Sanctions. — Any person required to attend a mediated settlement conference who, without good cause, fails to attend in compliance with this section and the rules adopted under this section, shall be subject to any appropriate monetary sanction imposed by a resident or presiding superior court judge, including the payment of attorneys' fees, mediator fees, and expenses incurred in attending the conference. If the court imposes sanctions, it shall do so, after notice and a hearing, in a written order, making findings of fact and conclusions of law. An order imposing sanctions shall be reviewable upon appeal where the entire record as submitted shall be reviewed to determine whether the order is supported by substantial evidence.

(h) Selection of mediator. — The parties to a superior court civil action in which a mediated settlement conference is to be held pursuant to this section shall have the right to designate a mediator. Upon failure of the parties to designate a mediator within the time established by the rules of the Supreme Court, a mediator shall be appointed by the senior resident superior court judge.

(i) Promotion of other settlement procedures. — Nothing in this section is intended to preclude the use of other dispute resolution methods within the superior court. Parties to a superior court civil action are encouraged to select other available dispute resolution methods. The senior resident superior court judge, at the request of and with the consent of the parties, may order the parties to attend and participate in any other settlement procedure authorized by rules of the Supreme Court or by the local superior court rules, in lieu of attending a mediated settlement conference. Neutral third parties acting pursuant to this section shall be selected and compensated in accordance with such rules or pursuant to agreement of the parties. Nothing in this section shall prohibit the parties from participating in, or the court from ordering, other dispute resolution procedures, including arbitration to the extent authorized under State or federal law.

(j) Immunity. — Mediator and other neutrals acting pursuant to this section shall have judicial immunity in the same manner and to the same extent as a judge of the General Court of Justice, except that mediators and other neutrals may be disciplined in accordance with enforcement procedures adopted by the Supreme Court pursuant to G.S. 7A-38.2.

(k) Costs of mediated settlement conference. — Costs of mediated settlement conferences shall be borne by the parties. Unless otherwise ordered by the court or agreed to by the parties, the mediator's fees shall be paid in equal shares by the parties. For purposes of this section, multiple parties shall be considered one party when they are represented by the same counsel. The rules adopted by the Supreme Court implementing this section shall set out a method whereby parties found by the court to be unable to pay the costs of the mediated settlement conference are afforded an opportunity to participate without cost. The rules adopted by the Supreme Court shall set the fees to be paid a mediator appointed by a judge upon the failure of the parties to designate a mediator.

(l) Inadmissibility of negotiations. — Evidence of statements made and conduct occurring in a mediated settlement conference or other settlement proceeding conducted under this section, whether attributable to a party, the mediator, other neutral, or a neutral observer present at the settlement proceeding, shall not be subject to discovery and shall be inadmissible in any proceeding in the action or other civil actions on the same claim, except:

(1) In proceedings for sanctions under this section;
(2) In proceedings to enforce or rescind a settlement of the action;
(3) In disciplinary proceedings before the State Bar or any agency established to enforce standards of conduct for mediators or other neutrals; or
(4) In proceedings to enforce laws concerning juvenile or elder abuse.

As used in this section, the term "neutral observer" includes persons seeking mediator certification, persons studying dispute resolution processes, and persons acting as interpreters.

No settlement agreement to resolve any or all issues reached at the proceeding conducted under this subsection or during its recesses shall be enforceable unless it has been reduced to writing and signed by the parties. No evidence otherwise discoverable shall be inadmissible merely because it is presented or discussed in a mediated settlement conference or other settlement proceeding.

No mediator, other neutral, or neutral observer present at a settlement proceeding shall be compelled to testify or produce evidence concerning statements made and conduct occurring in anticipation of, during, or as a follow-up to a mediated settlement conference or other settlement proceeding pursuant to this section in any civil proceeding for any purpose, including proceedings to enforce or rescind a settlement of the action, except to attest to the signing of any agreements, and except proceedings for sanctions under this section, disciplinary hearings before the State Bar or any agency established to enforce standards of conduct for mediators or other neutrals, and proceedings to enforce laws concerning juvenile or elder abuse.

CASE NOTES

Sanctions for Failure to Attend. — Trial court did not abuse its discretion by striking defendant's answer and entering default where corporate defendant had no good cause for failing to have officer mediation settlement conference and was not excused, less severe sanctions were considered rejected as inappropriate, and the sanctions entered were specifically authorized by former Rule 37(b)(2)c (repealed by 1993 Session Laws, c. 553, s. 1). Triad Mack Sales & Serv., Inc. v. Clement Bros. Co., 113 N.C. App. 405, 438 S.E.2d 485 (1994).

Unlike this section, authorizing mediated settlement conferences in superior court civil actions, G.S. 7A-37.1 does not require the attendance of the parties, their attorneys and other persons or entities with authority, by law or by contract, to settle the parties' claims, nor does the court-ordered arbitration statute require sanctions as does the mediated settlement conference statute; thus, there was insufficient evidence to support the trial court's sanction based on the fact that defendant motorist appeared at the arbitration only through his counsel. Bledsole v. Johnson, 357 N.C. 133, 579 S.E.2d 379, 2003 N.C. LEXIS 418 (2003).

Sanction Not Authorized for Violation of Agreement. — Trial court was without authority under G.S. 7A-38.1(g), or its inherent authority, to sanction the parents for violating the terms of the settlement agreement because the parents complied with the Mediation Rules in creating a settlement agreement but subsequently violated the terms of the agreement. Estate of Barber v. Guilford County Sheriff's Dep't, 161 N.C. App. 658, 589 S.E.2d 433, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 2256 (2003).

Mediator May Be Compelled for Evidence of Agreement. — A mediator is both competent and compellable to testify or produce evidence on whether the parties reached a settlement agreement, where a judge is making that determination. Few v. Hammack Enters., Inc., 132 N.C. App. 291, 511 S.E.2d 665 (1999).

Mediation Settlement Outcomes Admissible. — Admission of the outcome of a mediation settlement conference is not prohibited where a judge is making a determination of whether an agreement was reached and the terms of the agreement. Few v. Hammack Enters., Inc., 132 N.C. App. 291, 511 S.E.2d 665 (1999).

A party who claims that a settlement agreement is invalid and unenforceable should have to overcome the strong presumption expressed in this section that a settlement agreement reached by the parties through court-ordered mediation under the guidance of a mediator is a valid contract. Chappell v. Roth, 141 N.C. App. 502, 539 S.E.2d 666, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1392 (2000).

Conversation Not Part of Negotiations. — The trial judge properly determined that admitted portions of an answering machine message and a subsequent conversation between the plaintiff mother of a boy injured on an amusement ride and the deceased defendant ride operator in which he admitted the possibility that he had not fastened the boy properly were not part of settlement negotiations; there was no mention of an intent to compromise or negotiate in the admitted portions of the conversation and the testimony was an admission of fact during a telephone conversation initiated by a party to the dispute. Breedlove v. Aerotrim, U.S.A., Inc., 142 N.C. App. 447, 543 S.E.2d 213, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 147 (2001).

Breach. — Record supported the trial court's judgment that a general contractor made three of six payments it was required to make under a settlement agreement on time, that a subcontractor that was entitled to receive those payments breached the settlement agreement by refusing to authorize release of a letter of credit, and that the general contractor was relieved of its obligation to make the remaining payments because of the subcontractor's breach. McClure Lumber Co. v. Helmsman Constr., Inc., 160 N.C. App. 190, 585 S.E.2d 234, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1733 (2003).

Summary Judgment Proper Upon Reaching Settlement Agreement. — Where the parties to a real estate commission dispute reached a settlement agreement at mediation, but the brokerage did not sign the written settlement agreement, and never moved the trial court to enforce the settlement agreement, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment dismissing the case rather than entering an order enforcing the agreement. Cohen Schatz Assocs. v. Perry, 169 N.C. App. 834, 611 S.E.2d 229, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 807 (2005).

Dismissal Upon Failure to Agree on Mediator Was Error. — Both G.S. 7A-38.1(h) and Rules of the North Carolina Supreme Court Implementing Statewide Mediated Settlement Conferences in Superior Court Civil Actions 2C contemplated that if the parties to a lawsuit failed to agree on a settlement conference mediator or that plaintiff failed to report this to the senior resident superior court judge, that the judge was to have appointed a mediator; trial court's dismissal of an action after the parties failed to agree on mediator was error. Gailey v. Triangle Billiards & Blues Club, Inc., — N.C. App. —, 635 S.E.2d 482, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 2132 (2006).

Costs of Mediation Recoverable. — In a medical malpractice case, trial court erred in denying motion seeking to recover mediation costs because mediation was ordered in all civil actions, and the cost was recoverable under G.S. 7A-305(d)(7). Miller v. Forsyth Mem'l Hosp., Inc., 173 N.C. App. 385, 618 S.E.2d 838, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2040 (2005).

Applied in Lord v. Customized Consulting Specialty, Inc., 164 N.C. App. 730, 596 S.E.2d 891, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 1144 (2004).

(a) The Supreme Court may adopt standards of conduct for mediators and other neutrals who are certified or otherwise qualified pursuant to G.S. 7A-38.1, 7A-38.3, 7A-38.3B, 7A-38.3D, and 7A-38.4A, or who participate in proceedings conducted pursuant to those sections. The standards may also regulate mediator and other neutral training programs. The Supreme Court may adopt procedures for the enforcement of those standards.

(b) The administration of the certification and qualification of mediators and other neutrals, and mediator and other neutral training programs shall be conducted through the Dispute Resolution Commission, established under the Judicial Department. The Supreme Court shall adopt rules and regulations governing the operation of the Commission. The Commission shall exercise all of its duties independently of the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts, except that the Commission shall consult with the Director regarding personnel and budgeting matters.

(c) The Dispute Resolution Commission shall consist of 16 members: five judges appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, at least two of whom shall be superior court judges, and at least two of whom shall be district court judges; one clerk of superior court appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court; two mediators certified to conduct superior court mediated settlement conferences and two mediators certified to conduct equitable distribution mediated settlement conferences appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court; one certified district criminal court mediator who is a representative of a community mediation center appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court; two practicing attorneys who are not certified as mediators appointed by the President of the North Carolina State Bar, one of whom shall be a family law specialist; and three citizens knowledgeable about mediation, one of whom shall be appointed by the Governor, one by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Speaker of the House of Representatives in accordance with G.S. 120-121, and one by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the President Pro Tempore of the Senate in accordance with G.S. 120-121. Members shall initially serve four-year terms, except that one judge, one mediator, one attorney, and the citizen member appointed by the Governor, shall be appointed for an initial term of two years. Incumbent members as of September 30, 1998 shall serve the remainder of the terms to which they were appointed. Members appointed to newly-created membership positions effective October 1, 1998 shall serve initial terms of two years. Thereafter, members shall serve three-year terms and shall be ineligible to serve more than two consecutive terms. The Chief Justice shall designate one of the members to serve as chair for a two-year term. Members of the Commission shall be compensated pursuant to G.S. 138-5.

Vacancies shall be filled for unexpired terms and full terms in the same manner as incumbents were appointed. Appointing authorities may receive and consider suggestions and recommendations of persons for appointment from the Dispute Resolution Commission, the Family Law, Litigation, and Dispute Resolution Sections of the North Carolina Bar Association, the North Carolina Association of Professional Family Mediators, the North Carolina Conference of Clerks of Superior Court, the North Carolina Conference of Court Administrators, the Mediation Network of North Carolina, the Dispute Resolution Committee of the Supreme Court, the Conference of Chief District Court Judges, the Conference of Superior Court Judges, the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts, and the Child Custody Mediation Advisory Committee of the Administrative Office of the Courts.

(d) An administrative fee, not to exceed two hundred dollars ($200.00), may be charged by the Administrative Office of the Courts to applicants for certification and annual renewal of certification for mediators and mediation training programs operating under this Article. The fees collected may be used by the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts to establish and maintain the operations of the Commission and its staff.

(e) The chair of the Commission may employ an executive secretary and other staff as necessary to assist the Commission in carrying out its duties. The chair may also employ special counsel or call upon the Attorney General to furnish counsel to assist the Commission in conducting hearings pursuant to its certification or qualification and regulatory responsibilities. Special counsel or counsel furnished by the Attorney General may present the evidence in support of a denial or revocation of certification or qualification or a complaint against a mediator, other neutral, training program, or trainers or staff affiliated with a program. Special counsel or counsel furnished by the Attorney General may also represent the Commission when its final determinations are the subject of an appeal.

(f) In connection with any investigation or hearing conducted pursuant to an application for certification or qualification of any mediator, other neutral, or training program, or conducted pursuant to any disciplinary matter, the chair of the Dispute Resolution Commission or his/her designee, may:

(1) Administer oaths and affirmations;

(2) Sign and issue subpoenas in the name of the Dispute Resolution Commission or direct its executive secretary to issue such subpoenas on its behalf requiring attendance and the giving of testimony by witnesses and the production of books, papers, and other documentary evidence;

(3) Apply to the General Court of Justice, Superior Court Division, for any order necessary to enforce the power conferred in this section.

(g) The General Court of Justice, Superior Court Division, may enforce subpoenas issued in the name of the Dispute Resolution Commission and requiring attendance and the giving of testimony by witnesses and the production of books, papers, and other documentary evidence.

(h) The Commission shall keep confidential all information in its files pertaining to the certification of mediators, the qualification of other neutrals, the certification or qualification of training programs for mediators or other neutrals, and the renewal of such certifications and qualifications. However, disciplinary matters reported by an applicant for certification or qualification, a mediator, other neutral, trainer, or manager shall be treated as a complaint as set forth below. The Commission shall also keep confidential the identity of those persons requesting informal guidance or the issuance of formal advisory opinions from the Commission or its staff.

Unless an applicant, mediator, other neutral, or training program trainer or manager requests otherwise, all information in the Commission's disciplinary files pertaining to a complaint regarding the conduct of an applicant, mediator, other neutral, trainer, or manager shall remain confidential until such time as a preliminary investigation is completed and a determination is made that probable cause exists to believe that the applicant, mediator, neutral, trainer, or manager's words or actions:

(1) Violate standards for the conduct of mediators or other neutrals;
(2) Violate other standards of professional conduct to which the applicant, mediator, neutral, trainer, or manager is subject;
(3) Violate program rules; or
(4) Consist of conduct or actions that are inconsistent with good moral character or reflect a lack of fitness to serve as a mediator, other neutral, trainer, or manager.

The Commission may publish names, contact information, and biographical information for mediators, neutrals, and training programs that have been certified or qualified.

(i) The Commission shall conduct its initial review of all applications for certification and certification renewal or qualification and qualification renewal in private. The Commission shall also conduct its initial review of complaints regarding the qualifications of any certified mediator, other neutral, or training program, but not involving issues of ethics or conduct, in private. Appeals of denials of applications for certification, qualification, or renewal and appeals of revocations of certification or qualification for reasons that do not relate to ethics or conduct, shall be heard by the Commission in private unless the applicant, certified mediator, qualified neutral, or certified or qualified training program requests a public hearing.

(j) The Commission shall conduct in private its initial review of all matters relating to the ethics or conduct of an applicant for certification, qualification, or renewal of certification or qualification or the ethics or conduct of a mediator, other neutral, trainer, or training program manager. If an applicant appeals the Commission's initial determination that sanctions be imposed, the hearing of such appeal by the Commission shall be open to the public, except that for good cause shown, the presiding officer may exclude from the hearing room all persons except the parties, counsel, and those engaged in the hearing. No hearing shall be closed to the public over the objection of an applicant, mediator, other neutral, trainer, or training program manager.

(k) Appeals of final determinations by the Commission to deny certification or renewal of certification, to revoke certification, or to discipline a mediator, trainer, or training program manager shall be filed in the General Court of Justice, Wake County Superior Court Division. Notice of appeal shall be filed within 30 days of the date of the Commission's decision. (1995, c. 500, s. 1; 1998-212, s. 16.19(b), (c); 2005-167, ss. 2, 4; 2007-387, ss. 2, 3.)

Editor's Note. — This section was amended by Session Laws 2005-167, ss. 1 and 4, in the coded bill drafting format provided by G.S. 120-20.1. The amendment by 2005-167, s. 4 did not account for changes made to subsection (a) by Session Laws 2005-167, s. 1. Subsection (a) has been set out in the form above at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes.

Session Laws 2005-167, s. 4, which amended this section by inserting "G.S. 7A-38.3B" in subsection (a), was contingent on "A Bill to Be Entitled An Act to Authorize The Clerk of Superior Court To Order Mediation In Matters Within The Clerk's Jurisdiction" becoming law. That bill was enacted as Session Laws 2005-67, effective May 26, 2005, and applicable to all matters pending before a clerk of superior court on, or filed with the clerk after, the date the Supreme Court adopts rules implementing Session Laws 2005-67.

Session Laws 2007-387, s. 4, provides: "The Supreme Court shall adopt rules under G.S. 7A-38.3D(d), as enacted in Section 1 of this act, and shall establish requirements for the certification or qualification under G.S. 7A-38.3D(f), as enacted by Section 1 of this act, no later than January 1, 2008." The rules had not yet been adopted as of October 12, 2007.

Session Laws 2007-387, s. 5, provides: "This act is effective when it becomes law [August 19, 2007] and applies to mediations conducted on and after the date the Supreme Court adopts rules and requirements for the certification or qualification under Section 4 of this act."

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2007-387, ss. 2 and 3, effective August 19, 2007, in subsection (a), substituted "may" for "is authorized to" following "The Supreme Court", deleted "G.S." preceding "7A-38.3B," and inserted "7A-38.3D" thereafter; in subsection (c), substituted "16 members" for "15 members" and inserted "one certified district criminal court mediator who is a representative of a community mediation center appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court" in the first sentence. For applicability provision, see Editor's note.

§ 7A-38.3. Prelitigation mediation of farm nuisance disputes.

(a) Definitions. — As used in this section:

(1) "Farm nuisance dispute" means a claim that the farming activity of a farm resident constitutes a nuisance.

(2) "Farm resident" means a person holding an interest in fee, under a real estate contract, or under a lease, in land used for farming activity when that person manages the operations on the land.

(3) "Farming activity" means the cultivation of farmland for the production of crops, fruits, vegetables, ornamental and flowering plants, and the utilization of farmland for the production of dairy, livestock, poultry, and all other forms of agricultural products having a domestic or foreign market.

(4) "Mediator" means a neutral person who acts to encourage and facilitate a resolution of a farm nuisance dispute.

(5) "Nuisance" means an action that is injurious to health, indecent, offensive to the senses, or an obstruction to the free use of property.

(6) "Party" means any person having a dispute with a farm resident.

(7) "Person" means a natural person, or any corporation, trust, or limited partnership as defined in G.S. 59-102.

(b) Voluntary Mediation. — The parties to a farm nuisance dispute may agree at any time to mediation of the dispute under the provisions of this section.

(c) Mandatory Mediation. — Prior to bringing a civil action involving a farm nuisance dispute, a farm resident or any other party shall initiate mediation pursuant to this section. If a farm resident or any other party brings an action involving a farm nuisance dispute, this action shall, upon the motion of any party prior to trial, be dismissed without prejudice by the court unless any one or more of the following apply:

(1) The dispute involves a claim that has been brought as a class action.

(2) The nonmoving party has satisfied the requirements of this section and such is indicated in a mediator's certification issued under subsection (g) of this section.

(3) The court finds that a mediator improperly failed to issue a certification indicating that the nonmoving party satisfied the requirements of this section.

(4) The court finds good cause for a failure to attempt mediation. Good cause includes, but is not limited to, a determination that the time delay required for mediation would likely result in irreparable harm or that injunctive relief is otherwise warranted.

(d) Initiation of Mediation. — Prelitigation mediation of a farm nuisance dispute shall be initiated by filing a request for mediation with the clerk of superior court in a county in which the action may be brought. The Administrative Office of the Courts shall prescribe a request for mediation form. The party filing the request for mediation also shall mail a copy of the request by certified mail, return receipt requested, to each party to the dispute. The clerk shall provide each party with a list of mediators certified by the Dispute Resolution Commission. If the parties agree in writing to the selection of a mediator from that list, the clerk shall appoint that mediator selected by the parties. If the parties do not agree on the selection of a mediator, the party filing the request for mediation shall bring the matter to the attention of the clerk, and a mediator shall be appointed by the senior resident superior court judge. The clerk shall notify the mediator and the parties of the appointment of the mediator.

(e) Mediation Procedure. — Except as otherwise expressly provided in this section, mediation under this section shall be conducted in accordance with the provisions for mediated settlement of civil cases in G.S. 7A-38.1 and G.S. 7A-38.2 and rules and standards adopted pursuant to those sections. The Supreme Court may adopt additional rules and standards to implement this section, including an exemption from the provisions of G.S. 7A-38.1 for cases in which mediation was attempted under this section.

(f) Waiver of Mediation. — The parties to the dispute may waive the mediation required by this section by informing the mediator of their waiver in writing. No costs shall be assessed to any party if all parties waive mediation prior to the occurrence of an initial mediation meeting.

(g) Certification That Mediation Concluded. — Immediately upon a waiver of mediation under subsection (f) of this section or upon the conclusion of mediation, the mediator shall prepare a certification stating the date on which the mediation was concluded and the general results of the mediation, including, as applicable, that the parties waived the mediation, that an agreement was reached, that mediation was attempted but an agreement was not reached, or that one or more parties, to be specified in the certification, failed or refused without good cause to attend one or more mediation meetings or otherwise participate in the mediation. The mediator shall file the original of the certification with the clerk and provide a copy to each party. Each party to the mediation has satisfied the requirements of this section upon the filing of the certification, except any party specified in the certification as having failed or refused to attend one or more mediation meetings or otherwise participate. The sanctions in G.S. 7A-38.1(g) do not apply to prelitigation mediation conducted under this section.

(h) Time Periods Tolled. — Time periods relating to the filing of a claim or the taking of other action with respect to a farm nuisance dispute, including any applicable statutes of limitations, shall be tolled upon the filing of a request for mediation under this section, until 30 days after the date on which the mediation is concluded as set forth in the mediator's certification, or if the mediator fails to set forth such date, until 30 days after the filing of the certification under subsection (g) of this section. § 7A-38.3B. Mediation in matters within the jurisdiction of the clerk of superior court.

(a) Purpose. — The General Assembly finds that the clerk of superior court in the General Court of Justice should have the discretion and authority to order that mediation be conducted in matters within the clerk's jurisdiction in order to facilitate a more economical, efficient, and satisfactory resolution of those matters.

(b) Enabling Authority. — The clerk of superior court may order that mediation be conducted in any matter in which the clerk has exclusive or original jurisdiction, except for matters under Chapters 45 and 48 of the General Statutes and except in matters in which the jurisdiction of the clerk is ancillary. The Supreme Court may adopt rules to implement this section. Such mediations shall be conducted pursuant to this section and the Supreme Court rules as adopted.

(c) Attendance. — In those matters ordered to mediation pursuant to this section, the following persons or entities, along with their attorneys, may be ordered by the clerk to attend the mediation:

(1) Named parties.

(2) Interested persons, meaning persons or entities who have a right, interest, or claim in the matter; heirs or devisees in matters under Chapter 28A of the General Statutes, next of kin under Chapter 35A of the General Statutes, and other persons or entities as the clerk deems necessary for the adjudication of the matter. The meaning of "interested person" may vary according to the issues involved in the matter.

(3) Nonparty participants, meaning any other person or entity identified by the clerk as possessing useful information about the matter and whose attendance would be beneficial to the mediation.

(4) Fiduciaries, meaning persons or entities who serve as fiduciaries, as that term is defined by G.S. 36A-22.1, of named parties, interested persons, or nonparty participants.

Any person or entity ordered to attend a mediation shall be notified of its date, time, and location and shall attend unless excused by rules of the Supreme Court or by order of the clerk. No one attending the mediation shall be required to make a settlement offer or demand that it deems contrary to its best interests.

(d) Selection of Mediator. — Persons ordered to mediation pursuant to this section have the right to designate a mediator in accordance with rules promulgated by the Supreme Court implementing this section. Upon failure of those persons to agree upon a designation within the time established by rules of the Supreme Court, a mediator certified by the Dispute Resolution Commission pursuant to those rules shall be appointed by the clerk.

(e) Immunity. — Mediators acting pursuant to this section shall have judicial immunity in the same manner and to the same extent as a judge of the General Court of Justice, except that mediators may be disciplined in accordance with procedures adopted by the Supreme Court pursuant to G.S. 7A-38.2.

(f) Costs of Mediation. — Costs of mediation under this section shall be borne by the named parties, interested persons, and fiduciaries ordered to attend the mediation. The rules adopted by the Supreme Court implementing this section shall set out the manner in which costs shall be paid and a method by which an opportunity to participate without cost shall be afforded to persons found by the clerk to be unable to pay their share of the costs of mediation. Costs may only be assessed against the estate of a decedent, the estate of an adjudicated or alleged incompetent, a trust corpus, or against a fiduciary upon the entry of a written order making specific findings of fact justifying the taxing of costs.

(g) Inadmissibility of Negotiations. — Evidence of statements made or conduct occurring during a mediation conducted pursuant to this section, whether attributable to any participant, mediator, expert, or neutral observer, shall not be subject to discovery and shall be inadmissible in any proceeding in the matter or other civil actions on the same claim, except in:

(1) Proceedings for sanctions pursuant to this section;
(2) Proceedings to enforce or rescind a written and signed settlement agreement;
(3) Incompetency, guardianship, or estate proceedings in which a mediated agreement is presented to the clerk;
(4) Disciplinary proceedings before the North Carolina State Bar or any agency established to enforce standards of conduct for mediators or other neutrals; or
(5) Proceedings for abuse, neglect, or dependency of a juvenile, or for abuse, neglect, or exploitation of an adult, for which there is a duty to report under G.S. 7B-301 and Article 6 of Chapter 108A of the General Statutes, respectively.

No evidence otherwise discoverable shall be inadmissible merely because it is presented or discussed in mediation.

As used in this section, the term "neutral observer" includes persons seeking mediator certification, persons studying dispute resolution processes, and persons acting as interpreters.

(h) Testimony. — No mediator or neutral observer shall be compelled to testify or produce evidence concerning statements made and conduct occurring in anticipation of, during, or as a follow-up to the mediation in any civil proceeding for any purpose, including proceedings to enforce or rescind a settlement of the matter except to attest to the signing of any agreements reached in mediation, and except in:

(1) Proceedings for sanctions pursuant to this section;
(2) Disciplinary proceedings before the North Carolina State Bar or any agency established to enforce standards of conduct for mediators or other neutrals; or
(3) Proceedings for abuse, neglect, or dependency of a juvenile, or for abuse, neglect, or exploitation of an adult, for which there is a duty to report under G.S. 7B-301 and Article 6 of Chapter 108A of the General Statutes, respectively.

(i) Agreements. — In matters before the clerk in which agreements are reached in a mediation conducted pursuant to this section, or during one of its recesses, those agreements shall be treated as follows:

(1) Where as a matter of law, a matter may be resolved by agreement of the parties, a settlement is enforceable only if it has been reduced to writing and signed by the parties.
(2) In all other matters before the clerk, including guardianship and estate matters, all agreements shall be delivered to the clerk for consideration in deciding the matter.

(j) Sanctions. — The clerk may sanction any person ordered to attend a mediation conducted pursuant to this section and rules of the Supreme Court who, without good cause, fails to attend the mediation, by imposing an appropriate monetary sanction, including the payment of attorneys' fees, mediator fees, and expenses incurred in attending the conference. If the clerk imposes sanctions, the clerk shall do so, after notice and a hearing, in a written order, making findings of fact and conclusions of law. An order imposing sanctions is reviewable by the superior court in accordance with G.S. 1-301.2 and G.S. 1-301.3, as applicable, and thereafter by the appellate courts in accordance with G.S. 7A-38.1(g).

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2005-67, s. 5, made this section effective May 26, 2005, and applicable to all matters pending before a clerk of superior court on, or filed with the clerk after, the date the Supreme Court adopts rules implementing this act.

(a) Purpose. — The General Assembly finds that it is in the public interest to promote high standards for persons who mediate matters in district criminal court. To that end, a program of certification for these mediators shall be established in judicial districts designated by the Dispute Resolution Commission and the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts and in which the chief district court judge, the district attorney, and the community mediation center agree to participate. This section does not supersede G.S. 7A-38.5.

(b) Enabling Authority. — In each district, the court may encourage mediation for any criminal district court action pending in the district, and the district attorney may delay prosecution of those actions so that the mediation may take place.

(c) Program Administration. — A community mediation center established under G.S. 7A-38.5 and located in a district designated under subsection (a) of this section shall assist the court in administering a program providing mediation services in district criminal court cases. A community mediation center may assist in the screening and scheduling of cases for mediation and provide certified volunteer or staff mediators to conduct district criminal court mediations.

(d) Rules of Procedure. — The Supreme Court shall adopt rules to implement this section. Each mediation shall be conducted pursuant to this section and the Supreme Court Rules as adopted.

(e) Mediator Authority. — In the mediator's discretion, any person whose presence and participation may assist in resolving the dispute or addressing any issues underlying the mediation may be permitted to attend and participate. The mediator shall have discretion to exclude any individual who seeks to attend the mediation but whose participation the mediator deems would be counterproductive. Lawyers for the participants may attend and participate in the mediation.

(f) Mediator Qualification. — The Supreme Court shall establish requirements for the certification or qualification of mediators serving under this section. The Court shall also establish requirements for the qualification of training programs and trainers, including community mediation center staff, that train these mediators. The Court shall also adopt rules regulating the conduct of these mediators and trainers.

(g) Oversight and Evaluation. — The Supreme Court may require community mediation centers and their volunteer or staff mediators to collect and report caseload statistics, referral sources, fees collected, and any other information deemed essential for program oversight and evaluation purposes.

(h) Immunity. — A mediator under this section has judicial immunity in the same manner and to the same extent as a judge of the General Court of Justice, except that a mediator may be disciplined in accordance with procedures adopted by the Supreme Court. A community mediation center and its staff involved in supplying volunteer or staff mediators or other personnel to schedule cases or perform other duties under this section are immune from suit in any civil action, except in any case of willful or wanton misconduct.

(i) Confidentiality. — Any memorandum, work note, or product of the mediator and any case file maintained by a community mediation center acting under this section and any mediator certification application are confidential.

(j) Inadmissibility of Negotiations. — Evidence of any statement made and conduct occurring during a mediation under this section shall not be subject to discovery and shall be inadmissible in any proceeding in the action from which the mediation arises. Any participant in a mediation conducted under this section, including the mediator, may report to law enforcement personnel any statement made or conduct occurring during the mediation process that threatens or threatened the safety of any person or property. A mediator has discretion to warn a person whose safety or property has been threatened. No evidence otherwise discoverable is inadmissible for the reason it is presented or discussed in a mediated settlement conference or other settlement proceeding under this section.

(k) Testimony. — No mediator or neutral observer present at the mediation shall be compelled to testify or produce evidence concerning statements made and conduct occurring in or related to a mediation conducted under this section in any proceeding in the same action for any purpose, except in:

(1) Proceedings for abuse, neglect, or dependency of a juvenile, or for abuse, neglect, or exploitation of an adult, for which there is a duty to report under G.S. 7B-301 and Article 6 of Chapter 108A of the General Statutes, respectively.

(2) Disciplinary proceedings before the North Carolina State Bar or any agency established to enforce standards of conduct for mediators.

(3) Proceedings in which the mediator acts as a witness pursuant to subsection (j) of this section.

(4) Trials of a felony, during which a presiding judge may compel the disclosure of any evidence arising out of the mediation, excluding a statement made by the defendant in the action under mediation, if it is to be introduced in the trial or disposition of the felony and the judge determines that the introduction of the evidence is necessary to the proper administration of justice and the evidence cannot be obtained from any other source.

(l) Written Agreements. — Any agreement reached in mediation shall be reduced to writing and signed by the parties. A non-attorney mediator may assist parties in reducing the agreement to writing.

(m) Dismissal Fee. — Where an agreement has been reached in mediation and the case will be dismissed, the defendant shall pay to the clerk the dismissal fee of court set forth in G.S. 7A-38.7. By agreement, all or any portion of the fee may be paid by a person other than the defendant. The judge may in the judge's discretion waive the fee for good cause shown.

(n) Definitions. — As used in this section, the following definitions apply:

(1) Court. — A district court judge, a district attorney, or the designee of a district court judge or district attorney.

(2) Neutral observer. — Includes any person seeking mediator certification, any person studying any dispute resolution process, and any person acting as an interpreter. (2007-387, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2007-387, s. 4, provides: "The Supreme Court shall adopt rules under G.S. 7A-38.3D(d), as enacted in Section 1 of this act, and shall establish requirements for the certification or qualification under G.S. 7A-38.3D(f), as enacted by Section 1 of this act, no later than January 1, 2008." The rules had not yet been adopted as of October 12, 2007.

Session Laws 2007-387, s. 5, provides: "This act is effective when it becomes law [August 19, 2007] and applies to mediations conducted on and after the date the Supreme Court adopts rules and requirements for the certification or qualification under Section 4 of this act."

Cross References. — As to settlement procedures in district court actions, see G.S. 7A-38.4A.

(a) The General Assembly finds that a system of settlement events should be established to facilitate the settlement of district court actions involving equitable distribution, alimony, or support and to make that litigation more economical, efficient, and satisfactory to the parties, their representatives, and the State. District courts should be able to require parties to those actions and their representatives to attend a pretrial mediated settlement conference or other settlement procedure conducted under this section and rules adopted by the Supreme Court to implement this section.

(b) The definitions in G.S. 7A-38.1(b)(2) and (b)(3) apply in this section.

(c) Any chief district court judge in a judicial district may order a mediated settlement conference or another settlement procedure, as provided under subsection (g) of this section, for any action pending in that district involving issues of equitable distribution, alimony, child or post separation support, or claims arising out of contracts between the parties under G.S. 52-10, G.S. 52-10.1, or Chapter 52B of the General Statutes. The chief district court judge may adopt local rules that order settlement procedures in all of the foregoing actions and designate other district court judges or administrative personnel to issue orders implementing those settlement procedures. However, local rules adopted by a chief district court judge shall not be inconsistent with any rules adopted by the Supreme Court.

(d) The parties to a district court action where a mediated settlement conference or other settlement procedure is ordered, their attorneys, and other persons or entities with authority, by law or contract, to settle a party's claim, shall attend the mediated settlement conference or other settlement procedure, unless the rules ordering the settlement procedure provide otherwise. No party or other participant in a mediated settlement conference or other settlement procedure is required to make a settlement offer or demand that the party or participant deems contrary to that party's or participant's best interests. Parties who have been victims of domestic violence may be excused from physically attending or participating in a mediated settlement conference or other settlement procedure.

(e) Any person required to attend a mediated settlement conference or other settlement procedure under this section who, without good cause fails to attend, is subject to any appropriate monetary sanction imposed by a district court judge, including the payment of attorneys' fees, mediator fees, and expenses incurred in attending the settlement procedure. If the court imposes sanctions, it shall do so, after notice and hearing, in a written order, making findings of fact and conclusions of law. An order imposing sanctions shall be reviewable upon appeal, and the entire record shall be reviewed to determine whether the order is supported by substantial evidence.

(f) The parties to a district court action in which a mediated settlement conference is to be held under this section shall have the right to designate a mediator. Upon failure of the parties to designate within the time established by the rules adopted by the Supreme Court, a mediator shall be appointed by a district court judge.

(g) A chief district court judge or that judge's designee, at the request of a party and with the consent of all parties, may order the parties to attend and participate in any other settlement procedure authorized by rules adopted by the Supreme Court or adopted by local district court rules, in lieu of attending a mediated settlement conference. Neutrals acting under this section shall be selected and compensated in accordance with rules adopted by the Supreme Court. Nothing herein shall prohibit the parties from participating in other dispute resolution procedures, including arbitration, to the extent authorized under State or federal law. Nothing herein shall prohibit the parties from participating in mediation at a community mediation center operating under G.S. 7A-38.5.

(h) Mediators and other neutrals acting under this section shall have judicial immunity in the same manner and to the same extent as a judge of the General Court of Justice, except that mediators and other neutrals may be disciplined in accordance with enforcement procedures adopted by the Supreme Court under G.S. 7A-38.2.

(i) Costs of mediated settlement conferences and other settlement procedures shall be borne by the parties. Unless otherwise ordered by the court or agreed to by the parties, the mediator's fees shall be paid in equal shares by the parties. The rules adopted by the Supreme Court shall set out a method whereby a party found by the court to be unable to pay the costs of settlement procedures is afforded an opportunity to participate without cost to that party and without expenditure of State funds.

(j) Evidence of statements made and conduct occurring in a mediated settlement conference or other settlement proceeding conducted under this section, whether attributable to a party, the mediator, other neutral, or a neutral observer present at the settlement proceeding, shall not be subject to discovery and shall be inadmissible in any proceeding in the action or other civil actions on the same claim, except:

(1) In proceedings for sanctions under this section;
(2) In proceedings to enforce or rescind a settlement of the action;
(3) In disciplinary proceedings before the State Bar or any agency established to enforce standards of conduct for mediators or other neutrals; or
(4) In proceedings to enforce laws concerning juvenile or elder abuse.

As used in this subsection, the term "neutral observer" includes persons seeking mediator certification, persons studying dispute resolution processes, and persons acting as interpreters.

No settlement agreement to resolve any or all issues reached at the proceeding conducted under this section or during its recesses shall be enforceable unless it has been reduced to writing and signed by the parties and in all other respects complies with the requirements of Chapter 50 of the General Statutes. No evidence otherwise discoverable shall be inadmissible merely because it is presented or discussed in a settlement proceeding.

No mediator, other neutral, or neutral observer present at a settlement proceeding under this section, shall be compelled to testify or produce evidence concerning statements made and conduct occurring in anticipation of, during, or as a follow-up to a mediated settlement conference or other settlement proceeding pursuant to this section in any civil proceeding for any purpose, including proceedings to enforce or rescind a settlement of the action, except to attest to the signing of any agreements, and except proceedings for sanctions under this section, disciplinary hearings before the State Bar or any agency established to enforce standards of conduct for mediators or other neutrals, and proceedings to enforce laws concerning juvenile or elder abuse.

(k) The Supreme Court may adopt standards for the certification and conduct of mediators and other neutrals who participate in settlement procedures conducted under this section. The standards may also regulate mediator training programs. The Supreme Court may adopt procedures for the enforcement of those standards. The administration of mediator certification, regulation of mediator conduct, and decertification shall be conducted through the Dispute Resolution Commission.

(l) An administrative fee not to exceed two hundred dollars ($200.00) may be charged by the Administrative Office of the Courts to applicants for certification and annual renewal of certification for mediators and mediator training programs operating under this section. The fees collected may be used by the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts to establish and maintain the operations of the Commission and its staff. The administrative fee shall be set by the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts in consultation with the Dispute Resolution Commission.

(m) The Administrative Office of the Courts, in consultation with the Dispute Resolution Commission, may require the chief district court judge of any district to report statistical data about settlement procedures conducted under this section for administrative purposes.

(n) Nothing in this section or in rules adopted by the Supreme Court implementing this section shall restrict a party's right to a trial by jury.

Editor's Note. — This section was enacted by Session Laws 2001-320, which repealed G.S. 7A-38.4, pertaining to a similar subject matter. The historical citation to repealed G.S. 7A-38.4 has been placed under this section at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes.

Subsection (j), as rewritten by Session Laws 2005-167, s. 3, effective October 1, 2005, is applicable to mediations commenced on or after that date.

(a) The General Assembly finds that it is in the public interest to encourage the establishment of community mediation centers, also known as dispute settlement centers or dispute resolution centers, to support the work of these centers in facilitating communication, understanding, reconciliation, and settlement of conflicts in communities, courts, and schools, and to promote the widest possible use of these centers by the courts and law enforcement officials across the State.

(b) Community mediation centers, functioning as or within nonprofit organizations and local governmental entities, may receive referrals from courts, law enforcement agencies, and other public entities for the purpose of facilitating communication, understanding, reconciliation, and settlement of conflicts.

(c) Each chief district court judge and district attorney shall encourage mediation for any criminal district court action pending in the district when the judge and district attorney determine that mediation is an appropriate alternative.

(d) Each chief district court judge shall encourage mediation for any civil district court action pending in the district when the judge determines that mediation is an appropriate alternative. (1999-354, s. 1.)

(a) All community mediation centers currently receiving State funds shall report annually to the Mediation Network of North Carolina on the program's funding and activities, including:

(1) Types of dispute settlement services provided;
(2) Clients receiving each type of dispute settlement service;
(3) Number and type of referrals received, cases actually mediated (identified by docket number), cases resolved in mediation, and total clients served in the cases mediated;

(b) A community mediation center requesting State funds for the first time shall provide the General Assembly with the information enumerated in subsection (a) of this section, or projections where historical data are not available, as well as a detailed statement justifying the need for State funding.

(c) Each community mediation center receiving State funds for the first time shall document in the information provided pursuant to this section that, after the second year of receiving State funds, at least ten percent (10%) of total funding comes from non-State sources.

(d) Each community mediation center receiving State funds for the third, fourth, or fifth year shall document that at least twenty percent (20%) of total funding comes from non-State sources.

(f) Each community mediation center currently receiving State funds that has achieved a funding level from non-State sources greater than that provided for that center by subsection (c), (d), or (e) of this section shall make a good faith effort to maintain that level of funding.

(g) The percentage that State funds comprise of the total funding of each community mediation center shall be determined at the conclusion of each fiscal year with the information provided pursuant to this section and is intended as a funding ratio and not a matching funds requirement. Community mediation centers may include the market value of donated office space, utilities, and professional legal and accounting services in determining total funding.

(h) A community mediation center having difficulty meeting the funding ratio provided for that center by subsection (c), (d), or (e) of this section may request a waiver or special consideration through the Mediation Network of North Carolina for consideration by the Senate and House of Representatives Appropriations Subcommittees on Justice and Public Safety.

Fees assessed under this section shall be paid to the clerk of superior court in the county where the case was filed and remitted by the clerk to the State Treasurer.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2002-126, s. 29A.11(c), made this section effective November 1, 2002, and applicable to cases resolved on or after that date.

Session Laws 2002-126, s. 29A.11(b), provides: "Each community mediation center shall maintain records as to the number of cases in which dispute resolution fees are assessed and paid. The Mediation Network of North Carolina shall collect this information from each center annually.

"Each community mediation center shall also maintain records as to the source of referral for all court-referred cases. Each center receiving State funds shall use a standardized form and methodology to determine the referral source and report that information annually to the Mediation Network of North Carolina.

"The Mediation Network of North Carolina shall report by March 15, 2003, to the Chairs of the Senate and House of Representatives Appropriations Committees and the Chairs of the Senate and House of Representatives Appropriations Subcommittees on Justice and Public Safety on the fees collected year-to-date and the sources of referral of court-referred cases during the 2002-2003 fiscal year."

For example, uncodified provisions of this act relating to the Medicaid program apply only to the 2002-2003 fiscal year."

§ 7A-39. Cancellation of court sessions and closing court offices; extension of statutes of limitations in catastrophic conditions.

(a) Cancellation of Court Sessions, Closing Court Offices. — In response to adverse weather or other emergency situations, any session of any court of the General Court of Justice may be cancelled, postponed, or altered by judicial officials, and court offices may be closed by judicial branch hiring authorities, pursuant to uniform statewide guidelines prescribed by the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts.

(b) Authority of Chief Justice. — When the Chief Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court determines and declares that catastrophic conditions exist or have existed in one or more counties of the State, the Chief Justice may by order entered pursuant to this subsection extend, to a date certain no fewer than 10 days after the effective date of the order, the time or period of limitation within which pleadings, motions, notices, and other documents and papers may be timely filed and other acts may be timely done in civil actions, criminal actions, estates, and special proceedings in each county named in the order.

(1) Catastrophic conditions defined. — As used in this subsection, "catastrophic conditions" means any set of circumstances that make it impossible or extremely hazardous for judicial officials, employees, parties, witnesses, or other persons with business before the courts to reach a courthouse, or that create a significant risk of physical harm to persons in a courthouse, or that would otherwise convince a reasonable person to avoid travelling to or being in the courthouse.

(2) Entry of order. — The Chief Justice may enter an order under this subsection at any time after catastrophic conditions have ceased to exist. The order shall be in writing and shall become effective for each affected county upon the date set forth in the order, and if no date is set forth in the order, then upon the date the order is signed by the Chief Justice.

(c) In Chambers Jurisdiction Not Affected. — Nothing in this section prohibits a judge or other judicial officer from exercising, during adverse weather or other emergency situations, any in chambers or ex parte jurisdiction conferred by law upon that judge or judicial officer, as provided by law. The effectiveness of any such exercise shall not be affected by a determination by the Chief Justice that catastrophic conditions existed at the time it was exercised. (2000-166, s. 1; 2006-187, s. 6.)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2006-187, s. 6, effective August 3, 2006, in the section heading, substituted "Cancellation" for "Adverse weather cancellation"; in subsection (a), deleted "comparable" preceding "emergency situations"; in subsection (b), substituted "Justice" for "Justice to Extend Statutes of Limitations" in the subheading, and added "or period of limitation"; in subdivision (b)(1), deleted "including conditions that may result from hurricane, tornado, flood, snowstorm, ice storm, other severe natural disaster, fire, or riot" from the end; and in subdivision (b)(2), substituted "the date set forth in the order, and if no date is set forth in the order, then upon the date the order is signed by the Chief Justice" for "being filed in the office of the clerk of superior court of that county."

§ 7A-39.5. Recall of emergency justice or emergency judge upon temporary incapacity of a justice or judge.

(a) Upon the request of any justice of the Supreme Court who has been advised in writing by a reputable and competent physician that he is temporarily incapable of performing efficiently and promptly all the duties of his office, the Chief Justice may recall any emergency justice who, in his opinion, is competent to perform the duties of an associate justice, to serve temporarily in the place of the justice in whose behalf he is recalled; provided, that when the incapacity of a justice of the Supreme Court is such that he cannot request the recall of an emergency justice to serve in his place, an order of recall may be issued by the Chief Justice upon satisfactory medical proof of the facts upon which the order of recall must be based. Orders of recall shall be in writing and entered upon the minutes of the court.

(b) Upon the request of any judge of the Court of Appeals who has been advised in writing by a reputable and competent physician that he is temporarily incapable of performing efficiently and promptly all the duties of his office, the Chief Judge may recall any emergency judge who, in his opinion, is competent to perform the duties of a judge of the Court of Appeals, to serve temporarily in the place of the judge in whose behalf he is recalled; provided, that when the incapacity of a judge of the Court of Appeals is such that he cannot request the recall of an emergency judge to serve in his place, an order of recall may be issued by the Chief Judge upon satisfactory medical proof of the facts upon which the order of recall must be based. No retired justice of the Supreme Court or retired judge of the Court of Appeals may become an emergency justice or emergency judge except upon his written application to the Governor certifying his desire and ability to serve as an emergency justice or emergency judge. If the Governor is satisfied that the applicant qualifies under G.S. 7A-39.3(a) to become an emergency justice or emergency judge and that he is physically and mentally able to perform the official duties of an emergency justice or emergency judge, he shall issue to such applicant a commission as an emergency justice or emergency judge of the court from which he retired. The commission shall be effective upon the date of its issue and shall terminate when the judge to whom it is issued reaches the maximum age for judicial service under G.S. 7A-4.20(a). (1967, c. 108, s. 1; 1977, c. 736, s. 2; 1979, c. 884, s. 2.)

The Supreme Court shall prescribe rules respecting the filing of opinions prepared by an emergency justice or an emergency judge after his period of temporary service has expired, and any other matter deemed necessary and consistent with the provisions of this Article. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

§ 7A-39.9. Chief Justice and Chief Judge may recall and terminate recall of justices and judges; procedure when Chief Justice or Chief Judge incapacitated.

(a) Decisions of the Chief Justice and the Chief Judge regarding recall of emergency justices and emergency judges, when not in conflict with the provisions of this Article, are final.

(b) The Chief Justice or Chief Judge, may, at any time, in his discretion, cancel any order of recall issued by him or fix the termination date thereof.

(c) Whenever the Chief Justice is the justice in whose behalf an emergency justice is recalled to temporary service, the powers vested in him as Chief Justice by this article shall be exercised by the associate justice senior in point of time served on the Supreme Court. Whenever the Chief Judge is the judge in whose behalf an emergency judge or justice is recalled to temporary service the powers vested in him as Chief Judge by this article shall be exercised by the associate judge senior in point of time served on the Court of Appeals. If two or more judges have served the same length of time on the Court of Appeals, the eldest shall be deemed the senior judge. (1967, c. 108, s. 1; 1985, c. 698, s. 16(d), (e).)

All provisions of this Article shall apply to every justice of the Supreme Court who has heretofore retired and is receiving compensation as an emergency justice. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

Every justice of the Supreme Court or judge of the Court of Appeals who has served for eight years or more on the Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals, or the superior court, or as Administrative Officer of the Courts, or in any combination of these offices, and who while in active service becomes totally and permanently disabled so as to be unable to perform efficiently the duties of his office, and who retires by reason of such disability, shall receive for life compensation equal to two thirds of the annual salary from time to time received by the occupant or occupants of the office from which he retired. In determining whether a judge is eligible for retirement under this section, time served as district solicitor of the superior court prior to January 1, 1971, may be included. Whenever any justice or judge claims retirement benefits under this section on account of total and permanent disability, the Governor and Council of State, acting together, shall, after notice and an opportunity to be heard is given the applicant, by a majority vote of said body, make findings of fact from the evidence offered. Such findings of fact shall be reduced to writing and entered upon the minutes of the Council of State. The findings so made shall be conclusive as to such matters and determine the right of the applicant to retirement benefits under this section. Justices and judges retired under the provisions of this section are not subject to recall as emergency justices or judges. (1967, c. 108, s. 1.)

The provisions of G.S. 7A-39.2 and 7A-39.11 shall apply only to justices and judges who entered into office prior to January 1, 1974. The extent of such application is specified in Chapter 135, Article 4 (Uniform Judicial Retirement Act). (1973, c. 640, s. 5.)

§ 7A-39.13. Recall of active and emergency justices and judges who have reached mandatory retirement age.

Justices and judges retired because they have reached the mandatory retirement age, and emergency justices and judges whose commissions have expired because they have reached the mandatory retirement age, may be temporarily recalled to active service under the following circumstances:

(1) The justice or judge must consent to the recall.

(2) The Chief Justice may recall retired justices to serve on the Supreme Court or on the Court of Appeals, and the Chief Judge may recall retired judges of the Court of Appeals to serve on that court.

(4) Prior to recall, the Chief Justice or the Chief Judge, as the case may be, shall satisfy himself that the justice or judge being recalled is capable of efficiently and promptly performing the duties of the office to which recalled.

(5) Recall is authorized only to replace an active justice or judge who is temporarily incapacitated.

(6) Jurisdiction and authority of a recalled justice or judge is as specified in G.S. 7A-39.7.

(7) The Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, as the case may be, shall prescribe rules respecting the filing of opinions prepared by a retired justice or judge after his period of temporary service has expired, and respecting any other matter deemed necessary and consistent with this section.

(8) Compensation of recalled retired justices and judges is the same as for recalled emergency justices and judges under G.S. 7A-39.3(b).

(9) Recall shall be evidenced by a commission signed by the Chief Justice or Chief Judge, as the case may be. (1981, c. 455, s. 2; 1985, c. 698, s. 16(f).)

§ 7A-39.14. Recall by Chief Justice of retired or emergency justices or judges for temporary vacancy.

(a) In addition to the authority granted to the Chief Justice under G.S. 7A-39.5 to recall emergency justices and under G.S. 7A-39.13 to recall retired justices, the Chief Justice may recall not more than one retired or emergency justice or retired emergency judge of the Court of Appeals, including an emergency justice or judge whose commission has expired because he has reached the mandatory retirement age, in the following circumstances:

(1) If a vacancy exists on the Supreme Court, he may recall an emergency or retired justice to serve on that court until the vacancy is filled in accordance with law.

(2) If a vacancy exists on the Court of Appeals, he may recall an emergency or retired justice of the Supreme Court or judge of the Court of Appeals to serve on the Court of Appeals until the vacancy is filled in accordance with law.

(3) With the concurrence of a majority of the Supreme Court, he may recall an emergency or retired justice to serve on the Supreme Court in place of a sitting justice who, as determined by the Chief Justice, is temporarily unable to perform all of the duties of his office.

(4) With the concurrence of a majority of the Supreme Court, he may recall an emergency or retired justice of the Supreme Court or judge of the Court of Appeals to serve on the Court of Appeals in place of a sitting judge who, as determined by the Chief Justice, is temporarily unable to perform all of the duties of his office.

(b) No judge or justice may be recalled unless he consents to the recall. Orders of recall issued pursuant to this section must be in writing and entered on the minutes of the court. In addition, if the judge or justice is recalled pursuant to subdivision (a)(3) or (a)(4), the order shall contain a finding by the Chief Justice setting out, in detail, the reason for the recall.

(c) A judge or justice recalled pursuant to subdivision (a)(1) or (a)(2) of this section:

(1) Has the same authority and jurisdiction granted to emergency justices and judges under G.S. 7A-39.7;

(2) Is subject to rules adopted pursuant to G.S. 7A-39.8 regarding filing of opinions and other matters; and

(3) Is compensated as are other retired or emergency justices or judges recalled for service pursuant to G.S. 7A-39.5 or G.S. 7A-39.13.

(d) A judge or justice recalled pursuant to subdivision (a)(3) or (a)(4) of this section:

(1) Has the same authority and jurisdiction granted to emergency justices and judges under G.S. 7A-39.7;

(2) Is subject to rules adopted pursuant to G.S. 7A-39.8 regarding filing of opinions and other matters;

(3) May, after the return of the judge or justice in whose place he was sitting, complete the duties assigned to him before the return of that judge or justice; and

(4) Is compensated as are other retired or emergency justices or judges recalled for service pursuant to G.S. 7A-39.5 or G.S. 7A-39.13.

(e) A retired or emergency justice or judge may serve on the Supreme Court or Court of Appeals pursuant to subdivision (a)(3) or (a)(4) only if he is recalled to serve temporarily in place of a sitting justice or judge who is not temporarily incapacitated under circumstances that would permit temporary service of the retired or emergency justice or judge pursuant to G.S. 7A-39.5 or G.S. 7A-39.13. This section does not authorize more than seven justices to serve on the Supreme Court at any given time, nor does it authorize more than 12 justices and judges to serve on the Court of Appeals at any given time. In no case may more than one emergency justice or emergency judge serve on one panel of the Court of Appeals at any given time.

(a) A retired justice or judge of the Appellate Division of the General Court of Justice is eligible to be appointed as an emergency recall judge of the Court of Appeals under the following circumstances:

(1) The justice or judge has retired under the provisions of the Consolidated Judicial Retirement Act, Article 4 of Chapter 135 of the General Statutes, or is eligible to receive a retirement allowance under that act;

(2) The justice or judge has not reached the mandatory retirement age specified in G.S. 7A-4.20;

(3) The justice or judge has served a total of at least five years as a judge or justice of the General Court of Justice, provided that at least six months was served in the Appellate Division, whether or not otherwise eligible to serve as an emergency justice or judge of the Appellate Division of the General Court of Justice;

(4) The judicial service of the justice or judge ended within the preceding 15 years; and

(5) The justice or judge has applied to the Governor for appointment as an emergency recall judge of the Court of Appeals in the same manner as is provided for application in G.S. 7A-53. If the Governor is satisfied that the applicant meets the requirements of this section and is physically and mentally able to perform the duties of a judge of the Court of Appeals, the Governor shall issue a commission appointing the applicant as an emergency recall judge of the Court of Appeals until the applicant reaches the mandatory retirement age for judges of the Court of Appeals specified in G.S. 7A-4.20.

Any former justice or judge of the Appellate Division of the General Court of Justice who otherwise meets the requirements of this section to be appointed an emergency recall judge of the Court of Appeals, but who has already reached the mandatory retirement age for judges of the Court of Appeals set forth in G.S. 7A-4.20, may apply to the Governor to be appointed as an emergency recall judge of the Court of Appeals as provided in this section. If the Governor issues a commission to the applicant, the retired justice or judge is subject to recall as an emergency recall judge of the Court of Appeals as provided in this section.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals may recall and assign one or more emergency recall judges of the Court of Appeals, not to exceed three at any one time, provided funds are available, if the Chief Judge determines that one or more emergency recall judges of the Court of Appeals are necessary to discharge the court's business expeditiously.

(c) Any emergency recall judge of the Court of Appeals appointed as provided in this section shall be subject to recall in the following manner:

(1) The judge shall consent to the recall;
(2) The Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals may order the recall;
(3) Prior to ordering recall, the Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals shall be satisfied that the recalled judge is capable of efficiently and promptly discharging the duties of the office to which recalled;
(4) Orders of recall and assignment shall be in writing, evidenced by a commission signed by the Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals, and entered upon the minutes of the permanent records of the Court of Appeals;
(5) Compensation, expenses, and allowances of emergency recall judges of the Court of Appeals are the same as for recalled emergency superior court judges under G.S. 7A-52(b);
(6) Emergency recall judges assigned under those provisions shall have the same powers and duties, when duly assigned to hold court, as provided for by law for judges of the Court of Appeals;
(7) Emergency recall judges of the Court of Appeals are subject to assignment in the same manner as provided for by G.S. 7A-16 and G.S. 7A-19;
(8) Emergency recall judges of the Court of Appeals shall be subject to rules adopted pursuant to G.S. 7A-39.8 regarding the filing of opinions and other matters;
(9) Emergency recall judges of the Court of Appeals shall be subject to the provisions and requirements of the Canons of Judicial Conduct during the term of assignment; and
(10) An emergency recall judge of the Court of Appeals shall not engage in the practice of law during any period for which the emergency recall Court of Appeals judgeship is commissioned. However, this subdivision shall not be construed to prohibit an emergency recall judge of the Court of Appeals appointed pursuant to this section from serving as a referee, arbitrator, or mediator during service as an emergency recall judge of the Court of Appeals so long as the service does not conflict with or interfere with the judge's service as an emergency recall judge of the Court of Appeals.

(d) A justice or judge commissioned as an emergency recall judge of the Court of Appeals is also eligible to receive a commission as an emergency special superior court judge. However, no justice or judge who has been recalled as provided in this section shall, during the period so recalled and assigned, contemporaneously serve as an emergency special superior court judge or emergency justice of the General Court of Justice. (1995, c. 108, s. 1.)

1987 Amendment Held Constitutional. — The provisions of Session Laws 1987, c. 509, which amended subsection (d) of this section, did not violate the North Carolina Constitution. State ex rel. Martin v. Preston, 325 N.C. 438, 385 S.E.2d 473 (1989).

The provisions of Session Laws 1987, c. 509, which amended subsection (d) of this section, creating a one-time delay of elections and a one-time interim or hiatus between terms of office for certain superior court judgeships (causing the incumbents to hold over until the next elections were held and the succeeding terms of office began) served a public purpose and did not violate the Constitution of North Carolina. State ex rel. Martin v. Preston, 325 N.C. 438, 385 S.E.2d 473 (1989).

By enacting Session Laws 1987, c. 509, the legislature eliminated staggered terms within multi-seat judicial districts by creating a one-time interim or hiatus between certain terms of office; as the Constitution anticipates such "hold over" situations by providing that elected judges remain in office "until their successors are elected and qualified," the act was not unconstitutional. State ex rel. Martin v. Preston, 325 N.C. 438, 385 S.E.2d 473 (1989).

Constitutionality. — Redistricting plan for the superior courts in a county enacted pursuant to G.S. 7A-41 did not violate N.C. Const., Art. I, § 19, as the one person, one vote principle did not apply to judicial elections. Blankenship v. Bartlett, — N.C. App. —, 646 S.E.2d 584, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1452 (2007).

Preclearance of Acts Pursuant to Voting Rights Act. — Where superior court judges were elected pursuant to Session Laws 1965, c. 262, Session Laws 1967, c. 997, Session Laws 1977, cc. 1119, 1130 and 1238, and Session Laws 1983, c. 1109, and such legislative acts had not been precleared by the Attorney General as required by section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, 42 U.S.C. § 1973c, the federal district court would enjoin such elections retroactively in those counties subject to section 5 of the Voting Rights Act; the fact that an election law deals with the election of members of the judiciary does not remove it from the ambit of section 5 of the Voting Rights Act. Haith v. Martin, 618 F. Supp. 410 (E.D.N.C. 1985), aff'd, 477 U.S. 901, 106 S. Ct. 3268, 91 L. Ed. 2d 559 (1986).

Elections proposed to be held in Judicial Districts 3, 4, 8 and 12 would not offend provisions of federal court order of Sept. 24, 1985, and thus would not be enjoined, as such elections would not result in any retrogression in the voting right privileges of racial minorities in those districts, and the judgeships to be filled in those districts in 1986, all of which were created under law prior to section 5 of the Voting Rights Act, have not become an integral part of the voting procedures established by the North Carolina statutes creating new judgeships in those districts. Haith v. Martin, 643 F. Supp. 253 (E.D.N.C. 1986).

New Judicial District Was Not Arbitrary and Capricious. — Creation of the Wake County Superior Court judicial district was not arbitrary and capricious where the General Assembly had consulted with the Administrative Office of the Courts and the new judgeship was based on heavy caseloads and maintaining minority districts. Blankenship v. Bartlett, — N.C. App. —, 646 S.E.2d 584, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1452 (2007).

§ 7A-41.1. District and set of districts defined; senior resident superior court judges and their authority.

(a) In this section and in any other law which refers to this section:

(1) "District" means any superior court district established by G.S. 7A-41 which consists exclusively of one or more entire counties;

(2) "Set of districts" means any set of two or more superior court districts established under G.S. 7A-41, none of which consists exclusively of one or more entire counties, but both or all of which include territory from the same county or counties and together comprise all of the territory of that county or those counties;

(3) "Regular resident superior court judge of the district or set of districts" means a regular superior court judge who is a resident judge of any of the superior court districts established under G.S. 7A-41 which comprise or are included in a district or set of districts as defined herein.

(b) There shall be one and only one senior resident superior court judge for each district or set of districts as defined in subsection (a) of this section, who shall be:

(1) Where there is only one regular resident superior court judge for the district, that judge; and

(2) Where there are two or more regular resident superior court judges for the district or set of districts, the judge who, from among all the regular resident superior court judges of the district or set of districts, has the most continuous service as a regular resident superior court judge; provided if two or more judges are of equal seniority, the oldest of those judges shall be the senior regular resident superior court judge.

(c) Senior resident superior court judges and regular resident superior court judges possess equal judicial jurisdiction, power, authority and status, but all duties placed by the Constitution or statutes on the resident judge of a superior court district, including the appointment to and removal from office, which are not related to a case, controversy or judicial proceeding and which do not involve the exercise of judicial power, shall be discharged, throughout a district as defined in subsection (a) of this section or throughout all of the districts comprising a set of districts so defined, for each county in that district or set of districts, by the senior resident superior court judge for that district or set of districts. That senior resident superior court judge alone among the superior court judges of that district or set of districts shall receive the salary and benefits of a senior resident superior court judge.

(d) A senior resident superior court judge for a district or set of districts as defined in subsection (a) of this section with two or more regular resident superior court judges, by notice in writing to the Administrative Officer of the Courts, may decline to exercise the authority vested in him by this section, in which event such authority shall be exercised by the regular resident superior court judge who, among the other regular resident superior court judges of the district or set of districts, is next senior in point of service or age, respectively.

(e) In the event a senior resident superior court judge for a district or set of districts with one or more regular resident superior court judges is unable, due to mental or physical incapacity, to exercise the authority vested in him by the statute, and the Chief Justice, in his discretion, has determined that such incapacity exists, the Chief Justice shall appoint an acting senior regular resident superior court judge from the other regular resident judges of the district or set of districts, to exercise, temporarily, the authority of the senior regular resident judge. Such appointee shall serve at the pleasure of the Chief Justice and until his temporary appointment is vacated by appropriate order. (1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 2.)

Candidates for the office of regular superior court judge shall be both nominated and elected by the qualified voters of the superior court district for which the election is sought. (1996, 2nd Ex. Sess., c. 9, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1996, Second Extra Session, c. 9, s. 23, provides: "Part 1 of this act becomes effective only if Parts 1 and 2 of this act are both effective under section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965." Preclearance was received by letter dated October 1, 1996.

Session Laws 1996, Second Extra Session, c. 9, s. 24, makes this section effective upon ratification, and applicable beginning with the 1996 elections, except that Sections 1 and 2 of that act shall be applied to the 1994 general election and the results of that election validated and confirmed under those sections. The Act was ratified August 2, 1996. Preclearance was received by letter dated October 1, 1996.

(a) Sessions of the superior court shall be held in each city in the State which is not a county seat and which has a population of 35,000 or more, according to the 1960 federal census.

(a1) In addition to the sessions of superior court authorized by subsection (a) of this section, sessions of superior court in the following counties may be held in the additional seats of court listed by order of the Senior Resident Superior Court Judge after consultation with the Chief District Court Judge:

County	Additional Seats of Court
Davidson	Thomasville
Iredell	Mooresville

The courtrooms and related judicial facilities for these sessions of superior court may be provided by the municipality, and in such cases the facilities fee collected for the State by the clerk of superior court shall be remitted to the municipality to assist in meeting the expense of providing those facilities.

(b) For the purpose of segregating the cases to be tried in any city referred to in subsection (a), and to designate the place of trial, the clerk of superior court in any county having one or more such cities shall set up a criminal docket and a civil docket, which dockets shall indicate the cases and proceedings to be tried in each such city in his county. Such dockets shall bear the name of the city in which such sessions of court are to be held, followed by the word "Division." Summons in actions to be tried in any such city shall clearly designate the place of trial.

(c) For the purpose of determining the proper place of trial of any action or proceeding, whether civil or criminal, the county in which any city described in subsection (a) is located shall be divided into divisions, and the territory embraced in the division in which each such city is located shall consist of the township in which such city lies and all contiguous townships within such county, such division of the superior court to be known by the name of such city followed by the word "Division." All other townships of any such county shall constitute a division of the superior court to be known by the name of the county seat followed by the word "Division." All laws, rules, and regulations now or hereafter in force and effect in determining the proper venue as between the superior courts of the several counties of the State shall apply for the purpose of determining the proper place of trial as between such divisions within such county and as between each of such divisions and any other county of the superior court in North Carolina.

(d) The clerk of superior court of any county with an additional seat of superior court may, but shall not be required to, hear matters in any place other than at his office at the county seat.

(e) The grand jury for the several divisions of court of any county in which a city described in subsection (a) is located shall be drawn from the whole county, and may hold hearings and meetings at either the county seat or elsewhere within the county as it may elect, or as it may be directed by the judge holding any session of superior court within such county; provided, however, that in arranging the sessions of the court for the trial of criminal cases for any county in which any such city is located a session of one week or more shall be held at the county seat preceding any session of one week or more to be held in any such city, so as to facilitate the work of the grand jury, and so as to confine its meetings to the county seat as fully as may be practicable. All petit jurors for all sessions of court in the several divisions of such county shall be drawn, as now or hereafter provided by law, from the whole of the county in which any such city is located for all sessions of courts in the several divisions of such county.

(f) Special sessions of court for the trial of either civil or criminal cases in any city described in subsection (a) may be arranged as by law now or hereafter provided for special sessions of the superior court.

(g) All court records of all such divisions of the superior court of any such county shall be kept in the office of the clerk of the superior court at the county seat, but they may be temporarily removed under the direction and supervision of the clerk to any such division or divisions. No judgment or order rendered at any session held in any such city shall become a lien upon or otherwise affect the title to any real estate within such county until it has been docketed in the office of the clerk of the superior court at the county seat as now or may hereafter be provided by law; provided, that nothing herein shall affect the provisions of G.S. 1-233 and the equities therein provided for shall be preserved as to all judgments and orders rendered at any session of the superior court in any such city.

(h) It shall be the duty of the board of county commissioners of the county in which any such city is located to provide a suitable place for holding such sessions of court, and to provide for the payment of the extra expense, if any, of the sheriff and his deputies in attending the sessions of court of any such division, and the expense of keeping, housing and feeding prisoners while awaiting trial.

(i) Notwithstanding the provisions of this section, when exigent circumstances exist, sessions of superior court may be conducted at a location outside a county seat by order of the Senior Resident Superior Court Judge of a county, with the prior approval of the location and the facilities by the Administrative Office of the Courts and after consultation with the Clerk of Superior Court and county officials of the county. An order entered under this subsection shall be filed in the office of the Clerk of Superior Court in the county and posted at the courthouse within the county seat and notice shall be posted in other conspicuous locations. The order shall be limited to such session or sessions as are approved by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina. (1943, c. 121; 1969, c. 1190, s. 48; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 2.1; 1997-304, s. 4.)

Obligation to Provide "Suitable" Facilities. — In cities other than county seats where sessions of superior court are held, boards of commissioners are obligated by statute to provide "suitable" places for holding such sessions of court. In re Alamance County Ct. Facilities, 329 N.C. 84, 405 S.E.2d 125 (1991).

Hearing Ordered to Probe Adequacy of Court Facilities. — A hearing ordered by a superior court judge to inquire into the adequacy of the Alamance County court facilities probes the scope of the court's inherent power to direct county commissioners to ameliorate such facilities and the proper means of effecting that end. Such power exists, but the order invoking it was procedurally and substantively flawed where the commissioners against whom the order was directed were not made parties to the action, the order was ex parte, and the order intruded on discretion that properly belonged to the commissioners. In re Alamance County Ct. Facilities, 329 N.C. 84, 405 S.E.2d 125 (1991).

(a) A judge of the superior court, regular or special, shall receive the annual salary set forth in the Current Operations Appropriations Act, and in addition shall be paid the same travel allowance as State employees generally by G.S. 138-6(a)(1) and (2), provided that no travel allowance be paid for travel within his county of residence. In addition, a judge of the superior court shall be allowed seven thousand dollars ($7,000) per year, payable monthly, in lieu of necessary subsistence expenses while attending court or transacting official business at a place other than in the county of his residence and in lieu of other professional expenses incurred in the discharge of his official duties. The Administrative Officer of the Courts may also reimburse superior court judges, in addition to the above funds for travel and subsistence, for travel and subsistence expenses incurred for professional education.

(b) In lieu of merit and other increment raises paid to regular State employees, a judge of the superior court, regular or special, shall receive as longevity pay an annual amount equal to four and eight-tenths percent (4.8%) of the annual salary set forth in the Current Operations Appropriations Act payable monthly after five years of service, nine and six-tenths percent (9.6%) after 10 years of service, fourteen and four-tenths percent (14.4%) after 15 years of service, nineteen and two-tenths percent (19.2%) after 20 years of service, and twenty-four percent (24%) after 25 years of service. "Service" means service as a justice or judge of the General Court of Justice or as a member of the Utilities Commission or as director or assistant director of the Administrative Office of the Courts. Service shall also mean service as a district attorney or as a clerk of superior court. OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

A Resident Superior Court Judge on assignment by the Chief Justice to perform the duties of Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts would be entitled to continue to draw the salaries and expenses set out in this section. (c) The Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts may provide assistance requested pursuant to subsection (b) of this section only upon a showing by the senior resident superior court judge, supported by facts, that the overwhelming public interest warrants the use of additional resources for the speedy disposition of cases involving drug offenses, domestic violence, or other offenses involving a threat to public safety.

(d) The terms of any contract entered into with local governments pursuant to subsection (b) of this section shall be fixed by the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts in each case. Nothing in this section shall be construed to obligate the General Assembly to make any appropriation to implement the provisions of this section or to obligate the Administrative Office of the Courts to provide the administrative costs of establishing or maintaining the positions or services provided for under this section. CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Many of the cases below were decided under former statutory provisions.

A special judge enjoys the power and authority of a regular judge only during the session of court in that county in which the special judge is duly appointed to hold court. Green ex rel. Green v. Maness, 69 N.C. App. 403, 316 S.E.2d 911, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

No Jurisdiction When Not Holding Term of Court. — A special or emergency judge has no authority to determine a controversy without action at chambers when not holding a term of court. Greene v. Stadiem, 197 N.C. 472, 149 S.E. 685 (1929). See Bohannon v. Virginia Trust Co., 198 N.C. 702, 153 S.E. 263 (1930).

Special Judge May Hear Matter Out of Term by Consent. — Once having acquired jurisdiction at term, a special or emergency judge, by consent, may hear the matter out of term nunc pro tunc. Shepard v. Leonard, 223 N.C. 110, 25 S.E.2d 445 (1943).

A judgment signed by a special judge out-of-session without the consent of the parties is void. Green ex rel. Green v. Maness, 69 N.C. App. 403, 316 S.E.2d 911, cert. denied, 312 N.C. 621, 323 S.E.2d 922 (1984).

Judicial Notice of Appointment as Special Judge. — The appellate court will take judicial notice on appeal of the appointment of a certain person as a special judge. Greene v. Stadiem, 197 N.C. 472, 149 S.E. 685 (1929).

When necessary for the determination of a case on appeal, the appellate court will take judicial notice of the counties comprising a judicial district, and that a judge holding a term in one of the counties was a special judge appointed by the Governor. Reid v. Reid, 199 N.C. 740, 155 S.E. 719 (1930).

Motions in Cause Made at Term. — Civil actions pending on the civil issue docket of a county are always subject to motion in the cause. These motions may be made before the judge at term. In many instances they may be made out of term. When made at term the judge presiding, whether regular or special, has jurisdiction. To this extent this section has full constitutional sanction. Shepard v. Leonard, 223 N.C. 110, 25 S.E.2d 445 (1943).

Proceeding to Obtain Custody of Child. — A special judge has concurrent jurisdiction with the judge of the district to hear and determine a proceeding instituted by the mother of a child to obtain its custody, provided the proceeding can be heard and judgment rendered during the term of court the special judge is commissioned to hold. In re Cranford, 231 N.C. 91, 56 S.E.2d 35 (1949).

Motion for Alimony. — Where a special judge was authorized under commission of the Governor to hold a term of court in only one county of a district, he could not issue an order for alimony, attorneys' fees and costs in a proceeding in an action for divorce a vinculo pending in another county of the district and continued to be heard before a judge regularly holding the terms of court in that district. Public Laws 1929, c. 137, under which the special judge was commissioned, provided that writs, orders and notices should be returnable before special judges only in the county where the suit, proceeding or other cause was pending, unless such special judge was then holding the courts of that district, in which case the same might be returnable before him as before the regular judge. Reid v. Reid, 199 N.C. 740, 155 S.E. 719 (1930).

§ 7A-45.2. Emergency special judges of the superior court; qualifications, appointment, removal, and authority.

(a) Any justice or judge of the appellate division of the General Court of Justice who:

(1) Retires under the provisions of the Consolidated Judicial Retirement Act, Article 4 of Chapter 135 of the General Statutes, or who is eligible to receive a retirement allowance under that act;

(2) Has not reached the mandatory retirement age specified in G.S. 7A-4.20;

(3) Has served at least five years as a superior court judge or five years as a justice or judge of the appellate division of the General Court of Justice, or any combination thereof, whether or not eligible to serve as an emergency justice or judge of the appellate division of the General Court of Justice; and may apply to the Governor for appointment as an emergency special superior court judge in the same manner as is provided for application as an emergency superior court judge in G.S. 7A-53. If the Governor is satisfied that the applicant meets the requirements of this section and is physically and mentally able to perform the duties of a superior court judge, the Governor shall issue a commission appointing the applicant as an emergency special superior court judge until the applicant reaches the mandatory retirement age for superior court judges specified in G.S. 7A-4.20.

(4) Whose judicial service ended within the preceding 10 years;

(b) Any emergency special superior court judge appointed as provided in this section shall:

(1) Have the same powers and duties, when duly assigned to hold court, as provided for an emergency superior court judge by G.S. 7A-48;

(2) Be subject to assignment in the same manner as provided for an emergency superior court judge by G.S. 7A-46;

(3) Receive the same compensation, expenses, and allowances, when assigned to hold court, as an emergency superior court judge as provided by G.S. 7A-52(b);

(4) Be subject to the provisions and requirements of the Canons of Judicial Conduct; and

(5) Not engage in the practice of law during any period for which the emergency special superior court judgeship is commissioned. However, this subdivision shall not be construed to prohibit an emergency special superior court judge appointed pursuant to this section from serving as a referee, arbitrator, or mediator, during service as an emergency special superior court judge when the service does not conflict with or interfere with the emergency special superior court judge's judicial service in emergency status.

(c) Upon reaching mandatory retirement age for superior court judges as set forth in G.S. 7A-4.20, any emergency special superior court judge appointed pursuant to this section, whose commission has expired, may be recalled as a recalled emergency special superior court judge to preside over any regular or special session of the superior court under the following circumstances:

(1) The judge shall consent to the recall;

(2) The Chief Justice may order the recall;

(3) Prior to ordering recall, the Chief Justice shall be satisfied that the recalled judge is capable of efficiently and promptly discharging the duties of the office to which recalled;

(4) Jurisdiction of a recalled emergency special superior court judge is as set forth in G.S. 7A-48;

(5) Orders of recall and assignment shall be in writing and entered upon the minutes of the court to which assigned; and

(6) Compensation, expenses, and allowances of recalled emergency special superior court judges are the same as for recalled emergency superior court judges under G.S. 7A-52(b).

(d) Any former justice or judge of the appellate division of the General Court of Justice who otherwise meets the requirements of subsection (a) of this section to be appointed an emergency special superior court judge but has already reached the mandatory retirement age for superior court judges set forth in G.S. 7A-4.20 on retirement may, in lieu of serving as an emergency judge of the court from which he retired, apply to the Governor to be appointed as an emergency special superior court judge as provided in this section. If the Governor issues a commission to the applicant, the retired justice or judge is subject to recall as an emergency special superior court judge as provided in subsection (c) of this section.

(e) No justice or judge appointed as an emergency special superior court judge or subject to recall as provided in this section shall, during the period so appointed or subject to recall, contemporaneously serve as an emergency justice or judge of the appellate division of the General Court of Justice. (1993, c. 321, s. 199.)

The Chief Justice may exercise the authority under rules of practice prescribed pursuant to G.S. 7A-34 to designate one or more of the special superior court judges authorized by G.S. 7A-45.1 to hear and decide complex business cases as prescribed by the rules of practice. Any judge so designated shall be known as a Business Court Judge and shall preside in the Business Court. If there is more than one business court judge, the Chief Justice may designate one of them as the Senior Business Court Judge. If there is no designation by the Chief Justice, the judge with the longest term of service on the court shall serve as Senior Business Court Judge until the Chief Justice makes an appointment to the position. (2005-425, s. 1.1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2005-425, s. 4, made this section effective January 1, 2006, and applicable to fees assessed or collected on or after that date.

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 14.7, provides: "The Administrative Office of the Courts shall report to the Chairs of the House of Representatives and Senate Appropriations Committees and the Chairs of the House of Representatives and Senate Appropriations Subcommittees on Justice and Public Safety by March 1 of each year on the activities of each North Carolina Business Court site, including the number of new, closed, and pending cases; average age of pending cases, and annual expenditures for the prior fiscal year."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 1.2, provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations and Capital Improvements Appropriations Act of 2007'."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 32.3, provides: "Except for statutory changes or other provisions that clearly indicate an intention to have effects beyond the 2007-2009 fiscal biennium, the textual provisions of this act apply only to funds appropriated for, and activities occurring during, the 2007-2009 fiscal biennium."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 32.5 is a severability clause.

(a) A mandatory complex business case is an action that involves a material issue related to:

(1) The law governing corporations, except charitable and religious organizations qualified under G.S. 55A-1-40(4) on the grounds of religious purpose, partnerships, limited liability companies, and limited liability partnerships, including issues concerning governance, involuntary dissolution of a corporation, mergers and acquisitions, breach of duty of directors, election or removal of directors, enforcement or interpretation of shareholder agreements, and derivative actions.

(2) Securities law, including proxy disputes and tender offer disputes.
(3) Antitrust law, except claims based solely on unfair competition under G.S. 75-1.1.
(4) State trademark or unfair competition law, except claims based solely on unfair competition under G.S. 75-1.1.
(5) Intellectual property law, including software licensing disputes.
(6) The Internet, electronic commerce, and biotechnology.
(7) Tax law, when the dispute has been the subject of a contested tax case for which judicial review is requested under G.S. 105-241.16 or the dispute is a civil action under G.S. 105-241.17.

(b) Any party may designate a civil action or a petition for judicial review under G.S. 105-241.16 as a mandatory complex business case by filing a Notice of Designation in the Superior Court in which the action has been filed and simultaneously serving the notice on each opposing party or counsel and on the Special Superior Court Judge for Complex Business Cases who is then the senior Business Court Judge. A copy of the notice shall also be sent contemporaneously by e-mail or facsimile transmission to the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court for approval of the designation of the action as a mandatory complex business case and assignment to a specific Business Court Judge.

(c) The Notice of Designation shall, in good faith and based on information reasonably available, succinctly state the basis of the designation and include a certificate by or on behalf of the designating party that the civil action meets the criteria for designation as a mandatory complex business case pursuant to subsection (a) of this section.

(d) The Notice of Designation shall be filed:
(1) By the plaintiff, the third-party plaintiff, or the petitioner for judicial review contemporaneously with the filing of the complaint, third-party complaint, or the petition for judicial review in the action.
(2) By any intervenor when the intervenor files a motion for permission to intervene in the action.
(3) By any defendant or any other party within 30 days of receipt of service of the pleading seeking relief from the defendant or party.

(e) Within 30 days after service of the Notice of Designation, any other party may, in good faith, file and serve an opposition to the designation of the action as a mandatory business case. Based on the opposition or ex mero motu, the Business Court Judge may determine that the action should not be designated as a mandatory complex business case. If a party disagrees with the decision, the party may appeal to the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

(f) Once a designation is filed under subsection (d) of this section, and after preliminary approval by the Chief Justice, a case shall be designated and administered a complex business case. All proceedings in the action shall be before the Business Court Judge to whom it has been assigned unless and until an order has been entered under subsection (e) of this section ordering that the case not be designated a mandatory complex business case or the Chief Justice revokes approval. If complex business case status is revoked or denied, the action shall be treated as any other civil action, unless it is designated as an exceptional civil case or a discretionary complex business case pursuant to Rule 2.1 of the General Rules of Practice for the Superior and District Courts. (2005-425, s. 2; 2007-491, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2005-425, s. 4, made this section effective January 1, 2006, and applicable to cases filed on or after that date.

Session Laws 2007-491, s. 47, provides in part: "The remainder of this act becomes effective January 1, 2008. The procedures for review of disputed tax matters enacted by this act apply to assessments of tax that are not final as of the effective date of this act and to claims for refund pending on or filed on or after the effective date of this act."

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2007-491, s. 4, effective January 1, 2008, added subdivision (a)(7); inserted "or a petition for judicial review under G.S. 105-241.16" in the first sentence of subsection (b); and in subdivision (d)(1), substituted "plaintiff, the third-party plaintiff, or the petitioner for judicial review" for "plaintiff or third-party plaintiff" and "complaint, third-party complaint, or the petition for judicial review" for "complaint or third-party complaint."

Whenever it appears to the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court that there is need for a special session of superior court in any county, he may order a special session in that county, and order any regular, special, or emergency judge to hold such session. The Chief Justice shall notify the clerk of the superior court of the county, who shall initiate action under Chapter 9 of the General Statutes to provide a jury for the special session, if a jury is required.

Special sessions have all the jurisdiction and powers that regular sessions have. (R.C., c. 31, s. 22; 1868-9, c. 273; 1876-7, c. 44; Code, ss. 914, 915, 916; Rev., ss. 1512, 1513, 1516; C.S., ss. 1450, 1452, 1455; Ex. CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases in the following annotations were decided under former statutory provisions.

Constitutionality. — See State v. Ketchey, 70 N.C. 621 (1874).

The power to order special terms is not restricted to instances where there is accumulation of business, nor, when such fact is recited as a reason in the commission, is the power of the judge restricted to the trial of indictments found before that term. State v. Register, 133 N.C. 746, 46 S.E. 21 (1903).

No reason need be assigned by the Governor (now the Chief Justice) for calling special terms. State v. Watson, 75 N.C. 136 (1876). He is the sole judge of the evidence necessitating such action. State v. Lewis, 107 N.C. 967, 12 S.E. 457, 13 S.E. 247 (1890).

Regular Order Presumed. — When it appears from the record that a cause was tried at a special term of a superior court, it is presumed prima facie that an order for holding it was duly made, and that it was duly held. Sparkman v. Daughtry, 35 N.C. 168 (1851).

Plea Denying Existence of Court. — A plea of the defendant that the court was unlawfully called because the Governor (now the Chief Justice) was absent from the State when he attempted to order the holding of the court was properly overruled. State v. Hall, 142 N.C. 710, 55 S.E. 806 (1906).

Appointment of Judge. — When the Governor (now the Chief Justice) has ordered a special term to be held in any county of this State, it is his duty to appoint one of the judges of the superior court to hold such term, and to issue to the judge appointed by him a commission authorizing him to hold such court. State v. Baxter, 208 N.C. 90, 179 S.E. 450 (1935).

Court Held Outside Judge's District. — A judge specially commissioned to hold court in a certain county outside his district has the same jurisdiction of matters transferred to that court, by consent, from another county, as the judge of the district comprising both counties. Henry v. Hilliard, 120 N.C. 479, 27 S.E. 130 (1897).

Arraignment at Regular Term Not Required. — It is not necessary that a prisoner should be arraigned and plead at a preceding regular term to the special term at which he is tried. State v. Ketchey, 70 N.C. 621 (1874).

Removal of Cause. — A superior court at a special term has the same power to remove a cause to another county that it has at a regular term. Sparkman v. Daughtry, 35 N.C. 168 (1851).

Judgment by Default. — Whether at a regular or special term of the court, notice to the adverse party of a motion in term for judgment by default for want of an answer is not necessary. Reynolds v. Greensboro Boiler & Mach. Co., 153 N.C. 342, 69 S.E. 248 (1910).

Show Cause Order Entered Out of Term. — Where the Chief Justice on May 1, 1990, issued a commission for a judge to hold a special session of superior court for Graham County "to begin May 25, 1990, and continue one day, or until the business is disposed of," and on May 3, 1990, the judge issued an order to show cause directing respondent to appear in court on May 25, 1990, at which time the judge was not assigned to Graham County, the show cause order was entered out of term and the court was without jurisdiction to enter the order. In re Delk, 103 N.C. App. 659, 406 S.E.2d 601 (1991).

Applied in State v. Boykin, 211 N.C. 407, 191 S.E. 18 (1937).

Cited in State v. Baxter, 208 N.C. 90, 179 S.E. 450 (1935); State v. Kornegay, 313 N.C. 1, 326 S.E.2d 881 (1985).

A regular superior court judge, duly assigned to hold the courts of a county, or holding such courts by exchange, shall have the same powers in the district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1(a) in which that county is located, in open court and in chambers as the resident judge or any judge regularly assigned to hold the courts of the district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1(a) has, and his jurisdiction in chambers shall extend until the session is adjourned or the session expires by operation of law, whichever is later. (1951, c. 740; 1969, c. 1190, s. 42; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 6.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly G.S. 7-61.1. It was revised and transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 1190, s. 42.

CASE NOTES

Order Signed After Judge's Term Expired and Outside Time of Consent Between Parties. — Where the parties had given consent to an order to be entered up to ten days after the expiration of a judge's term, judgment entered long after the ten days was void and case was remanded. In re Brooks, 93 N.C. App. 86, 376 S.E.2d 250 (1989).

Authority of Assigned Presiding Superior Court Judge. — Presiding superior court judge, duly assigned by the Chief Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court, acted with the power of the resident superior court judge; thus, the judge from another county who was assigned to serve as resident superior court judge was technically acting in a "resident" capacity when he ruled on a motion for an extension of time to file pleadings. Best v. Wayne Mem. Hosp., 147 N.C. App. 628, 556 S.E.2d 629, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 1259 (2001).

Applied in Howard v. Vaughn, 155 N.C. App. 200, 573 S.E.2d 253, 2002 N.C. App. LEXIS 1609 (2002), cert. denied, 357 N.C. 62, 579 S.E.2d 389 (2003).

In any case in which the superior court in vacation has jurisdiction, and all the parties unite in the proceedings, they may apply for relief to the superior court in vacation, or during a session of court, at their election. Any regular resident superior court judge of the district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1(a) and any special superior court judge residing in the district or set of districts and the judge regularly presiding over the courts of the district or set of districts have concurrent jurisdiction throughout the district or set of districts in all matters and proceedings in which the superior court has jurisdiction out of session; provided, that in all matters and proceedings not requiring a jury or in which a jury is waived, any regular resident superior court judge of the district or set of districts and any special superior court judge residing in the district or set of districts shall have concurrent jurisdiction throughout the district or set of districts with the judge holding the courts of the district or set of districts and any such regular or special superior court judge, in the exercise of such concurrent jurisdiction, may hear and pass upon such matters and proceedings in vacation, out of session or during a session of court. (1871-2, c. 3; Code, c. 10, s. 230; Rev., s. 1501; C.S., s. 1438; 1939, c. 69; 1945, c. 142; 1951, c. 78, s. 2; 1969, c. 1190, s. 47; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 7.)

"Vacation" or "In Chambers" Jurisdiction Generally. — A regular judge holding the courts of the district has general jurisdiction of all "in chambers" matters arising in the district. The general "vacation" or "in chambers" jurisdiction of a regular judge arises out of his general authority. Usually it may be exercised anywhere in the district, and it is never dependent upon and does not arise out of the fact that he is at the time presiding over a designated term of court or in a particular county. As to him, it is limited, ordinarily, to the district to which he is assigned by statute. It may not be exercised even within the district of his residence except when specially authorized by statute. Baker v. Varser, 239 N.C. 180, 79 S.E.2d 757 (1954).

Matters and proceedings not requiring the intervention of a jury, or in which trial by jury has been waived, may be heard in vacation. In re Burton, 257 N.C. 534, 126 S.E.2d 581 (1962).

Consent of Parties Required. — A judge has no power to render judgment after the expiration of the term of court without the consent of parties. Hardin v. Ray, 89 N.C. 364 (1883).

By consent, the superior court can grant judgment in civil cases in vacation. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 94 N.C. 174 (1886).

After leaving the bench for a term of the superior court to expire by limitation, the judge cannot hear motions or other matters outside of the courtroom except by consent, unless they are such as are cognizable at chambers. May v. National Fire Ins. Co., 172 N.C. 795, 90 S.E. 890 (1916).

Transaction of Business Out of Term. — The courts have recognized the power and authority of the legislature to provide for the transaction of business in the superior court out of term except for the trial of issues of fact requiring a jury. Capital Outdoor Adv., Inc. v. City of Raleigh, 337 N.C. 150, 446 S.E.2d 289, rehearing denied, 337 N.C. 807, 449 S.E.2d 566 (1994).

The judge holding the courts of a judicial district has authority to act in all matters within the jurisdiction of the superior court, with the consent of the parties, by signing judgments out of term and in or out of the county and out of the district. Edmundson v. Edmundson, 222 N.C. 181, 22 S.E.2d 576 (1942).

Jurisdiction Limited to District. — The jurisdiction of a superior court judge is ordinarily limited to the district in which he resides. Vance Constr. Co. v. Duane White Land Corp., 127 N.C. App. 493, 490 S.E.2d 588 (1997).

Demurrers May Be Heard in Chambers. — A special judge has jurisdiction in the county of his residence to hear and determine in chambers a demurrer to the complaint in an action pending in the county. Parker v. Underwood, 239 N.C. 308, 79 S.E.2d 765 (1954); Scott v. Scott, 259 N.C. 642, 131 S.E.2d 478 (1963).

As May Controversies Without Action. — A special judge in the county of his residence has jurisdiction to hear and determine in chambers a controversy without action. Scott v. Scott, 259 N.C. 642, 131 S.E.2d 478 (1963).

And Motions for Judgment of Voluntary Nonsuit. — A resident judge has jurisdiction to hear and determine in chambers a motion for judgment of voluntary nonsuit. Scott v. Scott, 259 N.C. 642, 131 S.E.2d 478 (1963).

And Actions Involving Title to Bank Accounts. — A regular judge has jurisdiction to hear and determine in chambers an action involving title to a bank account in which the answer raised no issues of fact. Scott v. Scott, 259 N.C. 642, 131 S.E.2d 478 (1963).

Interlocutory Order. — The superior court has power to make an amendment to an interlocutory order in an ancillary proceeding out of term. Coates Bros. v. Wilkes, 94 N.C. 174 (1886).

Where resident judge issued order to defendant wife to appear outside county and outside district to show cause why temporary order awarding custody of children to husband should not be made permanent, it was held that the judge was without jurisdiction to hear the matter outside the district, and an order issued upon the hearing of the order to show cause was void ab initio. Patterson v. Patterson, 230 N.C. 481, 53 S.E.2d 658 (1949).

Mandamus Proceedings in Another District Not Within Jurisdiction. — A regular judge of the superior court while assigned by rotation to hold the courts of the judicial district of his residence has no jurisdiction to hear a petition for mandamus in chambers in another judicial district to which he is not assigned to hold court. Baker v. Varser, 239 N.C. 180, 79 S.E.2d 757 (1954).

No Jurisdiction to Order Payment of Expenses Out of the Recovery. — In an action by taxpayers against public officers under G.S. 128-10 to recover public funds unlawfully expended, plaintiffs disclaimed in their complaint any right personally to participate in the recovery. After recovery and the entry of a consent judgment dismissing appeals, and after payment of the judgment, the resident judge, on petition of one of the original taxpayer plaintiffs, was then without jurisdiction under this section to order payments, out of the recovery, of such petitioner's expenses and counsel fees. Hill v. Stanbury, 224 N.C. 356, 30 S.E.2d 150 (1944), commented on in 23 N.C.L. Rev. 40 (1945).

Power of Resident Judge. — The resident judge of a district has no other power within such district in vacation than any other judge of the superior court. State v. Ray, 97 N.C. 510, 1 S.E. 876 (1887).

Concurring Jurisdiction of Judges. — The resident judge of a judicial district and the judge regularly presiding over the courts of the district and any special judge residing in the district have concurrent jurisdiction in all matters and proceedings wherein the superior court has jurisdiction out of term. In re Burton, 257 N.C. 534, 126 S.E.2d 581 (1962).

Same — Proceeding to Obtain Custody of Child. — A special judge has concurrent jurisdiction with the judge of the district to hear and determine a proceeding instituted by the mother of a child to obtain its custody, provided the proceeding can be heard and judgment rendered during the term of court the special judge is commissioned to hold. In re Cranford, 231 N.C. 91, 56 S.E.2d 35 (1949).

There was both statutory and common law authority for the trial court's entry of its supplemental judgment, as this section and 1A-1, Rule 6(c) both authorize the entry of judgment out of session. Buford v. GMC, 339 N.C. 396, 451 S.E.2d 293 (1994).

Applied in Parmele v. Eaton, 240 N.C. 539, 83 S.E.2d 93 (1954); Towne v. Cope, 32 N.C. App. 660, 233 S.E.2d 624 (1977); E-B Grain Co. v. Denton, 73 N.C. App. 14, 325 S.E.2d 522 (1985).

Cited in Andrews v. Peters, 89 N.C. App. 315, 365 S.E.2d 709 (1988); Bacon v. Lee, 225 F.3d 470, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 22231 (4th Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 950, 121 S. Ct. 1420, 149 L. Ed. 2d 360 (2001).

Editor's Note. — The repealed section was enacted by Session Laws 1987, c. 509, s. 2, effective January 1, 1989, and repealed by Session Laws 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 8, also effective January 1, 1989. Thus, it never went into effect.

(a) To effect the intent of Article IV, Section 11 of the North Carolina Constitution, each regular resident superior court judge may, upon each rotation, be assigned to hold the courts either of one of the districts or of one of the sets of districts, as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1(a), in that judge's judicial division.

(b) All sessions of superior court shall be for an entire county, whether that county comprises or is located in a district or in a set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1(a), and at each session all matters and proceedings arising anywhere in the county shall be heard. (1987, c. 509, s. 3; 738, s. 124; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 9.)

Emergency superior court judges have the same power and authority in all matters whatsoever, in the courts which they are assigned to hold, that regular judges holding the same courts would have. An emergency judge duly assigned to hold the courts of a county or district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1(a) has the same powers in that county and district or set of districts in open court and in chambers as a resident judge of the district or set of districts or any judge regularly assigned to hold the courts of the district or set of districts would have, but his jurisdiction in chambers extends only until the session is adjourned or the session expires by operation of law, whichever is later. (Ex. Sess. 1921, c. 94, s. 1; C.S., s. 1435(b); 1925, c. 8; 1941, c. 52, s. 2; 1951, c. 88; 1969, c. 1190, s. 39; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 10.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly G.S. 7-52. It was revised and transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 1190, s. 39.

CASE NOTES

Jurisdiction to Order Expenses and Fees Paid. — Emergency superior court judge commissioned to preside over a Special Session of County Superior Court continuing two weeks, or until the business was completed, had jurisdiction to sign order taxing deposition expenses and witness fees 6 weeks later. Hockaday v. Lee, 124 N.C. App. 425, 477 S.E.2d 82 (1996), cert. denied, 346 N.C. 178, 486 S.E.2d 204 (1997).

Limitations on Jurisdiction. — The power and authority given to emergency judges are to be exercised only "in the courts which they are assigned to hold." The jurisdiction of an emergency judge "in chambers" terminates with the adjournment or termination of the term of court which he is assigned to hold. Lewis v. Harris, 238 N.C. 642, 78 S.E.2d 715 (1953). But the statute places no such limitation on the "in term" jurisdiction of an emergency judge. Strickland v. Kornegay, 240 N.C. 758, 83 S.E.2d 903 (1954).

Applied in State v. Kornegay, 313 N.C. 1, 326 S.E.2d 881 (1985).

Cited in Spaugh v. City of Charlotte, 239 N.C. 149, 79 S.E.2d 748 (1954).

When any special or emergency judge makes any matter returnable before him, and thereafter he is called upon by the Chief Justice to hold court elsewhere, he shall order the matter heard before some other judge, setting forth in the order the time and place where it is to be heard, and he shall send copies of the order to the attorneys representing the parties in such matter. (Ex. Sess. 1921, c. 94, s. 2; C.S., s. 1435(c); 1951, c. 491, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 40.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly G.S. 7-53. It was revised and transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 1190, s. 40.

§ 7A-49.1. Disposition of motions when judge disqualified.

Whenever a judge before whom a motion is made, either in open court or in chambers, disqualifies himself from determining it, he may in his discretion refer the motion for disposition to a regular resident superior court judge of, or any judge regularly holding the courts of, the district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1(a) in which the county in which the cause arose is located, or of any adjoining district or set of districts, who shall have full power and authority to hear and determine the motion in the same manner as if he were the presiding judge of a session of superior court for that county. (1939, c. 48; 1961, c. 50; 1969, c. 1190, s. 43; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 11.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly G.S. 7-62. It was revised and transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 1190, s. 43.

(a) At criminal sessions of court, motions in civil actions may be heard upon due notice, and trials in civil actions may be heard by consent of parties. Motions for confirmation or rejection of referees' reports may also be heard upon 10 days' notice and judgment may be entered on such reports. The court may also enter consent orders and consent judgments, and try uncontested civil actions.

Editor's Note. — This section combines former G.S. 7-72 and 7-73. The former sections were revised, combined and transferred to their present position by Session Laws 1969, c. 1190, s. 44.

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases in the following annotations were decided under former statutory provisions.

Failure to Give Notice. — Due notice must be given of motions in civil actions to be heard at a criminal term of court, and where the movant failed to give the statutory notice of his motion, and the superior court ordered a dismissal of the action, the judgment was reversed on appeal. Dawkins v. Phillips, 185 N.C. 608, 116 S.E. 723 (1923).

The superior court has authority to hear motions in civil actions at criminal terms only after due notice to the adverse party, and therefore when it did not affirmatively appear that due notice was given of plaintiff's motion to be allowed to amend, the granting of the motion at a term of court for criminal cases only would be held to be error as being presumptively outside the authority of the court. Beck v. Lexington Coca-Cola Bottling Co., 216 N.C. 579, 5 S.E.2d 855 (1939).

Notice of Motion for Default. — Under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 7, an application for default judgment is considered a motion in a civil action; therefore, as subsection (a) of this section requires notice to be given before motions in civil actions may be heard at criminal sessions of court, and no notice was given defendant, default judgment granted plaintiff would be vacated. Miller v. Belk, 18 N.C. App. 70, 196 S.E.2d 44, cert. denied, 283 N.C. 665, 197 S.E.2d 874 (1973).

Motion for New Trial in Criminal Case May Not Be Determined at Civil Term. — A motion which, if allowed, would set aside a verdict and judgment in a case on the criminal docket, specifically, a motion for a new trial on the ground of newly discovered evidence, may not be determined at a term expressly restricted by statute as a term "for the trial of civil cases only." Such a motion is for determination at a term of the court (in which the verdict and judgment to which the motion is addressed were rendered) provided for the trial of criminal cases. In re Renfrow, 247 N.C. 55, 100 S.E.2d 315 (1957).

Contested Divorce Action at Civil Session. — The purported trial of a contested divorce action conducted over defendant's protest and in disregard of his motion for continuance for trial at a civil session was a nullity. Branch v. Branch, 282 N.C. 133, 191 S.E.2d 671 (1972).

Jurisdiction to Hear Criminal Case. — Trial court that was assigned to hold civil court had jurisdiction to conduct a criminal trial where an order from the Chief Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court mandated that the trial court hear both civil and criminal cases. State v. Thomas, 132 N.C. App. 515, 512 S.E.2d 436 (1999).

Even though the official transcript from a session of court designated the session as civil, no violation of G.S. 7A-49.2 occurred because the record showed that both civil and criminal cases were heard. State v. Price, — N.C. App. —, 611 S.E.2d 891 (2005).

Applied in Whedbee v. Powell, 41 N.C. App. 250, 254 S.E.2d 645 (1979).

(a) Criminal Docketing. — Criminal cases in superior court shall be calendared by the district attorney at administrative settings according to a criminal case docketing plan developed by the district attorney for each superior court district in consultation with the superior court judges residing in that district and after opportunity for comment by members of the local bar. Each criminal case docketing plan shall, at a minimum, comply with the provisions of this section, but may contain additional provisions not inconsistent with this section.

(b) Administrative Settings. — An administrative setting shall be calendared for each felony within 60 days of indictment or service of notice of indictment if required by law, or at the next regularly scheduled session of superior court if later than 60 days from indictment or service if required. At an administrative setting:

(1) The court shall determine the status of the defendant's representation by counsel;

(2) After hearing from the parties, the court shall set deadlines for the delivery of discovery, arraignment if necessary, and filing of motions;

(3) If the district attorney has made a determination regarding a plea arrangement, the district attorney shall inform the defendant as to whether a plea arrangement will be offered and the terms of any proposed plea arrangement, and the court may conduct a plea conference if supported by the interest of justice;

(4) The court may hear pending pretrial motions, set such motions for hearing on a date certain, or defer ruling on motions until the trial of the case; and

(5) The court may schedule more than one administrative setting if requested by the parties or if it is found to be necessary to promote the fair administration of justice in a timely manner.

Whenever practical, administrative settings shall be held by a superior court judge residing within the district, but may otherwise be held by any superior court judge.

If the parties have not otherwise agreed upon a trial date, then upon the conclusion of the final administrative setting, the district attorney shall announce a proposed trial date. The court shall set that date as the tentative trial date unless, after providing the parties an opportunity to be heard, the court determines that the interests of justice require the setting of a different date. In that event, the district attorney shall set another tentative trial date during the final administrative setting. The trial shall occur no sooner than 30 days after the final administrative setting, except by agreement of the State and the defendant.

Nothing in this section precludes the disposition of a criminal case by plea, deferred prosecution, or dismissal prior to an administrative setting.

(c) Definite Trial Date. — When a case has not otherwise been scheduled for trial within 120 days of indictment or of service of notice of indictment if required by law, then upon motion by the defendant at any time thereafter, the senior resident superior court judge, or a superior court judge designated by the senior resident superior court judge, may hold a hearing for the purpose of establishing a trial date for the defendant.

(d) Venue for Administrative Settings. — Venue for administrative settings may be in any county within the district when necessary to comply with the terms of the criminal case docketing plan. The presence of the defendant is only required for administrative settings held in the county where the case originated.

(e) Setting and Publishing of Trial Calendar. — No less than 10 working days before cases are calendared for trial, the district attorney shall publish the trial calendar. The trial calendar shall schedule the cases in the order in which the district attorney anticipates they will be called for trial and should not contain cases that the district attorney does not reasonably expect to be called for trial. In counties in which multiple sessions of court are being held, the district attorney may publish a trial calendar for each session of court.

(f) Order of Trial. — The district attorney, after calling the calendar and determining cases for pleas and other disposition, shall announce to the court the order in which the district attorney intends to call for trial the cases remaining on the calendar. Deviations from the announced order require approval by the presiding judge if the defendant whose case is called for trial objects; but the defendant may not object if all the cases scheduled to be heard before the defendant's case have been disposed of or delayed with the approval of the presiding judge or by consent of the State and the defendant. A case may be continued from the trial calendar only by consent of the State and the defendant or upon order of the presiding judge or resident superior court judge for good cause shown. The district attorney, after consultation with the parties, shall schedule a new trial date for cases not reached during that session of court.

(g) Nothing in this section shall be construed to deprive any victim of the rights granted under Article I, Section 37 of the North Carolina Constitution and Article 46 of Chapter 15A of the General Statutes.

(h) Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the authority of the court in the call of cases calendared for trial. (1999-428, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Editor's Note. — The cases below were decided under former G.S. 7A-49.3.

Prosecutor Controls Calendar. — Under North Carolina practice, the prosecutor controls the criminal calendar and decides when to set cases for trial. Shirley v. North Carolina, 528 F.2d 819 (4th Cir. 1975).

Judge May Consolidate Calendared and Non-Calendared Charges. — When read together, G.S. 15A-926(a) and subsection (a) former G.S. 7A-49.3 (now see this section) permitted a judge in a criminal trial to consolidate calendared charges with non-calendared charges that were based either on the same act or transaction, or on a series of acts of transactions connected together or constituting parts of a single scheme or plan. State v. Thompson, 129 N.C. App. 13, 497 S.E.2d 126 (1998).

The ultimate authority over managing the trial calendar is retained in the court, even though this section gives the district attorney the authority to calendar cases for trial. State v. Monk, 132 N.C. App. 248, 511 S.E.2d 332 (1999).

Because the ultimate authority over managing the trial calendar is retained in the court, it could not be said that prior similar provision infringed upon the court's inherent authority or vested the district attorney with judicial powers in violation of the separation of powers clause. Simeon v. Hardin, 339 N.C. 358, 451 S.E.2d 858 (1994).

Constitutional Application. — Where there were allegations the district attorney placed a large number of cases on the printed trial calendar knowing that all cases would not be called, thereby providing defendants virtually no notice of which cases were going to be called for trial, the allegations were sufficient to state a claim that the statutes were being applied in an unconstitutional manner in the Fourteenth Prosecutorial District. Simeon v. Hardin, 339 N.C. 358, 451 S.E.2d 858 (1994).

Filing of Calendar Six Days Before Session. — Defendant was not prejudiced by the fact that the district attorney filed the calendar of cases to be tried six days before the beginning of the session of the court rather than a full week before the session began as required by this section, particularly where he was not tried until a full week after the calendar had been filed. State v. Miller, 42 N.C. App. 342, 256 S.E.2d 512 (1979).

No Defense Subpoenas Until Case Calendared. — Until the prosecutor files his calendar, criminal defendants are unable to subpoena witnesses, for this section requires defense subpoenas to state the date of trial, a detail which, of course, cannot be known until the case is calendared. Shirley v. North Carolina, 528 F.2d 819 (4th Cir. 1975).

Notice of Arraignment Date. — A capital murder defendant's right to due process was not impaired by a lack of notice of his arraignment on a certain date as required by this section, where the defendant was fully aware of the charge against him, entered a plea of not guilty to first-degree murder at the arraignment, and was not prevented from filing pretrial motions as a result of the arraignment being held on that date. State v. Locklear, 349 N.C. 118, 505 S.E.2d 277 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1075, 119 S. Ct. 1475, 143 L. Ed. 2d 559 (1999).

Applied in State v. Edwards, 70 N.C. App. 317, 319 S.E.2d 613 (1984).

Cited in State v. Moore, 65 N.C. App. 56, 308 S.E.2d 723 (1983); State v. Fisher, 171 N.C. App. 201, 614 S.E.2d 428, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 1214 (2005).

Editor's Note. — The opinion below was rendered under former G.S. 7A-49.3.

As to prosecutor's responsibility for calendaring criminal cases, see opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Archie Taylor, Solicitor, Fourth Solicitorial District, 41 N.C.A.G. 37 (1970).

§ 7A-49.5. Statewide electronic filing in courts.

(a) The General Assembly finds that the electronic filing of pleadings and other documents required to be filed with the courts may be a more economical, efficient, and satisfactory procedure to handle the volumes of paperwork routinely filed with, handled by, and disseminated by the courts of this State, and therefore authorizes the use of electronic filing in the courts of this State.

(b) The Supreme Court may adopt rules governing this process and associated costs and may supervise its implementation and operation through the Administrative Office of the Courts. The rules adopted under this section shall address the waiver of electronic fees for indigents.

(c) The Administrative Office of the Courts may contract with a vendor to provide electronic filing in the courts.

(d) Any funds received by the Administrative Office of the Courts from the vendor selected pursuant to subsection (c) of this section, other than applicable statutory court costs, as a result of electronic filing, shall be deposited in the Court Information Technology Fund in accordance with G.S. 7A-343.2. (2006-187, s. 2(c); 2007-323, s. 14.17(c).)

Article 8.

Retirement of Judges of the Superior Court; Retirement Compensation for Superior Court Judges; Recall to Emergency Service of Judges of the District and Superior Court; Disability Retirement for Judges of the Superior Court.

§ 7A-50. Emergency judge defined.

As used in this Article "emergency judge" means any judge of the superior court who has retired subject to recall to active service for temporary duty. (1967, c. 108, s. 2.)

§ 7A-51. Age and service requirements for retirement of judges of the superior court and of the Administrative Officer of the Courts.

(a) Any judge of the superior court, or Administrative Officer of the Courts, who has attained the age of sixty-five years, and who has served for a total of fifteen years, whether consecutive or not, as a judge of the superior court, or as Administrative Officer of the Courts, or as judge of the superior court and as Administrative Officer of the Courts combined, may retire and receive for life compensation equal to two thirds of the total annual compensation, including longevity and additional payment for service as senior resident superior court judge, but excluding any payments in the nature of reimbursement for expenses or subsistence allowances, from time to time received by the occupant of the office from which he retired.

(b) Any judge of the superior court, or Administrative Officer of the Courts, who has served for twelve years, whether consecutive or not, as a judge of the superior court, or as Administrative Officer of the Courts, or as judge of the superior court and as Administrative Officer of the Courts combined may, at age sixty-eight, retire and receive for life compensation equal to two thirds of the total annual compensation, including longevity and additional payment for service as senior resident superior court judge, but excluding any payments in the nature of reimbursement for expenses or subsistence allowances, from time to time received by the occupant of the office from which he retired.

(c) Any person who has served for a total of twenty-four years, whether continuously or not, as a judge of the superior court, or as Administrative Officer of the Courts, or as judge of the superior court and as Administrative Officer of the Courts combined, may retire, regardless of age, and receive for life compensation equal to two thirds of the total annual compensation, including longevity and additional payment for service as senior resident superior court judge, but excluding any payments in the nature of reimbursement for expenses or subsistence allowances, from time to time received by the occupant of the office from which he retired. In determining whether a person meets the requirements of this subsection, time served as district attorney of the superior court prior to January 1, 1971, may be included, so long as the person has served at least eight years as a judge of the superior court, or as Administrative Officer of the Courts, or as judge of the superior court and Administrative Officer of the Courts combined.

(d) Repealed by Session Laws 1971, c. 508, s. 3.

(e) For purposes of this section, the "occupant or occupants of the office from which" the retired judge retired will be deemed to be a superior court judge holding the same office and with the same service as the retired judge had immediately prior to retirement. (1967, c. 108, s. 2; 1971, c. 508, s. 3; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1109, ss. 13.10-13.13.)

§ 7A-52. Retired district and superior court judges may become emergency judges subject to recall to active service; compensation for emergency judges on recall.

(a) Judges of the district court and judges of the superior court who have not reached the mandatory retirement age specified in G.S. 7A-4.20, but who have retired under the provisions of G.S. 7A-51, or under the Uniform Judicial Retirement Act after having completed five years of creditable service, may apply as provided in G.S. 7A-53 to become emergency judges of the court from which they retired. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court may order any emergency judge of the district or superior court who, in his opinion, is competent to perform the duties of a judge of the court from which such judge retired, to hold regular or special sessions of such court, as needed. Order of assignment shall be in writing and entered upon the minutes of the court to which such emergency judge is assigned.

(b) In addition to the compensation or retirement allowance the judge would otherwise be entitled to receive by law, each emergency judge of the district or superior court who is assigned to temporary active service by the Chief Justice shall be paid by the State the judge's actual expenses, plus four hundred dollars ($400.00) for each day of active service rendered upon recall. No recalled retired trial judge shall receive from the State total annual compensation for judicial services in excess of that received by an active judge of the bench to which the judge is recalled. § 7A-53. Application to the Governor; commission as emergency judge.

No retired judge of the district or superior court may become an emergency judge except upon his written application to the Governor certifying his desire and ability to serve as an emergency judge. If the Governor is satisfied that the applicant qualifies under G.S. 7A-52(a) to become an emergency judge and that he is physically and mentally able to perform the official duties of an emergency judge, he shall issue to such applicant a commission as an emergency judge of the court from which he retired. The commission shall be effective upon the date of its issue and shall terminate when the judge to whom it is issued reaches the maximum age for judicial service under G.S. 7A-4.20(a). (1967, c. 108, s. 2; 1977, c. 736, s. 4; 1979, c. 878, s. 3.)

Emergency district court judges have the same power and authority in all matters whatsoever, in the courts which they are assigned to hold, that regular district court judges holding the same courts would have. An emergency district court judge duly assigned to hold district court in a particular county or district has the same powers in the county or district in open court and in chambers as a resident district court judge or any district court judge regularly assigned to hold district court in that district, but his jurisdiction in chambers extends only until the session is adjourned or the session expires by operation of law, whichever is later. (1981, c. 455, s. 5.)

All judges of the superior court who have heretofore retired and who are receiving retirement compensation under the provisions of any judicial retirement law previously enacted shall be entitled to the benefits of this article. All such judges shall be subject to assignment as emergency judges by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, except judges retired for total disability. (1967, c. 108, s. 2.)

Every judge of the superior court or Administrative Officer of the Courts who has served for eight years or more on the superior court, or as Administrative Officer of the Courts, or on the superior court and as Administrative Officer of the Courts combined, and who while in active service becomes totally and permanently disabled so as to be unable to perform efficiently the duties of his office, and who retires by reason of such disability, shall receive for life compensation equal to two thirds of the annual salary from time to time received by the occupant of the office from which he retired. In determining whether a person meets the requirements for retirement under this section, time served as district solicitor of the superior court prior to January 1, 1971, may be included. Whenever any judge claims retirement benefits under this section on account of total and permanent disability, the Governor and Council of State, acting together, shall, after notice and an opportunity to be heard is given the applicant, by a majority vote of said body, make findings of fact from the evidence offered. Such findings of fact shall be reduced to writing and entered upon the minutes of the Council of State. The findings so made shall be conclusive as to such matters and determine the right of the applicant to retirement benefits under this section. Judges retired under the provisions of this section are not subject to recall as emergency judges. (1967, c. 108, s. 2.)

The extent of such application is specified in Chapter 135, Article 4 (Uniform Judicial Retirement Act). (1973, c. 640, s. 6; 1975, c. 19, s. 2.)

Superior and district court judges retired because they have reached the mandatory retirement age, and emergency superior and district court judges whose commissions have expired because they have reached the mandatory retirement age, may be recalled to preside over regular or special sessions of the court from which retired under the following circumstances:

(1) The judge must consent to the recall.
(2) The Chief Justice is authorized to order the recall.
(3) Prior to ordering recall, the Chief Justice shall satisfy himself that the recalled judge is capable of efficiently and promptly discharging the duties of the office to which recalled.

(5) Orders of recall and assignment shall be in writing and entered upon the minutes of the court to which assigned.
(6) Compensation of recalled retired trial judges is the same as for recalled emergency trial judges under G.S. 7A-52(b). (1981, ch. 455, s. 4.)

The report shall include the number of assistant district attorneys allocated to each prosecutorial district and the caseload and criteria on which each allocation was based. The Administrative Office of the Courts shall transmit a copy of the order allocating the positions to the Revisor of Statutes. Upon receipt of such an order, the Revisor of Statutes shall revise the chart in G.S. 7A-60(a1) so that it reflects the changes made by the order." See the Effect of amendment note below for the resulting changes to the chart in subsection (a1).

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 14.15(a), (b), provides: "(a) The Legislative Research Commission may contract for an independent study that assesses the availability of prosecutorial resources to the State's district attorneys and that assesses the use and management of those prosecutorial resources by the district attorneys, their staffs, and the Conference of District Attorneys. The study shall address all of the following:

"(1) Current prosecutorial resources. — Resources to be considered include those available to district attorneys and their legal, administrative, support, and investigative staff, and the Conference of District Attorneys. The study shall also consider supplemental assistance and resources provided to district attorneys and their staffs through the State or other funding sources.

"(2) Services provided by the State's district attorneys and Conference of District Attorneys and the recipients of those services.

"(3) Funding of prosecutorial services, adequacy of supplies, equipment, and working space, and allocation of prosecutorial resources. — Issues to be considered shall include the following:

"a. Funding, supplies, equipment, and space required to support prosecutorial services at an appropriate level.

"b. Distribution of prosecutorial resources and how that distribution is determined.

"c. Equitable allocation of prosecutorial resources among the geographical areas of the State and between urban and rural areas.

"d. The proportion of prosecution personnel and budget that is devoted to criminal prosecution, as opposed to other functions or mandates.

"e. Whether monies from the General Fund should be used to support positions for the Conference of District Attorneys, or positions for any other conferences that provide prosecutorial resources.

"(4) The current role of the Conference of District Attorneys and district attorneys in assessing the needs of the public with regard to prosecutorial services and providing assistance in meeting those needs. The study shall also assess the current role, responsibilities, and interaction of the Conference of District Attorneys with regard to the General Assembly and the executive branch and whether those roles and responsibilities should be modified.

"(5) Automation. — The study shall document which prosecutorial services are currently automated and the ability of those systems to interact with each other. The study shall also address areas in which automation could improve or increase the efficiency of prosecutorial services.

"(6) Cost management practices of district attorneys and their staffs. — Practices to be reviewed and considered shall include how well district attorneys' offices manage costs associated with a prosecution such as forensics costs, expert witnesses, and witness travel expenses.

"(7) Caseload management. — In the assessment of caseload management, the study shall focus particularly on whether current management techniques used by district attorneys recognize the critical need to prosecute serious crimes in a timely manner and to keep jail populations at a low level; the techniques, if any that have been adopted to achieve those objectives; and the effectiveness of those management techniques. Other issues that shall also be considered include the following:

"a. Mechanisms used by the district attorney to manage the incoming caseloads generally.

"b. The screening process, if any, for assessing cases prior to assignment.

"c. Initiatives implemented by a district attorney, if any, to expedite the resolution of certain categories of cases.

"d. The type of statistics, if any, the district attorney's office keeps and for what purposes.

"e. Performance indicators, if any, used by district attorneys. If performance indicators are not being used, then the study shall assess whether implementation of performance indicators would be helpful in achieving management goals and the types of indicators that may assist with caseload management. If there are performance indicators, then the study shall identify the indicators, how they are developed, the effectiveness of the indicators, and whether additional performance indicators or modification of existing performance indicators would be helpful in achieving management objectives.

"(8) How the current management and use of prosecutorial resources affect the following:

"a. Access to justice.

"b. Day-to-day functioning of the prosecution service.

"c. Case management, including the development of case screening mechanisms and protocols for diversion.

"d. Timely resolution of caseloads.

"e. Reduction of any backlogs that exist and the impact that current management and use of prosecutorial resources has on the jail population.

"f. The capacity to handle specialized or complex crimes.

"g. The effectiveness of district attorneys and their staffs in responding to domestic violence and other crimes of violence.

"h. Services and support provided to victims.

"i. Accountability to the public.

"(9) Any other issue deemed relevant by the Legislative Research Commission.

"(b) The findings and recommendations of the study shall be reported to the Chairs of the House of Representatives and Senate Appropriations Committee, Chairs of the House of Representatives and Senate Appropriations Subcommittees on Justice and Public Safety, and the Fiscal Research Division by March 15, 2008."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 14.25(k), (l), provides: "(k) The district attorney position established for District 22A by subsection (j) of this section shall be filled by election in the 2008 election for a four-year term expiring December 31, 2012. That district attorney's successor shall be elected in the 2012 election.

"(l) The district attorney position established for District 22B by subsection (j) of this section shall be filled by the district attorney currently serving District 22 who resides in Davidson County. Session Laws 2007-323, s. 14.25(m), as amended by Session Laws 2007-345, s. 8, provides: "Ten of the 11 assistant district attorney positions established for District 22A by subsection (j) of this section shall be filled by 10 assistant district attorneys currently serving Alexander and Iredell Counties in District 22. Ten of the 11 assistant district attorney positions established for District 22B by subsection (j) of this section shall be filled by 10 assistant district attorneys currently serving Davidson and Davie Counties in District 22."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 1.2, provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations and Capital Improvements Appropriations Act of 2007'."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 32.3, provides: "Except for statutory changes or other provisions that clearly indicate an intention to have effects beyond the 2007-2009 fiscal biennium, the textual provisions of this act apply only to funds appropriated for, and activities occurring during, the 2007-2009 fiscal biennium."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 32.5 is a severability clause.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2005-276, s. 14.2(l), effective January 1, 2007, or the date on which approval is granted under

CASE NOTES

Defendant failed to meet her burden of proving that pretrial publicity tainted her chances of receiving a fair and impartial trial where of 33 articles submitted, at least three contained potentially exculpatory information and only one was potentially inflammatory, as factual news accounts regarding the commission of a crime and the pretrial proceedings do not of themselves warrant a change of venue. State v. Moore, 335 N.C. 567, 440 S.E.2d 797, cert. denied, 513 U.S. 898, 115 S. Ct. 253, 130 L. Ed. 2d 174 (1994).

§ 7A-61. Duties of district attorney.

The district attorney shall prepare the trial dockets, prosecute in a timely manner in the name of the State all criminal actions and infractions requiring prosecution in the superior and district courts of his prosecutorial district, advise the officers of justice in his district, and perform such duties related to appeals to the Appellate Division from his district as the Attorney General may require. Effective January 1, 1971, the district attorney shall also represent the State in juvenile cases in which the juvenile is represented by an attorney. Each district attorney shall devote his full time to the duties of his office and shall not engage in the private practice of law. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 12; 1999-428, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

The proper role of the district attorney or privately employed counsel in the prosecution of one charged with a criminal offense is the conviction of the guilty, the acquittal of the innocent and the punishment of the guilty, appropriate to the circumstances, in the interest of the future protection of society. In the discharge of his duties the prosecuting attorney is not required to be, and should not be, neutral. He is not the judge, but the advocate of the State's interest in the matter at hand. State v. Best, 280 N.C. 413, 186 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

Responsibility to Prosecute Vested in District Attorneys. — The clear mandate of N.C. Const., Art. IV, § 18 is that the responsibility and authority to prosecute all criminal actions in the superior courts is vested solely in the several district attorneys of the State. State v. Camacho, 329 N.C. 589, 406 S.E.2d 868 (1991).

Delegation of Prosecutorial Function. — The elected district attorney may, in his or her discretion and where otherwise permitted by law, delegate the prosecutorial function to others. State v. Camacho, 329 N.C. 589, 406 S.E.2d 868 (1991).

Prosecution by Special Prosecution Division. — G.S. 114-11.6 authorizes the several elected district attorneys of the State to permit the Special Prosecution Division of the Office of the Attorney General to prosecute individual criminal cases in their prosecutorial districts. State v. Camacho, 329 N.C. 589, 406 S.E.2d 868 (1991).

When Requested by District Attorneys. — When G.S. 114-11.6 is read in pari materia with N.C. Const., Art. IV, § 18, it is apparent that our Constitution and statutes give the district attorneys of the State the exclusive discretion and authority to determine whether to request, and thus permit, the prosecution of any individual case by the Special Prosecution Division. State v. Camacho, 329 N.C. 589, 406 S.E.2d 868 (1991).

This section makes the office of district attorney a full-time job. State v. Best, 280 N.C. 413, 186 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

But this Article did not change the role of the district attorney in a criminal case to that of an impartial officer of the court. State v. Best, 280 N.C. 413, 186 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

This Article Does Not Prohibit Practice of Employing Private Counsel to Assist District Attorney. — This Article does not prohibit the practice of employing private counsel to assist the district attorney in a criminal case. State v. Best, 280 N.C. 413, 186 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

However, the district attorney should not relinquish the duties of his office to privately employed counsel, but should remain in charge of and responsible for the prosecution of criminal actions, and except for the most compelling reasons, the trial judge should not permit the district attorney to abdicate his duties. State v. Page, 22 N.C. App. 435, 206 S.E.2d 771, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 763, 209 S.E.2d 287 (1974).

Allowing Special Counsel Is Within Discretion of Trial Court. — It is within the discretion of the trial court to allow special counsel to aid the prosecuting attorney in the prosecution of a case. State v. Best, 280 N.C. 413, 186 S.E.2d 1 (1972).

The discretion vested in the trial judge to permit private counsel to appear with the district attorney has existed in our courts from their incipiency. State v. Page, 22 N.C. App. 435, 206 S.E.2d 771, appeal dismissed, 285 N.C. 763, 209 S.E.2d 287 (1974).

Selectivity Required in Preparation of Trial Calendar. — It is the district attorney's statutory duty to prepare the trial docket and prosecute criminal actions in the name of the State. In order to properly perform this duty, he must exercise selectivity in preparing the trial calendar. State v. Cherry, 298 N.C. 86, 257 S.E.2d 551 (1979), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 941, 100 S. Ct. 2165, 64 L. Ed. 2d 796 (1980).

Holding Delinquency Hearing in Absence of District Attorney. — A contention by a juvenile who was represented by counsel that the trial court erred in proceeding with a delinquency hearing in the absence of the district attorney in that the court was cast in the role of a prosecutor was held without merit where the record showed that someone other than the judge examined witnesses of both the petitioner and the juvenile, and that the questions asked by the court were fair and demonstrated no bias. In re Potts, 14 N.C. App. 387, 188 S.E.2d 643, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 622, 190 S.E.2d 471 (1972).

Disqualification of Prosecutor for Conflict of Interests. — A prosecutor may not be disqualified from prosecuting a criminal action in this State unless and until the trial court determines that an actual conflict of interests exists. In this context, an "actual conflict of interests" is demonstrated where a district attorney or a member of his or her staff has previously represented the defendant with regard to the charges to be prosecuted and, as a result of that former attorney-client relationship, the prosecution has obtained confidential information which may be used to the defendant's detriment at trial. Any order of disqualification ordinarily should be directed only to individual prosecutors who have been exposed to such information. State v. Camacho, 329 N.C. 589, 406 S.E.2d 868 (1991).

Order to Withdraw Held Improper. — The trial court exceeded its authority by ordering that in order to avoid the possibility or impression of any conflict of interest, the district attorney and his entire staff must withdraw from a capital case and have no further participation either directly or indirectly with regard to the case. State v. Camacho, 329 N.C. 589, 406 S.E.2d 868 (1991).

Constitutional Application. — Where there were allegations the district attorney placed a large number of cases on the printed trial calendar knowing that all cases would not be called, thereby providing defendants virtually no notice of which cases were going to be called for trial, the allegations were sufficient to state a claim that the statutes were being applied in an unconstitutional manner in the Fourteenth Prosecutorial District. Simeon v. Hardin, 339 N.C. 358, 451 S.E.2d 858 (1994).

Public Nuisance Actions. — The State Constitution and G.S. 7A-61, 147-89 and 19-2.1

do not prohibit a district attorney from employing private counsel to assist in public nuisance actions. Whitfield v. Gilchrist, 126 N.C. App. 241, 485 S.E.2d 61 (1997), rev'd on other grounds, 348 N.C. 39, 497 S.E.2d 412 (1998).

When a district attorney becomes for any reason unable to perform his duties, the Governor shall appoint an acting district attorney to serve during the period of disability. An acting district attorney has all the power, authority and duties of the regular district attorney. He shall take the oath of office prescribed for the regular district attorney, and shall receive the same compensation as the regular district attorney. (1967, c. 1049, s. 1; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

The trial court exceeded its authority and invaded the province of an independent constitutional officer when it ordered the district attorney to request that the Attorney General prosecute defendant in a capital case. State v. Camacho, 329 N.C. 589, 406 S.E.2d 868 (1991).

§ 7A-63. Assistant district attorneys.

Each district attorney shall be entitled to the number of full-time assistant district attorneys set out in this Subchapter, to be appointed by the district attorney, to serve at his pleasure. A vacancy in the office of assistant district attorney shall be filled in the same manner as the initial appointment. An assistant district attorney shall take the same oath of office as the district attorney, and shall perform such duties as may be assigned by the district attorney. He shall devote his full time to the duties of his office and shall not engage in the private practice of law during his term. (1967, c. 1049, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 6; 1971, c. 377, s. 6; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Duties of Assistant District Attorneys. — The legislative intent and the statutory provisions contemplate that an assistant district attorney is fully authorized to carry out such duties of the district attorney as the district attorney may assign to him. State v. Rimmer, 25 N.C. App. 637, 214 S.E.2d 225, cert. denied, 288 N.C. 250, 217 S.E.2d 674 (1975).

§ 7A-64. Temporary assistance for district attorneys.

(a) A district attorney may apply to the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts to:

(1) Temporarily assign an assistant district attorney from another district, after consultation with the district attorney thereof, to assist in the prosecution of cases in the requesting district;

(2) Authorize the temporary appointment, by the requesting district attorney, of a qualified attorney to assist the requesting district attorney; or

(3) Enter into contracts with local governments for the provision of services by the State pursuant to G.S. 153A-212.1 or G.S. 160A-289.1.

(b) The Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts may provide this assistance only upon a showing by the requesting district attorney, supported by facts, that:

(1) Criminal cases have accumulated on the dockets of the superior or district courts of the district beyond the capacity of the district attorney and the district attorney's full-time assistants to keep the dockets reasonably current; or

(2) The overwhelming public interest warrants the use of additional resources for the speedy disposition of cases involving drug offenses, domestic violence, or other offenses involving a threat to public safety.

(c) The length of service and compensation of any temporary appointee or the terms of any contract entered into with local governments shall be fixed by Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts in each case. Nothing in this section shall be construed to obligate the General Assembly to make any appropriation to implement the provisions of this section or to obligate the Administrative Office of the Courts to provide the administrative costs of establishing or maintaining the positions or services provided for under this section. Further, nothing in this section shall be construed to obligate the Administrative Office of the Courts to maintain positions or services initially provided for under this section. (1967, c. 1049, s. 1; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; 1999-237, s. 17.17(a); 2000-67, s. 15.4(g).)

Editor's Note. — The subsection designations (a) through (c) have been added to this section at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes.

Compensation. — The district attorney has no power to provide for compensation of an attorney appointed under this statute. Whitfield v. Gilchrist, 348 N.C. 39, 497 S.E.2d 412 (1998).

Temporary Assistance When Docket Overcrowded. — Subdivision (2) sets out the mandatory procedure for a district attorney to follow to appoint private counsel to provide temporary assistance when criminal dockets are overcrowded. Whitfield v. Gilchrist, 348 N.C. 39, 497 S.E.2d 412 (1998).

Office of temporary district attorney is full-time public office as of January 1, 1971. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. John C.W. Gardner, 41 N.C.A.G. 192 (1970).

(c) In lieu of merit and other increment raises paid to regular State employees, a district attorney shall receive as longevity pay an amount equal to four and eight-tenths percent (4.8%) of the annual salary set forth in the Current Operations Appropriations Act payable monthly after five years of service, and nine and six-tenths percent (9.6%) after 10 years of service, fourteen and four-tenths percent (14.4%) after 15 years of service, nineteen and two-tenths percent (19.2%) after 20 years of service, and twenty-four percent (24%) after 25 years of service. "Service" means service as an assistant district attorney, district attorney, resource prosecutor, public defender, appellate defender, assistant public or appellate defender, justice or judge of the General Court of Justice, or clerk of superior court. For purposes of this subsection, "resource prosecutor" means a former assistant district attorney who has left the employment of the district attorney's office to serve in a specific, time-limited position with the Conference of District Attorneys. Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2007-323, s. 1.2, provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations and Capital Improvements Appropriations Act of 2007'."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 32.5 is a severability clause.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2007-323, ss. 28.15A and 28.18A(d), effective July 1, 2007, substituted "as provided in the Current Operations Appropriations Act" for "the midpoint amount between the salary of a senior resident superior court judge and the salary of a chief district court judge, as provided by law," in the middle of subdivision (a)(1); and, in the middle of the first sentence of subsections (c) and (d), deleted "and" preceding "nineteen" and added "and twenty-four percent (24%) after 25 years of service" at the end.

The following are grounds for suspension of a district attorney or for his removal from office:

(1) Mental or physical incapacity interfering with the performance of his duties which is, or is likely to become, permanent;
(2) Willful misconduct in office;
(3) Willful and persistent failure to perform his duties;
(4) Habitual intemperance;
(5) Conviction of a crime involving moral turpitude;
(6) Conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brings the office into disrepute; or
(7) Knowingly authorizing or permitting an assistant district attorney to commit any act constituting grounds for removal, as defined in subdivisions (1) through (6) hereof.

A proceeding to suspend or remove a district attorney is commenced by filing with the clerk of superior court of the county where the district attorney resides a sworn affidavit charging the district attorney with one or more grounds for removal. The clerk shall immediately bring the matter to the attention of the senior regular resident superior court judge for the district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1(a) in which the county is located who shall within 30 days either review and act on the charges or refer them for review and action within 30 days to another superior court judge residing in or regularly holding the courts of that district or set of districts. If the superior court judge upon review finds that the charges if true constitute grounds for suspension, and finds probable cause for believing that the charges are true, he may enter an order suspending the district attorney from performing the duties of his office until a final determination of the charges on the merits. During the suspension the salary of the district attorney continues. If the superior court judge finds that the charges if true do not constitute grounds for suspension or finds that no probable cause exists for believing that the charges are true, he shall dismiss the proceeding.

If a hearing, with or without suspension, is ordered, the district attorney should receive immediate written notice of the proceedings and a true copy of the charges, and the matter shall be set for hearing not less than 10 days nor more than 30 days thereafter. The matter shall be set for hearing before the judge who originally examined the charges or before another regular superior court judge resident in or regularly holding the courts of that district or set of districts. The hearing shall be open to the public. All testimony shall be recorded. At the hearing the superior court judge shall hear evidence and make findings of fact and conclusions of law and if he finds that grounds for removal exist, he shall enter an order permanently removing the district attorney from office, and terminating his salary. If he finds that no grounds exist, he shall terminate the suspension, if any.

The district attorney may appeal from an order of removal to the Court of Appeals on the basis of error of law by the superior court judge. Pending decision of the case on appeal, the district attorney shall not perform any of the duties of his office. If, upon final determination, he is ordered reinstated either by the appellate division or by the superior court upon remand his salary shall be restored from the date of the original order of removal. CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section does not violate the Constitution of North Carolina; thus, the superior court had jurisdiction to remove district attorney. In re Spivey, 345 N.C. 404, 480 S.E.2d 693 (1997).

Purpose. — This section aims to create a procedure for the removal of district attorneys by the superior court. In re Spivey, 345 N.C. 404, 480 S.E.2d 693 (1997).

Authority of General Assembly. — The General Assembly has the authority under the State Constitution to provide by statute for a method of removal of an individual holding the constitutional office of district attorney, although the Constitution does not itself specify any method whatsoever for removal of an individual from that office. In re Spivey, 345 N.C. 404, 480 S.E.2d 693 (1997).

Neither Article IV, Section 18 nor any other provision of the Constitution of North Carolina prohibits the General Assembly from enacting a statutory method for the removal of district attorneys from office, so long as district attorneys whose removal from office is sought are accorded due process of law. In re Spivey, 345 N.C. 404, 480 S.E.2d 693 (1997).

Use of Racial Epithets Is Conduct Prejudicial to the Administration of Justice Which Brings the Office into Disrepute. — There could be no question that the use of racial epithets against a member of the public by a district attorney in an apparent attempt to provoke an affray in public was conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice which brings the office into disrepute. In re Spivey, 345 N.C. 404, 480 S.E.2d 693 (1997).

District attorney's abusive verbal attack on African-American man which gave rise to the inquiry removing him from office was not protected speech under the First Amendment. Instead, when taken in context, his repeated references to victim as a "nigger"presented a classic case of the use of "fighting words" tending to incite an immediate breach of the peace which are not protected by either the Constitution of the United States or the Constitution of North Carolina. In re Spivey, 345 N.C. 404, 480 S.E.2d 693 (1997).

Applied in In re Hudson, 165 N.C. App. 894, 600 S.E.2d 25, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 1506 (2004), appeal dismissed, cert. denied, 359 N.C. 189, 607 S.E.2d 271 (2004).

§ 7A-66.1. Office of solicitor may be denominated as office of district attorney; "solicitor" and "district attorney" made interchangeable; interchangeable use authorized in proceedings, documents, and quotations.

(a) The constitutional office of solicitor may be denominated as the office of "district attorney" for all purposes, and the terms "solicitor" and "district attorney" shall be identical in meaning and interchangeable in use. All terms derived from or related to the term "solicitor" may embody this denomination.

(b) Repealed by Session Laws 1975, c. 956, s. 5.

(c) The interchangeable use authorized in this section includes use in all forms of oral, written, visual, and other communication including:

(1) Oaths of office;
(2) Other oaths or orations required or permitted in court or official proceedings;
(3) Ballots;
(4) Statutes;
(5) Regulations;
(6) Ordinances;
(7) Judgments and other court orders and records;
(8) Opinions in cases;
(9) Contracts;
(10) Bylaws;
(11) Charters;
(12) Official commissions, orders of appointment, proclamations, executive orders, and other official papers or pronouncements of the Governor or any executive, legislative, or judicial official of the State or any of its subdivisions;
(13) Official and unofficial letterheads;
(14) Campaign advertisements;
(15) Official and unofficial public notices; and
(16) In all other contexts not enumerated.

The interchangeability authorized in this section extends to the privilege of substituting terminology in matter quoted in oral, written, and other modes of communication without making indication of such change, except where such change may result in a substantive misunderstanding. Reprints or certifications of the text of the Constitution of North Carolina made by the Secretary of State, however, must retain the original terminology and indicate in brackets beside the original terminology the appropriate alternative words. (1973, c. 47, s. 1; 1975, c. 956, s. 5.)

(a) Each district attorney shall be entitled to one administrative assistant to be appointed by the district attorney and to serve at his pleasure. The assistant need not be an attorney licensed to practice law in the State of North Carolina.

(b) It shall be the duty of the administrative assistant to assist the district attorney in preparing cases for trial and in expediting the criminal court docket, and to assist in such other duties as may be assigned by the district attorney.

(c) When traveling on official business, each administrative assistant is entitled to reimbursement for his subsistence and travel expenses to the same extent as State employees generally. (1973, c. 807.)

Oath of Office. — Administrative and investigatorial assistants to the district attorney appointed pursuant to this section and G.S. 7A-69 are not required to take an oath of office as public officials, unless the district attorney assigns such duties the performance of which would involve the exercise of sovereign authority of the State. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Herbert F. Pierce, Fifteen-A Prosecutorial District, 50 N.C.A.G. 79 (1981).

The district attorney in prosecutorial districts 1, 3B, 4, 5, 7, 8, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15A, 15B, 16A, 18, 19B, 20A, 20B, 21, 22, 24, 25, 26, 27A, 27B, 28, 29A, 29B, and 30 is entitled to one investigatorial assistant, and the district attorney in prosecutorial district 10 is entitled to two investigatorial assistants, to be appointed by the district attorney and to serve at his pleasure.

It shall be the duty of the investigatorial assistant to investigate cases preparatory to trial and to perform such other Duties as may be assigned by the district attorney. The investigatorial assistant is entitled to reimbursement for his subsistence and travel expenses to the same extent as State employees generally. (1975, c. 956, s. 6; 1977, c. 969, s. 1; 1981, c. 964, s. 2; 1993, c. 321, s. 200.7(e); 1997-443, s. 18.16; 1998-212, s. 16.21; 1999-237, s. 17.9; 2004-124, s. 14.7(a); 2005-276, s. 14.2(p).)

Section Set Out Twice. — The section above is effective until January 1, 2009. For the section as amended January 1, 2009, see the following section, also numbered G.S. 7A-69.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2005-276, s. 14.2(q), provides, in part: "With respect to the division of Prosecutorial District 20, subsections (l) through (p) of this section become effective January 1, 2007, or the date upon which subsection (l) of this section [which amended G.S. 7A-60] is approved under section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, whichever is later, but the district attorneys for Prosecutorial Districts 20A and 20B shall be elected in the 2006 general election. With respect to the division of Prosecutorial District 29, subsections (l) through (p) of this section become effective January 1, 2007, but the district attorneys for Prosecutorial Districts 29A and 29B shall be elected in the 2006 general election." Preclearance was received from the U.S. Department of Justice by letter dated January 5, 2006.

Session Laws 2005-276, s. 1.2, provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations and Capital Improvements Appropriations Act of 2005'."

Session Laws 2005-276, s. 46.3, provides: "Except for statutory changes or other provisions that clearly indicate an intention to have effects beyond the 2005-2007 fiscal biennium, the textual provisions of this act apply only to funds appropriated for, and activities occurring during, the 2005-2007 fiscal biennium."

Session Laws 2005-276, s. 46.5 is a severability clause.

CASE NOTES

Discharge. — Since an investigatorial assistant's public statements criticizing the district attorney's discretionary decisions and the disruption of his office's working relationship with law enforcement agencies were sufficient reasons, standing alone, to terminate the investigatorial assistant's at will employment, the district attorney's decision to terminate him rested within his lawful and discretionary scope of authority; because the investigatorial assistant's termination was not injurious to the public or against the public good, there was no evidence to establish a genuine issue of material fact to support a claim for wrongful discharge against the district attorney. Hines v. Yates, 171 N.C. App. 150, 614 S.E.2d 385, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 1267 (2005).

The district attorney in prosecutorial districts 1, 3B, 4, 5, 7, 8, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15A, 15B, 16A, 18, 19B, 20A, 20B, 21, 22A, 22B, 24, 25, 26, 27A, 27B, 28, 29A, 29B, and 30 is entitled to one investigatorial assistant, and the district attorney in prosecutorial district 10 is entitled to two investigatorial assistants, to be appointed by the district attorney and to serve at his pleasure.

It shall be the duty of the investigatorial assistant to investigate cases preparatory to trial and to perform such other Duties as may be assigned by the district attorney. Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2007-323, s. 14.25(n), effective January 1, 2009, and applicable to the 2008 election as provided in the terms of this section, substituted "22A, 22B," for "22," in the middle of the first paragraph.

Special Regulations.

§ 7A-95. Reporting of trials.

(a) Court reporting personnel shall be utilized if available, for the reporting of trials in the superior court. If court reporters are not available in any county, electronic or other mechanical devices shall be provided by the Administrative Office of the Courts upon the request of the senior regular resident superior court judge.

(b) The Administrative Office of the Courts shall from time to time investigate the state of the art and techniques of recording testimony, and shall provide such electronic or mechanical devices as are found to be most efficient for this purpose.

(c) If an electronic or other mechanical device is utilized, it shall be the duty of the clerk of the superior court or some person designated by the clerk to operate the device while a trial is in progress, and the clerk shall thereafter preserve the record thus produced, which may be transcribed, as required, by any person designated by the Administrative Office of the Courts. If stenotype, shorthand, or stenomask equipment is used, the original tapes, notes, discs or other records are the property of the State, and the clerk shall keep them in his custody.

(d) Reporting of any trial may be waived by consent of the parties.

(e) Appointment of a reporter or reporters for superior court proceedings in each district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1(a) shall be made by the senior regular resident superior court judge of that district or set of districts. The compensation and allowances of reporters in each such district or set of districts shall be fixed by the senior regular resident superior court judge, within limits determined by the Administrative Officer of the Courts, and paid by the State.

If the judge of a superior court shall not be present to hold any session of court at the time fixed therefor, he may order the sheriff to adjourn the court to any day certain during the session, and on failure to hear from the judge it shall be the duty of the sheriff to adjourn the court from day to day, unless he shall be sooner informed that the judge for any reason cannot hold the session. CASE NOTES

Presumption of Adjournment. — Where the record recited that a regular term of a superior court was opened and held Wednesday, instead of on Monday, of the week fixed by the statutes, it was presumed that the sheriff had duly opened the court and adjourned it from day to day as provided in this section. State v. Weaver, 104 N.C. 758, 10 S.E. 486 (1889).

All Matters Carried Over. — This section by operation of law carries all matters over to the next term, in the same plight and condition. State v. Horton, 123 N.C. 695, 31 S.E. 218 (1898).

Newly Elected Judge. — Where a newly elected judge, as successor to one who was to have held the spring term of a court, ordered the sheriff to adjourn the court from day to day, not exceeding four days, to enable him to take the oath of office and preside, and the sheriff qualified and held the court, his acts were valid either as those of an officer de jure or as those of an officer de facto, and an exception to the validity of a trial of an action on that ground was untenable. State v. Harden, 177 N.C. 580, 98 S.E. 782 (1919).

Duty of Defendant to Attend Special Term. — A defendant bound over to answer a criminal charge at a regular term of the superior court, which term is not held in consequence of the absence of the judge, is required to attend an intervening special term subsequently appointed and held. State v. Horton, 123 N.C. 695, 31 S.E. 218 (1898).

§ 7A-97. Court's control of argument.

In all trials in the superior courts there shall be allowed two addresses to the jury for the State or plaintiff and two for the defendant, except in capital felonies, when there shall be no limit as to number. The judges of the superior court are authorized to limit the time of argument of counsel to the jury on the trial of actions, civil and criminal as follows: to not less than one hour on each side in misdemeanors and appeals from justices of the peace; to not less than two hours on each side in all other civil actions and in felonies less than capital; in capital felonies, the time of argument of counsel may not be limited otherwise than by consent, except that the court may limit the number of those who may address the jury to three counsel on each side. Where any greater number of addresses or any extension of time are desired, motion shall be made, and it shall be in the discretion of the judge to allow the same or not, as the interests of justice may require. In jury trials the whole case as well of law as of fact may be argued to the jury. (1903, c. 433; Rev., s. 216; C.S., s. 203; 1927, c. 52; 1995, c. 431, s. 7.)

Editor's Note. — This section is former G.S. 84-14, as recodified by Session Laws 1995, c. 431, s. 7. The historical citation from the former section has been added to this section as recodified.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited below were decided under G.S. 84-14 before its recodification as this section.

The language of this section is clear. State v. Feldstein, 21 N.C. App. 446, 204 S.E.2d 551 (1974).

Purpose of Section. — The purpose of this section was not to enlarge the number of addresses but rather to limit the number of counsel and time allowed a defendant's counsel in addressing the jury. State v. McCaskill, 47 N.C. App. 289, 267 S.E.2d 331, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 101, 273 S.E.2d 306 (1980).

Application to District Court Proceedings. — This section would seem to control district court proceedings, when applicable, by virtue of G.S. 7A-193, despite the fact that there is no specific reference to this section in that section. Roberson v. Roberson, 40 N.C. App. 193, 252 S.E.2d 237 (1979).

Discretion of Court. — The trial judge has a large discretion in controlling and directing the argument of counsel, but, under this section, this does not include the right to deprive a litigant of the benefit of his counsel's argument when it is confined within proper bounds and is addressed to the material facts of the case. Puett v. Caldwell & N.R.R., 141 N.C. 332, 53 S.E. 852 (1906); Irvin v. Southern Ry., 164 N.C. 5, 80 S.E. 78 (1913); In re Will of Farr, 7 N.C. App. 250, 172 S.E.2d 78, rev'd on other grounds, 277 N.C. 86, 175 S.E.2d 578 (1970); Kennedy v. Tarlton, 12 N.C. App. 397, 183 S.E.2d 276 (1971).

Conduct of counsel in presenting their causes to the jury is left largely to the discretion of the trial judge. In re Will of Farr, 7 N.C. App. 250, 172 S.E.2d 78, rev'd on other grounds, 277 N.C. 86, 175 S.E.2d 578 (1970); State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975); State v. Cousins, 289 N.C. 540, 223 S.E.2d 338 (1976); State v. Locklear, 291 N.C. 598, 231 S.E.2d 256 (1977); State v. Penley, 318 N.C. 30, 347 S.E.2d 783 (1986).

The conduct of the arguments of counsel is left to the sound discretion of the trial judge. State v. Britt, 291 N.C. 528, 231 S.E.2d 644 (1977).

Arguments of counsel are largely in the control and discretion of the trial judge who must allow wide latitude in the argument of the law, the facts of the case, as well as to all reasonable inferences to be drawn from the facts. State v. Taylor, 289 N.C. 223, 221 S.E.2d 359 (1976).

The trial judge is allowed discretion in controlling the arguments before the jury and he may restrict comment on facts not material to the case. State v. Moore, 34 N.C. App. 141, 237 S.E.2d 339 (1977).

Duty to Interfere When Remarks Prejudicial or Unwarranted by Evidence. — While it is true that in jury trials the whole case as well as of law as of fact may be argued to the jury, and counsel's freedom of argument should not be impaired without good reason, argument is not without limitation. Thus, when the remarks of counsel are not warranted by either the evidence or the law, or are calculated to mislead or prejudice the jury, it is the duty of the judge to interfere. Watson v. White, 309 N.C. 498, 308 S.E.2d 268 (1983).

Counsel's freedom of argument should not be impaired without good reason, but where both the impropriety and the prejudicial effect are clear, the court should act. Wilcox v. Glover Motors, Inc., 269 N.C. 473, 153 S.E.2d 76 (1967).

It is the duty of the judge to interfere when the remarks of counsel are not warranted by the evidence and are calculated to mislead or prejudice the jury. State v. Howley, 220 N.C. 113, 16 S.E.2d 705 (1941).

When the remarks of counsel are not warranted by either the evidence or the law, or are calculated to mislead or prejudice the jury, it is the duty of the judge to interfere. In re Will of Farr, 277 N.C. 86, 175 S.E.2d 578 (1970).

Because this section presents no mandatory requirement that defendant be allowed to argue his version of the law, the trial court properly exercised its discretion in preventing the defendant from showing the jury a copy of G.S. 14-33.2, including its effective date, to support his argument that because two of the offenses named in the indictment occurred prior to the enactment of the habitual misdemeanor assault statute, they should not have been considered in determining the issue of his guilt on this charge. State v. Smith, 139 N.C. App. 209, 533 S.E.2d 518, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 887 (2000).

Limits of Judge's Authority. — The only manner in which the trial judge is restrained by law with respect to the control over arguments by counsel is found in this section which applies to jury trials in the superior court. Roberson v. Roberson, 40 N.C. App. 193, 252 S.E.2d 237 (1979).

Instruction to Disregard Argument of Law. — It is the duty of the trial judge to instruct the jury upon the law, and he may correctly tell them to disregard the law as argued to them by counsel. Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Rouse Banking Co., 191 N.C. 500, 132 S.E. 468 (1926).

A trial judge's violation of the provisions of this section is prejudicial error. State v. Eury, 317 N.C. 511, 346 S.E.2d 447 (1986).

Failure to charge upon a certain point is reversible error, especially after counsel has argued the whole case "as well of law as of fact" as is permitted by this section. Nichols v. Champion Fibre Co., 190 N.C. 1, 128 S.E. 471 (1925).

Grounds for Review of Judge's Discretion. — Exercise of the trial judge's discretion in controlling jury arguments is not reviewed unless the impropriety of counsel's remarks is extreme and is clearly calculated to prejudice the jury in its deliberations. State v. Taylor, 289 N.C. 223, 221 S.E.2d 359 (1976).

It is well settled that the control of the jury arguments of counsel must be left largely to the discretion of the trial court and its rulings thereon will not be disturbed in the absence of gross abuse of discretion. State v. Small, 31 N.C. App. 556, 230 S.E.2d 425 (1976), cert. denied, 291 N.C. 715, 232 S.E.2d 207 (1977).

The argument of counsel must ordinarily be left to the sound discretion of the judge who tries the case and the appellate court will not review his discretion unless it is apparent that the impropriety of counsel was gross and well calculated to prejudice the jury. State v. Locklear, 291 N.C. 598, 231 S.E.2d 256 (1977).

In a trial without a jury, argument of counsel is a privilege, not a right, which is subject to the discretion of the presiding judge. Roberson v. Roberson, 40 N.C. App. 193, 252 S.E.2d 237 (1979).

The implication is clear that the legislature's failure to grant counsel the statutory right to argue to the court in non-jury matters left the authority to refuse to hear arguments within the discretion of the presiding judge. Roberson v. Roberson, 40 N.C. App. 193, 252 S.E.2d 237 (1979).

Provision of G.S. 1A-1, Rule 8(a)(2) relating to professional malpractice actions was enacted to reduce the believed impact of pretrial publicity about medical malpractice cases, and for no other purpose. This provision curtails the rights that counsel in this State have long had to argue the facts in evidence and all reasonable inferences drawable therefrom. Biggs v. Cumberland County Hosp. Sys., 69 N.C. App. 547, 317 S.E.2d 421 (1984).

II. SCOPE OF ARGUMENT.

A. In General.

Wide latitude is given counsel in the exercise of the right to argue to the jury the whole case, as well of law as of fact, but counsel is not entitled to travel outside of the record and argue facts not included in the evidence, and when counsel attempts to do so it is the right and duty of the court to correct the argument, either at the time or in the charge to the jury. State v. Little, 228 N.C. 417, 45 S.E.2d 542 (1947); State v. Graves, 252 N.C. 779, 114 S.E.2d 770 (1960).

Counsel must be allowed wide latitude in the argument of hotly contested cases. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975); State v. Cousins, 289 N.C. 540, 223 S.E.2d 338 (1976); State v. Locklear, 291 N.C. 598, 231 S.E.2d 256 (1977).

Counsel is given wide latitude to argue the facts and all reasonable inferences which may be drawn therefrom, together with the relevant law, in presenting the case to the jury. State v. Britt, 291 N.C. 528, 231 S.E.2d 644 (1977).

Counsels have a wide latitude in arguing their cases to the jury, and have the right to argue every phase of the case supported by the evidence, and to argue the law as well as the facts. Weeks v. Holsclaw, 306 N.C. 655, 295 S.E.2d 596, rehearing denied, 307 N.C. 273, 302 S.E.2d 884 (1982).

Because it is the duty of the prosecuting attorney to present the State's case with earnestness and vigor and to use every legitimate means to bring about a just conviction, in the discharge of that duty he should not be so restricted as to discourage a vigorous presentation of the State's case to the jury. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975).

Right to argue the whole case has been expressly conferred by statute. In re Will of Farr, 7 N.C. App. 250, 172 S.E.2d 78, rev'd on other grounds, 277 N.C. 86, 175 S.E.2d 578 (1970).

Under this section counsel's right to argue law generally to the jury has been upheld or expressly recognized. In re Will of Farr, 7 N.C. App. 250, 172 S.E.2d 78, rev'd on other grounds, 277 N.C. 86, 175 S.E.2d 578 (1970).

Counsel May Argue Both Law and Fact. — Counsel have the right to argue the whole case as well of law as of fact. Brown v. Vestal, 231 N.C. 56, 55 S.E.2d 797 (1949); In re Will of Farr, 7 N.C. App. 250, 172 S.E.2d 78, rev'd on other grounds, 277 N.C. 86, 175 S.E.2d 578 (1970).

The right of counsel to state in his argument to the jury what he conceives the law of the case to be has been upheld in numerous decisions. State v. Bovender, 233 N.C. 683, 65 S.E.2d 323 (1951).

Counsel for both sides are entitled to argue to the jury the law and the facts in evidence and all reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975); Property Shop, Inc. v. Mountain City Inv. Co., 56 N.C. App. 644, 290 S.E.2d 222 (1982).

Counsel may argue the facts in evidence and all reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom, together with the relevant law, so as to present his case. State v. Locklear, 291 N.C. 598, 231 S.E.2d 256 (1977).

It is a basic right of a litigant to have his counsel argue his case to the jury on questions of law and of fact. Board of Transp. v. Wilder, 28 N.C. App. 105, 220 S.E.2d 183 (1975).

The right to argue "the whole case as well of law as of fact" to the jury arises regardless of whether the trial court's jury instructions will also relate the law on the issue. State v. Gardner, 316 N.C. 605, 342 S.E.2d 872 (1986).

But counsel may not argue principles of law not relevant to the case. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975).

The law which this provision allows to be argued must of course be the law applicable to the facts of the case. The whole corpus juris is not fair game. State v. McMorris, 290 N.C. 286, 225 S.E.2d 553 (1976).

This section does not authorize counsel to argue law which is not applicable to the issues, for such arguments could only lead to confusion in the minds of the jury. In re Will of Farr, 277 N.C. 86, 175 S.E.2d 578 (1970); Fonville v. Dixon, 16 N.C. App. 664, 193 S.E.2d 406 (1972), cert. denied, 282 N.C. 672, 194 S.E.2d 152 (1973).

It is reversible error for the trial judge not to permit attorneys to argue law to the jury and to apply in the argument the decisions of the court as provided by this section. Howard v. Western Union Tel. Co., 170 N.C. 495, 87 S.E. 313 (1915).

Language may be used consistent with the facts in evidence to present each side of the case. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975).

Counsel may not "travel outside the record" in his argument to the jury. State v. Cousins, 289 N.C. 540, 223 S.E.2d 338 (1976).

Counsel may not travel outside the record and place before the jury an incompetent and prejudicial theory of the case grounded wholly on personal beliefs and opinions not supported by the evidence. State v. Britt, 288 N.C. 699, 220 S.E.2d 283 (1975).

The general rule is that counsel may argue all the evidence to the jury, which such inferences as may be drawn therefrom; but he may not "travel outside of the record" and inject into his argument facts of his own knowledge or other facts not included in the evidence. State v. Patton, 45 N.C. App. 676, 263 S.E.2d 796 (1980).

Commenting on Testimony. — The testimony of a witness being competent, material, and relevant, there can be no doubt of the right of counsel to make proper comment upon it in his address to the jury. In re Will of Farr, 7 N.C. App. 250, 172 S.E.2d 78, rev'd on other grounds, 277 N.C. 86, 175 S.E.2d 578 (1970).

Expression of Counsel's Personal Belief. — As a general rule, it is improper for the prosecuting attorney to express his personal opinion or belief in the guilt of the accused, unless it is apparent that such opinion is based solely on the evidence, and not on any reasons or information outside the evidence. State v. Britt, 291 N.C. 528, 231 S.E.2d 644 (1977).

Incompetent and Prejudicial Matters. — Counsel may not place before the jury incompetent and prejudicial matters, and may not "travel outside the record" by injecting into his argument facts of his own knowledge or other facts not included in the evidence. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975).

Counsel may not by his argument place before the jury incompetent and prejudicial matter not admissible into evidence. State v. Cousins, 289 N.C. 540, 223 S.E.2d 338 (1976).

A prosecuting attorney may not place before the jury incompetent and prejudicial matters not admissible in evidence or include in his argument facts not included in the evidence. State v. Taylor, 289 N.C. 223, 221 S.E.2d 359 (1976).

Counsel may read or state to the jury a statute or other rule of law relevant to such case, including the statutory provision fixing the punishment for the offense charged. State v. Britt, 285 N.C. 256, 204 S.E.2d 817 (1974); State v. McMorris, 290 N.C. 286, 225 S.E.2d 553 (1976); State v. Irick, 291 N.C. 480, 231 S.E.2d 833 (1977).

Under this section, counsel, in his argument to the jury, is entitled to read or state to the jury a relevant statute or other rule of law so as to present his side of the case. State v. Hall, 60 N.C. App. 450, 299 S.E.2d 680 (1983).

But May Not State Law Incorrectly or Read Unconstitutional Statute. — Counsel may not state the law incorrectly or read to the jury a statutory provision which has been declared unconstitutional. State v. Britt, 285 N.C. 256, 204 S.E.2d 817 (1974); State v. McMorris, 290 N.C. 286, 225 S.E.2d 553 (1976); State v. Irick, 291 N.C. 480, 231 S.E.2d 833 (1977).

Reading and Commenting on Reported Cases. — As counsel have the right under this section to argue "the whole case as well of law as of fact," they may read to the jury reported cases and comment thereon; but the facts contained in the cases cannot be read as evidence of their existence in another case. Horah v. Knox, 87 N.C. 483 (1882).

This section permits counsel, in his argument to the jury, to state his view of the law applicable to the case on trial and to read, in support thereof, from the published reports of decisions of the Supreme Court. It is often necessary for counsel to do so in order that the jury may understand the issue to which counsel's argument on the evidence is addressed. Wilcox v. Glover Motors, Inc., 269 N.C. 473, 153 S.E.2d 76 (1967), commented on in 47 N.C.L. Rev. 262.; State v. Thomas, 350 N.C. 315, 514 S.E.2d 486, 1999 N.C. App. LEXIS 246 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1006, 120 S. Ct. 503, 145 L. Ed. 2d 388 (1999).

In order to make meaningful a statement of a rule of law found in a reported decision, it is sometimes necessary to recount some of the facts which the court had before it when it pronounced the rule in question. For this purpose, counsel, in his argument in a subsequent case, may not only read the rule of law stated in the published opinion in the former case but may also state the facts before the court therein. Wilcox v. Glover Motors, Inc., 269 N.C. 473, 153 S.E.2d 76 (1967), commented on in 47 N.C.L. Rev. 262.

It is not permissible argument for counsel to read, or otherwise state, the facts of another case, together with the decision therein, as premises leading to the conclusion that the jury should return a verdict favorable to his client in the case on trial. This is but an application of the rule that, in his argument to the jury, counsel may not go outside the record and inject into his argument facts of his own knowledge, or other facts not included in the evidence. Wilcox v. Glover Motors, Inc., 269 N.C. 473, 153 S.E.2d 76 (1967), commented on in 47 N.C.L. Rev. 262.

The ultimate test is whether the reading from the reported case "would reasonably tend to prejudice either party upon the facts" of the case on trial. Wilcox v. Glover Motors, Inc., 269 N.C. 473, 153 S.E.2d 76 (1967), commented on in 47 N.C.L. Rev. 262.

This section grants counsel the right to argue the law to the jury, which includes the authority to read and comment on reported cases and statutes. There are, however, limitations on what portions of these cases counsel may relate. State v. Gardner, 316 N.C. 605, 342 S.E.2d 872 (1986).

Counsel's right to argue the law to the jury includes the authority to read and comment on reported cases and statutes. State v. Thomas, 350 N.C. 315, 514 S.E.2d 486, 1999 N.C. App. LEXIS 246 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1006, 120 S. Ct. 503, 145 L. Ed. 2d 388 (1999).

Facts of Unrelated Case. — The prosecutor was properly allowed to read the facts of another, unrelated case to the jury during closing arguments, as that portion of the prosecutor's argument not only accurately stated North Carolina law, but also concerned principles of law that were relevant to the issue of burglary in the present case. State v. Thomas, 350 N.C. 315, 514 S.E.2d 486, 1999 N.C. App. LEXIS 246 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1006, 120 S. Ct. 503, 145 L. Ed. 2d 388 (1999).

Counsel may only read statements of the law in the case which are relevant to the issues before the jury. State v. Gardner, 316 N.C. 605, 342 S.E.2d 872 (1986).

Reading Facts in Reported Cases. — Counsel may not read the facts contained in a published opinion together with the result to imply that the jury in his case should return a favorable verdict for his client. State v. Gardner, 316 N.C. 605, 342 S.E.2d 872 (1986).

Reading Excerpts from Treatises in Reported Cases. — It would be an improper interpretation of this section to allow counsel to avoid the rule prohibiting counsel from reading from medical books or writings of a scientific nature to the jury except when an expert has given an opinion and cited a treatise as his authority on the basis that he read the material from an appellate reporter rather than from the magazine or book itself, especially where it was contained in an opinion that had been reversed by the Supreme Court. State v. Gardner, 316 N.C. 605, 342 S.E.2d 872 (1986).

Reading Reported Cases Discussing In-

applicable Principles of Law. — Broad and comprehensive as the provisions of this section are, they do not permit counsel to read to the jury decisions discussing principles of law which are irrelevant to the case and have no application to the facts in evidence. State v. Crisp, 244 N.C. 407, 94 S.E.2d 402 (1956).

Counsel May Not Read Mere Dictum or Irrelevant Decisions. — Although counsel may properly read statements of law and their attendant facts found in the original opinion to the jury, counsel may not read matters which are not law but rather constitute mere dictum and therefore are not within the scope of this section, nor may counsel read to the jury decisions discussing principles of law which are irrelevant to the case and have no application to the facts in evidence. State v. Austin, 320 N.C. 276, 357 S.E.2d 641, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 916, 108 S. Ct. 267, 98 L. Ed. 2d 224 (1987).

Reading Dissenting Opinion as Law of Case. — It is not permissible for counsel, in his argument to the jury, to read a dissenting opinion by a Justice of the Supreme Court as the law of the case over the defendant's objection, and where this has been done a new trial will be awarded on the defendant's exception thereto. It is the duty of the trial court, either to direct counsel not to read the dissenting opinion or to plainly and unequivocally instruct that the dissenting opinion has no legal bearing upon the case. Conn v. Seaboard Air Line Ry., 201 N.C. 157, 159 S.E. 331 (1931); State v. Thomas, 350 N.C. 315, 514 S.E.2d 486, 1999 N.C. App. LEXIS 246 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1006, 120 S. Ct. 503, 145 L. Ed. 2d 388 (1999).

Counsel may not read from a dissenting opinion in a reported case. State v. Gardner, 316 N.C. 605, 342 S.E.2d 872 (1986).

When Case Law Desired to Be Read Is Excluded. — Defendant bears the burden of proving that the erroneous exclusion of case law which defense counsel sought to read to the jury was prejudicial. State v. Harrison, 90 N.C. App. 629, 369 S.E.2d 624 (1988), overruled on other grounds, 334 N.C. 402, 432 S.E.2d 349 (1993).

Case Law Improperly Excluded at Trial. — Where the statement of law read to the jury by defense counsel specifically addressed the State's use of circumstantial evidence to obtain a conviction, had not been reversed on appeal, and was relevant to the issue of circumstantial evidence before the jury in the present case, the trial court improperly excluded the case law at trial. State v. Harrison, 90 N.C. App. 629, 369 S.E.2d 624 (1988), overruled on other grounds, 334 N.C. 402, 432 S.E.2d 349 (1993).

Consequences of Nonunanimity. — Defense counsel is not entitled to argue that trial court will impose a life sentence if the jury cannot reach a unanimous decision; therefore, the trial court properly refused to permit counsel to argue the consequences of nonunanimity. State v. Huff, 325 N.C. 1, 381 S.E.2d 635 (1989), vacated and remanded for further consideration at 497 U.S. 1021, 110 S. Ct. 3266, 111 L. Ed. 2d 777 (1990), in light of McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 110 S. Ct. 1227, 108 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1990), death sentence vacated, remanded for new capital sentencing proceeding, State v. Huff, 328 N.C. 532, 402 S.E.2d 577 (1991).

Prohibiting the Reading of the Fifth Amendment Held Not Reversible Error. — The trial court did not commit reversible error in prohibiting the reading to the jury of that portion of the Fifth Amendment pertinent to the defendant's election not to testify, where in his general instructions to the jury, the judge gave an accurate and complete statement of the law applicable to defendant's election not to testify. State v. Banks, 322 N.C. 753, 370 S.E.2d 398 (1988).

Defense counsel was entitled to read to the jury that clause of the Fifth Amendment material to defendant's election not to testify, i.e., "No person ... shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself" and to say simply that because of this provision, the jury must not consider defendant's election not to testify adversely to him, or words to this effect. State v. Banks, 322 N.C. 753, 370 S.E.2d 398 (1988).

Reading Portions of Final Pleadings. — The trial court did not commit prejudicial error by allowing counsel for plaintiff to read portions of the final pleadings upon which the case was tried in his argument to the jury. Kennedy v. Tarlton, 12 N.C. App. 397, 183 S.E.2d 276 (1971).

The defense counsel may read portions of the final pleadings in his argument to the jury at the discretion of the trial judge. Gillespie v. Draughn, 54 N.C. App. 413, 283 S.E.2d 548 (1981), cert. denied, 304 N.C. 726, 288 S.E.2d 805 (1982).

Racially Inflammatory Remarks. — In a prosecution of three black men, the racially inflammatory remarks in the prosecutor's closing argument before an all-white jury were so prejudicial as to make a fair trial impossible. Miller v. North Carolina, 583 F.2d 701 (4th Cir. 1978).

Comment Relating to Dismissed Charge Is Not Relevant. — Where the case before the jury at the time of counsel's argument consisted of two assault indictments, and a murder charge had been dismissed, comment relating to a possible sentence under that charge was neither relevant nor material to the remaining assault charges before the jury and was not within the protection of this section. State v. Moore, 34 N.C. App. 141, 237 S.E.2d 339 (1977).

It is proper to argue to jury to compensate at a certain amount per specific time period when there is evidence of continuous pain. Thompson v. Kyles, 48 N.C. App. 422, 269 S.E.2d 231, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 239, 283 S.E.2d 135 (1980).

In a personal injury action, where plaintiff's evidence tended to show that during the period of time between the accident and trial he suffered pain "almost constantly" as a result of injury caused by the accident, counsel's per diem argument based on this period of time was appropriate. Weeks v. Holsclaw, 306 N.C. 655, 295 S.E.2d 596, rehearing denied, 307 N.C. 273, 302 S.E.2d 884 (1982).

Cautionary Instruction Where "Per Diem" Argument Used. — A "per diem" argument that the jury consider a formula by which a monetary value is assigned to a particular unit of time and this value is multiplied by the total number of such units during which the pain persisted is permissible, but when it is used the trial judge should give appropriate cautionary jury instructions. Weeks v. Holsclaw, 306 N.C. 655, 295 S.E.2d 596, rehearing denied, 307 N.C. 273, 302 S.E.2d 884 (1982).

Improper to Comment on Character or Conduct of Opposing Party or Attorney. — Where counsel's remarks are not sustained by the facts it is improper for counsel in argument to make statements reflecting on the character or conduct of the opposite party or his attorney. State v. Taylor, 289 N.C. 223, 221 S.E.2d 359 (1976).

B. Punishment.

Defendant Has Right to Inform Jury of Punishment. — This section, as interpreted by the Supreme Court, gives a defendant the right to inform the jury of the punishment that may be imposed upon conviction of the crime for which he is being tried. State v. Walters, 33 N.C. App. 521, 235 S.E.2d 906 (1977), aff'd, 294 N.C. 311, 240 S.E.2d 628 (1978).

This section secures to counsel the right to inform the jury of the punishment prescribed for the offense for which defendant is being tried. Counsel may exercise this right by reading the punishment provisions of the statute to the jury. State v. Walters, 294 N.C. 311, 240 S.E.2d 628 (1978).

Statements in the defense counsel's jury argument which informed the jury of the consequences of a conviction and stated that, in light of those consequences, the jury should give the matter close attention and its most serious consideration were in all respects proper. State v. Wilson, 293 N.C. 47, 235 S.E.2d 219 (1977).

A criminal defendant has the right to inform the jury of the punishment prescribed for the offense for which he is being tried. State v. Cabe, 131 N.C. App. 310, 506 S.E.2d 749 (1998).

Trial court erred in denying defendant's request to inform the jury during the first phase of the trial that, if convicted, defendant was subject to punishment as a class C felon due to defendant's status as an habitual felon; while defendant had the right under G.S. 7A-97 to inform the jury of the punishment that could be imposed upon conviction of the crime for which defendant was being tried, this did not permit defendant to inform the jury of the maximum sentence as a result of an habitual felon adjudication, and G.S. 14-7.5, providing that an habitual felon trial was to be held separate from the principal felony trial, precluded instruction on the habitual offender penalty. State v. Dammons, 159 N.C. App. 284, 583 S.E.2d 606, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1539 (2003), cert. denied, 357 N.C. 579, 589 S.E.2d 133 (2003), cert. denied, 541 U.S. 951, 124 S. Ct. 1691, 158 L. Ed. 2d 382 (2004).

Trial court did not err when it refused to answer the inquiry of the jury regarding the penalty for second-degree murder, as defendant did not choose the exercise the right to inform the jury of the punishment for possible verdicts and the trial court was not obligated to inform the jury of applicable punishments. State v. Hewson, — N.C. App. —, 642 S.E.2d 459, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 581 (2007).

And Is Entitled to New Trial Where Denied This Right. — A defendant deprived of the right to inform the jury of the punishment that might be imposed upon conviction of the crime for which he was being tried was entitled to a new trial. State v. Walters, 33 N.C. App. 521, 235 S.E.2d 906 (1977), aff'd, 294 N.C. 311, 240 S.E.2d 628 (1978).

But Not If the Error Is Harmless. — The trial court's error in denying the defendant the right to advise the jury of the possible sentences he could receive if convicted, as allowed by this section, was harmless. State v. Peoples, 141 N.C. App. 115, 539 S.E.2d 25, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1290 (2000).

Defendant May Not Attack Validity of Punishment. — Counsel may not argue the question of punishment in the sense of attacking the validity, constitutionality, or propriety of the prescribed punishment. Nor may counsel argue to the jury that the law ought to be otherwise, that the punishment provided thereby is too severe and, therefore, the jury should find the defendant not guilty of the offense charged but should find him guilty of a lesser offense or acquit him entirely. State v. Walters, 294 N.C. 311, 240 S.E.2d 628 (1978).

Or Its Severity. — Where the defense counsel implied in his jury argument that identification of the defendant was based on a fleeting view and that, while such a view may be sufficient to convict in some situations, it was inadequate to convict in the immediate case because the punishment was so severe, thus asking the jury to consider the punishment as part of its substantive deliberations, the trial judge correctly excluded that portion of defendant's jury argument. State v. Wilson, 293 N.C. 47, 235 S.E.2d 219 (1977).

Counsel may not argue to the jury that the law ought to be otherwise, that the punishment provided thereby is too severe and, therefore, that the jury should find the defendant not guilty of the offense charged but should find him guilty of a lesser offense or acquit him entirely. State v. Britt, 285 N.C. 256, 204 S.E.2d 817 (1974); State v. Irick, 291 N.C. 480, 231 S.E.2d 833 (1977).

Quotation by the prosecutor from an overruled capital punishment decision during the penalty phase of a trial for first-degree murder, where the portion quoted did not form the rationale of the overruled decision, did not require action by the trial judge or a new sentencing hearing, in light of the assessment of the reviewing court and defense counsel that the prosecutor's motive for quoting on the decision was to argue the deterrent value of the death penalty. State v. Boyd, 311 N.C. 408, 319 S.E.2d 189 (1984).

C. Appeals, Paroles, etc.

The State or the defendant should not be allowed to speculate upon the outcome of possible appeals, paroles, executive commutations or pardons. State v. McMorris, 290 N.C. 286, 225 S.E.2d 553 (1976).

III. LENGTH OF ARGUMENT.

Defense counsel in a felony case is entitled to at least two hours for jury argument. State v. Feldstein, 21 N.C. App. 446, 204 S.E.2d 551 (1974).

IV. NUMBER OF ARGUMENTS.

In trials in the superior courts involving other than capital felonies, the State and the defendant are entitled to two addresses to the jury. State v. Eury, 317 N.C. 511, 346 S.E.2d 447 (1986).

The trial court's refusal to permit both counsels to address the jury during defendant's final arguments constituted prejudicial error per se in both the guilt-innocence and sentencing phases. State v. Campbell, 332 N.C. 116, 418 S.E.2d 476 (1992).

In a capital case as many as three counsel on each side may argue for as long as they wish, and each may address the jury as many times as he desires. State v. Eury, 317 N.C. 511, 346 S.E.2d 447 (1986).

When, in a capital case, a defendant does not offer evidence and is entitled to both open and close the argument to the jury, his attorneys may each address the jury as many times as they desire during the closing phase of the argument. The only limit to this right is the provision of this section allowing the trial judge to limit to three the number of counsel on each side who may address the jury. State v. Eury, 317 N.C. 511, 346 S.E.2d 447 (1986).

Discretion of Court. — This section gives the court the discretion to allow a greater number of addresses. State v. McCaskill, 47 N.C. App. 289, 267 S.E.2d 331, cert. denied, 301 N.C. 101, 273 S.E.2d 306 (1980).

V. CAPITAL CASES.

This section places two restraints on a trial court's ability to limit jury arguments in capital felonies. First, the statute prohibits the trial court from limiting the number of addresses which can be made to the jury. Second, although the court may limit the number of attorneys who may address the jury to not less than three on each side, the statute prevents the trial court from imposing a limit on the length of the arguments. State v. Gladden, 315 N.C. 398, 340 S.E.2d 673, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 871, 107 S. Ct. 241, 93 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1986).

Argument as to Jury's Role in Sentencing Phase of Capital Trial. — In the sentencing phase of a bifurcated trial, a reference to any statutory provision, which would have the effect of minimizing in the jurors' minds their role in recommending the sentence to be imposed, is precluded. The matters which a jury may consider in the sentencing phase of a bifurcated trial are clearly set forth in G.S. 15A-2000(e) and (f). State v. Jones, 296 N.C. 495, 251 S.E.2d 425 (1979).

Argument as to Review by Supreme Court in Capital Cases. — During the sentencing phase of a bifurcated prosecution for murder, it was error for the district attorney to read to the jury G.S. 15A-2000(d), relating to the review of judgment and sentence by the Supreme Court. A reference to appellate review has no relevance with regard to the jury's task of weighing any aggravating and mitigating circumstances for the purpose of recommending a sentence. More importantly, such reference will, in all likelihood, result in the jury's reliance on the Supreme Court for the ultimate determination of sentence. State v. Jones, 296 N.C. 495, 251 S.E.2d 425 (1979).

The rule precluding any argument which suggests to the jurors that they can depend on judicial or executive review to correct an erroneous verdict and thereby lessen the jurors' responsibility applies with equal force to a sentence recommendation in a bifurcated trial. State v. Jones, 296 N.C. 495, 251 S.E.2d 425 (1979).

Reference to Parole Statute. — In a prosecution for murder, during the sentencing phase of a bifurcated trial, the district attorney's reference to the parole statute was erroneous. Neither the State nor the defendant should be allowed to speculate upon the outcome of possible appeals, paroles, executive commutations or pardons. The jury's sentence recommendation should be based solely on their balancing of the aggravating and mitigating factors before them. State v. Jones, 296 N.C. 495, 251 S.E.2d 425 (1979).

Where the word "parole" was never used, and there was no specific mention of the possibility that a life sentence could mean release in 20 years, the district attorney's arguments did not suggest the possibility of parole in so direct a manner as to amount to a gross impropriety requiring ex mero motu intervention by the trial court. State v. Hunt, 323 N.C. 407, 373 S.E.2d 400 (1988), vacated and remanded for further consideration at 494 U.S. 1022, 110 S. Ct. 1464, 108 L. Ed. 2d 602 (1990), in light of McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 110 S. Ct. 1227, 108 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1990), overruled in part State v. Gaines, 345 N.C. 647, 483 S.E.2d 396 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 900, 118 S. Ct. 248, 139 L. Ed. 2d 177 (1997).

In defendant's trial on charges of first-degree murder and robbery with a firearm, the trial court properly advised the jury that life imprisonment meant a sentence of life without the possibility of parole, and the state supreme court rejected the argument that G.S. 84-14 (recodified as this section) gave defendant the right to inform the jury of the punishment that could be imposed if defendant was convicted. State v. Haselden, 357 N.C. 1, 577 S.E.2d 594, 2003 N.C. LEXIS 318 (2003).

Final Closing Argument Where Defendant Presents Evidence. — This section means that although the trial court in a capital case may limit to three the number of counsel on each side who may address the jury, those three (or however many actually argue) may argue for as long as they wish, and each may address the jury as many times as he desires. However, if defendant presents evidence, all such addresses must be made prior to the prosecution's closing argument. State v. Gladden, 315 N.C. 398, 340 S.E.2d 673, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 871, 107 S. Ct. 241, 93 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1986).

Where defendant in a capital case presented evidence, the State had the right to give the final closing argument pursuant to Rule 10 of the General Rules of Practice for the Superior and District Courts. This section did not give defendant the right to respond to the State's argument. State v. Gladden, 315 N.C. 398, 340 S.E.2d 673, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 871, 107 S. Ct. 241, 93 L. Ed. 2d 166 (1986).

Quotations from the Bible. — District attorney's closing remarks at the penalty phase, in which he read quotations from the Bible, were not so improper as to require intervention by the trial court ex mero motu. State v. Hunt, 323 N.C. 407, 373 S.E.2d 400 (1988), vacated and remanded for further consideration at 494 U.S. 1022, 110 S. Ct. 1464, 108 L. Ed. 2d 602 (1990), in light of McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 110 S. Ct. 1227, 108 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1990), overruled in part State v. Gaines, 345 N.C. 647, 483 S.E.2d 396 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 900, 118 S. Ct. 248, 139 L. Ed. 2d 177 (1997).

Evidence supported district attorney's reference to defendant as a "professional assassin" in attorney's argument at the guilt phase, and defendant failed to object to the statement; therefore, the trial court did not err in failing to intervene ex mero motu to correct this remark. State v. Hunt, 323 N.C. 407, 373 S.E.2d 400 (1988), vacated and remanded for further consideration at 494 U.S. 1022, 110 S. Ct. 1464, 108 L. Ed. 2d 602 (1990), in light of McKoy v. North Carolina, 494 U.S. 433, 110 S. Ct. 1227, 108 L. Ed. 2d 369 (1990), overruled in part State v. Gaines, 345 N.C. 647, 483 S.E.2d 396 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 900, 118 S. Ct. 248, 139 L. Ed. 2d 177 (1997).

Refusal to Allow Both Defense Counsel to Argue Was Prejudicial Error. — At the conclusion of the sentencing proceeding in capital murder case, the trial court erred in refusing to permit both counsel for defendant to address the jury during defendant's final argument. This deprived the defendant of a substantial right and amounted to prejudicial error. State v. Simpson, 320 N.C. 313, 357 S.E.2d 332 (1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 963, 108 S. Ct. 1230, 99 L. Ed. 2d 430 (1988).

Trial court's refusal in a capital case to permit both counsel to address the jury during defendant's final arguments constituted prejudicial error per se in both the guilt-innocence and sentencing phases, entitling defendant to a new trial. State v. Mitchell, 321 N.C. 650, 365 S.E.2d 554 (1988).

The failure of trial court to permit defense counsel to make three arguments during closing arguments of the guilt phase, an opening argument by one defense attorney before the State's closing arguments and two final arguments, one by each of his attorneys, after the State's closing arguments, where defendant was being tried for multiple capital felonies and did not present evidence during the guilt-innocence phase, and where counsel made a clear request, constituted prejudicial error per se and entitled the defendant to a new trial as to both capital and noncapital charges. State v. Barrow, 350 N.C. 640, 517 S.E.2d 374 (1999).

How Often and How Long Defense Attorneys May Address Jury. — In capital cases this section allows the trial court to limit defendant to three counsel, but at each point at which defendant has the right to present an argument to the jury those three, or however many actually argue, may argue for as long as they wish, and each may address the jury as many times as he desires. Thus, for example, if one defense attorney grows weary of arguing, he may allow another defense attorney to address the jury, and may, upon being refreshed, rise again to make another address during defendant's time for argument. State v. Mitchell, 321 N.C. 650, 365 S.E.2d 554 (1988).

When a defendant is entitled to the final or last jury argument, during the closing arguments in a capital case, his attorneys may each address the jury as many times as they desire during the closing phase of the arguments. The only limit to this right is the provision of this section allowing the trial judge to limit to three the number of counsel on each side who may address the jury. State v. Mitchell, 321 N.C. 650, 365 S.E.2d 554 (1988).

In cases in which a capital felony has been joined for trial with noncapital charges, the failure of the trial judge to allow both of defendant's counsel to make the closing argument is prejudicial error in the noncapital as well as the capital charges. State v. Mitchell, 321 N.C. 650, 365 S.E.2d 554 (1988).

VI. OBJECTION.

A. In General.

Duty of Court to Censor Remarks. — The trial court has a duty, upon objection, to censor remarks not warranted by either the evidence or the law, or remarks calculated to mislead or prejudice the jury. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975); State v. Britt, 288 N.C. 699, 220 S.E.2d 283 (1975); State v. Locklear, 291 N.C. 598, 231 S.E.2d 256 (1977).

The trial court is required, upon objection, to censor remarks either not warranted by the law or facts or made only to prejudice or mislead the jury. State v. Britt, 291 N.C. 528, 231 S.E.2d 644 (1977); State v. Ford, 323 N.C. 466, 373 S.E.2d 420 (1988).

The trial court has a duty, upon objection, to censure remarks which are not warranted by the law or evidence or are calculated to mislead or prejudice the jury, and, if the impropriety is gross, it is proper for the trial judge, even in the absence of objection, to correct the abuse ex mero motu. Watson v. White, 309 N.C. 498, 308 S.E.2d 268 (1983).

If the impropriety in counsel's closing arguments is gross, it is proper for the court even in the absence of objection, to correct the abuse ex mero motu. State v. Monk, 286 N.C. 509, 212 S.E.2d 125 (1975); State v. Britt, 288 N.C. 699, 220 S.E.2d 283 (1975); State v. Locklear, 291 N.C. 598, 231 S.E.2d 256 (1977).

Failure to Sustain Objection to Remark with No Basis in Law or Fact. — A trial court errs as a matter of law in failing to sustain plaintiff's objection to the remarks of defendant's counsel, which remarks had no basis in law or fact, but rather injected extraneous considerations concerning defendants' financial situation so far as their capacity to respond to damages was concerned. Watson v. White, 309 N.C. 498, 308 S.E.2d 268 (1983).

B. Time for Objection.

An objection to argument of counsel must be made at the time of the argument, so as to give the court an opportunity to correct the transgression, if any. State v. Coffey, 289 N.C. 431, 222 S.E.2d 217 (1976).

Or Before Verdict. — Exception to improper remarks of counsel during argument must be taken before verdict. State v. Coffey, 289 N.C. 431, 222 S.E.2d 217 (1976).

Ordinarily, an objection to the arguments by counsel must be made before verdict, since only when the impropriety is gross is the trial court required to correct the abuse ex mero motu. State v. Britt, 291 N.C. 528, 231 S.E.2d 644 (1977).

Or Else Waived. — Objection to an impropriety in counsel's argument to the jury is waived by waiting until after the verdict to enter the objection. State v. Coffey, 289 N.C. 431, 222 S.E.2d 217 (1976).

After verdict, an objection to an impropriety in the argument comes too late. State v. Locklear, 291 N.C. 598, 231 S.E.2d 256 (1977).

Capital Case Exception. — An exception to the general rule that objections to counsel's argument to the jury must be made before verdict is recognized in capital cases where the improper argument was so prejudicial in nature that, in the opinion of the court, no instruction by the trial court could have removed it from the minds of the jury had the objection been seasonably made. State v. Coffey, 289 N.C. 431, 222 S.E.2d 217 (1976).

Under the capital case exception the first attention of the reviewing court is to consider if the challenged argument was improper and, if so, whether it was improper to the extent that doubt remains as to whether a curative instruction would remove its prejudicial effect. If a convicted defendant was so prejudiced, the failure to object is no bar and his claim may be decided on the merits. If, on the other hand, it can be said that the argument was not prejudicial or that a curative instruction would have removed any prejudice, his failure to object to the argument is treated as a bar to appellate relief. Miller v. North Carolina, 583 F.2d 701 (4th Cir. 1978).

If argument of counsel in a capital case is so grossly improper that removal of its prejudicial effect, after a curative instruction, remains in doubt, the general rule requiring objection before verdict does not apply. Miller v. North Carolina, 583 F.2d 701 (4th Cir. 1978).

Application of the capital case exception entails an inquiry by the reviewing court into the merits of the claim; waiver is not automatic. Miller v. North Carolina, 583 F.2d 701 (4th Cir. 1978).

VII. OPENING AND CLOSING ARGUMENTS.

The right to closing argument is a substantial legal right of which a defendant may not be deprived by the exercise of a judge's discretion. State v. Eury, 317 N.C. 511, 346 S.E.2d 447 (1986).

If, in a non-capital case, defendant elects to present evidence, he is entitled to open the argument to the jury before the prosecution argues, and two of his counsel may address the jury within the time limits prescribed by this section. State v. Eury, 317 N.C. 511, 346 S.E.2d 447 (1986).

If defendant in a non-capital case does not present evidence, he is entitled to both open and close the argument to the jury. In such case he may have one lawyer make the opening argument and one the closing, or he may waive one argument and have both lawyers address the jury during the remaining argument. State v. Eury, 317 N.C. 511, 346 S.E.2d 447 (1986).

Where defendant by stipulation waived her opening argument, the failure of the trial judge to allow both of defendant's counsel to make the closing argument was prejudicial error in the non-capital as well as the capital charges against her. State v. Eury, 317 N.C. 511, 346 S.E.2d 447 (1986).

ARTICLE 12.

Clerk of Superior Court.

§ 7A-100. Election; term of office; oath; vacancy; office and office hours; appointment of acting clerk.

(a) A clerk of the superior court for each county shall be elected by the qualified voters thereof, to hold office for a term of four years, in the manner prescribed by Chapter 163 of the General Statutes. The clerk, before entering on the duties of his office, shall take the oath of office prescribed by law. If the office of clerk of superior court becomes vacant otherwise than by the expiration of the term, or if the people fail to elect a clerk, the senior regular resident superior court judge for the county shall fill the vacancy by appointment until an election can be regularly held. In cases of death or resignation of the clerk, the senior regular resident superior court judge, pending appointment of a successor clerk, may appoint an acting clerk of superior court for a period of not longer than 30 days.

(b) The county commissioners shall provide an office for the clerk in the courthouse or other suitable place in the county seat. The clerk shall observe such office hours and holidays as may be directed by the Administrative Officer of the Courts. (Const., art. 4, ss. 16, 17, 29; C.C.P., ss. 139-141; 1871-72, c. 136; Code, ss. 74, 76, 78, 80, 114, 115; 1903, c. 467; Rev., ss. 890-893, 895, 909, 910; C.S., ss. 926, 930, 931, 945, 946; 1935, c. 348; 1939, c. 82; 1941, c. 329; 1949, c. 122, ss. 1, 2; 1971, c. 363, s. 1; 1973, c. 240.)

Editor's Note. — The cases cited in the following annotation were decided under former statutory provisions.

Commissioners' Duty. — A failure on the part of the clerk to give bond must be ascertained by the commissioners before the judge is authorized to declare a vacancy. And in accepting or rejecting the bond tendered, the court cannot interfere in the exercise of their discretion. Buckman v. Commissioners of Beaufort, 80 N.C. 121 (1879).

Conflicting Claimants for Vacant Office. — Where there are conflicting claimants for a vacant office, a court must act upon the prima facie evidence of right and admit the one possessing it, leaving the other to pursue the proper legal remedy for the recovery of possession. Clark v. Carpenter, 81 N.C. 309 (1879).

Term of Appointee. — When there is a vacancy and the judge appoints one to fill that vacancy, such appointee holds office only until the next election at which members of the General Assembly are chosen. Rodwell v. Rowland, 137 N.C. 617, 50 S.E. 319 (1905).

(a) The clerk of superior court is a full-time employee of the State and shall receive an annual salary, payable in equal monthly installments, based on the population of the county as determined in subsection (a1) of this section, according to the following schedule:

Population	Annual Salary
Less than 100,000	$ 80,196
100,000 to 149,999	89,993
250,000 and above	109,593.

When a county changes from one population group to another, the salary of the clerk shall be changed, on July 1 of the fiscal year for which the change is reported, to the salary appropriate for the new population group, except that the salary of an incumbent clerk shall not be decreased by any change in population group during his continuance in office.

(a1) For purposes of subsection (a) of this section, the population of a county for any fiscal year shall be the population for the beginning of that fiscal year as reported by the Office of State Budget and Management to the Administrative Office of the Courts prior to the beginning of that fiscal year.

(b) The clerk shall receive no fees or commission by virtue of his office. The salary set forth in this section is the clerk's sole official compensation, but if, on June 30, 1975, the salary of a particular clerk, by reason of previous but no longer authorized merit increments, is higher than that set forth in the table, that higher salary shall not be reduced during his continuance in office.

(c) In lieu of merit and other increment raises paid to regular State employees, a clerk of superior court shall receive as longevity pay an amount equal to four and eight-tenths percent (4.8%) of the clerk's annual salary payable monthly after five years of service, nine and six-tenths percent (9.6%) after 10 years of service, fourteen and four-tenths percent (14.4%) after 15 years of service, nineteen and two-tenths percent (19.2%) after 20 years of service, and twenty-four percent (24%) after 25 years of service. Service shall mean service in the elective position of clerk of superior court, as an assistant clerk of court and as a supervisor of clerks of superior court with the Administrative Office of the Courts and shall not include service as a deputy or acting clerk. Service shall also mean service as a justice, judge, or magistrate of the General Court of Justice or as a district attorney. Session Laws 2007-323, ss. 28.5 and 28.18A(e), effective July 1, 2007, in subsection (a), increased the annual salaries of the clerks and deleted the former second paragraph which described the percentage of the clerk salaries to the salary of a chief district court judge; in the first sentence of subsection (c), deleted "and" preceding "nineteen" and added "and twenty-four percent (24%) after 25 years of service" at the end.

§ 7A-102. Assistant and deputy clerks; appointment; number; salaries; duties.

(a) The numbers and salaries of assistant clerks, deputy clerks, and other employees in the office of each clerk of superior court shall be determined by the Administrative Officer of the Courts after consultation with the clerk concerned. All personnel in the clerk's office are employees of the State. The clerk appoints the assistants, deputies, and other employees in the clerk's office to serve at his or her pleasure. Assistant and deputy clerks shall take the oath of office prescribed for clerks of superior court, conformed to the office of assistant or deputy clerk, as the case may be. Except as provided by subsection (c2) of this section, the job classifications and related salaries of each employee within the office of each superior court clerk shall be subject to the approval of the Administrative Officer of the Courts after consultation with each clerk concerned and shall be subject to the availability of funds appropriated for that purpose by the General Assembly.

(b) An assistant clerk is authorized to perform all the duties and functions of the office of clerk of superior court, and any act of an assistant clerk is entitled to the same faith and credit as that of the clerk. A deputy clerk is authorized to certify the existence and correctness of any record in the clerk's office, to take the proofs and examinations of the witnesses touching the execution of a will as required by G.S. 31-17, and to perform any other ministerial act which the clerk may be authorized and empowered to do, in his own name and without reciting the name of his principal. The clerk is responsible for the acts of his assistants and deputies. With the consent of the clerk of superior court of each county and the consent of the presiding judge in any proceeding, an assistant or deputy clerk is authorized to perform all the duties and functions of the office of the clerk of superior court in another county in any proceeding in the district or superior court that has been transferred to that county from the county in which the assistant or deputy clerk is employed.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a), the Administrative Officer of the Courts shall establish an incremental salary plan for assistant clerks and for deputy clerks based on a series of salary steps corresponding to the steps contained in the Salary Plan for State Employees adopted by the Office of State Personnel, subject to a minimum and a maximum annual salary as set forth below. On and after July 1, 1985, each assistant clerk and each deputy clerk shall be eligible for an annual step increase in his salary plan based on satisfactory job performance as determined by each clerk. Notwithstanding the foregoing, if an assistant or deputy clerk's years of service in the office of superior court clerk would warrant an annual salary greater than the salary first established under this section, that assistant or deputy clerk shall be eligible on and after July 1, 1984, for an annual step increase in his salary plan. Furthermore, on and after July 1, 1985, that assistant or deputy clerk shall be eligible for an increase of two steps in his salary plan, and shall remain eligible for a two-step increase each year as recommended by each clerk until that assistant or deputy clerk's annual salary corresponds to his number of years of service. Any person covered by this subsection who would not receive a step increase in fiscal year 1995-96 because that person is at the top of the salary range as it existed for fiscal year 1994-95 shall receive a salary increase to the maximum annual salary provided by subsection (c1) of this section.

(c1) A full-time assistant clerk or a full-time deputy clerk, and up to one full-time deputy clerk serving as head bookkeeper per county, shall be paid an annual salary subject to the following minimum and maximum rates:

Assistant Clerks and Head Bookkeeper	Annual Salary
Minimum	$31,122
Maximum	53,301
Deputy Clerks	Annual Salary
Minimum	$26,788
Maximum	41,456.

(c2) The clerk of superior court may appoint assistant clerks, deputy clerks, and a head bookkeeper and set their salaries above the minimum rate established for the positions by subsection (c1) of this section if, in the clerk's discretion, (i) the needs of the clerk's office would be best served by an appointment above the minimum rate, (ii) the appointee's skills and experience support the higher rate, and (iii) the Administrative Office of the Courts certifies that there are sufficient funds available.

(d) Full-time assistant clerks, licensed to practice law in North Carolina, who are employed in the office of superior court clerk on and after July 1, 1984, and full-time assistant clerks possessing a masters degree in business administration, public administration, accounting, or other similar discipline from an accredited college or university who are employed in the office of superior court clerk on and after July 1, 1997, are authorized an annual salary of not less than three-fourths of the maximum annual salary established for assistant clerks; the clerk of superior court, with the approval of the Administrative Office of the Courts, may establish a higher annual salary but that salary shall not be higher than the maximum annual salary established for assistant clerks. Full-time assistant clerks, holding a law degree from an accredited law school, who are employed in the office of superior court clerk on and after July 1, 1984, are authorized an annual salary of not less than two-thirds of the maximum annual salary established for assistant clerks; the clerk of superior court, with the approval of the Administrative Office of the Courts, may establish a higher annual salary, but the entry-level salary may not be more than three-fourths of the maximum annual salary established for assistant clerks, and in no event may be higher than the maximum annual salary established for assistant clerks. Except as provided by subsection (c2) of this section, the entry-level annual salary for all other assistant and deputy clerks employed on and after July 1, 1984, shall be at the minimum rates as herein established.

(e) A clerk of superior court may apply to the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts to enter into contracts with local governments for the provision by the State of services of assistant clerks, deputy clerks, and other employees in the office of each clerk of superior court pursuant to G.S. 153A-212.1 or G.S. 160A-289.1.

(f) The Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts may provide assistance requested pursuant to subsection (e) of this section only upon a showing by the senior resident superior court judge, supported by facts, that the overwhelming public interest warrants the use of additional resources for the speedy disposition of cases involving drug offenses, domestic violence, or other offenses involving a threat to public safety.

(g) The terms of any contract entered into with local governments pursuant to subsection (e) of this section shall be fixed by the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts in each case. Nothing in this section shall be construed to obligate the General Assembly to make any appropriation to implement the provisions of this section or to obligate the Administrative Office of the Courts to provide the administrative costs of establishing or maintaining the positions or services provided for under this section. Further, nothing in this section shall be construed to obligate the Administrative Office of the Courts to maintain positions or services initially provided for under this section. CASE NOTES

Legislature May Take Away or Modify Powers of Clerks. — The powers and duties of clerks enumerated in this section are given and fixed by legislative enactment, and there is no constitutional barrier to the legislature's taking away, adding to, or modifying them, or authorizing them to be exercised and performed by another. In re Barker, 210 N.C. 617, 188 S.E. 205 (1936).

The clerk of the superior court is a court of very limited jurisdiction. Russ v. Woodard, 232 N.C. 36, 59 S.E.2d 351 (1950).

Such court has only such jurisdiction as is given by statute. It has no common-law or equitable jurisdiction. McCauley v. McCauley, 122 N.C. 288, 30 S.E. 344 (1898).

Powers of Clerk Within His Jurisdiction. — Within his jurisdiction the clerk of the superior court has the same power as courts of general jurisdiction to open, vacate, modify, set aside or enter as of a former time, decrees or orders of his court, and to fix time for hearings. Russ v. Woodard, 232 N.C. 36, 59 S.E.2d 351 (1950).

The clerk has the jurisdiction to correct a mistake in a partition proceeding. Wahab v. Smith, 82 N.C. 229 (1880); Little v. Duncan, 149 N.C. 84, 62 S.E. 770 (1908).

Power to Set Aside Sale. — In a proceeding to subject real estate to sale for assets, after a report of the sale is returned and confirmed, the clerk has the right to set aside the sale and order a resale by showing proper cause. Lovinier v. Pearce, 70 N.C. 167 (1874).

Correction of Omissions. — The power of a court upon a proper showing to correct its records and supply an inadvertent omission cannot be doubted. Philbrick v. Young, 255 N.C. 737, 122 S.E.2d 725 (1961).

Clerk May Correct Orders Entered Erroneously. — The broad grant of power to the clerk in this section includes the power to correct orders entered erroneously, whenever the clerk's attention is directed to the error by motion or by other means. In re Estate of English, 83 N.C. App. 359, 350 S.E.2d 379 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 403, 354 S.E.2d 711 (1987).

The clerk of the superior court is authorized to correct, nunc pro tunc, orders entered on erroneous misapprehension of the facts. In re Watson, 70 N.C. App. 120, 318 S.E.2d 544 (1984), cert. denied, 313 N.C. 330, 327 S.E.2d 900 (1985).

Removal of Administrators. — The clerk has the power, for good and sufficient cause, to remove an administrator, or for like cause, as necessarily equivalent, to permit him to resign his trust. Murrill v. Sandlin, 86 N.C. 54 (1882); Tulburt v. Hollar, 102 N.C. 406, 9 S.E. 430 (1889).

Appointment and Replacement of Trustees. — Action filed by a trust beneficiary and a settlor's siblings, pursuant to G.S. 36A-125.4, seeking an order modifying a trust, was really an action seeking replacement of the trustee for exercising discretion in managing the trust and the trial court's judgment dismissing the action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction was upheld. In re Testamentary Trust of Charnock, 158 N.C. App. 35, 579 S.E.2d 887, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 938 (2003), aff'd, 358 N.C. 523, 597 S.E.2d 706 (2004).

Appointment of Guardian Ad Litem. — Where the clerk, upon his own motion, sought to have the administratrix of the estate removed, and the minor heirs clearly had a vested interest and the right of appeal from the clerk's determination, the clerk took the appropriate and proper step of appointing a guardian ad litem to protect their interests and the clerk could compel the payment of the necessary expenses from the estate to which the heirs would potentially benefit, including the costs of the guardian ad litem's attorneys' fees, to the estate. In re Estate of Sturman, 93 N.C. App. 473, 378 S.E.2d 204 (1989).

Examination of Accounts. — The jurisdiction for auditing accounts of executors, administrators, etc., conferred upon the clerk is an ex parte jurisdiction of examining the accounts and vouchers of such persons, allowing them commissions, etc., as formerly practiced, and does not conclude legatees, etc., or affect suits inter partes upon the same matters. Heilig v. Foard, 64 N.C. 710 (1870).

Clerk Had Jurisdiction to Deny Accounting. — The clerk had jurisdiction to grant or deny plaintiffs' Motion to Compel an Accounting, because this section grants the clerk of superior court jurisdiction to audit the accounts of fiduciaries, as required by law, and by implication, to deny a request to audit such accounts as well. Wilson v. Watson, 136 N.C. App. 500, 524 S.E.2d 812, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 51 (2000).

Probate of Wills. — This section confers upon the clerk of the superior court exclusive and original jurisdiction of proceedings for the probate of wills. Brissie v. Craig, 232 N.C. 701, 62 S.E.2d 330 (1950); Morris v. Morris, 245 N.C. 30, 95 S.E.2d 110 (1956).

The clerk had authority to rehear a petition to reopen an estate and to reverse her prior order that the estate be reopened. In re Estate of English, 83 N.C. App. 359, 350 S.E.2d 379 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 403, 354 S.E.2d 711 (1987).

Acts of Heirs Would Not Affect Clerk's Determination. — The clerk of court was not bound, in making a discretionary determination of whether "proper cause" existed for reopening an estate, by any estoppel theory based upon acts of the heirs. In re Estate of English, 83 N.C. App. 359, 350 S.E.2d 379 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 403, 354 S.E.2d 711 (1987).

Refusal to Reopen Estate Upheld. — In light of the public policy in favor of the expedited administration of estates, as evidenced by the six-month statute of limitations and other provisions of Chapter 28A, petitioner, who alleged that the deceased had promised to devise a life estate to her, had a heavy burden of justifying her failure to bring her suit within the six-month period provided for that purpose, or at the very least, within the greater than two-year period that the estate actually remained open. There was no error in the clerk's determination that this burden was not met. In re Estate of English, 83 N.C. App. 359, 350 S.E.2d 379 (1986), cert. denied, 319 N.C. 403, 354 S.E.2d 711 (1987).

The purpose of the subpoena duces tecum is to require the production of specific items patently material to the inquiry. Therefore, it must specify with as much precision as fair and feasible the particular items desired. State v. Newell, 82 N.C. App. 707, 348 S.E.2d 158 (1986).

Issuance of Subpoena Duces Tecum. — It is the long-established practice of clerks of court to issue subpoenas duces tecum as a matter of course upon the oral request of counsel. The issuance of the subpoena is treated merely as a ministerial act which initiates proceedings to have the documents or other items described in the subpoena brought before the court. At the trial, the court will pass upon the competency of the evidence unless the subpoena has been quashed prior thereto. Vaughan v. Broadfoot, 267 N.C. 691, 149 S.E.2d 37 (1966).

Customary Use of Subpoena Duces Tecum. — Attorneys have customarily used the subpoena duces tecum only for the purpose for which it was intended, i.e., to require the production of a specific document or items patently material to the inquiry, or as a notice to produce the original of a document. Vaughan v. Broadfoot, 267 N.C. 691, 149 S.E.2d 37 (1966).

Discovery is not a proper purpose for a subpoena duces tecum. State v. Newell, 82 N.C. App. 707, 348 S.E.2d 158 (1986).

What Documents Are Subject to Subpoena Duces Tecum. — Documents not subject to the criminal discovery statute, G.S. 15A-903, may still be subject to a subpoena duces tecum. State v. Newell, 82 N.C. App. 707, 348 S.E.2d 158 (1986).

A motion to quash a subpoena duces tecum is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, and is not subject to review absent a showing of abuse of discretion. State v. Newell, 82 N.C. App. 707, 348 S.E.2d 158 (1986).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in quashing subpoena duces tecum which called for all files and records of children's home relating to the victim and another witness in a prosecution for taking indecent liberties with a child. State v. Newell, 82 N.C. App. 707, 348 S.E.2d 158 (1986).

A reasonable fee for legal advice and assistance in the management of a trust estate is allowable as a necessary expense of the trust estate. Tripp v. Tripp, 17 N.C. App. 64, 193 S.E.2d 366 (1972).

Partial Payment Allocated to Principal First. — When payment is made on a debt which has accumulated interest but the payment is not high enough to satisfy the principal and interest, in order to encourage debtors to pay the entire amount due and in the interest of fairness, when payments are made on a judgment debt, the clerk should first allocate the payment to the interest due, and the remainder of the payment should be allocated to the principal. Morley v. Morley, 102 N.C. App. 713, 403 S.E.2d 574 (1991).

Appeals. — In appeals from the clerk, in that class of cases of which he has jurisdiction in his capacity as clerk, as given under this section, it is not necessary that he should prepare and transmit to the judge any statement of the case on appeal. Ex parte Spencer, 95 N.C. 271 (1886).

Applied in Braddy v. Pfaff, 210 N.C. 248, 186 S.E. 340 (1936); In re Will of Wood, 240 N.C. 134, 81 S.E.2d 127 (1954); Potts v. Howser, 267 N.C. 484, 148 S.E.2d 836 (1966); Little v. Bennington, 109 N.C. App. 482, 427 S.E.2d 887 (1993).

§ 7A-104. Disqualification; waiver; removal; when judge acts.

(a) The clerk shall not exercise any judicial powers in relation to any estate, proceeding, or civil action:

(1) If he has, or claims to have, an interest by distribution, by will, or as creditor or otherwise;

(2) If he is so related to any person having or claiming such an interest that he would, by reason of such relationship, be disqualified as a juror, but the disqualification on this ground ceases unless the objection is made at the first hearing of the matter before him;

(3) If clerk or the clerk's spouse is a party or a subscribing witness to any deed of conveyance, testamentary paper or nuncupative will, but this disqualification ceases when such deed, testamentary paper, or will has been finally admitted to probate by another clerk, or before the judge of the superior court;

(4) If clerk or the clerk's spouse is named as executor or trustee in any testamentary or other paper, but this disqualification ceases when the will or other paper is finally admitted to probate by another clerk, or before the judge of the superior court. The clerk may renounce the executorship and endorse the renunciation on the will or on some paper attached thereto, before it is propounded for probate, in which case the renunciation must be recorded with the will if it is admitted to probate.

(a1) The clerk may disqualify himself in a proceeding in circumstances justifying disqualification or recusement by a judge.

(a2) The parties may waive the disqualification specified in this section, and upon the filing of such written waiver, the clerk shall act as in other cases.

(b) When any of the disqualifications specified in this section exist, and there is no waiver thereof, or when there is no renunciation under subdivision (a)(4) of this section, any party in interest may apply to a superior court judge who has jurisdiction pursuant to G.S. 7A-47.1 or G.S. 7A-48 in that county, for an order to remove the proceedings to the clerk of superior court of an adjoining county in the district or set of districts; or he may apply to the judge to make either in vacation or during a session of court all necessary orders and judgments in any proceeding in which the clerk is disqualified, and the judge in such cases is hereby authorized to make any and all necessary orders and judgments as if he had the same original jurisdiction as the clerk over such proceedings.

(c) In any case in which the clerk of the superior court is executor, administrator, collector, or guardian of an estate at the time of his election or appointment to office, in order to enable him to settle such estate, a superior court judge who has jurisdiction pursuant to G.S. 7A-47.1 or G.S. 7A-48 in that county may make such orders as may be necessary in the settlement of the estate; and he may audit the accounts or appoint a commissioner to audit the accounts of such executor or administrator, and report to him for his approval, and when the accounts are so approved, the judge shall order the proper records to be made by the clerk. (C.C.P., ss. 419-421; 1871-72, cc. 196, 197; Code, ss. 104-107; Rev., ss. 902-905; 1913, c. 70, s. 1; C.S., ss. 939-942; 1935, c. 110, s. 1; 1971, c. 363, s. 4; 1977, c. 546; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 15; 1989, c. 493, s. 1.)

The proper practice, in a proceeding against an administrator who at the time was elected clerk, seems to be to make the summons returnable before him, and then transfer the whole proceeding before the district judge, who will make the necessary orders in the premises. Wilson v. Abrams, 70 N.C. 324 (1874).

Disqualification of Interested Clerk. — The clerk is disqualified, both by common-law rules and by this section, to act in any cause wherein he is interested. Gregory v. Ellis, 82 N.C. 225 (1880); White v. Connelly, 105 N.C. 65, 11 S.E. 177 (1890); Scranton & N.C. Land & Lumber Co. v. Jennett, 128 N.C. 3, 37 S.E. 954 (1901).

And where he is personally interested in the commissions to be allowed the executors, the clerk is excluded from jurisdiction. Barlow v. Norfleet, 72 N.C. 535 (1875).

The probate of a deed by a clerk interested therein is a nullity. Scranton & N.C. Land & Lumber Co. v. Jennett, 128 N.C. 3, 37 S.E. 954 (1901).

And when the probate of a deed is a nullity because the clerk was disqualified to act the defect is not cured by the approval of the final decree, under which it is made, by the judge of the superior court. Scranton & N.C. Land & Lumber Co. v. Jennett, 128 N.C. 3, 37 S.E. 954 (1901).

The act of "admitting to probate" is a judicial act, and a clerk is prohibited from acting on a deed or deed of trust in which he is grantor or grantee. White v. Connelly, 105 N.C. 65, 11 S.E. 177 (1890); Freeman v. Person, 106 N.C. 251, 10 S.E. 1037 (1890); Piland v. Taylor, 113 N.C. 1, 18 S.E. 70 (1893); Norman v. Ausbon, 193 N.C. 791, 138 S.E. 162 (1927).

Performance of Ministerial Acts. — The issuing of a warrant in attachment, or an order for seizure of property in claim and delivery, are ministerial acts, and can be performed by a deputy, or even by the clerk, in a case to which he is a party. Evans v. Etheridge, 96 N.C. 42, 1 S.E. 633 (1887); White v. Connelly, 105 N.C. 65, 11 S.E. 177 (1890).

Issuance of Process. — It has been the practice in this State for clerks to issue process either for or against themselves. Evans v. Etheridge, 96 N.C. 42, 1 S.E. 633 (1887).

A clerk cannot take proof of a deed of which he is the subscribing witness, because he cannot administer an oath to himself. Trenwith v. Smallwood, 111 N.C. 132, 15 S.E. 1030 (1892).

Relationship of Clerk to Party. — A clerk is prohibited from acting as such in relation to any estate or proceeding if he is so related to any person having, or claiming to have, such interest that he would by reason of such relationship be disqualified as a juror. Scranton & N.C. Land & Lumber Co. v. Jennett, 128 N.C. 3, 37 S.E. 954 (1901).

But probate and private examination taken before an officer are not invalid simply because the clerk is related to the parties. McAllister v. Purcell, 124 N.C. 262, 32 S.E. 715 (1899).

Trial Court's Removal of Trustee Proper. — Where beneficiaries' filings only requested an order removing the trustee of trusts, the trial court did not err by exercising jurisdiction or entering orders regarding the trustee's removal after the clerk recused himself from the case; the trial court provided the parties with due process, and its conclusions removing the trustee were supported by its findings of fact. In re Estate of Newton, 173 N.C. App. 530, 619 S.E.2d 571, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2120 (2005), cert. denied, — N.C. —, 625 S.E.2d 786 (2005).

Written Waiver of Clerk's Disqualification. — The waiver must be in writing and made when the opposing parties are present and capable of objecting. White v. Connelly, 105 N.C. 65, 11 S.E. 177 (1890).

§ 7A-105. Suspension, removal, and reinstatement of clerk.

A clerk of superior court may be suspended or removed from office for willful misconduct or mental or physical incapacity, and reinstated, under the same procedures as are applicable to a superior court district attorney, except that the procedure shall be initiated by the filing of a sworn affidavit with the chief district judge of the district in which the clerk resides, and the hearing shall be conducted by the senior regular resident superior court judge serving the county of the clerk's residence. If suspension is ordered, the judge shall appoint some qualified person to act as clerk during the period of the suspension. (1967, c. 691, s. 6; 1971, c. 363, s. 10; 1973, c. 47, s. 2; c. 148, s. 2.)

Editor's Note. — The above section was formerly numbered G.S. 7A-104. It was renumbered G.S. 7A-105 by Session Laws 1971, c. 363, s. 10. Former G.S. 7A-105 was renumbered G.S. 7A-107 by the same 1971 act.

(a) It is the duty of the clerk of superior court, upon going out of office for any reason, to deliver to his successor, or such person as the senior regular resident superior court judge may designate, all records, books, papers, moneys, and property belonging to his office, and obtain receipts therefor.

(b) Any clerk going out of office or such other person having custody of the records, books, papers, moneys, and property of the office who fails to transfer and deliver them as directed shall forfeit and pay the State one thousand dollars ($1,000), which shall be sued for by the district attorney. (R.C., c. 19, s. 14; C.C.P., s. 142; Code, ss. 81, 124; Rev., ss. 906, 907; C.S., s. 943; 1971, c. 363, s. 5; 1973, c. 47, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

Necessity of Order and Demand on Predecessor. — A person duly elected clerk of the superior court by the people needs no order from any person or authority to demand from his predecessor the property of all kinds belonging to the office, nor is it necessary for a retiring superior court clerk to be ordered to pay over to his successor, whether elected or appointed, the funds, etc., of the officer. But where the judge places some person temporarily in charge of the office until the regular appointment is made, it is then necessary for the new clerk to have an order from the judge directing the person temporarily in charge to deliver the possession of his office to such clerk. Peebles v. Boone, 116 N.C. 57, 21 S.E. 187 (1895).

Ground for Right of Action. — The right of clerk of a superior court to bring an action against his predecessor on the latter's official bond to recover the records, money, etc., in his hands does not rest on any injury done to the plaintiff, but on the ground that the law requires that each successive clerk shall receive from his predecessor all the records, money and property of his office. Peebles v. Boone, 116 N.C. 57, 21 S.E. 187 (1895).

Two Distinct Remedies Provided. — Our statutes provide two separate and distinct remedies — one in behalf of the injured individual for a specific fund to which he is entitled or on account of a particular wrong committed against him by the clerk, as provided for in G.S. 58-76-5, and one in behalf of the clerk against his predecessor in office to recover possession of records, books, papers, and money in the hands of the outgoing clerk by virtue or under color of his office, as provided for in this section. State ex rel. Underwood v. Watson, 223 N.C. 437, 27 S.E.2d 144 (1943); State ex rel. Underwood v. Watson, 224 N.C. 502, 31 S.E.2d 465 (1944).

Successor's Remedy. — When an outgoing clerk fails to deliver the property of his office, as herein provided, the successor's remedy is by attachment and suit for the penalty. O'Leary v. Harrison, 51 N.C. 338 (1859).

Affirmative Allegations Improperly Stricken. — In an action by the clerk of the superior court against his predecessor in office for possession of records, books and funds under this section, where defendant denied the allegations of the complaint that plaintiff was duly appointed clerk to fill a vacancy caused by the removal of defendant and qualified as such, and also made further affirmative allegations to like effect, there was error in allowing a motion to strike such affirmative allegations. State ex rel. Underwood v. Watson, 223 N.C. 437, 27 S.E.2d 144 (1943).

When Liability Ceases. — When a former clerk delivers to his successors all the proceeds, etc., of his office, his official duties, powers, and liabilities cease. Gregory v. Morisey, 79 N.C. 559 (1878).

§ 7A-107. Bonds of clerks, assistant and deputy clerks, and employees of office.

The Administrative Officer of the Courts shall require, or purchase, in such amounts as he deems proper, individual or blanket bonds for any and all clerks of superior court, assistant clerks, deputy clerks, and other persons employed in the offices of the various clerks of superior court, or one blanket bond covering all such clerks and other persons, such bond or bonds to be conditioned upon faithful performance of duty, and made payable to the State. The premiums shall be paid by the State. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 7; 1971, c. 363, ss. 10, 11.1; c. 518, s. 2.)

§ 7A-108. Accounting for fees and other receipts; annual audit.

The Administrative Office of the Courts, subject to the approval of the State Auditor, shall establish procedures for the receipt, deposit, protection, investment, and disbursement of all funds coming into the hands of the clerk of superior court. The fees to be remitted to counties and municipalities shall be paid to them monthly by the clerk of superior court.

The operations of the Administrative Office of the Courts and the Clerks of Superior Court shall be subject to the oversight of the State Auditor pursuant to Article 5A of Chapter 147 of the General Statutes. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 9; 1971, c. 363, s. 10; 1983, c. 913, s. 5.)

(a) Each clerk shall maintain such records, files, dockets and indexes as are prescribed by rules of the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts. Except as prohibited by law, these records shall be open to the inspection of the public during regular office hours, and shall include civil actions, special proceedings, estates, criminal actions, juvenile actions, minutes of the court, judgments, liens, lis pendens, and all other records required by law to be maintained. The rules prescribed by the Director shall be designed to accomplish the following purposes:

(1) To provide an accurate record of every determinative legal action, proceeding, or event which may affect the person or property of any individual, firm, corporation, or association;

(2) To provide a record during the pendency of a case that allows for the efficient handling of the matter by the court from its initiation to conclusion and also affords information as to the progress of the case;

(3) To provide security against the loss or destruction of original documents during their useful life and a permanent record for historical uses;

(4) To provide a system of indexing that will afford adequate access to all records maintained by the clerk;

(5) To provide, to the extent possible, for the maintenance of records affecting the same action or proceeding in one rather than several units; and

(6) To provide a reservoir of information useful to those interested in measuring the effectiveness of the laws and the efficiency of the courts in administering them.

(b) The rules shall provide for indexing according to the minimum criteria set out below:

(1) Civil actions. — the names of all parties;

(2) Special proceedings. — the names of all parties;

(3) Administration of estates. — the name of the estate and in the case of testacy the name of each devisee;

(4) Criminal actions. — the names of all defendants;

(5) Juvenile actions. — the names of all juveniles;

(6) Judgments, liens, lis pendens, etc. — the names of all parties against whom a lien has been created by the docketing of a judgment, notice of lien, transcript, certificate, or similar document and the names of all parties in those cases in which a notice of lis pendens has been filed with the clerk and abstracted on the judgment docket.

(c) The rules shall require that all documents received for docketing shall be immediately indexed either on a permanent or temporary index. The rules may prescribe any technological process deemed appropriate for the economical and efficient indexing, storage and retrieval of information.

(d) In order to facilitate public access to court records, except where public access is prohibited by law, the Director may enter into one or more nonexclusive contracts under reasonable cost recovery terms with third parties to provide remote electronic access to the records by the public. Costs recovered pursuant to this subsection shall be remitted to the State Treasurer to be held in the Court Information Technology Fund established in G.S. 7A-343.2.

(e) If any contracts entered into under G.S. 7A-109(d) [subsection (d) of this section] are in effect during any calendar year, the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts shall submit to the Joint Legislative Commission on Governmental Operations not later than February 1 of the following year a report on all those contracts. (Code, ss. 83, 95, 96, 97, 112, 1789; 1887, c. 178, s. 2; 1889, c. 181, s. 4; 1893, c. 52; 1899, c. 1, s. 17; cc. 82, 110; 1901, c. 2, s. 9; c. 89, s. 13; c. 550, s. 3; 1903, c. 51; c. 359, s. 6; 1905, c. 360, s. 2; Rev., s. 915; 1919, c. 78, s. 7; c. 152; c. 197, s. 4; c. 314; C.S., s. 952; 1937, c. 93; 1953, c. 259; c. 973, s. 3; 1959, c. 1073, s. 3; c. 1163, s. 3; 1961, c. 341, ss. 3, 4; c. 960; 1965, c. 489; 1967, c. 691, s. 39; c. 823, s. 2; 1971, c. 192; c. 363, s. 6; 1997-199, ss. 1, 2; 1999-237, s. 17.15(c).)

Editor's Note. — Most of the cases cited in the following annotation were decided under former statutory provisions.*

Section Held Inapplicable to Prevent Introduction of Parole Evidence. — In an action to remove the executor of an estate, this section would not apply to prevent defendant from introducing parole evidence to prove that the court clerk gave oral approval of executor's actions and authorized commissions to be paid executor. Matthews v. Watkins, 91 N.C. App. 640, 373 S.E.2d 133 (1988), aff'd, 324 N.C. 541, 379 S.E.2d 857 (1989).

Purpose of Recordkeeping. — The clerk's proceedings are summary in their nature, and should always be put in such shape as to present all that he does in the course of a proceeding, including his orders and judgments, intelligently, and so that the same may be distinctly seen and understood. To this end, the clerk is required to keep certain permanent records of proceedings before him. Edwards v. Cobb, 95 N.C. 4 (1886).

Judgment Docket Serves as Notice. — The law prescribes what shall be recorded on the judgment docket, and everybody has notice that he may find there whatever ought to be there recorded, if indeed it exists. He is not required to look elsewhere for such matters. But he is required and bound to take notice in proper connections of what is there. The law charges him with such notice. Holman v. Miller, 103 N.C. 118, 9 S.E. 429 (1889); Dewey v. Sugg, 109 N.C. 328, 13 S.E. 923 (1891).

Documents filed as exhibits attached to plaintiff's complaint entered the public domain for purposes of the Public Records Act, G.S. 132-1, and public's right to inspect court records under this section, and became "public records" once the complaint was filed with the clerk of the court, although these exhibits would otherwise have been shielded by G.S.131E-95(b) of the Hospital Licensure Act. Virmani v. Presbyterian Health Servs. Corp., 350 N.C. 449, 515 S.E.2d 675, 1999 N.C. App. LEXIS 432 (1999), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1033, 120 S. Ct. 1452, 146 L. Ed. 2d 337 (2000).

Civil Issue Docket. — Not only issues of fact joined upon the pleadings, but also all other matters for hearing before the judge at a regular term of the court are to be put upon the civil issue docket. Brown v. Rhinehart, 112 N.C. 772, 16 S.E. 840 (1893). See Brittain v. Mull, 91 N.C. 498 (1884); Walton v. Pearson, 101 N.C. 428, 7 S.E. 566 (1888).

Minute Docket. — The minute docket is intended to and should contain a record of all the proceedings of the court, and such other entries as the judge may direct to be therein made. Walton v. Pearson, 101 N.C. 428, 7 S.E. 566 (1888); Guilford v. Board of Comm'rs, 120 N.C. 23, 27 S.E. 94 (1897).

When Minute Docket Prevails. — While in the absence of entries on the minute docket those made on the civil issue docket should not be disregarded, yet where there is a conflict between them, nothing else appearing, those on the former must prevail. Walton v. Pearson, 101 N.C. 428, 7 S.E. 566 (1888).

Record of Fiats. — Clerks are required to record in general order books copies of all fiats made by them. Perry v. Bragg, 111 N.C. 159, 16 S.E. 10 (1892).

Record of Appointments. — The record of appointments is admissible as evidence to show a guardian's appointment. Topping v. Windley, 99 N.C. 4, 5 S.E. 14 (1888).

Sufficient Notice of Lien. — A notice of a lien filed on the lien docket should go into details sufficiently so as to give reasonable notice to all persons of the character of the claim and the property upon which the lien is attached. Fulp & Linville v. Kernersville Light & Power Co., 157 N.C. 157, 72 S.E. 867 (1911). See Cook v. Cobb, 101 N.C. 68, 7 S.E. 700 (1888); Cameron v. Consolidated Lumber Co., 118 N.C. 266, 24 S.E. 7 (1896).

Former G.S. 2-42 did not require cross-indexing of liens filed in the clerk's office and was not to be confused with the requirements for registering liens, deeds, etc., in the office of the register of deeds as provided by G.S. 161-22, which does require cross-indexing. Saunders v. Woodhouse, 243 N.C. 608, 91 S.E.2d 701 (1956).

A lien for material and labor was properly filed where the clerk after delivery attached it in its original form to specified page in a book labeled "Lien Docket," where the book without question was the book intended as the lien docket contemplated by former G.S. 2-42, though the book was also used for the filing of liens for old age assistance, since former G.S. 108-30.1 provided that such liens should be filed in the regular lien docket. Saunders v. Woodhouse, 243 N.C. 608, 91 S.E.2d 701 (1956).

The failure of the clerk to comply with the statute by neglecting to record all or a part of the proceeding does not render the proceeding void. Any interested party may, by motion, require the proceeding to be recorded, and when a part of the papers has been lost without being recorded, the proceeding does not, because of that fact, lose its vitality or cease to give the protection which the complete record would afford. State Trust Co. v. Toms, 244 N.C. 645, 94 S.E.2d 806 (1956).

The defendant county clerk was not required to comply with G.S. 1-116, 1-117, and 7A-109(b)(6) where the plaintiff was not entitled to have her notice of lis pendens cross-indexed by him on the public record. George v. Administrative Office of Courts, 142 N.C. App. 479, 542 S.E.2d 699, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 139 (2001).

Treasurer's Report as Evidence. — The record of the county treasurer's report is competent evidence against the sureties upon the official bond of such officer, and is prima facie evidence of the correctness of statements therein made. Davenport v. McKee, 98 N.C. 500, 4 S.E. 545 (1887).

Recording of Verified Report Purports Verity. — Plaintiff, purchaser of the real property at execution sale of a judgment against the devisee, offered in evidence, as proof of payment and that title had vested in the devisee, a special report, duly verified, filed by the executrix, stating that the devisee had paid the estate the amount stipulated by the will. This special, verified report of the executrix was a document authorized and required to be recorded, was relevant to the issue, and was competent in evidence, its recording purporting verity, and objection to its admission on the ground of hearsay in that it contained a declaration of a person not a party to the action was untenable, the recorded, verified report being more than a mere declaration by the executrix. Braddy v. Pfaff, 210 N.C. 248, 186 S.E. 340 (1936).

Session Laws 2006-253, s. 20.1, substituted "the name" for "identity" and failed to delete the preceding "the" in subsection (a). Subsection (a) has been set out at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes.

Session Laws 2006-253, s. 33, provides in part: "Sections 20.1, 20.2, and the requirement that the Administrative Office of the Courts electronically record certain data contained in subsection (c) of G.S. 20-138.4, as amended by Section 19 of this act, become effective after the next rewrite of the superior court clerks system by the Administrative Office of the Courts."

On or before the first of May each year the clerk of superior court shall certify to the Secretary of Revenue the names and addresses of all attorneys-at-law located within the clerk's county who are engaged in the practice of law. (1931, c. 290; 1971, c. 363, s. 7; 1973, c. 476, s. 193.)

Editor's Note. — This section was formerly G.S. 2-45. It was revised and transferred to its present position by Session Laws 1971, c. 363, s. 7.

§ 7A-111. Receipt and disbursement of insurance and other moneys for minors and incapacitated adults.

(a) When a minor under 18 years of age is named beneficiary in a policy or policies of insurance, and the insured dies prior to the majority of such minor, and the proceeds of each individual policy do not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) such proceeds may be paid to and, if paid, shall be received by the public guardian or clerk of the superior court of the county wherein the beneficiary is domiciled. The receipt of the public guardian or clerk shall be a full and complete discharge of the insurer issuing the policy or policies to the extent of the amount paid to such public guardian or clerk.

Any person having in his possession twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) or less for any minor under 18 years of age for whom there is no guardian, may pay such moneys into the office of the public guardian, if any, or the office of the clerk of superior court of the county of the recipient's domicile. The receipt of the public guardian or clerk shall constitute a valid release of the payor's obligation to the extent of the sum delivered to the clerk.

The clerk is authorized under this section to receive, to administer and to disburse the monies held in such sum or sums and at such time or times as in his judgment is in the best interest of the child, except that the clerk must first determine that the parents or other persons responsible for the child's support and maintenance are financially unable to provide the necessities for such child, and also that the child is in need of maintenance and support or other necessities, including, when appropriate, education. The clerk shall require receipts or paid vouchers showing that the monies disbursed under this section were used for the exclusive use and benefit of the child.

(b) When an adult who is mentally incapable on account of sickness, old age, disease or other infirmity to manage his own affairs is named beneficiary in a policy or policies of insurance, and the insured dies during the incapacity of such adult, and the proceeds of each individual policy do not exceed five thousand dollars ($5,000) such proceeds may be paid to and, if paid, shall be received by the public guardian or clerk of the superior court of the county wherein the beneficiary is domiciled. A certificate of mental incapacity, signed by a physician or reputable person who has had an opportunity to observe the mental condition of an adult beneficiary, filed with the clerk, is prima facie evidence of the mental incapacity of such adult, and authorizes the clerk to receive and administer funds under this section. The receipt of the public guardian or clerk shall be a full and complete discharge of the insurer issuing the policy or policies to the extent of the amount paid to such public guardian or clerk.

Any person having in his possession five thousand dollars ($5,000) or less for any incapacitated adult for whom there is no guardian, may pay such monies into the office of the public guardian, if any, or the office of the clerk of superior court of the county of the recipient's domicile. The clerk's receipt shall constitute a valid release of the payor's obligation to the extent of the sum delivered to the clerk.

The clerk is authorized to receive, to administer and, upon a finding of fact that it is in the best interest of the incapacitated adult, to disburse funds directly to a creditor, a relative or to some discreet and solvent neighbor or friend for the purpose of handling the property and affairs of the incapacitated adult. The clerk shall require receipts or paid vouchers showing that the monies disbursed under this section were used for the exclusive use and benefit of the incapacitated adult.

(c) Any monies paid to the clerk of the superior court under subsection (a) of this section shall also include the name, last known address, social security number or taxpayer identification number of the beneficiary or payee, and the name and address of the nearest relative of the beneficiary or payee.

(d) The determination of incapacity authorized in subsection (b) of this section is separate and distinct from the procedure for the determination of incompetency provided in Chapter 35A. (1899, c. 82; Rev., s. 924; 1911, c. 29, s. 1; 1919, c. 91; C.S., s. 962; Ex. (b) When money in a single account in excess of two thousand dollars ($2,000) is received by the clerk by virtue or color of his office and it can reasonably be expected that the money will remain on deposit with the clerk in excess of six months from date of receipt, the money exceeding two thousand dollars ($2,000) shall be invested by the clerk within 60 days of receipt in investments authorized by this section. The first two thousand dollars ($2,000) of these accounts and money in a single account totaling less than two thousand dollars ($2,000), received by the clerk by virtue or color of his office, shall be invested, or administered, or invested and administered, by the clerk in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Administrative Officer of the Courts. Article 13.

Creation and Organization of the District Court Division.

The district court division of the General Court of Justice is hereby created. It consists of various district courts organized in territorial districts. The numbers and boundaries of the districts are as provided by G.S. 7A-133. The district court shall sit in the county seat of each county, and at such additional places in each county as the General Assembly may authorize, except that sessions of court are not required at an additional seat of court unless the chief district judge and the Administrative Officer of the Courts concur in a finding that the facilities are adequate. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1987, c. 509, s. 14; c. 738, s. 124.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2004-186, s. 20.1, provides: "The North Carolina Supreme Court is respectfully requested to adopt rules establishing minimum standards of education and training for district court judges in handling civil and criminal domestic violence cases."

Subsection (a) Set Out Three Times. — The first version of subsection (a) set out above is effective January 1, 2008, but see Editor's note regarding contingency for Districts 11, 12 and 18. The second version of subsection (a) set out above is effective January 1, 2009, until January 15, 2009. The third version of subsection (a) set out above is effective January 15, 2009.

Additional judgeship — Union County. — Section 14.4(a) of Session Laws 2006-66 substituted "4" for "3" as the number of district court judges in District Court District 20B (Union County) in subsection (a) of this section. Section 14.4(a), however, fails to take into account the earlier amendment by Session Laws 2006-276, s. 14.2(f1), as added by Session Laws 2005-345, s. 27(a), which divided District Court District 20B (Union County) into District Court Districts 20B, with one district court judge, and 20C, with two district court judges. At the time Session Laws 2006-66 was enacted, District Court District 20B had only one district court judge, not three, and Union County had two district court districts, not one. The amendment by s. 14.4(a) as it applies to Union County cannot be effectively codified. The Revisor of Statutes has directed that subsection (a) be set out in the form above and that the amendment by s. 14.4 as it applies to Union County be described in this editor's note.

CASE NOTES

Preclearance of Acts Pursuant to Voting Rights Act. — Where superior court judges were elected pursuant to Session Laws 1965, c. 262, Session Laws 1967, c. 997, Session Laws 1977, cc. 1119, 1130 and 1238, and Session Laws 1983, c. 1109, and such legislative acts had not been precleared by the Attorney General as required by section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, 42 U.S.C. § 1973c, the federal district court would enjoin such elections retroactively in those counties subject to section 5 of the Voting Rights Act; the fact that an election law deals with the election of members of the judiciary does not remove it from the ambit of section 5 of the Voting Rights Act. Haith v. Martin, 618 F. Supp. 410 (E.D.N.C. 1985), aff'd, 477 U.S. 901, 106 S. Ct. 3268, 91 L. Ed. 2d 559 (1986).

The Chief Justice may transfer a district judge from one district to another for temporary or specialized duty. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

A vacancy in the office of district judge shall be filled for the unexpired term by appointment of the Governor from nominations submitted by the bar of the judicial district as defined in G.S. 84-19, except that in judicial District 9, when vacancies occur in District Court District 9 or 9B, only those members who reside in the district court district shall participate in the selection of the nominees. If the district court district is comprised of counties in more than one judicial district, the nominees shall be submitted jointly by the bars of those judicial districts, but only those members who reside in the district court district shall participate in the selection of the nominees. If the district court judge was elected as the nominee of a political party, then the district bar shall submit to the Governor the names of three persons who are residents of the district court district who are duly authorized to practice law in the district and who are members of the same political party as the vacating judge; provided that if there are not three persons who are available, the bar shall submit the names of two persons who meet the qualifications of this sentence. If the district court judge was not elected as the nominee of a political party, then the district bar shall submit to the Governor the names of three persons who are residents of the district court district and who are duly authorized to practice law in the district; provided that if there are not three persons who are available, the bar shall submit the names of two persons who meet the qualifications of this sentence. Within 60 days after the district bar submits nominations for a vacancy, the Governor shall appoint to fill the vacancy. If the Governor fails to appoint a district bar nominee within 60 days, then the district bar nominee who received the highest number of votes from the district bar shall fill the vacancy. If the district bar fails to submit nominations within 30 days from the date the vacancy occurs, the Governor may appoint to fill the vacancy without waiting for nominations. Session Laws 1999-237, s. 17.6(b), provides that the provisions of G.S. 7A-142 notwithstanding, the Governor shall appoint additional district court judges for District Court Districts 2, 5, 13, 15A, 18, 19A, 26, 27A, and 30 as authorized by subsection (a) of this section. Those judges' successors shall be elected in the 2002 election for four-year terms commencing on the first Monday in December 2002.

Session Laws 1999-237, s. 30.2, provides: "Except for statutory changes or other provisions that clearly indicate an intention to have effects beyond the 1999-2001 fiscal biennium, the textual provisions of this act apply only to funds appropriated for, and activities occurring during, the 1999-2001 biennium."

CASE NOTES

Constitutionality. — This section, which provides that candidates for a vacancy in the office of a district judge shall be members of the same political party as the vacating judge, does not violate the Constitution of North Carolina. Baker v. Martin, 330 N.C. 331, 410 S.E.2d 887 (1991).

There is no constitutional impediment to the North Carolina General Assembly's decision to fill judicial vacancies only with nominees of the same political affiliation as the vacating judge. Davis v. Martin, 807 F. Supp. 385 (W.D.N.C. 1992).

There is no constitutional impediment to the North Carolina General Assembly's decision to fill judicial vacancies only with nominees of the same political affiliation as the vacating judge. Davis v. Martin, 807 F. Supp. 385 (W.D.N.C. 1992).

Challenge Held Moot. — Complaint filed on August 29, 1986, by individual who wished to be considered in selection process for district court judge, but who was ineligible by virtue of this section, seeking to have the requirement that the persons nominated by the Bar to fill a vacancy for district court judge be members of the same political party as the vacating judge declared unconstitutional only for the purpose of permitting him to be included in the selection process, where the Bar meeting that he sought to participate in had been held on August 25, 1986, was moot when it was filed and would be dismissed. Pearson v. Martin, 319 N.C. 449, 355 S.E.2d 496, cert. denied, 319 N.C. 678, 356 S.E.2d 789 (1987).

Preference Given in Interim Appointment Permitted. — The General Assembly may require that in the interim appointment of a district court judge, preference must be given to a member of the same political party as the vacating judge. Baker v. Martin, 330 N.C. 331, 410 S.E.2d 887 (1991).

(a) Each judge shall receive the annual salary provided in the Current Operations Appropriations Act, and reimbursement on the same basis as State employees generally, for his necessary travel and subsistence expenses.

(b) Notwithstanding merit, longevity and other increment raises paid to regular State employees, a judge of the district court shall receive as longevity pay an annual amount equal to four and eight-tenths percent (4.8%) of the annual salary set forth in the Current Operations Appropriations Act payable monthly after five years of service, nine and six-tenths percent (9.6%) after 10 years of service, fourteen and four-tenths percent (14.4%) after 15 years of service, nineteen and two-tenths percent (19.2%) after 20 years of service, and twenty-four percent (24%) after 25 years of service. "Service" means service as a justice or judge of the General Court of Justice or as a member of the Utilities Commission or as director or assistant director of the Administrative Office of the Courts. Service shall also mean service as a district attorney or as a clerk of superior court. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 10; 1983, c. 761, s. 245; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1034, s. 165; c. 1109, ss. 11, 13.1; 1985, c. 698, s. 10(a); 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1100, s. 15(d); 1989, c. 770, s. 5; 2007-323, s. 28.18A(f).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2007-323, s. 1.2, provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations and Capital Improvements Appropriations Act of 2007'."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 32.5 is a severability clause.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2007-323, s. 28.18A(f), effective July 1, 2007, in the first sentence of subsection (b), deleted "and" preceding "nineteen" and added "and twenty-four percent (24%) after 25 years of service" at the end.

§ 7A-146. Administrative authority and duties of chief district judge.

The chief district judge, subject to the general supervision of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, has administrative supervision and authority over the operation of the district courts and magistrates in his district. These powers and duties include, but are not limited to, the following:

(1) Arranging schedules and assigning district judges for sessions of district courts;

(2) Arranging or supervising the calendaring of noncriminal matters for trial or hearing;

(3) Supervising the clerk of superior court in the discharge of the clerical functions of the district court;

(4) Assigning matters to magistrates, and consistent with the salaries set by the Administrative Officer of the Courts, prescribing times and places at which magistrates shall be available for the performance of their duties; however, the chief district judge may in writing delegate his authority to prescribe times and places at which magistrates in a particular county shall be available for the performance of their duties to another district court judge or the clerk of the superior court, and the person to whom such authority is delegated shall make monthly reports to the chief district judge of the times and places actually served by each magistrate; and

(5) Making arrangements with proper authorities for the drawing of civil court jury panels and determining which sessions of district court shall be jury sessions;

(6) Arranging for the reporting of civil cases by court reporters or other authorized means;

(7) Arranging sessions, to the extent practicable for the trial of specialized cases, including traffic, domestic relations, and other types of cases, and assigning district judges to preside over these sessions so as to permit maximum practicable specialization by individual judges;

(8) Repealed by Session Laws 1991 (Regular Session, 1992), c. 900, s. 118(b), effective July 15, 1992.

(9) Assigning magistrates during an emergency to temporary duty outside the county of their residence but within that district; and, upon the request of a chief district judge of an adjoining district and upon the approval of the Administrative Officer of the Courts, to temporary duty in the district of the requesting chief district judge; and

(10) Designating another district judge of his district as acting chief district judge, to act during the absence or disability of the chief district judge. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1971, c. 377, s. 8; 1977, c. 945, s. 1; 1983, c. 586, s. 1; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1034, s. 85; 1985, c. 425, s. 2; c. 764, s. 8; 1985 (Reg. CASE NOTES

Purpose of Section. — Legislative anticipation of the procedural quagmires and "judge shopping" that could result from multi-judge districts was a factor prompting the enactment of this section. Johnson v. Johnson, 7 N.C. App. 310, 172 S.E.2d 264 (1970).

Authority of Judge Other Than Chief District Judge to Hear Motions and Enter Interlocutory Orders. — Under the provisions of the first portion of G.S. 7A-192, before a district court judge, other than the chief district judge, may hear motions and enter interlocutory orders at any session of district court in cases calendared for trial or hearing at such session, he must be first assigned by the chief district judge under the provisions of subdivision (1) of this section to preside at such session. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

In order to have authority to act on any motion, a district judge, other than the chief district judge, must be properly authorized under this section and G.S. 7A-192 to hold a session of court at which the matter is properly before him or under G.S. 7A-192 to hear the matter in chambers. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

District judge assigned to preside at the session in question by the chief district judge of the Thirtieth Judicial District was not without authority to hear defendant's motion to dismiss in Swain County over written objection of plaintiff who had filed his complaint in Cherokee County. Scroggs v. Ramsey, 74 N.C. App. 730, 329 S.E.2d 680 (1985).

Judgment Entered by Unauthorized Judge Is Void. — The judgment entered by a district court judge in favor of plaintiff, which directed, among other things, that defendant immediately pay to plaintiff's attorney a certain sum for legal services rendered, was interlocutory and was void, since the district court judge who entered the order had not been assigned by the chief district judge to preside over a session of court in the county where the judgment was entered, nor was he authorized by order or rule entered by the chief judge to hear motions and enter interlocutory orders on that date. Stroupe v. Stroupe, 301 N.C. 656, 273 S.E.2d 434 (1981).

Administrative Order for Discovery in Abuse, Neglect, and Dependency Proceedings. — Trial court did not commit an abuse of discretion by applying an administrative order governing all discovery in abuse, neglect, and dependency proceedings and denying the parents' motions to continue because the gravamen of the problem fell with the inability of the attorneys to make time to review the records in accordance with the administrative order. OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Time When Trial Session of District Court Ends. — See opinion of Attorney General to Honorable John C. Clifford, Judge of the District Court, 21st Judicial District, 40 N.C.A.G. 117 (1969).

(a) Prior to January 1 of each year in which elections for district court judges are to be held, the Administrative Officer of the Courts may, with the approval of the chief district judge, designate one or more judgeships in districts having three or more judgeships, as specialized judgeships, naming in each case the specialty. Designations shall become effective when filed with the State Board of Elections. Nominees for the position or positions of specialist judge shall be made in the ensuing primary and the position or positions shall be filled at the general election thereafter. The State Board of Elections shall prepare primary and general election ballots to effectuate the purposes of this section.

(b) The designation of a specialized judgeship shall in no way impair the right of the chief district judge to arrange sessions for the trial of specialized cases and to assign any district judge to preside over these sessions. A judge elected to a specialized judgeship has the same powers as a regular district judge.

(c) The policy of the State is to encourage specialization in juvenile cases by district court judges who are qualified by training and temperament to be effective in relating to youth and in the use of appropriate community resources to meet their needs. The Administrative Office of the Courts is therefore authorized to encourage judges who hear juvenile cases to secure appropriate training whether or not they were elected to a specialized judgeship as provided herein. Such training shall be provided within the funds available to the Administrative Office of the Courts for such training, and judges attending such training shall be reimbursed for travel and subsistence expenses at the same rate as is applicable to other State employees.

The Administrative Office of the Courts shall develop a plan whereby a district court judge may be better qualified to hear juvenile cases by reason of training, experience, and demonstrated ability. Any district court judge who completes the training under this plan shall receive a certificate to this effect from the Administrative Office of the Courts. In districts where there is a district court judge who has completed this training as herein provided, the chief district judge shall give due consideration in the assignment of such cases where practical and feasible. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1975, c. 823; 1979, c. 622, s. 1.)

(a) The chief district judges of the various district court districts shall meet at least once a year upon call of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court to discuss mutual problems affecting the courts and the improvement of court operations, to prepare and adopt uniform schedules of offenses for the types of offenses specified in G.S. 7A-273(2) and G.S. 7A-273(2a) for which magistrates and clerks of court may accept written appearances, waivers of trial or hearing and pleas of guilty or admissions of responsibility, and establish a schedule of penalties or fines therefor, and to take such further action as may be found practicable and desirable to promote the uniform administration of justice.

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a district court judge of a district court district which is in a set of districts as defined by G.S. 7A-200 has jurisdiction in the entire county or counties in which the district is located to the same extent as if the district encompassed the entire county, and has jurisdiction in the entire set of districts to the same extent as if the district encompassed the entire set of districts.

(b) All sessions of district court shall be for an entire county, whether that county comprises or is located in a district or in a set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-200, and at each session all matters and proceedings arising anywhere in the county may be heard.

(c) All clerks of court for a county have jurisdiction over the entire county, notwithstanding that the county may be part of a set of districts. (1995, c. 507, s. 21.1(b).)

Magistrates.

§ 7A-170. Nature of office and oath.

A magistrate is an officer of the district court. Before entering upon the duties of his office, a magistrate shall take the oath of office prescribed for a magistrate of the General Court of Justice. A magistrate possesses all the powers of his office at all times during his term. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 13; 1977, c. 945, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

A magistrate is an officer of the district court, and in issuing a warrant a magistrate performs a judicial act. Foust v. Hughes, 21 N.C. App. 268, 204 S.E.2d 230, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 589, 205 S.E.2d 722 (1974).

And Is Not Subject to Civil Action for Errors in Discharge of His Duties. — A judge of a court of this State is not subject to civil action for errors committed in the discharge of his official duties. This immunity applies even when the judge is accused of acting maliciously and corruptly, and is not for the protection or benefit of a malicious or corrupt judge, but for the benefit of the public, whose interest it is that judges should be at liberty to exercise their functions with independence and without fear of consequences. Thus plaintiff failed to state a claim for false imprisonment against a magistrate by reason of any act of the magistrate in issuing warrants for plaintiff's arrest. Foust v. Hughes, 21 N.C. App. 268, 204 S.E.2d 230, cert. denied, 285 N.C. 589, 205 S.E.2d 722 (1974).

Judicial Immunity Granted. — Whether or not a magistrate's alleged comments made in connection with plaintiff's arrest regarding a domestic violence matter were appropriate, they were made in connection with judicial acts within the magistrate's jurisdiction; he was, therefore, entitled to immunity, and his motion to dismiss plaintiff's 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 claim was granted. OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

No Continued Residence Requirements. — Continued residence in the county for which a magistrate is appointed is not a prerequisite to remain in the office of magistrate for the term of the appointment. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. David A. Phillips, Attorney at Law, 1997 N.C.A.G. 61 (10/8/97).

§ 7A-171. Numbers; appointment and terms; vacancies.

(a) The General Assembly shall establish a minimum quota of magistrates for each county. In no county shall the minimum quota be less than one. The number of magistrates in a county, above the minimum quota set by the General Assembly, is determined by the Administrative Office of the Courts after consultation with the chief district court judge for the district in which the county is located.

(a1) The initial term of appointment for a magistrate is two years and subsequent terms shall be for a period of four years. The term of office begins on the first day of January of the odd-numbered year after appointment. The service of an individual as a magistrate filling a vacancy as provided in subsection (d) of this section does not constitute an initial term. For purposes of this section, any term of office for a magistrate who has served a two-year term is for four years even if the two-year term of appointment was before the effective date of this section, the term is after a break in service, or the term is for appointment in a different county from the county where the two-year term of office was served.

(b) Not earlier than the Tuesday after the first Monday nor later than the third Monday in December of each even-numbered year, the clerk of the superior court shall submit to the senior regular resident superior court judge of the district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1(a) in which the clerk's county is located the names of two (or more, if requested by the judge) nominees for each magisterial office for the county for which the term of office of the magistrate holding that position shall expire on December 31 of that year. Not later than the fourth Monday in December, the senior regular resident superior court judge shall, from the nominations submitted by the clerk of the superior court, appoint magistrates to fill the positions for each county of the judge's district or set of districts.

(c) If an additional magisterial office for a county is approved to commence on January 1 of an odd-numbered year, the new position shall be filled as provided in subsection (b) of this section. If the additional position takes effect at any other time, it is to be filled as provided in subsection (d) of this section.

(d) Within 30 days after a vacancy in the office of magistrate occurs the clerk of superior court shall submit to the senior regular resident superior court judge the names of two (or more, if so requested by the judge) nominees for the office vacated. Within 15 days after receipt of the nominations the senior regular resident superior court judge shall appoint from the nominations received a magistrate who shall take office immediately and shall serve until December 31 of the even-numbered year, and thereafter the position shall be filled as provided in subsection (b) of this section. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 15; 1971, s. 84, s. 1; 1973, c. 503, s. 2; 1977, c. 945, ss. 3, 4; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 17; 2004-128, s. 19; 2006-187, s. 7(c).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1993, c. 321, s. 200.4(h), provides that the magistrates' positions created by the amendment to G.S. 7A-133 by c. 321, s. 200.4(e) for Person County in newly created District 9A shall be filled by the magistrates currently serving Person County in District 9 and that the magistrates' positions created by the amendment to G.S. 7A-133 by c. 321, s. 200.4(e) for Caswell County in newly created District 9A shall be filled by the magistrates currently serving Caswell County in District 17A. Section 200.4(h) of c. 321 becomes effective November 1, 1993, or the date upon which subsections (e) and (f) of the section are approved under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, whichever is later. Preclearance was received from the U.S. Department of Justice by letter dated February 14, 1994.

Session Laws 2004-128, ss. 17 and 18, provide: "Section 17. The amendment set out in Section 16 of this act shall be submitted to the qualified voters of the State at the general election in November 2004, which election shall be conducted under the laws then governing elections in the State. Ballots, voting systems, or both may be used in accordance with Chapter 163 of the General Statutes. The question to be used in the voting systems and ballots shall be:

"[ ] FOR [ ] AGAINST

"Constitutional amendment to provide for the first term of office for magistrates of the General Court of Justice to be two years and for subsequent terms to be four years.

"Section 18. If a majority of the votes cast on the question are in favor of the amendment set out in Section 16 of this act, the State Board of Elections shall certify the amendment to the Secretary of State, who shall enroll the amendment so certified among the permanent records of that office. The amendment becomes effective January 1, 2005."

Session Laws 2004-128, s. 20, provides that s. 19 of the act becomes effective January 1, 2005, but only upon voter approval of the constitutional amendment to N.C. Const. art. IV, § 10, proposed in s. 16 of the act, and is applicable to appointments that take effect after January 1, 2005.

The constitutional amendment proposed by Session Laws 2004-128, s. 16, was adopted by vote of the people at the general election held November 2, 2004.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2006-187, s. 7(c), effective July 1, 2006, in subsection (a), deleted "and a maximum" preceding "quota of magistrates" in the first sentence, and substituted "above the minimum quota" for "within the quota" in the second sentence.

CASE NOTES

Appointing Judge Conducting Magistrate Removal Hearing. — Every Resident Regular Superior Court Judge who appoints a magistrate does not have, as a matter of law, a personal bias or prejudice which would disqualify him under Code of Judicial Conduct, Canon 3 from conducting a magistrate's removal hearing pursuant to G.S. 7A-173(c). In re Ezzell, 113 N.C. App. 388, 438 S.E.2d 482 (1994).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Judge has duty to appoint magistrates, which may be enforced by a writ of mandamus. See opinion of Attorney General to Honorable Ralph A. Allison, Clerk of Superior Court, 40 N.C.A.G. 137 (1970).

§ 7A-171.1. Duty hours, salary, and travel expenses within county.

(a) The Administrative Officer of the Courts, after consultation with the chief district judge and pursuant to the following provisions, shall set an annual salary for each magistrate.

(1) A full-time magistrate shall be paid the annual salary indicated in the table set out in this subdivision. A full-time magistrate is a magistrate who is assigned to work an average of not less than 40 hours a week during the term of office. The Administrative Officer of the Courts shall designate whether a magistrate is full-time. Initial appointment shall be at the entry rate. A magistrate's salary shall increase to the next step every two years on the anniversary of the date the magistrate was originally appointed for increases to Steps 1 through 3, and every four years on the anniversary of the date the magistrate was originally appointed for increases to Steps 4 through 6.

Table of Salaries of Full-Time Magistrates

Step Level	Annual Salary
Entry Rate	$31,533
Step 1	34,425

Step Level	Annual Salary
Step 2	37,571
Step 3	41,006
Step 4	44,768
Step 6	53,760.

(2) A part-time magistrate is a magistrate who is assigned to work an average of less than 40 hours of work a week during the term, except that no magistrate shall be assigned an average of less than 10 hours of work a week during the term. A part-time magistrate is included, in accordance with G.S. 7A-170, under the provisions of G.S. 135-1(10) and G.S. 135-40.2(a). The Administrative Officer of the Courts designates whether a magistrate is a part-time magistrate. A part-time magistrate shall receive an annual salary based on the following formula: The average number of hours a week that a part-time magistrate is assigned work during the term shall be multiplied by the annual salary payable to a full-time magistrate who has the same number of years of service prior to the beginning of that term as does the part-time magistrate and the product of that multiplication shall be divided by the number 40. The quotient shall be the annual salary payable to that part-time magistrate.

(3) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, a magistrate who is licensed to practice law in North Carolina or any other state shall receive the annual salary provided in the Table in subdivision (1) of this subsection for Step 4.

(a1) Notwithstanding subsection (a) of this section, the following salary provisions apply to individuals who were serving as magistrates on June 30, 1994:

(1) The salaries of magistrates who on June 30, 1994, were paid at a salary level of less than five years of service under the table in effect that date shall be as follows:

Less than 1 year of service	$25,428
1 or more but less than 3 years of service	26,595

Upon completion of five years of service, those magistrates shall receive the salary set as the Entry Rate in the table in subsection (a).

(2) The salaries of magistrates who on June 30, 1994, were paid at a salary level of five or more years of service shall be based on the rates set out in subsection (a) as follows:

Salary Level on June 30, 1994	Salary Level on July 1, 1994
5 or more but less than 7 years of service	Entry Rate
7 or more but less than 9 years of service	Step 1
9 or more but less than 11 years of service	Step 2
11 or more years of service	Step 3

Thereafter, their salaries shall be set in accordance with the provisions in subsection (a).

(3) The salaries of magistrates who are licensed to practice law in North Carolina shall be adjusted to the annual salary provided in the table in subsection (a) as Step 4, and, thereafter, their salaries shall be set in accordance with the provisions in subsection (a).

(4) The salaries of "part-time magistrates" shall be set under the formula set out in subdivision (2) of subsection (a) but according to the rates set out in this subsection.

(a2) The Administrative Officer of the Courts shall provide magistrates with longevity pay at the same rates as are provided by the State to its employees subject to the State Personnel Act.

(b) Notwithstanding G.S. 138-6, a magistrate may not be reimbursed by the State for travel expenses incurred on official business within the county in which the magistrate resides. § 7A-171.2. Qualifications for nomination or renomination.

(a) In order to be eligible for nomination or for renomination as a magistrate an individual shall be a resident of the county for which he is appointed.

(b) To be eligible for nomination as a magistrate, an individual shall have at least eight years' experience as the clerk of superior court in a county of this State or shall have a four-year degree from an accredited senior institution of higher education or shall have a two-year associate degree and four years of work experience in a related field, including teaching, social services, law enforcement, arbitration or mediation, the court system, or counseling. The Administrative Officer of the Courts may determine whether the work experience is sufficiently related to the duties of the office of magistrate for the purposes of this subsection. In determining whether an individual's work experience is in a related field, the Administrative Officer of the Courts shall consider the requisite knowledge, skills, and abilities for the office of magistrate.

The eligibility requirements prescribed by this subsection do not apply to individuals holding the office of magistrate on June 30, 1994, and do not apply to individuals who have been nominated by June 30, 1994, but who have not been appointed or taken the oath of office by that date.

(c) In order to be eligible for renomination as a magistrate an individual shall have successfully completed the course of basic training for magistrates prescribed by G.S. 7A-177.

(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, an individual who holds the office of magistrate on July 1, 1977, shall not be required to have successfully completed the course of basic training for magistrates prescribed by G.S. 7A-177 in order to be eligible for renomination as a magistrate. (1977, c. 945, s. 6; 1993 (Reg. Sess., 1994), c. 769, s. 7.13(a); 2003-381, s. 1.)

No Continued Residence Requirements. — Continued residence in the county for which a magistrate is appointed is not a prerequisite to remain in the office of magistrate for the term of the appointment. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. David A. Phillips, Attorney at Law, 1997 N.C.A.G. 61 (10/8/97).

Editor's Note. — This section was repealed by Session Laws 1977, c. 945, s. 5, ratified July 1, 1977, and amended by Session Laws 1977, 2nd Sess., c. 1136, s. 12, ratified June 14, 1978.

(a) A magistrate may be suspended from performing the duties of his office by the chief district judge of the district court district in which his county is located, or removed from office by the senior regular resident superior court judge of, or any regular superior court judge holding court in the district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1(a) in which the county is located. Grounds for suspension or removal are the same as for a judge of the General Court of Justice.

(b) Suspension from performing the duties of the office may be ordered upon filing of sworn written charges in the office of clerk of superior court for the county in which the magistrate resides. If the chief district judge, upon examination of the sworn charges, finds that the charges, if true, constitute grounds for removal, he may enter an order suspending the magistrate from performing the duties of his office until a final determination of the charges on the merits. During suspension the salary of the magistrate continues.

(c) If a hearing, with or without suspension, is ordered, the magistrate against whom the charges have been made shall be given immediate written notice of the proceedings and a true copy of the charges, and the matter shall be set by the chief district judge for hearing before the senior regular resident superior court judge or a regular superior court judge holding court in the district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1(a) in which the county is located. The hearing shall be held in a county within the district or set of districts not less than 10 days nor more than 30 days after the magistrate has received a copy of the charges. The hearing shall be open to the public. All testimony offered shall be recorded. At the hearing the superior court judge shall receive evidence, and make findings of fact and conclusions of law. If he finds that grounds for removal exist, he shall enter an order permanently removing the magistrate from office, and terminating his salary. If he finds that no such grounds exist, he shall terminate the suspension, if any.

(d) A magistrate may appeal from an order of removal to the Court of Appeals on the basis of error of law by the superior court judge. Pending decision of the case on appeal, the magistrate shall not perform any of the duties of his office. If, upon final determination, he is ordered reinstated, either by the appellate division or by the superior court on remand, his salary shall be restored from the date of the original order of removal. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 108, s. 4; 1973, c. 148, ss. 3, 4; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 18.)

This section and G.S. 7A-376 are not irreconcilably in conflict with G.S. 14-230. State v. Greer, 308 N.C. 515, 302 S.E.2d 774 (1983).

And the legislature did not intend to exempt magistrates from indictment and criminal prosecution under G.S. 14-230 when it included magistrates under the sanctions of this section and G.S. 7A-376. Section 14-230 applies to misconduct in office unless another statute provides for the "indictment" of the officer, but neither this section nor G.S. 7A-376 provide for criminal charges to be brought against a magistrate who is guilty of misconduct in office. State v. Greer, 308 N.C. 515, 302 S.E.2d 774 (1983).

District Attorney's Participation in Proceedings. — Magistrate did not have standing to challenge involvement of the District Attorney in magistrate's removal proceeding as in violation of the constitutional limits on the District Attorney's office, where, had trial court the inherent authority to appoint an independent counsel, magistrate could not show that a different result would have occurred. In re Ezzell, 113 N.C. App. 388, 438 S.E.2d 482 (1994).

Judge Who Appoints Magistrate Is Not Biased Per Se. — Every Resident Regular Superior Court Judge who appoints a magistrate does not have, as a matter of law, a personal bias or prejudice which would disqualify him under Code of Judicial Conduct, Canon 3 from conducting a magistrate's removal hearing pursuant to subsection (c). In re Ezzell, 113 N.C. App. 388, 438 S.E.2d 482 (1994).

Grounds for suspension or removal of a magistrate are the same as for a judge of the General Court of Justice. In re Kiser, 126 N.C. App. 206, 484 S.E.2d 441 (1997).

The statutory procedures for removal of magistrates are entirely different from those providing for censure or removal of judges. In re Kiser, 126 N.C. App. 206, 484 S.E.2d 441 (1997).

Magistrate properly removed from office for engaging in willful misconduct in office and conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute where he aided and abetted a minor in the possession of alcohol. In re Kiser, 126 N.C. App. 206, 484 S.E.2d 441 (1997).

§ 7A-174. Bonds.

Prior to taking office, magistrates shall be bonded, individually or collectively, in such amount or amounts as the Administrative Officer of the Courts shall determine. The bond or bonds shall be conditioned upon the faithful performance of the duties of the office of magistrate. The Administrative Officer shall procure such bond or bonds from any indemnity or guaranty company authorized to do business in North Carolina, and the premium or premiums shall be paid by the State. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

§ 7A-175. Records to be kept.

A magistrate shall keep such dockets, accounts, and other records, under the general supervision of the clerk of superior court, as may be prescribed by the Administrative Office of the Courts. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

§ 7A-176. Office of justice of the peace abolished.

The office of justice of the peace is abolished in each county upon the establishment of a district court therein. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

§ 7A-177. Training course in duties of magistrate.

(a) Within six months of taking the oath of office as a magistrate for the first time, a magistrate is required to attend and satisfactorily complete a course of basic training of at least 40 hours in the civil and criminal duties of a magistrate. The Administrative Office of the Courts is authorized to contract with the School of Government at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill or with any other qualified educational organization to conduct this training, and to reimburse magistrates for travel and subsistence expenses incurred in taking such training.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2007-484, s. 25.5, amended this section in the coded bill drafting format prescribed by G.S. 120-20.1. However, the act failed to account for the amendments by Session Laws 2007-393, s. 15. Subsection (b) has been set out in the form above as directed by the Revisor of Statutes.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2006-264, s. 29(a), effective August 27, 2006, substituted "School of Government at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill" for "Institute of Government" in subsection (a).

Session Laws 2007-393, s. 15, effective August 20, 2007, in subsection (b), substituted "In addition to the basic training course required in subsection (a) of this section, continuing education" for "Training" and deleted the former last sentence which read: "Courses shall be provided in Asheville for the magistrates from the western region of the State."

Session Laws 2007-484, s. 25.5, effective August 30, 2007, in subsection (b), substituted "In addition to the basic training course required under subsection (a) of this section, continuing education" for "Training" in the first sentence and deleted the second sentence.

§ 7A-178. Magistrate as child support hearing officer.

A magistrate who meets the qualifications of G.S. 50-39 and is properly designated pursuant to G.S. Chapter 50, Article 2, to serve as a child support hearing officer, may serve in that capacity and has the authority and responsibility assigned to child support hearing officers by Chapter 50. (1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 993, s. 2.)

Article 17.

(6) Has the power to conduct an initial appearance in accordance with Chapter 15A, Article 24, Initial Appearance, and to fix conditions of release in accordance with Chapter 15A, Article 26, Bail;

(7) Continues to exercise all powers, duties and authority theretofore vested in or imposed upon clerks of superior court by general law, with the exception of jurisdiction in juvenile matters; and

(8) Has the power to accept written appearances, waivers of trial and pleas of guilty to violations of G.S. 14-107 when restitution, including service charges and processing fees allowed under G.S. 14-107, is made, the amount of the check is two thousand dollars ($2,000) or less, and the warrant does not charge a fourth or subsequent violation of this statute, and, in such cases, to enter such judgments as the chief district judge shall direct and, forward the amounts collected as restitution to the appropriate prosecuting witnesses and to collect the costs.

(9) Repealed by Session Laws 1991 (Reg. Sess., 1992), c. 900, s. 118(c). CASE NOTES

The issuance of a search warrant is neither a district court matter nor a superior court matter, but pertains to pretrial investigation which need not — indeed, often cannot at that point — be classified according to the court where the defendant may eventually be tried. State v. Pennington, 327 N.C. 89, 393 S.E.2d 847 (1990).

Newly Created District Court Division Does Not Limit Superior Court Clerk's Power to Issue Search Warrants. — In prescribing the organization and procedure of the newly created district court division, the General Assembly did not intend to limit the authority of superior court clerks to issue search warrants within their operative counties exclusively to criminal matters to be tried in district court. State v. Pennington, 327 N.C. 89, 393 S.E.2d 847 (1990).

Assistant and deputy clerks of superior court:

(1) Have the same powers and duties with respect to matters in the district court division as they have in the superior court division;

(2) Have the same powers as the clerk of superior court with respect to the issuance of warrants and acceptance of written appearances, waivers of trial and pleas of guilty; and

(3) Have the same power as the clerk of superior court to fix conditions of release in accordance with Chapter 15A, Article 26, Bail, and the same power as the clerk of superior court to conduct an initial appearance in accordance with Chapter 15A, Article 24, Initial Appearance. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 17; 1973, c. 503, s. 5; 1975, c. 166, s. 24; c. 626, s. 3.)

(a) In any county in which the General Assembly has authorized the district court to hold sessions at a place or places in addition to the county seat, the clerk of superior court shall furnish assistant and deputy clerks to the extent necessary to process efficiently the judicial business at such additional seat or seats of court. Only such records as are necessary for the expeditious processing of current judicial business shall be kept at the additional seat or seats of court. The office of the clerk of superior court at the county seat shall remain the permanent depository of official records.

(b) If an additional seat of a district court is designated for any municipality located in more than one county of a district, the clerical functions for that seat of court shall be provided by the clerks of superior court of the contiguous counties, in accordance with standing rules issued by the chief district judge, after consultation with the clerks concerned and a committee of the district bar appointed for this purpose. An assistant or deputy clerk assigned to a seat of district court described in this subsection shall have the same powers and authority as if he were acting in his own county. § 7A-191. Trials; hearings and orders in chambers.

All trials on the merits and all hearings on infractions conducted pursuant to Article 66 of Chapter 15A shall be conducted in open court and so far as convenient in a regular courtroom. All other proceedings, hearings, and acts may be done or conducted by a judge in chambers in the absence of the clerk or other court officials and at any place within the district; but no hearing may be held, nor order entered, in any cause outside the district in which it is pending without the consent of all parties affected thereby. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1985, c. 764, s. 11; 1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 852, s. 17.)

CASE NOTES

G.S. 7A-190 and this section are both subject to the provisions of G.S. 7A-192. Bowen v. Hodge Motor Co., 29 N.C. App. 463, 224 S.E.2d 699 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 292 N.C. 633, 234 S.E.2d 748 (1977).

This section and G.S. 7A-192 make a distinction between the jurisdiction of the district courts and the power and authority of a district judge other than the chief district judge to act. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

And Recognize Distinction Between Trial on Merits and Hearing of Motion. — This section and G.S. 7A-192 recognize a fundamental procedural distinction between a trial on the merits and the hearing of a motion in the cause. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

A hearing on motions in a cause comes within the purview of "all other proceedings, hearings and acts" referred to in this section. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

§ 7A-191.1. Recording of proceeding in which defendant pleads guilty or no contest to felony in district court.

The trial judge shall require that a true, complete, and accurate record be made of the proceeding in which a defendant pleads guilty or no contest to a Class H or I felony pursuant to G.S. 7A-272. (1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 725, s. 4.)

§ 7A-192. By whom power of district court to enter interlocutory orders exercised.

Any district judge may hear motions and enter interlocutory orders in causes regularly calendared for trial or for the disposition of motions, at any session to which the district judge has been assigned to preside. The chief district judge and any district judge designated by written order or rule of the chief district judge, may in chambers hear motions and enter interlocutory orders in all causes pending in the district courts of the district, including causes transferred from the superior court to the district court under the provisions of this Chapter. The designation is effective from the time filed in the office of the clerk of superior court of each county of the district until revoked or amended by written order of the chief district judge. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 16.)

CASE NOTES

G.S. 7A-190 and G.S. 7A-191 are both subject to the provisions of this section. Bowen v. Hodge Motor Co., 29 N.C. App. 463, 224 S.E.2d 699 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 292 N.C. 633, 234 S.E.2d 748 (1977).

This section and G.S. 7A-191 make a distinction between the jurisdiction of the district courts and the power and authority of a district judge other than the chief district judge to act. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

And recognize a fundamental procedural distinction between a trial on the merits and the hearing of a motion in the cause. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

It was improper for a district judge to have held a trial on the merits of a divorce action at a civil motion session, and because the judge had no jurisdiction, the judgment was void. Schumacher v. Schumacher, 109 N.C. App. 309, 426 S.E.2d 467 (1993).

Limitations on Authority of Judge Other Than Chief Judge to Hear Motions and Enter Interlocutory Orders. — The authority of a district judge (other than the chief district judge) to hear motions and enter interlocutory orders in cases properly pending in the district court is a special authority which is limited by this section. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

Under the provisions of the first portion of this section, before a district court judge, other than the chief district judge, may hear motions and enter interlocutory orders at any session of district court in cases calendared for trial or hearing at such session, he must be first assigned by the chief district judge under the provisions of subdivision (1) of G.S. 7A-146 to preside at such session. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

In order to have authority to act on any motion, a district judge, other than the chief district judge, must be properly authorized under G.S. 7A-146 and this section to hold a session of court at which the matter is properly before him, or under this section to hear the matter in chambers. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

Authority of Such Judge Must Affirmatively Appear on Record. — There is no presumption that a district judge (other than the chief district judge) has authority in chambers to hear motions and enter interlocutory orders in all cases pending in the district courts of the district; it must affirmatively appear in the record that the district judge was authorized pursuant to this section. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

Written Authorization for Hearing Motions in Chambers. — A district judge other than the chief district judge may hear motions and enter interlocutory orders during any session over which he has been assigned to preside, whether the assignment be oral or written, but he may not hear motions in chambers without written authorization. Jim Walter Homes, Inc. v. Peartree, 28 N.C. App. 709, 222 S.E.2d 706 (1976).

Chambers matters may be heard by the chief district judge at any time and place within the district, but other district judges have no authority to hear chambers matters out of session except upon written order or rule of the chief district judge. Bowen v. Hodge Motor Co., 29 N.C. App. 463, 224 S.E.2d 699 (1976), rev'd on other grounds, 292 N.C. 633, 234 S.E.2d 748 (1977).

Judge Authorized to Hear Motion. — District judge assigned to preside at the session in question by the chief district judge of the Thirtieth Judicial District was not without authority to hear defendant's motion to dismiss in Swain County over written objection of plaintiff who had filed his complaint in Cherokee County. Scroggs v. Ramsey, 74 N.C. App. 730, 329 S.E.2d 680 (1985).

Restraining Order in Action Pending in Another County in District. — A chief judge of the district court has jurisdiction to enter, in chambers in one county, a temporary restraining order in an action pending in the district court of another county in the judicial district, to return the order for hearing before him, and to enter an order continuing the restraining order in effect in the district court of the other county until the trial of the case on its merits. Boston v. Freeman, 6 N.C. App. 736, 171 S.E.2d 206 (1969).

Temporary Restraining Order Is Interlocutory Order. — A temporary restraining order, made permanent pending trial of the cause on its merits, is an interlocutory order. Boston v. Freeman, 6 N.C. App. 736, 171 S.E.2d 206 (1969).

Judgment Entered by Unauthorized Judge Is Void. — The judgment entered by district court judge in favor of plaintiff, which directed, among other things, that defendant immediately pay to plaintiff's attorney a certain sum for legal services rendered, was interlocutory and was void, since the district court judge who entered the order had not been assigned by the chief district judge to preside over a session of court in the county where the judgment was entered, nor was he authorized by order or rule entered by the chief judge to hear motions and enter interlocutory orders on that date. Stroupe v. Stroupe, 301 N.C. 656, 273 S.E.2d 434 (1981).

Applied in Routh v. Weaver, 67 N.C. App. 426, 313 S.E.2d 793 (1984).

Cited in Condie v. Condie, 51 N.C. App. 522, 277 S.E.2d 122 (1981).

§ 7A-193. Civil procedure generally.

Except as otherwise provided in this Chapter, the civil procedure provided in Chapters 1 and 1A of the General Statutes applies in the district court division of the General Court of Justice. Where there is reference in Chapters 1 and 1A of the General Statutes to the superior court, it shall be deemed to refer also to the district court in respect of causes in the district court division. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 17.)

CASE NOTES

Making Calendar for Trial of Civil Cases Discretionary. — In the superior court, making a calendar for the trial of civil cases appears to be discretionary rather than mandatory; this section makes the same rule apply to the district court. Laws v. Laws, 1 N.C. App. 243, 161 S.E.2d 40 (1968).

Separate Findings and Conclusions Required. — The rule that upon trial of an issue of fact by the court, its decision shall be in writing and shall contain a statement of the facts found and the conclusions of law separately, applies in the district court division of the General Court of Justice as well as in the superior court. Public Serv. Co. v. Beal, 5 N.C. App. 659, 169 S.E.2d 41 (1969).

This Chapter does not change the effect of G.S. 1A-1, Rule 52(a)(1), and therefore it is necessary for the district judge who is authorized to hear a case involving the custody and support of minor children to find the facts specially and state separately his conclusions of law before entering an appropriate judgment. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971).

Actions under the Juvenile Code (G.S. 7A-516, et seq. [see now G.S. 7B-100 and 7B-1500]) are in the nature of civil actions. As such, proceedings in juvenile matters are to be governed by the Rules of Civil Procedure, G.S. 1A-1, unless otherwise provided by the Juvenile Code or some other statute. In re Bullabough, 89 N.C. App. 171, 365 S.E.2d 642 (1988).

§ 7A-196. Jury trials.

(a) In civil cases in the district court there shall be a right to trial by a jury of 12 in conformity with Rules 38 and 39 of the Rules of Civil Procedure.

(b) In criminal cases there shall be no jury trials in the district court. Upon appeal to superior court trial shall be de novo, with jury trial as provided by law.

(c) In adjudicatory hearings for infractions, there shall be no right to trial by jury in the district court. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 954, s. 3; 1985, c. 764, s. 12; 1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 852, s. 17.)

Editor's Note. — Rules 38 and 39 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, referred to in this section, are codified as G.S. 1A-1, Rules 38 and 39.

CASE NOTES

Right to Jury Trial in Civil Cases. — The right to trial by jury in civil cases in the district court is preserved by this section, provided timely demand is made in one of the ways authorized by statute. Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Hayes, 10 N.C. App. 527, 179 S.E.2d 181 (1971).

Right to Jury Trial in Criminal Cases. — The constitutional right of a defendant charged with a misdemeanor to have a jury trial is not infringed by the fact that he has first to submit to trial without a jury in the district court and then appeal to superior court in order to obtain a jury trial. State v. Sherron, 4 N.C. App. 386, 166 S.E.2d 836 (1969).

The effect of a verdict of guilty by the district court in the trial of a misdemeanor is tantamount to a verdict of guilty returned by a jury. State v. Surles, 55 N.C. App. 179, 284 S.E.2d 738 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 307, 290 S.E.2d 707 (1982).

The trial judge's authority over its nonjury verdict is no greater than the authority of the trial judge over a jury verdict. State v. Surles, 55 N.C. App. 179, 284 S.E.2d 738 (1981), cert. denied, 305 N.C. 307, 290 S.E.2d 707 (1982).

When Demand for Trial by Jury Is Timely. — The demand for trial by jury in a civil case is timely if made in writing not later than 10 days after the filing of the last pleading directed to the issues. Holcomb v. Holcomb, 7 N.C. App. 329, 172 S.E.2d 212 (1970); Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Hayes, 10 N.C. App. 527, 179 S.E.2d 181 (1971).

One authorized method of making the demand is by endorsement on the pleading of the party. Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Hayes, 10 N.C. App. 527, 179 S.E.2d 181 (1971).

Error to Deny Jury Trial Timely Demanded. — Defendants having made timely demand in a manner authorized by statute, it was error for the district judge to deny them a jury trial. Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Hayes, 10 N.C. App. 527, 179 S.E.2d 181 (1971).

Waiver of Jury Trial. — The failure of a party to make a demand for jury trial within the 10-day limitation period is a waiver of the right to a jury trial. Holcomb v. Holcomb, 7 N.C. App. 329, 172 S.E.2d 212 (1970).

Transfer of Case Without Notice Denied Defendant's Right to Jury Trial. — Defendant was denied its constitutional right to a jury trial where the action was transferred from the superior court division to the district court division without notice to defendant, so that defendant made no demand for jury trial in the district court within the 10-day time period formerly allowed by this section (see now G.S. 1A-1, Rule 38), and the district court subsequently denied defendant's demand for a jury trial. Thermo-Industries v. Talton Constr. Co., 9 N.C. App. 55, 175 S.E.2d 370 (1970).

Applied in Kelly v. Davenport, 7 N.C. App. 670, 173 S.E.2d 600 (1970); Wendell Tractor & Implement Co. v. Lee, 9 N.C. App. 524, 176 S.E.2d 854 (1970); Williams v. Williams, 13 N.C. App. 468, 186 S.E.2d 210 (1972).

Guffey, 283 N.C. 94, 194 S.E.2d 827 (1973); N.C. Dep't of Env't & Natural Res. v. Carroll, 358 N.C. 649, 599 S.E.2d 888, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 909 (2004).

Unless otherwise provided in this Chapter, the provisions of Chapter 9 of the General Statutes with respect to petit jurors for the trial of civil actions in the superior court are applicable to the trial of civil actions in the district court. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

§ 7A-198. Reporting of civil trials.

(a) Court-reporting personnel shall be utilized, if available, for the reporting of civil trials in the district court. If court reporters are not available in any county, electronic or other mechanical devices shall be provided by the Administrative Office of the Courts upon request of the chief district judge.

(b) The Administrative Office of the Courts shall from time to time investigate the state of the art and techniques of recording testimony, and shall provide such electronic or mechanical devices as are found to be most efficient for this purpose.

(c) If an electronic or other mechanical device is utilized, it shall be the duty of the clerk of the superior court or some other person designated by him to operate the device while a trial is in progress, and the clerk shall thereafter preserve the record thus produced, which may be transcribed, as required, by any person designated by the Administrative Office of the Courts. If stenotype, shorthand, or stenomask equipment is used, the original tapes, notes, discs, or other records are the property of the State, and the clerk shall keep them in his custody.

(d) Reporting of any trial may be waived by consent of the parties.

(e) Reporting will not be provided in trials before magistrates or in hearings to adjudicate and dispose of infractions in the district court.

(f) Appointment of a reporter or reporters for district court proceedings in each district court district shall be made by the chief district judge for that district. The compensation and allowances of reporters in each district shall be fixed by the chief district judge, within limits determined by the Administrative Officer of the Courts, and paid by the State.

(g) A party to a civil trial in district court may request a private agreement from the opposing party or parties to share equally in the cost of a court reporter to be selected from a list provided by the Administrative Office of the Courts. If the opposing party does not consent to share this cost, the requesting party may nevertheless pay to have a court reporter present to record the trial and, in the event that the opposing party appeals the case, that party shall reimburse the party providing the court reporter in full for the costs incurred for the court reporter's services and transcripts.

In the event that the recording device in a civil trial conducted without a court reporter fails for any reason to provide a reasonably accurate record of the trial for purposes of appeal, then the trial judge shall grant a motion for a new trial made by a losing party whose request pursuant to this section to share the cost of a court reporter was not consented to by the opposing party. Editor's Note. — Subsections (e) and (f) of this section were subject to approval under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Preclearance was received from the U.S. Department of Justice by letter dated February 14, 1994.

CASE NOTES

A hearing on a motion for alimony pendente lite is not a civil trial within the meaning of this section. Howell v. Howell, 19 N.C. App. 260, 198 S.E.2d 462 (1973).

A hearing on a motion in the cause requesting a modification of a child support order is a "trial" within the meaning of G.S. 7A-198. Miller v. Miller, 92 N.C. App. 351, 374 S.E.2d 467 (1988).

When Motion for Services of Reporter May Be Refused. — If the case is one in which a court reporter's services can be dispensed with without prejudice, and no reporter can be found, it is not error to refuse a motion for the services of a reporter. McAlister v. McAlister, 14 N.C. App. 159, 187 S.E.2d 449, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 315, 188 S.E.2d 898 (1972).

Request for Recordation in District Court. — In district court, where there are no official court reporters, a party seeking recordation of a hearing or trial must request a reporter or mechanical recordation; failure to make such a request prevents the issue from being raised on appeal. Holterman v. Holterman, 127 N.C. App. 109, 488 S.E.2d 265 (1997).

It is not error for the trial judge to fail to appoint a stenographer where no stenographer is available and where the defendant made no motion that any other means be employed when his motion for a court reporter was denied. McAlister v. McAlister, 14 N.C. App. 159, 187 S.E.2d 449, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 315, 188 S.E.2d 898 (1972).

The absence of stenographic notes is not always fatal, even when oral testimony is introduced, if no prejudice is shown to result. McAlister v. McAlister, 14 N.C. App. 159, 187 S.E.2d 449, cert. denied, 281 N.C. 315, 188 S.E.2d 898 (1972).

Failure of Court to Record Hearing. — Court's violation of this section, by not preserving or recording hearing on modification of child custody order, did not relieve appellant of her burden of complying with N.C.R.A.P., Rule 9(a)(1)(v) and showing prejudicial error. Miller v. Miller, 92 N.C. App. 351, 374 S.E.2d 467 (1988).

Where respondent argued that he must receive a new hearing because children's testimony, which was taken in chambers with all counsel present, was not recorded, respondent did not argue any error in the unrecorded testimony itself and failed to show prejudice. In re Nolen, 117 N.C. App. 693, 453 S.E.2d 220 (1995).

Failure of Tape Device. — Absent contemporaneous objection to the use of tape devices, in order to show prejudicial error on account of a tape device not working, an appellant must at least indicate the import of some specific testimony or other proceeding that has been lost. Simply conjecturing that there may have been objections to critical testimony, without showing why any such testimony ought to have been excluded, will not support reversal, particularly when trial counsel assists in reconstructing the record. In re Caldwell, 75 N.C. App. 299, 330 S.E.2d 513 (1985).

Reporting of Juvenile Proceedings. — Proceedings under former G.S. 7A-636 are to be reported as other "civil trials" in accordance with this section. In re Bullabough, 89 N.C. App. 171, 365 S.E.2d 642 (1988).

Transcript of Juvenile Proceedings Held Necessary. — Where lower court ordered preparation of the transcript of juvenile proceedings for appeal purposes, and the record disclosed no adequate alternative devices that would have fulfilled the same functions as the transcript, the transcript was necessary for appellant to prepare her appeal and was "required" under subsection (c) of this section. In re Bullabough, 89 N.C. App. 171, 365 S.E.2d 642 (1988).

Reimbursement of Juvenile's Attorney for Preparation of Transcript. — As juvenile appellant was entitled to transcript at state expense, her attorney was entitled to be reimbursed for his reasonable expenses in having the transcript prepared. In re Bullabough, 89 N.C. App. 171, 365 S.E.2d 642 (1988).

§ 7A-199. Special venue rule when district court sits without jury in seat of court lying in more than one county; where judgments recorded.

(a) In any nonjury civil action or juvenile matter properly pending in the district court division, regularly assigned for a hearing or trial before a district judge at a seat of the district court in a municipality the corporate limits of which extend into two or more contiguous counties, venue is properly laid for such trial or hearing if by statute or common law it is properly laid in any of the contiguous counties.

(b) In any jury civil action regularly assigned for a hearing or trial before a district judge at a seat of the district court in a municipality the corporate limits of which extend into two or more contiguous counties, venue is properly laid for such jury trial if by statute or common law it is properly laid in any of the contiguous counties; provided, however, any such action shall be instituted in the county of proper venue, and the jurors summoned shall be from the county where such action was instituted. Notwithstanding the fact that the place of trial within such municipality is in a different county from the county where such action was commenced, the sheriff of the county where such action was commenced is authorized to summon the jurors to appear at such place of trial. Such jurors shall be subject to the same challenge as other jurors, except challenges for nonresidence in the county of trial.

(c) A district court judge sitting at a seat of court described in this section may, in criminal cases, conduct preliminary hearings and try misdemeanors arising within the corporate limits of the municipality plus the territory embraced within a distance of one mile in all directions therefrom.

If the corporate limits of the municipality extend into two counties, each of which is in a separate district court district, a district court judge assigned to sit at the seat of court has the same authority over criminal cases arising in the municipality and the territory embraced within a distance of one mile in all directions that he would have if the corporate limits of the municipality were solely located in a single district court district. Judges assigned to sit in such a municipality shall be assigned by the chief district court judge serving the district in which a majority of the voters of the municipality reside, but offenses arising in the portion of the municipality in which the minority of the voters reside shall not be disposed of in the municipality unless the chief district court judge for that district consents in writing to the disposition of criminal cases in the municipality.

(d) The judgment or order rendered in any civil action or juvenile matter heard or tried under the authority of this section shall be recorded in the county where the action was commenced. The judgment or finding of probable cause or other determination in any criminal action heard or tried under the authority of this section shall be recorded in the county where the offense was committed. (1967, c. 691, s. 19; 1989, c. 795, s. 23(c2).)

(a) In this section:

(1) "District" means any district court district established by G.S. 7A-133 which consists exclusively of one or more entire counties;

(2) "Set of districts" means any set of two or more district court districts established under G.S. 7A-133, none of which consists exclusively of one or more entire counties, but both or all of which include territory from the same county or counties and together comprise all of the territory of that county or those counties; "set of districts" also means a set of three district court districts in one county, one consisting of the entire county and the other two consisting of parts of that county; and

(3) "Chief district court judge" means in the case of a set of districts, the chief district court judge for those districts, designated by the chief justice from among the district court judges for the districts in the set of districts.

(b) Whenever by law a duty is imposed upon the chief district court judge, it means for a set of districts the chief district court judge designated under subsection (a)(3) of this section. (1995, c. 507, s. 21.1(a); 2007-484, s. 25(c).)

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2007-484, s. 25(c), effective August 30, 2007, inserted "'set of districts' also means a set of three district court districts in one county, one consisting of the entire county and the other two consisting of parts of that county" in subsdivision (a)(2).

ARTICLE 19.

Small Claim Actions in District Court.

§ 7A-210. Small claim action defined.

For purposes of this Article a small claim action is a civil action wherein:

(1) The amount in controversy, computed in accordance with G.S. 7A-243, does not exceed five thousand dollars ($5,000); and

(2) The only principal relief prayed is monetary, or the recovery of specific personal property, or summary ejectment, or any combination of the foregoing in properly joined claims; and

(3) The plaintiff has requested assignment to a magistrate in the manner provided in this Article.

The seeking of the ancillary remedy of claim and delivery or an order from the clerk of superior court for the relinquishment of property subject to a lien pursuant to G.S 44A-4(a) does not prevent an action otherwise qualifying as a small claim under this Article from so qualifying. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1973, c. 1267, s. 1; 1979, c. 144, s. 1; 1981, c. 555, s. 1; 1985, c. 329; c. 655, s. 1; 1989, c. 311, s. 1; 1993, c. 107, s. 1; c. 553, s. 73(a); 1999-411, s. 1; 2004-128, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — The fee increase from $4000 to $5000 in subdivision (1), as amended by Session Laws 2004-128, s. 1, effective October 1, 2004, is applicable to actions filed on or after that date.

CASE NOTES

Amount in Controversy. — Where the amount in controversy for plaintiff's claims was in excess of the dollar requirement for a small claim action, but less than the $ 10,000 requirement for an action in the superior court, the claim was within the jurisdiction of the district court, and the district court erred in concluding that it lacked jurisdiction to hear these claims. Wilson v. Jefferson-Green, Inc., 136 N.C. App. 824, 526 S.E.2d 506, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 161 (2000).

Remedy of summary ejectment may be obtained in a small claim action heard by a magistrate. Chandler v. Cleveland Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 24 N.C. App. 455, 211 S.E.2d 484 (1975).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Magistrate's Authority to Hear a Summary Ejectment Action. — A magistrate does not have the authority to hear a summary ejectment action involving residential rental property in another county if the landlord and the tenant so provide in the lease. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. James E. Lanning, Chief District Court Judge, 26th Judicial District, 60 N.C.A.G. 26 (1990).

§ 7A-211. Small claim actions assignable to magistrates.

In the interest of speedy and convenient determination, the chief district judge may, in his discretion, by specific order or general rule, assign to any magistrate of his district any small claim action pending in his district if the defendant is a resident of the county in which the magistrate resides. If there is more than one defendant, at least one of them must be a bona fide resident of the county in which the magistrate resides. (1965, c. 310, s. 1, 1967, c. 1165.)

Magistrate's Authority to Hear a Summary Ejectment Action. — A magistrate does not have the authority to hear a summary ejectment action involving residential rental property in another county if the landlord and the tenant so provide in the lease. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. James E. Lanning, Chief District Court Judge, 26th Judicial District, — N.C.A.G. — May 1, 1990.

§ 7A-211.1. Actions to enforce motor vehicle mechanic and storage liens.

Notwithstanding the provisions of G.S. 7A-210(2) and 7A-211, the chief district judge may in his discretion, by specific order or general rule, assign to any magistrate of his district actions to enforce motor vehicle mechanic and storage liens arising under G.S. 44A-2(d) or 20-77(d) when the claim arose in the county in which the magistrate resides. The defendant may be subjected to the jurisdiction of the court over his person by the methods provided in G.S. 7A-217 or 1A-1, Rules 4(j) and 4(j1), Rules of Civil Procedure. § 7A-212. Judgment of magistrate in civil action improperly assigned or not assigned.

No judgment of the district court rendered by a magistrate in a civil action assigned to him by the chief district judge is void, voidable, or irregular for the reason that the action is not one properly assignable to the magistrate under this article. The sole remedy for improper assignment is appeal for trial de novo before a district judge in the manner provided in this article. No judgment rendered by a magistrate in a civil action is valid when the action was not assigned to him by the chief district judge. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Judgment of magistrate in civil action assigned to him by chief district judge is judgment of the district court. Chandler v. Cleveland Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 24 N.C. App. 455, 211 S.E.2d 484 (1975).

Action Brought After Dismissal on Jurisdictional Grounds. — This section did not apply to an action brought in district court after being dismissed by a magistrate on jurisdictional grounds, where the plaintiff did not appeal the magistrate's action, but bowed to the magistrate's judgment by refiling the case. Falk Integrated Technologies, Inc. v. Stack, 132 N.C. App. 807, 513 S.E.2d 572 (1999).

Cited in Usher v. Waters Ins. & Realty Co., 438 F. Supp. 1215 (W.D.N.C. 1977).

The plaintiff files his complaint in a small claim action in the office of the clerk of superior court of the county wherein the defendant, or one of the defendants resides. The designation "Small Claim" on the face of the complaint is a request for assignment. If, pursuant to order or rule, the action is assigned to a magistrate, the clerk issues a magistrate summons substantially in the form prescribed in this Article as soon as practicable after the assignment is made. The issuance of a magistrate summons commences the action. After service of the magistrate summons on the defendant, the clerk gives written notice of the assignment to the plaintiff. The notice of assignment identifies the action, designates the magistrate to whom assignment is made, and specifies the time, date and place of trial. By any convenient means the clerk notifies the magistrate of the assignment and the setting. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 19; 1971, c. 377, s. 9.)

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Summary Ejectment Proceedings. — Because G.S. 7-217(4) states that the procedure found in G.S. 42-29 can be used in summary ejectment cases only, and because summary ejectment is in the nature of an in rem proceeding, an in personam money damages claim cannot be heard and a money judgment cannot be entered in an action where service of process is effected through the alternative method under G.S. 42-29. The requirements for actual service of process found elsewhere in this section and in G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4 would still apply to the claim for rents and other money damages. — N.C.A.G. — (February 26, 1992).

§ 7A-214. Time within which trial is set.

The time for trial of a small claim action is set not later than 30 days after the action is commenced. By consent of all parties the time for trial may be changed from the time set. For good cause shown, the magistrate to whom the action is assigned may grant continuances from time to time. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

A summary ejectment action heard by a magistrate is an expedited judicial proceeding and the trial is set no more than 30 days after the action is commenced. See Opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Thurman B. Hampton, Secretary of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, -- N.C.A.G. -- (February 10, 1995).

§ 7A-215. Procedure upon nonassignment of small claim action.

Failure of the chief district judge to assign a claim within five days after filing of a complaint requesting its assignment constitutes nonassignment. The chief district judge may sooner order nonassignment. Upon nonassignment, the clerk immediately issues summons in the manner and form provided for commencement of civil actions generally, whereupon process is served, return made, and pleadings are required to be filed in the manner provided for civil actions generally. Upon issuing civil summons, the clerk gives written notice of nonassignment to the plaintiff. The plaintiff within five days after notice of nonassignment, and the defendant before or with the filing of his answer, may request a jury trial. Failure within the times so limited to request a jury trial constitutes a waiver of the right thereto. Upon the joining of issue, the clerk places the action upon the civil issue docket for trial in the district court division. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

The complaint in a small claim action shall be in writing, signed by the party or his attorney, except the complaint in an action for summary ejectment may be signed by an agent for the plaintiff. It need be in no particular form, but is sufficient if in a form which enables a person of common understanding to know what is meant. In any event, the forms prescribed in this Article are sufficient under this requirement, and are intended to indicate the simplicity and brevity of statement contemplated. Demurrers and motions to challenge the legal and formal sufficiency of a complaint in an assigned small claim action shall not be used. But at any time after its filing, the clerk, the chief district judge, or the magistrate to whom such an action is assigned may, on oral or written ex parte motion of the defendant, or on his own motion, order the plaintiff to perfect the statement of his claim before proceeding to its determination, and shall grant extensions of time to plead and continuances of trial pending any perfecting of statement ordered. § 7A-217. Methods of subjecting person of defendant to jurisdiction.

When by order or rule a small claim action is assigned to a magistrate, the defendant may be subjected to the jurisdiction of the court over his person by the following methods:

(1) By delivering a copy of the summons and of the complaint to him or by leaving copies thereof at the defendant's dwelling house or usual place of abode with some person of suitable age and discretion then residing therein. When the defendant is under any legal disability, he may be subject to personal jurisdiction only by personal service of process in the manner provided by law.

(2) When the defendant is not under any legal disability, he may be served by registered or certified mail as provided in G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4(j). Proof of service is as provided in G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4(j2).

(3) When the defendant is under no legal disability, he may be subjected to the jurisdiction of the court over his person by his written acceptance of service, or by his voluntary appearance.

(4) In summary ejectment cases only, service as provided in G.S. 42-29 is also authorized. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 20; 1973, c. 90; 1983, c. 332, s. 3.)

CASE NOTES

Applied in Drummond v. Cordell, 72 N.C. App. 262, 324 S.E.2d 301 (1985).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Summary Ejectment Proceedings. — Because subdivision (4) of this section states that the procedure found in G.S. 42-29 can be used in summary ejectment cases only, and because summary ejectment is in the nature of an in rem proceeding, an in personam money damages claim cannot be heard and a money judgment cannot be entered in an action where service of process is effected through the alternative method under G.S. 42-29. The requirements for actual service of process found elsewhere in G.S. 7A-213 and in G.S. 1A-1, Rule 4 would still apply to the claim for rents and other money damages. See opinion of Attorney General to Hon. Thomas N. Hix, Chief District Court Judge, 29th Judicial Circuit, 60 N.C.A.G. 95 (1992).

§ 7A-218. Answer of defendant.

At any time prior to the time set for trial, the defendant may file a written answer admitting or denying all or any of the allegations in the complaint, or pleading new matter in avoidance. No particular form is required, but it is sufficient if in a form to enable a person of common understanding to know the nature of the defense intended. A general denial of all the allegations of the complaint is permissible.

Failure of defendant to file a written answer after being subjected to the jurisdiction of the court over his person constitutes a general denial. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 20.)

CASE NOTES

Failure to Plead Affirmative Defense on Appeal. — When a landlord successfully sued a tenant for summary ejectment in small claims court, and the tenant obtained a trial de novo in district court, the tenant was not required to file an answer to preserve its affirmative defense of estoppel for a trial de novo in the district court because there were no required pleadings in assigned small claim actions other than the complaint, and defendant's failure to file an answer in small claims court after being subjected to the jurisdiction of the court over his person was a general denial. Don Setliff & Assocs. v. Subway Real Estate Corp., 178 N.C. App. 385, 631 S.E.2d 526, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 1414 (2006).

§ 7A-219. Certain counterclaims; cross claims; third-party claims not permissible.

No counterclaim, cross claim or third-party claim which would make the amount in controversy exceed the jurisdictional amount established by G.S. 7A-210(1) is permissible in a small claim action assigned to a magistrate. No determination of fact or law in an assigned small claim action estops a party thereto in any subsequent action which, except for this section, might have been asserted under the Code of Civil Procedure as a counterclaim in the small claim action. Notwithstanding G.S. 1A-1, Rule 13, failure by a defendant to file a counterclaim in a small claims action assigned to a magistrate, or failure by a defendant to appeal a judgment in a small claims action to district court, shall not bar such claims in a separate action. CASE NOTES

Counterclaim in Ejectment Action Not Allowed. — Where a tenant sought damages in excess of $10,000 on improper summary ejectment claim, the tenant could not plead the claim as a compulsory counterclaim to the ejectment action while it was before a magistrate. Cloer v. Smith, 132 N.C. App. 569, 512 S.E.2d 779 (1999).

Applied in Chandler v. Cleveland Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 24 N.C. App. 455, 211 S.E.2d 484 (1975); Ervin Co. v. Hunt, 26 N.C. App. 755, 217 S.E.2d 93 (1975); Fickley v. Greystone Enters., 140 N.C. App. 258, 536 S.E.2d 331, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1110 (2000); Don Setliff & Assocs. v. Subway Real Estate Corp., 178 N.C. App. 385, 631 S.E.2d 526, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 1414 (2006).

There are no required pleadings in assigned small claim actions other than the complaint. Answers and counterclaims may be filed by the defendant in accordance with G.S. 7A-218 and G.S. 7A-219. Any new matter pleaded in avoidance in the answer is deemed denied or avoided. On appeal from the judgment of the magistrate for trial de novo before a district judge, the judge shall allow appropriate counterclaims, cross claims, third party claims, replies, and answers to cross claims, in accordance with G.S. 1A-1, et seq. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1987, c. 628.)

CASE NOTES

Failure to Assert Counterclaim on Appeal Resulted in Res Judicata. — The plaintiffs' claims for retaliatory eviction were a compulsory counterclaim which should have been asserted in the appeal from the magistrate's judgment in the prior summary ejectment proceeding—the amount in controversy would have prevented it from being asserted before the magistrate—and the plaintiffs were, therefore, precluded by the doctrine of res judicata from asserting their claims in a second action; the determinative question in both actions was whether the plaintiffs breached their respective lease agreements, making defendants' termination of the lease agreements valid. Fickley v. Greystone Enters., 140 N.C. App. 258, 536 S.E.2d 331, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1110 (2000).

Assertion of Affirmative Defense on Appeal. — When a landlord successfully sued a tenant for summary ejectment in small claims court, and the tenant obtained a trial de novo in district court, the tenant did not waive its affirmative defense of estoppel by not pleading it in district court because, in small claims court, the only pleading was the complaint, and on appeal to district court, the district court judge could elect to try the case on the pleadings filed, so the tenant did not waive its affirmative defense. Don Setliff & Assocs. v. Subway Real Estate Corp., 178 N.C. App. 385, 631 S.E.2d 526, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 1414 (2006).

§ 7A-221. Objections to venue and jurisdiction over person.

By motion prior to filing answer, or in the answer, the defendant may object that the venue is improper, or move for change of venue, or object to the jurisdiction of the court over his person. These motions or objections are heard on notice by the chief district judge or a district judge designated by order or rule of the chief district judge. Assignment to the magistrate is suspended pending determination of the objection, and the clerk gives notice of the suspension by any convenient means to the magistrate to whom the action has been assigned. All these objections are waived if not made prior to the date set for trial. If venue is determined to be improper, or is ordered changed, the action is transferred to the district court of the new venue, and is not thereafter assigned to a magistrate, but proceeds as in the case of civil actions generally. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article on defending the low-income tenant in North Carolina, see 2 N.C. Cent. L.J. 21 (1970).

§ 7A-222. General trial practice and procedure.

Trial of a small claim action before a magistrate is without a jury. The rules of evidence applicable in the trial of civil actions generally are observed. At the conclusion of plaintiff's evidence the magistrate may render judgment of dismissal if plaintiff has failed to establish a prima facie case. If a judgment of dismissal is not rendered the defendant may introduce evidence. At the conclusion of all the evidence the magistrate may render judgment or may in his discretion reserve judgment for a period not in excess of 10 days. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1971, c. 377, s. 11.)

§ 7A-223. Practice and procedure in small claim actions for summary ejectment.

In any small claim action demanding summary ejectment or past due rent, or both, the complaint may be signed by an agent acting for the plaintiff who has actual knowledge of the facts alleged in the complaint. If a small claim action demanding summary ejectment is assigned to a magistrate, the practice and procedure prescribed for commencement, form and service of process, assignment, pleadings, and trial in small claim actions generally are observed, except that if the defendant by written answer denies the title of the plaintiff, the action is placed on the civil issue docket of the district court division for trial before a district judge. In such event, the clerk withdraws assignment of the action from the magistrate and immediately gives written notice of withdrawal, by any convenient means, to the plaintiff and the magistrate to whom the action has been assigned. The plaintiff, within five days after receipt of the notice, and the defendant, in his answer, may request trial by jury. Failure to request jury trial within the time limited is a waiver of the right to trial by jury. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 21; 1971, c. 377, s. 12.)

Pleadings in small claim summary ejectment actions are the same as in other small claim actions. See Opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Thurman B. Hampton, Secretary of the Department of Crime Control and Public safety, — N.C.A.G. — (February 10, 1995).

For a summary ejectment action to be processed as a small claim, the complaint must designate it as a small claim and the action must be assigned to a magistrate. This practice is almost universal, and Article 3 of the Landlord and Tenant Act, which describes summary ejectment procedures, refers only to determinations being made in the first instance by magistrates. See Opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Thurman B. Hampton, Secretary of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, — N.C.A.G. — (February 10, 1995).

Judgment in a small claim action is rendered in writing and signed by the magistrate. The judgment so rendered is a judgment of the district court, and is recorded and indexed as are judgments of the district and superior court generally. Entry is made as soon as practicable after rendition. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 21.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "Fundamentals of Jurisprudence: An Ethnography of Judicial Decision Making in Informal Courts," see 66 N.C.L. Rev. 467 (1988).

CASE NOTES

Effect of Section. — This section does not control the manner of "rendering" magistrate's judgments under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 58; it merely requires the magistrate's judgment to be rendered in writing in order to be deemed a judgment of the district court entitled to recording and indexing as any other district court judgment. The statement that "entry is made as soon as practicable after rendition" merely refers to the entry of that judgment in the records and indexes of the general courts. Thus, this section simply sets forth the requirements for filing a magistrate's judgment as a judgment of the district court. Provident Fin. Co. v. Locklear, 89 N.C. App. 535, 366 S.E.2d 599 (1988).

Cited in Chandak v. Electronic Interconnect Corp., 144 N.C. App. 258, 550 S.E.2d 25, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 413 (2001).

§ 7A-225. Lien and execution of judgment.

From the time of docketing, the judgment rendered by a magistrate in a small claim action constitutes a lien and is subject to execution in the manner provided in Chapter 1, Article 28, of the General Statutes. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

This section and G.S. 7A-226 merely establish priority of liens; the statutes do not address the effect of a voluntary dismissal in the district court. G.S. 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1) allows plaintiff to voluntarily dismiss the action without prejudice, and this section and G.S. 7A-226 do not alter this right. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Richards, 90 N.C. App. 650, 369 S.E.2d 620 (1988).

Cited in Jones v. Ratley, 168 N.C. App. 126, 607 S.E.2d 38, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 147 (2005).

When appeal is taken from a judgment in a small claim action, the lien acquired by docketing merges into any judgment rendered after trial de novo on appeal, continues as a lien from the first docketing, and has priority over any judgment docketed subsequent to the first docketing. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

G.S. 7A-225 and this section merely establish priority of liens; the statutes do not address the effect of a voluntary dismissal in the district court. G.S. 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1) allows plaintiff to voluntarily dismiss the action without prejudice, and G.S. 7A-225 and this section do not alter this right. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Richards, 90 N.C. App. 650, 369 S.E.2d 620 (1988).

§ 7A-227. Stay of execution on appeal.

Appeal from judgment of a magistrate does not stay execution if the judgment is for recovery of specific property. Such execution may be stayed by order of the clerk of superior court upon petition by the appellant accompanied by undertaking in writing, executed by one or more sufficient sureties approved by the clerk, to the effect that if judgment be rendered against appellant the sureties will pay the amount thereof with costs awarded against the appellant. Appeal from judgment of a magistrate does stay execution if the judgment is for money damages. This section shall not require any undertaking of appellants in summary ejectment actions other than those imposed by Chapter 42 of the General Statutes. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 24, s. 1; 1977, c. 844; 1979, c. 820, s. 9.)

(a) The chief district court judge may authorize magistrates to hear motions to set aside an order or judgment pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 60(b)(1) and order a new trial before a magistrate. The exercise of the authority of the chief district court judge in allowing magistrates to hear Rule 60(b)(1) motions shall not be construed to limit the authority of the district court to hear motions pursuant to Rule 60(b)(1) through (6) of the Rules of Civil Procedure for relief from a judgment or order entered by a magistrate and, if granted, to order a new trial before a magistrate. After final disposition before the magistrate, the sole remedy for an aggrieved party is appeal for trial de novo before a district court judge or a jury. Notice of appeal may be given orally in open court upon announcement or after entry of judgment. If not announced in open court, written notice of appeal must be filed in the office of the clerk of superior court within 10 days after entry of judgment. The appeal must be perfected in the manner set out in subsection (b). Upon announcement of the appeal in open court or upon receipt of the written notice of appeal, the appeal shall be noted upon the judgment. If the judgment was mailed to the parties, then the time computations for appeal of such judgment shall be pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 6.

(b) The appeal shall be perfected by (1) oral announcement of appeal in open court; or (2) by filing notice of appeal in the office of the clerk of superior court within 10 days after entry of judgment, pursuant to subsection (a), and by serving a copy of the notice of appeal on all parties pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 5. Failure to pay the costs of court to appeal within 20 days after entry of judgment shall result in the automatic dismissal of the appeal. The failure to demand a trial by jury in district court by the appealing party before the time to perfect the appeal has expired is a waiver of the right thereto.

(b1) A person desiring to appeal as an indigent shall, within 10 days of entry of judgment by the magistrate, file an affidavit that he or she is unable by reason of poverty to pay the costs of appeal. Within 20 days after entry of judgment, a superior or district court judge, magistrate, or the clerk of the superior court may authorize a person to appeal to district court as an indigent if the person is unable to pay the costs of appeal. The clerk of superior court shall authorize a person to appeal as an indigent if the person files the required affidavit and meets one or more of the criteria listed in G.S. 1-110. A superior or district court judge, a magistrate, or the clerk of the superior court may authorize a person who does not meet any of the criteria listed in G.S. 1-110 to appeal as an indigent if the person cannot pay the costs of appeal.

The district court may dismiss an appeal and require the person filing the appeal to pay the court costs advanced if the allegations contained in the affidavit are determined to be untrue or if the court is satisfied that the action is frivolous or malicious. If the court dismisses the appeal, the court shall affirm the judgment of the magistrate.

(c) Whenever such appeal is docketed and is regularly set for trial, and the appellant fails to appear and prosecute his appeal, the presiding judge may have the appellant called and the appeal dismissed; and in such case the judgment of the magistrate shall be affirmed. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 1190, s. 22; 1979, 2nd Sess., c. 1328, s. 3; 1981, c. 599, s. 3; 1985, c. 753, ss. 1, 2; 1987, c. 553; 1993, c. 435, s. 2; 1998-120, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

G.S. 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1) is available in actions in the district court on appeal de novo from a magistrate's judgment. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Richards, 90 N.C. App. 650, 369 S.E.2d 620 (1988).

Requirements of this section are not inconsistent with those of G.S. 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1), since this section sets forth the right to appeal for trial de novo in district court and the procedures to perfect the appeal and G.S. 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1) sets forth the right to a voluntary dismissal and the procedures to effect the dismissal. This section does not address the same phase of the action as does G.S. 1A-1, Rule 41(a)(1). The rule is therefore not subject to the provisions of this section. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Richards, 90 N.C. App. 650, 369 S.E.2d 620 (1988).

Entry of Magistrate's Judgment. — G.S. 1A-1, Rule 58 specifically controls the determination of the magistrate's "entry" of the small claims court judgment in the court minutes for purposes of appeal under this section. Under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 58, where the magistrate "rendered" his judgment in open court and the evidence was clear that he announced the judgment in open court, both dismissing plaintiff's action and awarding defendants a sum certain on their counterclaim, entry of the magistrate's judgment was deemed to occur at the time of rendition. Provident Fin. Co. v. Locklear, 89 N.C. App. 535, 366 S.E.2d 599 (1988).

Entry of the magistrate's judgment for purposes of G.S. 1A-1, Rule 58 was not less automatic simply because the magistrate himself, rather than a clerk, noted the judgment in the court minutes. Provident Fin. Co. v. Locklear, 89 N.C. App. 535, 366 S.E.2d 599 (1988).

Collection of Costs. — Although in Porter v. Cahill, 1 N.C. App. 579, 581, 162 S.E.2d 128, 130 (1968) the court held it is the duty of the clerk of superior court to collect the costs of appeal, that case was decided before the effective date of the amendment to this section requiring the payment of the costs of appeal to perfect the appeal. Principal Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Burnup & Sims, Inc., 114 N.C. App. 494, 442 S.E.2d 85 (1994).

Duty to Pay. — Plaintiff has the responsibility of ascertaining and paying the costs of appeal. Principal Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Burnup & Sims, Inc., 114 N.C. App. 494, 442 S.E.2d 85 (1994).

Motions to Set Aside Magistrate's Judgment. — Subsection (a) of this section provides for motions under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 60(b)(1) to set aside the magistrate's judgment. Provident Fin. Co. v. Locklear, 89 N.C. App. 535, 366 S.E.2d 599 (1988).

Magistrate's judgment did not become a final judgment, where, after the magistrate's judgment was entered, plaintiff exercised its right to appeal for trial de novo in the district court pursuant to subsection (a) of this section, and then took a voluntary dismissal of the action pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 41(a). Therefore the doctrine of res judicata did not apply. First Union Nat'l Bank v. Richards, 90 N.C. App. 650, 369 S.E.2d 620 (1988).

Magistrate Cannot Extend Time to Pay Fees. — Magistrate did not have the authority under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 60(b) to extend the time provided in this section for party to pay appeal fees. Riverview Mobile Home Park v. Bradshaw, 119 N.C. App. 585, 459 S.E.2d 283 (1995).

Appearance in Forma Pauperis on Trial de Novo. — A party, plaintiff or defendant, may petition to appear in forma pauperis in the trial de novo of cases appealed to the district court judge from judgments of a magistrate in small claims actions. Atlantic Ins. & Realty Co. v. Davidson, 320 N.C. 159, 357 S.E.2d 668 (1987).

Tenant Estopped From Arguing that Appeal Vacated Summary Ejectment. — In an action in which a tenant claimed that a public housing agency's termination of benefits pursuant to 24 C.F.R. § 982.552(b)(2) violated due process by not mentioning at the termination hearing that her appeal in a summary ejectment action limited the agency's right to terminate benefits, the tenant was estopped from arguing that her appeal in the summary ejectment action vacated the ejectment. Mack v. W. Piedmont Council of Gov'ts, — F. Supp. 2d —, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28123 (W.D.N.C. Dec. 23, 2002).

Dismissal for failure to appear proper. — Trial court properly dismissed a county's appeal from a small claims court judgment in favor an of employee where the county failed to appear for the scheduled trial de novo before the trial court; the fact that the county had obtained an arbitrator's award was irrelevant. Brown v. County of Avery, 164 N.C. App. 704, 596 S.E.2d 334, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 975 (2004).

Dismissal Not Proper. — Because this section refers to the failure of the appellant to appear and prosecute his appeal once the appeal is docketed and regularly set for trial, dismissal for failure to prosecute was not proper. Fairchild Properties v. Hall, 122 N.C. App. 286, 468 S.E.2d 605 (1996).

Applied in Ervin Co. v. Hunt, 26 N.C. App. 755, 217 S.E.2d 93 (1975); Ball Photo Supply Co. v. McClain, 30 N.C. App. 132, 226 S.E.2d 178 (1976); Stephens v. John Koenig, Inc., 119 N.C. App. 323, 458 S.E.2d 233 (1995).

Upon appeal noted, the clerk of superior court places the action upon the civil issue docket of the district court division. The district judge before whom the action is tried may order repleading or further pleading by some or all of the parties; may try the action on stipulation as to the issue; or may try it on the pleadings as filed. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Appearance in Forma Pauperis on Trial de Novo. — A party, plaintiff or defendant, may petition to appear in forma pauperis in the trial de novo of cases appealed to the district court judge from judgments of a magistrate in small claims actions. Atlantic Ins. & Realty Co. v. Davidson, 320 N.C. 159, 357 S.E.2d 668 (1987).

District Court Could Decide Trial De Novo on Appeal on the Basis of Just the Pleadings. — In a trial de novo on appeal to the district court from a small claims money judgment, the district court had the statutory authority under G.S. 7A-229 to decide the case on the pleadings and, since the informal procedures of the small claims court carried over to the appeal, the district court was not required to give the separate, detailed legal conclusions that were required by N.C. R. Civ. P. 52. Jones v. Ratley, 168 N.C. App. 126, 607 S.E.2d 38, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 147 (2005).

When a landlord successfully sued a tenant for summary ejectment in small claims court, and the tenant obtained a trial de novo in district court, the tenant did not waive its affirmative defense of estoppel by not pleading it in district court because, in small claims court, the only pleading was the complaint, and on appeal to district court, the district court judge could elect to try the case on the pleadings filed, so the tenant did not waive its affirmative defense. Don Setliff & Assocs. v. Subway Real Estate Corp., 178 N.C. App. 385, 631 S.E.2d 526, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 1414 (2006).

The appellant in his written notice of appeal may demand a jury on the trial de novo. Within 10 days after receipt of the notice of appeal stating that the costs of the appeal have been paid, any appellee by written notice served on all parties and on the clerk of superior court may demand a jury on the trial de novo. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1981, c. 599, s. 3.)

§ 7A-231. Provisional and incidental remedies.

The provisional and incidental remedies of claim and delivery, subpoena duces tecum, production of documents and orders for the relinquishment of property subject to a possessory lien pursuant to G.S. 44A-4(a) are obtainable in small claims actions. The practice and procedure provided therefor in respect of civil actions generally is observed, conformed as may be required. No other provisional or incidental remedies are obtainable while the action is pending before the magistrate. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1985, c. 655, s. 3.)

The plaintiff's prosecution bond set out in G.S. 1-109 is one of the provisional or incidental remedies which are not obtainable while a civil action is pending before the magistrate by virtue of the last sentence of this section. See opinion of Attorney General to Ms. Jane M. Eason Civil Magistrate, New Hanover County, 55 N.C.A.G. 99 (1986).

SUBCHAPTER V. JURISDICTION AND POWERS OF THE TRIAL DIVISIONS OF THE GENERAL COURT OF JUSTICE.

ARTICLE 20.

Original Civil Jurisdiction of the Trial Divisions.

§ 7A-240. Original civil jurisdiction generally.

Except for the original jurisdiction in respect of claims against the State which is vested in the Supreme Court, original general jurisdiction of all justiciable matters of a civil nature cognizable in the General Court of Justice is vested in the aggregate in the superior court division and the district court division as the trial divisions of the General Court of Justice. Except in respect of proceedings in probate and the administration of decedents' estates, the original civil jurisdiction so vested in the trial divisions is vested concurrently in each division. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Judicial Immunity. — Judges of courts of general jurisdiction are fully clothed by both logic and precedent with the shield of judicial immunity. Fowler v. Alexander, 340 F. Supp. 168 (M.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

Jurisdiction over Member of Eastern Band of Cherokee in Tort Claim. — The courts of this State have jurisdiction over a member of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians in a tort claim by a non-Indian arising from an occurrence on land within the Qualla Boundary. Sasser v. Beck, 40 N.C. App. 668, 253 S.E.2d 577, cert. denied, 298 N.C. 300, 259 S.E.2d 915 (1979).

Jurisdiction over All Justiciable Matters Not Placed Elsewhere. — Except for areas specifically placing jurisdiction elsewhere (such as claims under the Workers' Compensation Act), the trial courts of North Carolina have subject matter jurisdiction over "all justiciable matters of a civil nature." Harris v. Pembaur, 84 N.C. App. 666, 353 S.E.2d 673 (1987).

Unless jurisdiction is specifically placed elsewhere, both the superior court division and the district court division have subject matter jurisdiction over all "justiciable" civil claims. State ex rel. Thornburg v. Lot & Bldgs. at 800 Waughtown St., 107 N.C. App. 559, 421 S.E.2d 374, cert. denied, 333 N.C. 170, 424 S.E.2d 915 (1992).

Contract dispute between the parties constituted a "justiciable matter" that is "cognizable" in North Carolina trial courts; therefore, trial judge's determination that there was no subject matter jurisdiction was in error. Harris v. Pembaur, 84 N.C. App. 666, 353 S.E.2d 673 (1987).

Challenge to Statutes Regarding Trial Calendar. — Plaintiffs' pending criminal prosecutions did not deprive the superior court of jurisdiction to consider plaintiffs' constitutional challenge to the statutes which authorize the district attorney to set the criminal trial calendar. Simeon v. Hardin, 339 N.C. 358, 451 S.E.2d 858 (1994).

Claims Clearly Justiciable Matters. — Where executor of decedent's estate filed its petition for hearing requesting instructions from the clerk of superior court as to whether surviving spouse was entitled to participate in the administration, settlement and distribution of decedent's estate, the claims at issue were claims of misrepresentation, undue influence and inadequate disclosure of assets or liabilities, clearly justiciable matters of a civil nature, original general jurisdiction over which is vested in the trial division; the superior court judge properly found that the clerk lacked jurisdiction in this matter and properly voided the clerk's order. In re Estate of Wright, 114 N.C. App. 659, 442 S.E.2d 540, cert. denied, 338 N.C. 516, 453 S.E.2d 174 (1994).

Concurrent Jurisdiction to Hear Application for Restraining Order Pending Trial on the Merits. — An application for a restraining order pending trial on the merits is a justiciable matter of a civil nature which is cognizable in the General Court of Justice, and the original general jurisdiction to hear the application and issue such order is vested concurrently in the superior court division and the district court division. Boston v. Freeman, 6 N.C. App. 736, 171 S.E.2d 206 (1969).

Superior Court Jurisdiction in Personal Injury Actions. — The superior court is a court of general jurisdiction and has jurisdiction in all actions for personal injuries caused by negligence, except where its jurisdiction is divested by statute. Morse v. Curtis, 276 N.C. 371, 172 S.E.2d 495 (1970).

Jurisdiction over Action to Recover for Breach of Duties, Negligence, and Fraud in Administration of Estate. — In action to recover for breach of fiduciary duties, negligence, and fraud arising from administration of estate of plaintiff's husband and a trust created under his will, dismissal for want of subject matter jurisdiction on the ground that the claims alleged should have been brought initially before the clerk was improper, since the claims were "justiciable matters of a civil nature," original general jurisdiction over which was vested in the trial division, and their resolution was not part of the administration, settlement, or distribution of an estate so as to make jurisdiction properly exercisable initially by the clerk; moreover, inclusion by plaintiff in her complaint of matters which should have been brought initially before the clerk did not require dismissal for want of subject matter jurisdiction of the entire action. Ingle v. Allen, 53 N.C. App. 627, 281 S.E.2d 406 (1981).

Superior Court Jurisdiction in Summary Ejectment Actions. — When the legislature created the district court division and gave it concurrent original jurisdiction over all matters except probate and matters of decedents' estates, it did not thereby divest the superior court division of any of its original jurisdiction; hence, the superior court division has original jurisdiction over summary ejectment actions. East Carolina Farm Credit v. Salter, 113 N.C. App. 394, 439 S.E.2d 610 (1994).

Superior Court Jurisdiction in Child Custody Actions. — The legislature has enunciated a public policy that every child should have a permanent plan of care. Because adoption is more likely than a custody proceeding between non-parents to result in a permanent plan of care, and because the superior court has jurisdiction over adoptions, that court's jurisdiction supersedes that of the district court with regard to the custody of a child who is the subject of a simultaneous adoption and custody proceeding. Griffin v. Griffin, 118 N.C. App. 400, 456 S.E.2d 329 (1995).

Upon the entry of an interlocutory order of adoption by the superior court, the jurisdiction of the district court with regard to the custody of the child who is the subject of the interlocutory order is in abeyance until such time as the interlocutory decree is vacated, the adoption petition is dismissed, or a final decree of adoption is entered. Griffin v. Griffin, 118 N.C. App. 400, 456 S.E.2d 329 (1995).

Disposition of Case in Superior Court After Transfer to District Court. — After a judge entered his order transferring a case from the superior court division of the General Court of Justice to the district court division, the latter being the proper division in which to try the case, nothing else appearing, disposition of the case thereafter in the superior court was irregular and contrary to the course and practice in the General Court of Justice. Brady v. Town of Chapel Hill, 277 N.C. 720, 178 S.E.2d 446 (1971).

Dispute Over Settlement Agreement. — When petitioner on appeal from an order of the clerk of superior court attacked a prior court decision, there was no merit to her claim that the prior decision was void for lack of subject matter jurisdiction; the trial court had not been addressing an estate matter under G.S. 28A-2-1 but determining whether there were issues of fact about the terms of a settlement agreement following a mediation; it had jurisdiction under G.S. 7A-240 to do this, as it later had jurisdiction to enforce a settlement agreement reached by the parties. In re Estate of Whitaker, 179 N.C. App. 375, 633 S.E.2d 849, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 1902 (2006).

Institution of Action in Improper Trial Division. — It is fairly common practice for an attorney to institute an action in district court, although not the proper division, in order to schedule an earlier trial date than would be available on the superior court calendar. This practice is allowed since original civil jurisdiction is vested concurrently in both divisions and since a judgment is not void or voidable solely because it was rendered in the improper trial division. Circle J. Farm Center, Inc. v. Fulcher, 57 N.C. App. 206, 290 S.E.2d 798 (1982).

Absent proper objection, an action begun in the wrong division may continue in that division to its conclusion. Circle J. Farm Center, Inc. v. Fulcher, 57 N.C. App. 206, 290 S.E.2d 798 (1982).

Civil Forfeiture. — Where the civil forfeiture dispute at the trial level was a "justiciable" matter, the superior court's determination that it had subject matter jurisdiction was proper. State ex rel. Thornburg v. Lot & Bldgs. at 800 Waughtown St., 107 N.C. App. 559, 421 S.E.2d 374, cert. denied, 333 N.C. 170, 424 S.E.2d 915 (1992).

Applied in Chemical Realty Corp. v. Home Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 40 N.C. App. 675, 253 S.E.2d 621 (1979); Church v. Carter, 94 N.C. App. 286, 380 S.E.2d 167 (1989); Schall v. Jennings, 99 N.C. § 7A-241. Original jurisdiction in probate and administration of decedents' estates.

Exclusive original jurisdiction for the probate of wills and the administration of decedents' estates is vested in the superior court division, and is exercised by the superior courts and by the clerks of superior court as ex officio judges of probate according to the practice and procedure provided by law. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

The clerk is a part of the superior court. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

And Continues to Exercise Probate Jurisdiction. — Under this section, the clerk of superior court, "as ex officio judge of probate," continues to exercise probate jurisdiction "according to the practice and procedure provided by law"; and in doing so, he continues to act as "a judicial officer of the superior court division, and not as a separate court" pursuant to G.S. 7A-40. In re Estate of Adamee, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Section Supports G.S. 28A-2-1 Assignment of Authority to Clerk. — The assignment of original authority of probate matters to the clerk in G.S. 28A-2-1 is supported by, and not contravened by, this section. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Reference to "Practice and Procedure Provided by Law". — When this section was enacted in 1965 its reference to "the practice and procedure provided by law" was a reference to Chapter 28, which remained applicable to the estates of all decedents dying on or before October 1, 1975. After that date the reference in this section was to Chapter 28A. Estate of Adamee, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

This section reemphasizes the fact that the district courts have no jurisdiction of probate matters, and except in those instances where the clerk is disqualified to act, it vests probate jurisdiction in the superior courts to be exercised originally by the clerks as ex officio judges of probate in the manner specified in the applicable statutes, that is, "according to the practice and procedure provided by law." Estate of Adamee, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Derivative Probate Jurisdiction of Judge. — In most instances a superior court judge's probate jurisdiction is, in effect, that of an appellate court, because his jurisdiction is derivative and not concurrent. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

Allocation of Jurisdiction Between Clerk and Judge. — This section does not say that concurrent jurisdiction in probate matters is vested in the clerk and the judge of the superior court. It says that probate jurisdiction is vested in the superior court division to be exercised by the superior court and the clerk according to the practice and procedure provided by law. The law, that is, the statutes specifying this practice and procedure, has allocated the jurisdiction between the clerk and the judge. By G.S. 28A-2-1 the clerk is given exclusive original jurisdiction of "the administration, settlement and distribution of estates of decedents" except in cases where the clerk is disqualified to act under G.S. 28A-2-3. When the clerk is disqualified to exercise his jurisdiction the judge has equal authority to perform the clerk's probate duties and, in that sense, he exercises concurrent jurisdiction of probate matters. In all other instances, however, the judge's probate jurisdiction is, in effect, that of an appellate court pursuant to G.S. 7A-251. In re Estate of Adamee, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Although this section provides that exclusive original jurisdiction in probate matters is vested in the "superior court division," G.S. 28A-2-1 specifies that the clerk is given exclusive original jurisdiction in the administration of decedents' estates except in cases where the clerk is disqualified to act. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

Submission of Issue Involving Probate and Nonprobate Matters. — The judge of superior court in the exercise of his inherent powers upon appeal from the clerk's finding had the right to submit to the jury the one issue that would resolve both the right to qualify as administratrix, a probate matter, and the right to share in the decedent's estate, which was not a probate matter. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Strict Construction of Appeal Procedure from Clerk Conflicts with Section. — Under a strict construction of G.S. 1-272 and 1-273 [see now G.S. 1-301.1 et seq.] as they affect G.S. 7A-251, in probate matters originally heard by the clerk, an appeal would lie directly to the judge of superior court in matters of law and legal inference; but in the hearing before the clerk if issues of fact, or both law and fact, were raised, the appeal would lie directly to the superior court for jury trial on the issues of fact. But this strict construction would ignore the "according to the practice and procedure provided by law" mandate of this section. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Procedure in Superior Court on Appeal from Clerk. — In an appeal from an order of the clerk in a probate matter, the superior court is not required to conduct a de novo hearing. Rather, when a finding of fact by the clerk of court is properly challenged by specific exception, the superior court judge will review those findings, and either affirm, reverse, or modify them. If he deems it advisable, he may submit the issue to a jury, which course he could not follow without hearing evidence. In re Estate of Longest, 74 N.C. App. 386, 328 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied, 314 N.C. 330, 333 S.E.2d 488 (1985).

An administratrix' petition for allowance of commissions and attorneys' fees is initially properly brought before the clerk of superior court. In re Green, 9 N.C. App. 326, 176 S.E.2d 19 (1970).

For the efficient administration of justice in respect of civil matters as to which the trial divisions have concurrent original jurisdiction, the respective divisions are constituted proper or improper for the trial and determination of specific actions and proceedings in accordance with the allocations provided in this Article. But no judgment rendered by any court of the trial divisions in any civil action or proceeding as to which the trial divisions have concurrent original jurisdiction is void or voidable for the sole reason that it was rendered by the court of a trial division which by such allocation is improper for the trial and determination of the civil action or proceeding. CASE NOTES

Administrative allocations of case loads between the divisions are not jurisdictional, since a judgment is not void or voidable for the reason that it was rendered by a court of the trial division which by the statutory allocation was the improper division for hearing and determining the matter. Stanback v. Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

The superior court division or the district court division, or both, are designated as "proper" divisions in which to bring a given civil action, and no order of the district court may be overturned merely because it was not the proper division to enter the order. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Party May Move for Transfer of Case as Matter of Right. — Although the case allocations of this Chapter are merely administrative directives, a party may move, as a matter of right, for transfer of a case in accordance with the proper statutory allocation. Stanback v. Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

Institution of Action in Improper Trial Division. — It is fairly common practice for an attorney to institute an action in district court, although not the proper division, in order to schedule an earlier trial date than would be available on the superior court calendar. This practice is allowed since original civil jurisdiction is vested concurrently in both divisions and since a judgment is not void or voidable solely because it was rendered in the improper trial division. Circle J. Farm Center, Inc. v. Fulcher, 57 N.C. App. 206, 290 S.E.2d 798 (1982).

Absent proper objection, an action begun in the wrong division may continue in that division to its conclusion. Circle J. Farm Center, Inc. v. Fulcher, 57 N.C. App. 206, 290 S.E.2d 798 (1982).

Superior Court Jurisdiction of Personal Injury Actions. — The superior court is a court of general jurisdiction and has jurisdiction in all actions for personal injuries caused by negligence, except where its jurisdiction is divested by statute. Morse v. Curtis, 276 N.C. 371, 172 S.E.2d 495 (1970).

Easement from Highway to State-Owned Lake. — The district court had subject matter jurisdiction to determine the parties' rights in an easement over a street from a highway to the edge of a state-owned lake. Woodlief v. Johnson, 75 N.C. App. 49, 330 S.E.2d 265 (1985).

Enforcement of Judgment for Alimony Entered in Superior Court Before Establishment of District Court. — A district court judge may hold a party to a proceeding before him in civil contempt for failure to comply with court orders issued pursuant to a confession of judgment regarding payment of alimony which was entered in the superior court prior to the establishment of a district court for the district in which the order was entered. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

§ 7A-243. Proper division for trial of civil actions generally determined by amount in controversy.

Except as otherwise provided in this Article, the district court division is the proper division for the trial of all civil actions in which the amount in controversy is ten thousand dollars ($10,000) or less; and the superior court division is the proper division for the trial of all civil actions in which the amount in controversy exceeds ten thousand dollars ($10,000).

For purposes of determining the amount in controversy, the following rules apply whether the relief prayed is monetary or nonmonetary, or both, and with respect to claims asserted by complaint, counterclaim, cross-complaint or third-party complaint:

(1) The amount in controversy is computed without regard to interest and costs.

(2) Where monetary relief is prayed, the amount prayed for is in controversy unless the pleading in question shows to a legal certainty that the amount claimed cannot be recovered under the applicable measure of damages. The value of any property seized in attachment, claim and delivery, or other ancillary proceeding, is not in controversy and is not considered in determining the amount in controversy.

(3) Where no monetary relief is sought, but the relief sought would establish, enforce, or avoid an obligation, right or title, the value of the obligation, right, or title is in controversy. Where the owner or legal possessor of property seeks recovery of property on which a lien is asserted pursuant to G.S. 44A-4(a) the amount in controversy is that portion of the asserted lien which is disputed. The judge may require by rule or order that parties make a good faith estimate of the value of any nonmonetary relief sought.

(4)a. Except as provided in subparagraph c of this subdivision, where a single party asserts two or more properly joined claims, the claims are aggregated in computing the amount in controversy.

b. Except as provided in subparagraph c, where there are two or more parties properly joined in an action and their interests are aligned, their claims are aggregated in computing the amount in controversy.

c. No claims are aggregated which are mutually exclusive and in the alternative, or which are successive, in the sense that satisfaction of one claim will bar recovery upon the other.

d. Where there are two or more claims not subject to aggregation the highest claim is the amount in controversy.

(5) Where the value of the relief to a claimant differs from the cost thereof to an opposing party, the higher amount is used in determining the amount in controversy. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1981 (Reg. Sess., 1982), c. 1225; 1985, c. 655, s. 2.)

CASE NOTES

The term "cost," as used in subdivision (5) of this section, means value of loss, whether monetary or nonmonetary. McLaurin v. Winston-Salem Southbound Ry., 87 N.C. App. 413, 361 S.E.2d 95 (1987), aff'd in part, and rev'd in part, 323 N.C. 609, 374 S.E.2d 265 (1988).

District Court Had Jurisdiction. — Where the amount in controversy for plaintiff's claims was in excess of the dollar requirement for a small claim action, but less than the $10,000 requirement for an action in the superior court, the claim was within the jurisdiction of the district court, and the district court erred in concluding that it lacked jurisdiction to hear these claims. Wilson v. Jefferson-Green, Inc., 136 N.C. App. 824, 526 S.E.2d 506, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 161 (2000).

Disposition of Case in Superior Court After Transfer to District Court. — After a judge entered his order transferring a case from the superior court division of the General Court of Justice to the district court division, and the latter was the proper division in which to try the case, nothing else appearing, disposition of the case thereafter in the superior court is irregular and contrary to the course and practice in the General Court of Justice. Brady v. Town of Chapel Hill, 277 N.C. 720, 178 S.E.2d 446 (1971).

Transfer to Superior Court Upheld. — In an action against a railroad seeking a declaration of ownership of land through adverse possession, the district court was correct in granting a motion to transfer the case to the superior court, since the evidence showed that the railroad had received an offer of $18,000.00 from codefendant for the property. McLaurin v. Winston-Salem Southbound Ry., 87 N.C. App. 413, 361 S.E.2d 95 (1987), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 323 N.C. 609, 374 S.E.2d 265 (1988).

The district court division is the proper division without regard to the amount in controversy, for the trial of civil actions and proceedings for annulment, divorce, equitable distribution of property, alimony, child support, child custody and the enforcement of separation or property settlement agreements between spouses, or recovery for the breach thereof. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1981, c. 815, s. 5; 1987, c. 573, s. 1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1998-202, s. 25, effective October 27, 1998, provides: "(a) The Administrative Office of the Courts shall establish pilot programs for the holding of family court within district court districts to be chosen by the Administrative Office of the Courts. Each pilot program shall be conducted following the guidelines for the establishment of family courts contained in the report of the Commission for the Future of Justice and the Courts in North Carolina and shall be assigned to hear all matters involving intrafamily rights, relationships, and obligations, and all juvenile justice matters, including:

"(1) Child abuse, neglect, and dependency;

"(2) Delinquent and undisciplined juvenile matters;

"(3) Emancipation of minors and termination of parental rights;

"(4) Divorce;

"(5) Annulment;

"(6) Equitable distribution;

"(7) Alimony and postseparation support;

"(8) Child custody;

"(9) Child support;

"(10) Paternity;

"(11) Adoption;

"(12) Domestic violence civil restraining orders;

"(13) Abortion consent waivers;

"(15) Guardianship, involuntary commitment, and voluntary admissions to mental health facilities.

"(b) The Administrative Office of the Courts shall report to the Chairs of the Senate and House Appropriations Subcommittees on Justice and Public Safety and to the Fiscal Research Division of the General Assembly by March 1, 2000, on the success of the pilot programs in bringing consistency, efficiency, and fairness to the resolution of family matters and on the impact of the programs on caseloads in the district court division.

"(c) If no funds are appropriated in the 1998-99 fiscal year to implement this section, this section shall not become effective."

Session Laws 1998-202, s. 36, contains a severability clause.

Session Laws 1999-237, s. 1.1, provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations and Capital Improvements Appropriations Act of 1999'."

Session Laws 1999-237, s. 17.16(a) through (d), provides in part that the Administrative

Office of the Courts shall establish a program to educate and sensitize separated or divorcing couples with children about the needs of their children during and after the separation and divorce process. The program shall be administered as part of the family court pilot program, established by Session Laws 1998-202, s. 25. The Administrative Office of the Courts shall ensure involvement and input into the development of the program by persons who have experience in assisting families through and after the divorcing process. The court shall order participation in this educational course if it finds that significant parental conflict has adversely affected the children and that the children's best interests would be served by the party or parties' participation in the course. The Administrative Office of the Courts shall report to the General Assembly not later than March 1, 2001, on the program developed pursuant to this section.

Session Laws 1999-237, s. 21.6(b), provides that funds appropriated in Session Laws 1998-212 for the family court pilot programs established in Session Laws 1998-202 shall not revert but shall remain available to the Administrative Office of the Courts for the 1999-2000 fiscal year.

Session Laws 1999-237, s. 30.2, provides: "Except for statutory changes or other provisions that clearly indicate an intention to have effect beyond the 1999-2001 fiscal biennium, the textual provisions of this act apply only to funds appropriated for, and activities occurring during, the 1999-2001 biennium."

Session Laws 1999-237, s. 30.4, contains a severability clause.

Session Laws 2005-356, s. 4, provides: "The Administrative Office of the Courts shall expand the Family Court Model to additional jurisdictions of the State, as resources allow, shall study the elements of the model that might be adopted without additional funding, and implement those elements in jurisdictions where possible. The Administrative Office of the Courts shall also study the automation of court records to allow queries on civil, criminal, and juvenile matters.

"The Administrative Office of the Courts shall report to the Joint Legislative Committee on Domestic Violence and the North Carolina Courts Commission no later than January 1, 2007, on the results of the studies, the recommendations of the Administrative Office of the Courts, and any steps requiring legislative action to implement the recommendations."

CASE NOTES

This section is merely an administrative allocation of annulment, divorce, alimony, child support and child custody actions to the district court division. Stanback v. Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

Jurisdiction of District Court. — The district court is, under the provisions of this section, a court of general jurisdiction for the trial of civil actions and proceedings for annulment, divorce, alimony, child support, and child custody. Austin v. Austin, 12 N.C. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 420 (1971); Smith v. Smith, 56 N.C. App. 812, 290 S.E.2d 390 (1982).

Alimony Jurisdiction. — The district court has jurisdiction over alimony proceedings and, indeed, the legislature has decreed that it is the only "proper" division for such a proceeding. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Divorce Property Settlement Agreement Disputes. — Transfer of a matter regarding a settlement of a divorce property agreement dispute to the district court was proper as there was no support for a husband's claim that a consent order was set aside only because it was entered in the improper division; the district court was the proper division for litigating the matter under G.S. 7A-244. Small v. Parker, — N.C. App. —, 646 S.E.2d 658, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1398 (2007).

Child Custody Jurisdiction. — The district courts of this State possess general subject matter jurisdiction over child custody disputes. Such matters are in no wise reserved by the Constitution or laws of North Carolina to the exclusive consideration of another tribunal. Therefore, the real question under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act is whether jurisdiction is properly exercised according to the statutory requirements in a particular case. Sloop v. Friberg, 70 N.C. App. 690, 320 S.E.2d 921 (1984).

The district court had jurisdiction over the subject matter of petition filed, signed and verified by the county division of social services, which alleged that the child had been placed with DSS by its mother; that the putative father was unknown; that North Carolina was the home state of the child and no other state had jurisdiction over the child; and that the best interest of the child would be served if the court assumed jurisdiction over him. In re Scearce, 81 N.C. App. 531, 345 S.E.2d 404, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 415, 349 S.E.2d 589 (1986).

The legislature has enunciated a public policy that every child should have a permanent plan of care. Because adoption is more likely than a custody proceeding between non-parents to result in a permanent plan of care, and because the superior court has jurisdiction over adoptions, that court's jurisdiction supersedes that of the district court with regard to the custody of a child who is the subject of a simultaneous adoption and custody proceeding. Griffin v. Griffin, 118 N.C. App. 400, 456 S.E.2d 329 (1995).

Upon the entry of an interlocutory order of adoption by the superior court, the jurisdiction of the district court with regard to the custody of the child who is the subject of the interlocutory order is in abeyance until such time as the interlocutory decree is vacated, the adoption petition is dismissed, or a final decree of adoption is entered. Griffin v. Griffin, 118 N.C. App. 400, 456 S.E.2d 329 (1995).

Continuing Jurisdiction in Child Custody Matters. — Once jurisdiction of the court attaches to a child custody matter, it exists for all time until the cause is fully and completely determined. In re Scearce, 81 N.C. App. 531, 345 S.E.2d 404, cert. denied, 318 N.C. 415, 349 S.E.2d 589 (1986).

The question of subject matter jurisdiction may be raised at any point in a proceeding under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act (G.S. 50A-1, et seq.), and that such jurisdiction cannot be conferred by waiver, estoppel or consent. Sloop v. Friberg, 70 N.C. App. 690, 320 S.E.2d 921 (1984).

Waiver of Venue in Custody and Support Modification Action. — Waiver of venue occurs when a custody and support modification request is filed with the district court in an improper county and there is no timely demand that the trial be conducted in the proper county. In such event, the district court in the improper county appropriately adjudicates the modification request. Brooks v. Brooks, 107 N.C. App. 44, 418 S.E.2d 534 (1992).

Proceedings Pursuant to Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act. — The district court had exclusive original jurisdiction to entertain a proceeding pursuant to the former Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act (G.S. 52A-1, et seq.). Cline v. Cline, 6 N.C. App. 523, 170 S.E.2d 645 (1969).

Same — Determination of Paternity. — Since the district court has exclusive original jurisdiction to entertain a proceeding under the former Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act (G.S. 52A-1, et seq.), it is clear that the district court has jurisdiction to determine the issue of paternity in such a case. Amaker v. Amaker, 28 N.C. App. 558, 221 S.E.2d 917 (1976).

Authority to Enforce Judgments. — It is manifest that the court which has been given the duty to supervise domestic relations matters, including alimony judgments and orders pursuant thereto, must have the authority to enforce those judgments and orders. This is true whether the judgment was entered in the superior court or the district court. It would be anomalous to assume that when the legislature changed the statutory framework to make the district court division the proper agency in which to bring actions for alimony or actions to enforce alimony judgments, it meant to leave supervision of prior alimony judgments to the superior court. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Enforcement of Judgment Entered in Superior Court Before Establishment of District Court. — The district court has the power to enforce by a civil contempt proceeding a confession of judgment entered in the superior court before the establishment of the district court allowing alimony to an appellee. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Transfer of Action for Absolute Divorce Which Has Ended in Mistrial. — The superior court has authority under G.S. 7A-259 to transfer to the district court an action for absolute divorce which has twice ended in mistrial in the superior court and this section gives the district court jurisdiction to try the action. Pence v. Pence, 8 N.C. App. 484, 174 S.E.2d 860 (1970).

An order for the payment of alimony is not a final judgment, since it may be modified upon application of either party; thus, an action for alimony would continue to be "pending" in the court of proper jurisdiction, which is now the district court. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Superior court had no authority to partition marital property pursuant to G.S. 46-1, et seq., where the jurisdiction of the district court had been properly invoked to equitably distribute such marital property. Garrison v. Garrison, 90 N.C. App. 670, 369 S.E.2d 628 (1988).

Where the parties invoked the jurisdiction of the district court to equitably distribute their marital property in the action for absolute divorce and equitable distribution of their marital property, the district court did not lose jurisdiction to equitably distribute the marital property because of its failure to enter a judgment in the equitable distribution case before the special proceeding seeking partition of the marital property was filed in the office of the clerk of superior court. Garrison v. Garrison, 90 N.C. App. 670, 369 S.E.2d 628 (1988).

Where an action dealing with marital property distribution had been previously filed in district court and another action relating to the same subject matter was then filed in superior court, the district court's jurisdiction over the subject matter had already been invoked, and the superior court did not have jurisdiction in the subsequently filed action. Hudson Int'l, Inc. v. Hudson, 145 N.C. App. 631, 550 S.E.2d 571, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 746 (2001).

A hearing on a motion in the cause requesting a modification of a child support order is a "trial" within the meaning of G.S. 7A-198. Miller v. Miller, 92 N.C. App. 351, 374 S.E.2d 467 (1988).

Applied in Bonavia v. Torreso, 7 N.C. App. 21, 171 S.E.2d 108 (1969); Russ v. Russ, 43 N.C. App. 74, 257 S.E.2d 676 (1979); Schall v. Jennings, 99 N.C. App. 343, 393 S.E.2d 130 (1990).

§ 7A-245. Injunctive and declaratory relief to enforce or invalidate statutes; constitutional rights.

(a) The superior court division is the proper division without regard to the amount in controversy, for the trial of civil actions where the principal relief prayed is

(1) Injunctive relief against the enforcement of any statute, ordinance, or regulation;
(2) Injunctive relief to compel enforcement of any statute, ordinance, or regulation;
(3) Declaratory relief to establish or disestablish the validity of any statute, ordinance, or regulation; or
(4) The enforcement or declaration of any claim of constitutional right.

(b) When a case is otherwise properly in the district court division, a prayer for injunctive or declaratory relief by any party not a plaintiff on grounds stated in this section is not ground for transfer. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Legal Periodicals. — For article, "A Powerless Judiciary? The North Carolina Courts' Perceptions of Review of Administrative Action," see 12 N.C. Cent. L.J. 21 (1980).

CASE NOTES

Jurisdiction of injunctive relief generally is vested concurrently in the superior court division and the district court division, because even the four types of injunctive relief which the legislature suggested should be heard in the superior court division are not confined jurisdictionally to that division; the statute merely specifies that the superior court division is the proper division for the trial of such actions. Boston v. Freeman, 6 N.C. App. 736, 171 S.E.2d 206 (1969).

Under subsection (b) of this section a prayer for injunctive relief of any of the types enumerated in subsection (a) is not even grounds for transfer to the superior court division unless such injunctive relief is prayed for by a party plaintiff. So it is abundantly clear that the district court division has jurisdiction to grant injunctive relief in cases docketed in that division. Boston v. Freeman, 6 N.C. App. 736, 171 S.E.2d 206 (1969).

Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies Not Required. — There is no requirement that the agency must exhaust any administrative remedies before seeking the court's help in enforcing an administrative rule adopted by that agency or in seeking a declaration that contracts adopted in violation of the agency's rule are contrary to public policy or the constitution. State v. Whittle Communications, 328 N.C. 456, 402 S.E.2d 556 (1991).

Injunction Not Warranted. — The plaintiff, who sued when he was reinstated as Internal Auditor II, rather than Chief of the Internal Audit Section for DOT, was not entitled to an injunction where the DOT showed that it would be harmed if the position of Chief Internal Auditor could not be filled with anyone other than plaintiff because the section's operations would be disrupted, and the DOT would be unfairly restricted in management of its own operations; additionally, the plaintiff, reinstated in a similar position at same pay grade, was unable to show financial loss or irreparable injury. Hodge v. North Carolina DOT, 137 N.C. App. 247, 528 S.E.2d 22, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 334 (2000).

Challenge to Statutes Regarding Trial Calendar. — Plaintiffs' pending criminal prosecutions did not deprive the superior court of jurisdiction to consider plaintiffs' constitutional challenge to the statutes which authorize the district attorney to set the criminal trial calendar. Simeon v. Hardin, 339 N.C. 358, 451 S.E.2d 858 (1994).

Challenge to Statutes Regarding the Duties of the District Attorney. — The superior court is empowered to review the constitutionality of the statutes which prescribe the duties of the district attorney and to fashion an appropriate remedy should such statutes violate the Constitution. Simeon v. Hardin, 339 N.C. 358, 451 S.E.2d 858 (1994).

Challenge to HIV Testing Rule. — This section conferred jurisdiction on the superior court to determine whether a Commission for Health Services Rule (15A NCAC 19A.0102(a)(3)), eliminating anonymous HIV testing, was unconstitutional. Act-Up Triangle v. Commission for Health Servs., 345 N.C. 699, 483 S.E.2d 388 (1997).

Applied in White v. Pate, 308 N.C. 759, 304 S.E.2d 199 (1983); Brooks v. Gooden, 69 N.C. App. 701, 318 S.E.2d 348 (1984); State v. Whittle Communications, 328 N.C. 456, 402 S.E.2d 556 (1991).

§ 7A-246. Special proceedings; exceptions; guardianship and trust administration.

The superior court division is the proper division, without regard to the amount in controversy, for the hearing and trial of all special proceedings except proceedings under the Protection of the Abused, Neglected or Exploited Disabled Adult Act (Chapter 108A, Article 6, of the General Statutes), proceedings for involuntary commitment to treatment facilities (Chapter 122C, Article 5, of the General Statutes), adoption proceedings (Chapter 48 of the General Statutes) and of all proceedings involving the appointment of guardians and the administration by legal guardians and trustees of express trusts of the estates of their wards and beneficiaries, according to the practice and procedure provided by law for the particular proceeding. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1973, c. 726, s. 5; c. 1378, s. 3; 1981, c. 682, s. 1; 1985, c. 689, s. 4; 1995, c. 88, s. 7.)

CASE NOTES

The legitimation procedure, which is identified in G.S. 49-10 as "a special proceeding in the superior court of the county in which the putative father resides," is within the jurisdictional purview of the clerk of superior court. In re Locklear, 314 N.C. 412, 334 S.E.2d 46 (1985).

Spousal Support from Estate of Incompetent. — The district court was not the proper forum in which to seek spousal support from the estate of an incompetent; the superior court is the only proper division to hear matters regarding the administration of incompetents' estates. Therefore, the incompetent's spouse should have made her demand for support before the clerk of superior court either as a motion in the cause pursuant to G.S. 35A-1207, or as a special proceeding for the sale of her husband's property under G.S. 35A-1307. Cline v. Teich, 92 N.C. App. 257, 374 S.E.2d 462 (1988).

Attorney-Client Privilege. — When the State sought the production of a deceased client's statements to his attorney in a murder investigation, and the State did not convene an investigative grand jury under G.S. 15A-623(h) or strictly comply with G.S. 1A-1, Rule 3, it nonetheless filed its petition in the superior court, which was the proper court to hear a "special proceeding," under G.S. 7A-246, and it could, to accommodate the exigent circumstances presented, hear the matter. OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Preneed Funeral Contracts. — If a purchaser or beneficiary of a preneed contract has been adjudicated incompetent, the clerk of the superior court is a "court of competent jurisdiction" and, a hearing should be held in order for the clerk to make findings establishing that it is in the best interest of the ward to revoke the contract. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. William R. Hoke, Attorney for the North Carolina State Board of Mortuary Science, — N.C.A.G. — (November 3, 1995).

The superior court division is the proper division, without regard to the amount in controversy, for the trial of all civil actions seeking as principal relief the remedy of quo warranto, according to the practice and procedure provided for obtaining that remedy. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1971, c. 377, s. 13.)

§ 7A-248. Condemnation actions and proceedings.

The superior court division is the proper division, without regard to the amount in controversy, for the trial of all actions and proceedings wherein property is being taken by condemnation in exercise of the power of eminent domain, according to the practice and procedure provided by law for the particular action or proceeding. Nothing in this section is in derogation of the validity of such administrative or quasi-judicial procedures for value appraisal as may be provided for the particular action or proceeding prior to the raising of justiciable issues of fact or law requiring determination in the superior court. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Admission of Evidence. — Trial court properly (1) admitted a land owner's statements to an expert, (2) prevented the owner from testifying on potential property uses, (3) allowed the city to offer evidence of sales and listings, and (4) denied a motion to set aside the verdict. City of Wilson v. Hawley, 156 N.C. App. 609, 577 S.E.2d 161, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 193 (2003).

§ 7A-249. Corporate receiverships.

The superior court division is the proper division, without regard to the amount in controversy, for actions for corporate receiverships under Chapter 1, Article 38, of the General Statutes, and proceedings under Chapters 55 (North Carolina Business Corporation Act) and 55A (Nonprofit Corporation Act) of the General Statutes. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1973, c. 503, s. 6; 1989 (Reg. Sess., 1990), c. 1024, s. 3.)

§ 7A-250. Review of decisions of administrative agencies.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsections (b) and (c) of this section, the superior court division is the proper division, without regard to the amount in controversy, for review by original action or proceeding, or by appeal, of the decisions of administrative agencies, according to the practice and procedure provided for the particular action, proceeding, or appeal.

(b) The Court of Appeals shall have jurisdiction to review final orders or decisions of the North Carolina Utilities Commission and the North Carolina Industrial Commission, as provided in Article 5 of this Chapter, and any order or decision of the Commissioner of Insurance described in G.S. 58-2-80.

(c) Appeals from rulings of county game commissions shall be heard in the district court division. The appeal shall be heard de novo before a district court judge sitting in the county in which the game commission whose ruling is being appealed is located. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 108, s. 6; 1973, c. 503, s. 7; 1981, c. 444.)

§ 7A-251. Appeal from clerk to judge.

(a) In all matters properly cognizable in the superior court division which are heard originally before the clerk of superior court, appeals lie to the judge of superior court having jurisdiction from all orders and judgments of the clerk for review in all matters of law or legal inference, in accordance with the procedure provided in Chapter 1 of the General Statutes.

(b) In all matters properly cognizable in the district court division which are heard originally before the clerk of superior court, appeals lie to the judge of district court having jurisdiction from all orders and judgments of the clerk for review in all matters of law or legal inference, in accordance with the procedure provided in Chapter 1 of the General Statutes. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1995, c. 88, s. 8.)

CASE NOTES

Strict Construction of Appeal Procedure from Clerk Conflicts with G.S. 7A-241. — Under a strict construction of G.S. 1-272 and 1-273 [see now G.S. 1-301.1 et seq.] as they affect this section, in probate matters originally heard by the clerk, an appeal would lie directly to the judge of superior court in matters of law and legal inference; but in the hearing before the clerk if issues of fact, or both law and fact, were raised, the appeal would lie directly to the superior court for jury trial on the issues of fact. But this strict construction would ignore the "according to the practice and procedure provided by law" mandate of G.S. 7A-241. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Allocation of Jurisdiction Between Clerk and Judge. — G.S. 7A-241 does not say that concurrent jurisdiction in probate matters is vested in the clerk and the judge of the superior court. It says that probate jurisdiction is vested in the superior court division to be exercised by the superior court and the clerk according to the practice and procedure provided by law. The law, that is, the statutes specifying this practice and procedure, has allocated the jurisdiction between the clerk and the judge. By G.S. 28A-2-1 the clerk is given exclusive original jurisdiction of "the administration, settlement and distribution of estates of decedents" except in cases where the clerk is disqualified to act under G.S. 28A-2-3. When the clerk is disqualified to exercise his jurisdiction the judge has equal authority to perform the clerk's probate duties and, in that sense, he exercises concurrent jurisdiction of probate matters. In all other instances, however, the judge's probate jurisdiction is, in effect, that of an appellate court pursuant to this section. In re Estate of Adamee, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Submission of Issue Involving Probate and Nonprobate Matters. — The judge of superior court in the exercise of his inherent powers upon appeal from the clerk's finding had the right to submit to the jury the one issue that would resolve both the right to qualify as administratrix, which was a probate matter, and the right to share in the decedent's estate, which was not a probate matter. In re Estate of Adamee, 28 N.C. App. 229, 221 S.E.2d 370, rev'd on other grounds, 291 N.C. 386, 230 S.E.2d 541 (1976).

Except as provided in G.S. 7A-271(d), original, exclusive jurisdiction for the adjudication and disposition of infractions lies in the district court division. (1985, c. 764, s. 14; 1985 (Reg. Sess., 1986), c. 852, s. 17.)

§ 7A-254: Reserved for future codification purposes.

Article 21.

Institution, Docketing, and Transferring Civil Causes in the Trial Divisions.

§ 7A-255. Clerk of superior court processes all actions and proceedings.

All civil actions and proceedings in the General Court of Justice are instituted in, and the original records thereof are maintained in, the office of the clerk of superior court, without regard to the trial divisions in which the cause is pending from time to time. When the commencement of an action or proceeding requires issuance of summons, the clerk of superior court issues the summons, and such summons runs and is valid as general process of the State without regard to the trial division in which the action or proceeding may be pending from time to time. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 22.)

§ 7A-256. Causes docketed and retained in originally designated trial division until transferred.

Upon the institution of any action or proceeding in the General Court of Justice the party instituting it designates upon the face of the originating pleading or other originating paper when filed, which trial division of the General Court of Justice he deems proper for disposition of the cause. The clerk dockets the cause for the trial division so designated and the cause is retained for complete disposition in that division unless thereafter transferred in accordance with the provisions of this Article. If no designation is made the clerk dockets the cause for the superior court division, and the cause is retained for complete disposition in that division unless thereafter transferred in accordance with the provisions of this Article. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Any party may move for transfer between the trial divisions as provided in this Article. Failure of a party to move for transfer within the time prescribed is a waiver of any objection to the division, except that there shall be no waiver of the jurisdiction of the superior court division in probate of wills and administration of decedents' estates. Where more than one party is aligned in interest, any party may move for transfer of the entire case, notwithstanding waiver by other parties or coparties. A waiver of objection to the division does not prevent the judge from ordering a transfer on his own motion as provided in this Article. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Party May Move for Transfer of Case as Matter of Right. — Although the case allocations of this Chapter are merely administrative directives, a party may move, as a matter of right, for transfer of a case in accordance with the proper statutory allocation. Stanback v. Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

Failure to Make Timely Objection. — An appellant's attack on the authority of the district court to enter an order holding him in contempt for failure to comply with an alimony consent order entered in the superior court must fail where there is no showing in the record that he entered a timely objection to the jurisdiction or venue of the district court. Peoples v. Peoples, 8 N.C. App. 136, 174 S.E.2d 2 (1970).

Applied in Wyatt v. Wyatt, 69 N.C. App. 747, 318 S.E.2d 251 (1984).

(a) Any party, including the plaintiff, may move on notice to all parties to transfer the civil action or special proceeding to the proper division when the division in which the case is pending is improper under the rules stated in this Subchapter. A motion to transfer to another division may also be made if all parties to the action or proceeding consent thereto, and if the judge deems the transfer will facilitate the efficient administration of justice.

(b) A motion to transfer is filed in the action or proceeding sought to be transferred, but it is heard and determined by a judge of the superior court division whether the case is pending in that division or not. A superior court judge who has jurisdiction under G.S. 7A-47.1 or G.S. 7A-48 in the district or set of districts as defined in G.S. 7A-41.1(a) in which the county is located, may hear and determine such motion. The motion is heard and determined in a county within that district or set of districts, except by consent of the parties.

(c) A motion to transfer by any party other than the plaintiff must be filed within 30 days after the moving party is served with a copy of the pleading which justifies transfer. A motion to transfer by the plaintiff, if based upon the pleading of any other party, must be filed within 20 days after the pleading has been filed. A motion to transfer by any party, based upon an amendment to his own pleading must be made not later than 10 days after such amendment is filed. In no event is a motion to transfer made or determined after the case has been called for trial. Failure to move for transfer within the required time is a waiver of any objection to the division in which the case is pending, except in matters of probate of wills or administration of decedents' estates.

(d) A motion to transfer is in writing and contains:

(1) A short and direct statement of the grounds for transfer with specific reference to the provision of this Chapter which determines the proper division; and

(2) A statement by an attorney for the moving party, or if the party is not represented by counsel, a statement by the party that the motion is made in the good faith belief that it may be properly granted and that he intends no amendment which would affect propriety of transfer.

(e) A motion to transfer is made on notice to all parties.

(f) Objection to the jurisdiction of the court over person or property is waived when a motion to transfer is filed unless such objection is raised at the time of filing or before. In no other case does the filing of a motion to transfer waive any rights under other motions or pleadings, nor does it prevent the filing of other motions or pleadings, except as provided in Rule 12 of the Rules of Civil Procedure. The filing of a motion to transfer does not stay further proceedings in the case except that:

(1) Involuntary dismissal is not ordered while a motion to transfer is pending;

(2) Assignment to a magistrate is not ordered while a motion to transfer is pending; and

(3) A change of venue is not ordered while a motion to transfer is pending, except by consent.

When a change of venue is ordered by consent while a motion to transfer is pending, the motion to transfer is determined in the new venue. The filing of a motion to transfer does not enlarge the time for filing responsive pleadings, nor does the filing of any other motion or pleading waive any rights under the motion to transfer.

(g) The motion for transfer provided herein is the sole method for seeking a transfer, and no transfer is effected by the use of mandamus, injunction, prohibition, certiorari, or other extraordinary writs; provided, however, that transfer may be sought in a responsive pleading when permitted by Rules 7(b) and 12(b) of the Rules of Civil Procedure.

(h) Transfer is effected when an order of transfer is filed. When transfer is ordered, the clerk makes appropriate entries on the dockets of each division and transfers the file of the case to the new division. No further proceedings are taken in the division from which the case is transferred. Papers filed after a transfer are properly filed notwithstanding any erroneous reference to the division from which the case is transferred. All orders made prior to transfer including restraining orders, remain effective after transfer, as if no transfer had been made, until modified or set aside in the division to which the case is transferred.

(i) A claim of new or different relief asserted after transfer has been effected does not authorize a second transfer. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 954, s. 3; 1969, c. 1190, s. 221/2; 1971, c. 377, s. 14; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1037, s. 20.)

Editor's Note. — Rules 7 and 12 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, referred to in this section, are codified as G.S. 1A-1, Rules 7 and 12.

CASE NOTES

There is no such thing as an oral motion to transfer. East Carolina Farm Credit v. Salter, 113 N.C. App. 394, 439 S.E.2d 610 (1994).

Party May Move for Transfer of Case as Matter of Right. — Although the case allocations of this Chapter are merely administrative directives, a party may move, as a matter of right, for transfer of a case in accordance with the proper statutory allocation. Stanback v. Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

Except Where Case Has Reached Trial Stage. — The General Assembly did not intend that cases called for trial or cases already tried and reduced to judgment be transferred under this section as a matter of right. Stanback v.

Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

Because this section clearly applies only to cases in the pleading stage. Stanback v. Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

But where a matter is properly in the district court, a party is not entitled to move for a transfer to superior court. Thus, the prohibition contained in subdivision (f)(1) of this section against involuntary dismissal of an action in which a motion to transfer is pending would not apply. Brooks v. Gooden, 69 N.C. App. 701, 318 S.E.2d 348 (1984).

The right to transfer may be waived by consent or by failure to move for transfer within the prescribed time limits. Amey v. Amey, 71 N.C. App. 76, 321 S.E.2d 458 (1984).

Where an action was improperly brought in the district court, the parties could have moved pursuant to this section to transfer the case to the proper division while the case was pending in the improper division; however, the parties waived this right after the case had been called for trial, and the defect was not jurisdictional. Parslow v. Parslow, 47 N.C. App. 84, 266 S.E.2d 746 (1980).

Effect of Pending Motion to Transfer. — Under subsection (f) of this section, the filing of a motion to transfer does not stay further proceedings in the case, except that: (1) Involuntary dismissal is not ordered while a motion to transfer is pending; and (2) Assignment to a magistrate is not ordered while a motion to transfer is pending. Amey v. Amey, 71 N.C. App. 76, 321 S.E.2d 458 (1984).

Whether to proceed in an action pending a motion to transfer rests within the sound discretion of the court. Langley v. Moore, 64 N.C. App. 520, 307 S.E.2d 817 (1983).

Grant of Subsequent Motions While Motion to Transfer Was Pending Held Error. — By striking the answer and dismissing counterclaims under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 12(b)(6), the district court in effect entered two "involuntary dismissals." Therefore, the district court erred, as it considered plaintiff's substantive, and subsequently filed, motions, before ruling on defendant's earlier filed motion to transfer. Amey v. Amey, 71 N.C. App. 76, 321 S.E.2d 458 (1984).

Action Instituted in Superior Court Prior to Establishment of District Court. — Where an action was instituted in the superior court prior to the establishment of the district court in the county, and where no order was ever entered transferring the action from the superior court to the district court, a district court judge was without jurisdiction to enter an order in the action. Hodge v. Hodge, 9 N.C. App. 601, 176 S.E.2d 795 (1970).

The district court had no authority to modify a child-custody order entered in the superior court where the cause was pending in the superior court when district courts were established in the county, and where no order had been entered in the superior court transferring the cause to the district court pursuant to G.S. 7A-259, nor had a motion to transfer been made pursuant to this section. In re Hopper, 9 N.C. App. 730, 177 S.E.2d 326 (1970).

Applied in In re Hopper, 11 N.C. App. 611, 182 S.E.2d 228 (1971); Ervin Co. v. Hunt, 26 N.C. App. 755, 217 S.E.2d 93 (1975); Wyatt v. Wyatt, 69 N.C. App. 747, 318 S.E.2d 251 (1984).

(a) If no party has moved for transfer within the time allowed to parties, any superior court judge who may hear and determine motions to transfer may order a transfer upon his own motion for the purpose of efficient administration of the trial divisions at any time before the case is calendared for trial. Transfer is not made on the judge's own motion unless the pleadings clearly show that the case is pending in an improper division. No hearing is held on such transfers, but the parties are given prompt notice when transfer is effected. Nothing in this section affects the power of the clerk to transfer matters and proceedings pending before him when an issue of fact is raised.

(b) When a district court is established in a district, any superior court judge authorized to hear and determine motions to transfer may, on his own motion, subject to the requirements of subsection (a), transfer to the district court cases pending in the superior court. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 23.)

CASE NOTES

Causes Pending in Superior Court at Time of Establishment of District Court. — All causes pending in the superior court at the time of the establishment of the district court remained pending in the superior court unless and until transferred to the district court by proper order. In re Hopper, 11 N.C. App. 611, 182 S.E.2d 228, cert. denied, 279 N.C. 726, 184 S.E.2d 884 (1971).

Assumption of Compliance with Subsection (a). — Absent objection and exception to an order of transfer, it would be assumed that the provisions of subsection (a) of this section were complied with. Wendell Tractor & Implement Co. v. Lee, 9 N.C. App. 524, 176 S.E.2d 854 (1970).

This section includes giving prompt notice to the parties when the transfer is effected. Wendell Tractor & Implement Co. v. Lee, 9 N.C. App. 524, 176 S.E.2d 854 (1970).

When Judge Not Authorized to Order Transfer. — A judge, on his own motion, is not authorized to order a transfer once the case has reached the trial stage and has been calendared. Stanback v. Stanback, 287 N.C. 448, 215 S.E.2d 30 (1975).

Transfer of Action for Absolute Divorce Which Has Ended in Mistrial. — The superior court has authority under this section to transfer to the district court an action for absolute divorce which has twice ended in mistrial in the superior court, and G.S. 7A-244 gives the district court jurisdiction to try the action. Pence v. Pence, 8 N.C. App. 484, 174 S.E.2d 860 (1970).

§ 7A-260. Review of transfer matters.

Orders transferring or refusing to transfer are not immediately appealable, even for abuse of discretion. Such orders are reviewable only by the appellate division on appeal from a final judgment. If on review, such an order is found erroneous, reversal or remand is not granted unless prejudice is shown. If, on review, a new trial or partial new trial is ordered for other reasons, the appellate division may specify the proper division for new trial and order a transfer thereto. Article 22.

Jurisdiction of the Trial Divisions in Criminal Actions.

General jurisdiction for the trial of criminal actions is vested in the superior court and the district court divisions of the General Court of Justice. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Jurisdiction of District Court. — Under this section and G.S. 7A-271, the district court has original jurisdiction for the trial of all criminal actions below the grade of felony, that is, of all prosecutions for misdemeanors; and the district court has exclusive original jurisdiction of all misdemeanors except in the four specific instances defined in subdivisions (a)(1), (a)(2), (a)(3) and (a)(4) of G.S. 7A-271. State v. Wall, 271 N.C. 675, 157 S.E.2d 363 (1967).

State Has Burden to Show Jurisdiction. — When jurisdiction is challenged in a criminal case, the State must carry the burden and show beyond a reasonable doubt that North Carolina has jurisdiction to try the accused. Former cases holding that a challenge to the jurisdiction is an affirmative defense with the burden of persuasion on the accused are no longer authoritative. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

The question of jurisdiction of the courts in this State in a criminal case is not an independent, distinct, substantive matter of exemption, immunity or defense and ought not to be regarded as an affirmative defense on which the defendant must bear the burden of proof. Rather, jurisdiction is a matter which, when contested, should be proven by the prosecution as a prerequisite to the authority of the court to enter judgment. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

(a) The superior court has exclusive, original jurisdiction over all criminal actions not assigned to the district court division by this Article, except that the superior court has jurisdiction to try a misdemeanor:

(1) Which is a lesser included offense of a felony on which an indictment has been returned, or a felony information as to which an indictment has been properly waived; or

(2) When the charge is initiated by presentment; or

(3) Which may be properly consolidated for trial with a felony under G.S. 15A-926;

(4) To which a plea of guilty or nolo contendere is tendered in lieu of a felony charge; or

(5) When a misdemeanor conviction is appealed to the superior court for trial de novo, to accept a guilty plea to a lesser included or related charge.

(b) Appeals by the State or the defendant from the district court are to the superior court. The jurisdiction of the superior court over misdemeanors appealed from the district court to the superior court for trial de novo is the same as the district court had in the first instance, and when that conviction resulted from a plea arrangement between the defendant and the State pursuant to which misdemeanor charges were dismissed, reduced, or modified, to try those charges in the form and to the extent that they subsisted in the district court immediately prior to entry of the defendant and the State of the plea arrangement.

(c) When a district court is established in a district, any superior court judge presiding over a criminal session of court shall order transferred to the district court any pending misdemeanor which does not fall within the provisions of subsection (a), and which is not pending in the superior court on appeal from a lower court.

(d) The criminal jurisdiction of the superior court includes the jurisdiction to dispose of infractions only in the following circumstances:

(1) If the infraction is a lesser-included violation of a criminal action properly before the court, the court must submit the infraction for the jury's consideration in factually appropriate cases.

(2) If the infraction is a lesser-included violation of a criminal action properly before the court, or if it is a related charge, the court may accept admissions of responsibility for the infraction. A proper pleading for the criminal action is sufficient to support a finding of responsibility for the lesser-included infraction.

(e) The superior court has exclusive jurisdiction over all hearings held pursuant to G.S. 15A-1345(e) where the district court had accepted a defendant's plea of guilty or no contest to a felony under the provisions of G.S. 7A-272(c), except that the district court shall have jurisdiction to hear these matters with the consent of the State and the defendant. I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Appeals in Civil Causes Distinguished from Appeals in Criminal Causes. — The constitutional and statutory structure of the General Court of Justice provides that, generally, appeals from the district court in civil causes go to the Court of Appeals, while appeals in criminal causes must first go to the superior court. State v. Killian, 25 N.C. App. 224, 212 S.E.2d 419 (1975).

Conviction Based on Plea Agreement. — This section sets forth an express exception where the conviction appealed from is the product of a plea agreement. State v. Monroe, 57 N.C. App. 597, 292 S.E.2d 21 (1982).

State Has Burden to Show Jurisdiction. — When jurisdiction is challenged in a criminal case, the State must carry the burden and show beyond a reasonable doubt that North Carolina has jurisdiction to try the accused. Former cases holding that a challenge to the jurisdiction is an affirmative defense with the burden of persuasion on the accused are no longer authoritative. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

The question of jurisdiction of the courts in this State in a criminal case is not an independent, distinct, substantive matter of exemption, immunity or defense and ought not to be regarded as an affirmative defense on which the defendant must bear the burden of proof. Rather, jurisdiction is a matter which, when contested, should be proven by the prosecution as a prerequisite to the authority of the court to enter judgment. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

When the record shows a lack of jurisdiction in the lower court, the appropriate action on the part of the appellate court is to arrest judgment or vacate any order entered without authority. State v. Felmet, 302 N.C. 173, 273 S.E.2d 708 (1981).

Presumption of Regular Procedure. — On appeal to the superior court from a conviction in the district court, a presumption of regular procedure in the district court can be inferred. State v. Joyner, 33 N.C. App. 361, 235 S.E.2d 107 (1977).

The entire record may be considered on appeal to the superior court from a conviction in the district court in searching for evidence that proper procedure was followed. State v. Joyner, 33 N.C. App. 361, 235 S.E.2d 107 (1977).

The imposition of a greater sentence after a conviction by a jury in the superior court, upon appeal from a district court, does not violate a defendant's constitutional rights. State v. Martin, 16 N.C. App. 609, 192 S.E.2d 596 (1972).

The offense of habitual impaired driving constitutes a separate substantive felony offense which is properly within the original exclusive jurisdiction of the superior court. State v. Priddy, 115 N.C. App. 547, 445 S.E.2d 610, cert. denied, 337 N.C. 805, 449 S.E.2d 751 (1994).

Because felonious habitual impaired driving is a substantive felony offense, the Superior Court has jurisdiction pursuant to this section. State v. Baldwin, 117 N.C. App. 713, 453 S.E.2d 193 (1995).

Appeal of District Court's Judgment Revoking Probation. — Defendant was required to appeal the district court's judgment revoking his probation to the superior court before he was allowed to appeal that judgment to the court of appeals, and the court of appeals dismissed defendant's appeal from the district court's judgment because he had not appealed that judgment to the superior court. State v. Harless, 160 N.C. App. 78, 584 S.E.2d 339, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1669 (2003).

When a district court revokes a defendant's probation, that defendant's appeal is to the superior court rather than the Court of Appeals of North Carolina; thus, G.S. 15A-1347, rather than G.S. 7A-272(d), governed defendant's appeal of a probation revocation and the court of appeals lacked jurisdiction to hear the appeal. State v. Hooper, 358 N.C. 122, 591 S.E.2d 514, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 12 (2004).

Sentence Contrary to Law Still Binding and Not Void Ab Initio. — Since the superior court had exclusive, original jurisdiction over defendant's motion for appropriate relief and had ordered that defendant's sentences on guilty pleas to armed robbery be served concurrently and not consecutively, the Department of Corrections could not refuse to obey an order to change defendant's records to reflect concurrent sentencing because, even though the sentencing order was contrary to law, the order was voidable, not void ab initio, and the order was binding on the Department until vacated or corrected; by refusing to honor the order, the Department was usurping the judiciary's exclusive power and was violating the separation of powers doctrine under N.C. Const. art. I, § 6. State v. Ellis, 167 N.C. App. 276, 605 S.E.2d 168, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 2161 (2004), rev'd 361 N.C. 200, 639 S.E.2d 425 (2007) (remanded to allow defendant to withdraw his guilty plea).

II. JURISDICTION OVER MISDEMEANORS.

A. In General.

Jurisdiction of Superior Court over Misdemeanors. — The superior court may try a misdemeanor when the conviction is appealed from the district court to the superior court for trial de novo, but has no jurisdiction to try a defendant upon warrants charging misdemeanors, where defendant has not first been tried upon the warrants in the district court and appealed to the superior court. State v. Taylor, 8 N.C. App. 544, 174 S.E.2d 872 (1970).

Where a prosecution was instituted under statutes which created misdemeanors, for which the district court has exclusive, original jurisdiction, until defendants were tried and convicted in the district court and appealed to the superior court for a trial de novo that court had no jurisdiction of the case. State v. Bryant, 280 N.C. 407, 185 S.E.2d 854 (1972).

The superior court has no jurisdiction to try an accused for a specific misdemeanor on the warrant of an inferior court unless he is first tried and convicted for such misdemeanor in the inferior court and appeals to the superior court from the sentence pronounced against him by the inferior court on his conviction for such misdemeanor. State v. Craig, 21 N.C. App. 51, 203 S.E.2d 401 (1974); State v. Robinson, 40 N.C. App. 514, 253 S.E.2d 311 (1979); State v. Felmet, 302 N.C. 173, 273 S.E.2d 708 (1981); State v. Martin, 97 N.C. App. 19, 387 S.E.2d 211 (1990).

The Superior Courts of North Carolina have exclusive original jurisdiction over all criminal actions not assigned to the district court division except that the superior courts have jurisdiction to try a misdemeanor offense where (1) it is a lesser included offense of a felony properly before the court by indictment or information, (2) the charge is initiated by presentment, (3) the misdemeanor is properly consolidated for trial with a felony, (4) a plea of guilty or nolo contendere is tendered in lieu of a felony charge, or (5) a misdemeanor conviction is appealed for trial de novo, to accept a guilty plea to a lesser included or related charge. State v. Petersilie, 105 N.C. App. 233, 414 S.E.2d 41 (1992), rev'd on other grounds, 334 N.C. 169, 432 S.E.2d 832 (1993).

Because misdemeanor charges were not included in an indictment, as required by G.S. 15A-922(g), a superior court did not have jurisdiction to try them under G.S. 7A-271. State v. Price, — N.C. App. —, 611 S.E.2d 891 (2005).

Derivative Jurisdiction. — Jurisdiction of the superior court on appeal from a conviction in district court is derivative. State v. Joyner, 33 N.C. App. 361, 235 S.E.2d 107 (1977).

The jurisdiction of the superior court for the trial of a misdemeanor, unless a circumstance enumerated in subsection (a) of this section arises, is derivative and arises only upon appeal from a conviction of the misdemeanor in district court. State v. Felmet, 302 N.C. 173, 273 S.E.2d 708 (1981); State v. Martin, 97 N.C. App. 19, 387 S.E.2d 211 (1990).

Dismissal of Appeal for Failure to Show Jurisdiction. — The Court of Appeals did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion to amend the record to show derivative jurisdiction of a misdemeanor in the superior court through appeal of a district court conviction and then dismissing defendant's appeal for failure of the record to show jurisdiction. State v. Felmet, 302 N.C. 173, 273 S.E.2d 708 (1981).

Where Court of Appeals orders that a new trial be held in a misdemeanor prosecution originally tried in a municipal court and then tried de novo in the superior court, the case on retrial maintains its status as a case pending in the superior court on appeal from a lower court, and defendant's motion to quash the indictment on the ground that the district court has jurisdiction of the case is properly denied. State v. Patton, 5 N.C. App. 164, 167 S.E.2d 821 (1969).

Effect of Issuing Second Warrant Charging Same Offense. — Where defendant was tried and convicted in district court, appealed to superior court, and subsequently moved to dismiss the charge pursuant to the former Speedy Trial Act, former G.S. 15A-701 through 15A-704, the court allowed defendant's motion and ordered dismissal of the case without prejudice; on that same day the magistrate issued a new warrant charging the same offense; and the trial judge, later during the same session, reopened the matter, heard additional evidence and arguments, and dismissed the case without prejudice to the State, the superior court was not divested of jurisdiction by the magistrate's issuing the second warrant, nor did the State, by securing the second warrant, waive whatever rights to appellate review it might have had. State v. Morehead, 46 N.C. App. 39, 264 S.E.2d 400, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 201, 269 S.E.2d 615 (1980).

Error for Superior Court to Instruct on Specific Misdemeanor Not Tried in District Court. — The trial judge, on trial de novo in the superior court, erred in instructing the jury on reckless driving under subsection (a) of G.S. 20-140 and should have instructed on former subsection (c) of G.S. 20-140, where the defendant had been charged in the district court with drunken driving under former G.S. 20-138 (see now G.S. 20-138.1) but was convicted of the lesser included offense under former subsection (c) of G.S. 20-140. State v. Robinson, 40 N.C. App. 514, 253 S.E.2d 311 (1979).

B. Charge Initiated by Presentment.

"Presentment" Defined. — In this jurisdiction, the accepted definition of the word "presentment" is as follows: "A presentment is an accusation of crime made by a grand jury on its own motion upon its own knowledge or observation, or upon information from others without any bill of indictment, but, since the enactment of former G.S. 15-137 (see now G.S. 15A-641), trials upon presentments have been abolished and a presentment amounts to nothing more than an instruction by the grand jury to the public prosecuting attorney to frame a bill of indictment." State v. Wall, 271 N.C. 675, 157 S.E.2d 363 (1967).

"Initiated" Construed. — The term "initiated" refers to how the criminal process in superior court began, not to what the first criminal process of any kind in any court was. State v. Gunter, 111 N.C. App. 621, 433 S.E.2d 191, appeal dismissed, 335 N.C. 561, 439 S.E.2d 154 (1993).

Language of Presentment and Indictment May Differ. — Where the language of the presentment and that contained in the bills of indictment, while not identical, dealt with the same subject matter and the charges contained in the bills were in fact initiated by the presentment, the superior court had original jurisdiction under this section. State v. Cole, 294 N.C. 304, 240 S.E.2d 355 (1978).

Initiation Not Shown. — A prosecution for violation of former G.S. 20-105 governing unauthorized use of a conveyance was not "initiated by presentment" within the meaning of subdivision (a)(2). Although the prerequisites to conviction for the felony charged in the warrant and the misdemeanor charged in the indictment were different, the prosecution for the alleged criminal conduct of defendant in respect of the alleged unlawful taking of a car was initiated by warrant issued by the district court. It was not initiated in the superior court by presentment or otherwise. State v. Wall, 271 N.C. 675, 157 S.E.2d 363 (1967).

The superior court had neither exclusive original jurisdiction of the misdemeanors under subdivisions (a)(1)-(5) of this section, nor derivative jurisdiction under subsection (b) where the record indicated that defendant's arrest sprang from indictments issued by the grand jury which originated in the superior court, and there was no indication in the record that a presentment preceded the indictments. State v. Petersilie, 105 N.C. App. 233, 414 S.E.2d 41 (1992), rev'd on other grounds, 334 N.C. 169, 432 S.E.2d 832 (1993).

Jurisdiction in Superior Court Shown. — This section grants jurisdiction to the superior court in any action already properly pending in the district court if the grand jury issues a presentment and that presentment is the first accusation of the offense within superior court. Therefore, defendant's driving while impaired (DWI) action was properly under the jurisdiction of the district court and not the superior court when the citation was issued, but as soon as the grand jury issued the presentment, the superior court acquired jurisdiction. State v. Gunter, 111 N.C. App. 621, 433 S.E.2d 191, appeal dismissed, 335 N.C. 561, 439 S.E.2d 154 (1993).

C. Consolidation with Felony.

A "driving under the influence" misdemeanor charge and a manslaughter felony charge were based on the same transaction within the meaning of subdivision (a)(3). And therefore the superior court had jurisdiction of both charges and had the right to proceed to the trial on the misdemeanor charge under the joinder exception of this section, the "original jurisdiction" of the district court having been lost after nolle prosequi was entered as to the misdemeanor in that court. State v. Karbas, 28 N.C. App. 372, 221 S.E.2d 98, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 618, 223 S.E.2d 394 (1976).

Death by Vehicle and Failure to Stop at Scene of Accident. — In a prosecution on separate bills of indictment for failing to stop an automobile at the scene of an accident in which an individual was killed (G.S. 20-166(a)) and death by vehicle (G.S. 20-141.4), where the two offenses were based on the same act or transaction, the superior court had jurisdiction of the misdemeanor offense of death by vehicle. State v. Fearing, 304 N.C. 471, 284 S.E.2d 487 (1981).

Consolidation Upheld. — Trial court properly consolidated charges of possession of cocaine and of possession of drug paraphernalia with murder charges. State v. Chavis, 134 N.C. App. 546, 518 S.E.2d 241 (1999).

D. Guilty Plea to Lesser Included or Related Charge.

Condition for Acceptance of Guilty Plea on Related Charge. — The acceptance of a plea of guilty by the superior court to a related charge in misdemeanor appeals from the district court is conditioned upon the requirement that the related charge be contained in a written information. State v. Craig, 21 N.C. App. 51, 203 S.E.2d 401 (1974).

No Jurisdiction to Accept Plea. — The superior court does not have jurisdiction to accept a plea of guilty to a charge of reckless driving when defendant is before the court on appeal from a conviction in the district court for operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. State v. Craig, 21 N.C. App. 51, 203 S.E.2d 401 (1974).

E. Particular Misdemeanors.

Violation of G.S. 14-33 or G.S. 14-34. — The superior court has no original jurisdiction of a trial for the misdemeanor violation of either G.S. 14-33(b)(1) or G.S. 14-34, for one of which defendant was charged and for one of which he was convicted. Its jurisdiction of these offenses is derivative and arises only upon appeal from a conviction in district court of the misdemeanor for which he stands charged in superior court or the misdemeanor with respect to which the jury returned a guilty verdict in superior court. State v. Caldwell, 21 N.C. App. 723, 205 S.E.2d 322 (1974).

Violation of G.S. 20-28. — A superior court has no original jurisdiction in a case involving a violation of G.S. 20-28(b), a misdemeanor; the jurisdiction of the superior court in such cases is derivative, and where the record does not disclose that defendant was convicted and sentenced in district court for this offense, the superior court is without jurisdiction to try him, and the trial in the superior court for that charge upon the original warrant is a nullity. State v. Guffey, 283 N.C. 94, 194 S.E.2d 827 (1973).

Violation of Former G.S. 20-105. — The warrant on which defendant was arrested and bound over to superior court charged a felony, to wit, the larceny of an automobile valued at more than $200.00, and the indictment charged a misdemeanor, to wit, a violation of former G.S. 20-105, the "temporary larceny" statute. Since defendant, in the superior court, was not tried for or charged with any felony, subdivisions (a)(1), (a)(3), and (a)(4) of this section did not apply to the criminal prosecution for the violation of former G.S. 20-105. State v. Wall, 271 N.C. 675, 157 S.E.2d 363 (1967).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Jurisdiction over Misdemeanor Appeals. — See opinion of Attorney General to the Honorable Hubert E. May, Special Judge, Superior Court, 40 N.C.A.G. 145 (1969).

§ 7A-272. Jurisdiction of district court; concurrent jurisdiction in guilty or no contest pleas for certain felony offenses; appellate and appropriate relief procedures applicable.

(a) Except as provided in this Article, the district court has exclusive, original jurisdiction for the trial of criminal actions, including municipal ordinance violations, below the grade of felony, and the same are hereby declared to be petty misdemeanors.

(b) The district court has jurisdiction to conduct preliminary examinations and to bind the accused over for trial upon waiver of preliminary examination or upon a finding of probable cause, making appropriate orders as to bail or commitment.

(c) With the consent of the presiding district court judge, the prosecutor, and the defendant, the district court has jurisdiction to accept a defendant's plea of guilty or no contest to a Class H or I felony if:

(1) The defendant is charged with a felony in an information filed pursuant to G.S. 15A-644.1, the felony is pending in district court, and the defendant has not been indicted for the offense; or

(2) The defendant has been indicted for a criminal offense but the defendant's case is transferred from superior court to district court pursuant to G.S. 15A-1029.1.

(d) Provisions in Chapter 15A of the General Statutes apply to a plea authorized under subsection (c) of this section as if the plea had been entered in superior court, so that a district court judge is authorized to act in these matters in the same manner as a superior court judge would be authorized to act if the plea had been entered in superior court, and appeals that are authorized in these matters are to the appellate division. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1995 (Reg. Sess., 1996), c. 725, ss. 1, 2.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Jurisdiction over Misdemeanors.
III. Preliminary Examinations.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

State Has Burden to Show Jurisdiction. — The question of jurisdiction of the courts in this State in a criminal case is not an independent, distinct, substantive matter of exemption, immunity or defense and ought not to be regarded as an affirmative defense on which the defendant must bear the burden of proof. Rather, jurisdiction is a matter which, when contested, should be proven by the prosecution as a prerequisite to the authority of the court to enter judgment. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

When jurisdiction is challenged, in a criminal case, the State must carry the burden and show beyond a reasonable doubt that North Carolina has jurisdiction to try the accused. Former cases holding that a challenge to the jurisdiction is an affirmative defense with the burden of persuasion on the accused are no longer authoritative. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

Construction with G.S. 15A-1347. — Appeals procedure in G.S. 7A-272(d) prevail over the general rule of G.S. 15A-1347; therefore, after defendant's felony probation was revoked in district court, defendant was allowed to appeal the case to the North Carolina Court of Appeals instead of a superior court. State v. Hooper, 158 N.C. App. 654, 582 S.E.2d 331, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1223 (2003).

Jurisdiction over a District Court's Revocation of Probation. — When a district court revokes a defendant's probation, that defendant's appeal is to the superior court rather than the Court of Appeals of North Carolina; thus, G.S. 15A-1347, rather than G.S. 7A-272(d), governed defendant's appeal of a probation revocation and the court of appeals lacked jurisdiction to hear the appeal. State v. Hooper, 358 N.C. 122, 591 S.E.2d 514, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 12 (2004).

II. JURISDICTION OVER MISDEMEANORS.

The district court has exclusive original jurisdiction of misdemeanors, including actions to determine liability of persons for the support of dependents in any criminal proceeding. Cline v. Cline, 6 N.C. App. 523, 170 S.E.2d 645 (1969).

Where a prosecution was instituted under statutes which created misdemeanors, for which the district court had exclusive, original jurisdiction, until defendants were tried and convicted in the district court and appealed to the superior court for a trial de novo that court had no jurisdiction of the case. State v. Bryant, 280 N.C. 407, 185 S.E.2d 854 (1972).

It is fundamental that the district courts of this state have exclusive original jurisdiction of misdemeanors, and the jurisdiction of the superior court is derivative and arises only upon an appeal from a conviction of the misdemeanor in the district court. State v. McKoy, 44 N.C. App. 516, 261 S.E.2d 226, cert. denied, 299 N.C. 546, 265 S.E.2d 405 (1980).

But Court Is Without Jurisdiction to Impose Sentence for Felony. — District courts are without jurisdiction to impose sentences in felony cases. State v. Jackson, 14 N.C. App. 75, 187 S.E.2d 470 (1972).

What Jurisdictional Issues May Arise. — Because the General Assembly has given the District Court Division statewide jurisdiction to hear misdemeanors, jurisdictional issues should arise only to determine: (1) whether North Carolina courts can hear the case, and (2) which division of the General Court of Justice must first try the matter. State v. Bolt, 81 N.C. App. 133, 344 S.E.2d 51 (1986).

Derivative Jurisdiction of Superior Court over Misdemeanors. — The jurisdiction of the superior court over a misdemeanor, unless a circumstance enumerated in G.S. 7A-271(a) arises, is a derivative and arises only upon appeal from a conviction of the misdemeanor in district court. State v. Martin, 97 N.C. App. 19, 387 S.E.2d 211 (1990).

Generally, the superior court has no jurisdiction to try a defendant on a misdemeanor charge unless he was first tried, convicted and sentenced in district court and then appeals the judgment for a trial de novo in superior court. State v. Martin, 97 N.C. App. 19, 387 S.E.2d 211 (1990).

The constitutional right of a defendant charged with a misdemeanor to have a jury trial is not infringed by the fact that he has first to submit to trial without a jury in the district court and then appeal to superior court in order to obtain a jury trial. State v. Sherron, 4 N.C. App. 386, 166 S.E.2d 836 (1969).

Demand for Jury Trial Not Ground for Removal. — Where, upon defendant's demand for a jury trial on a charge of driving without an operator's license, the district court ordered defendant to appear at the next session of superior court, the district judge apparently being of opinion that the defendant by moving for a jury trial could avoid trial in the district court and have his case transferred forthwith for trial in the superior court, the district court acted under a misapprehension of the law and erred by failing to proceed to trial of defendant for this criminal offense in accordance with the accusation contained in the warrant. State v. Wall, 271 N.C. 675, 157 S.E.2d 363 (1967).

Where Court of Appeals orders that a new trial be held in a misdemeanor prosecution originally tried in a municipal court and then tried de novo in the superior court, the case on retrial maintains its status as a case pending in the superior court on appeal from a lower court, and defendant's motion to quash the indictment on the ground that the district court has jurisdiction of the case is properly denied. State v. Patton, 5 N.C. App. 164, 167 S.E.2d 821 (1969).

Effect of Issuing Second Warrant Charging Same Offense. — Where defendant was tried and convicted in district court, appealed to superior court, and subsequently moved to dismiss the charge pursuant to the former Speedy Trial Act, former G.S. 15A-701 through 15A-704; the court allowed defendant's motion and ordered dismissal of the case without prejudice; on that same day the magistrate issued a new warrant charging the same offense; and the trial judge, later during the same session, reopened the matter, heard additional evidence and arguments and dismissed the case without prejudice to the State, the superior court was not divested of jurisdiction by the magistrate's issuing the second warrant, nor did the State, by securing the second warrant, waive whatever rights to appellate review it might have had. State v. Morehead, 46 N.C. App. 39, 264 S.E.2d 400, cert. denied, 300 N.C. 201, 269 S.E.2d 615 (1980).

Driving Under the Influence. — This section grants jurisdiction to the superior court in any action already properly pending in the district court if the grand jury issues a presentment and that presentment is the first accusation of the offense within superior court. Therefore, defendant's driving while impaired (DWI) action was properly under the jurisdiction of the district court and not the superior court when the citation was issued, but as soon as the grand jury issued the presentment, the superior court acquired jurisdiction. State v. Gunter, 111 N.C. App. 621, 433 S.E.2d 191, appeal dismissed, 335 N.C. 561, 439 S.E.2d 154 (1993).

A "driving under the influence" misdemeanor charge and a manslaughter felony charge were based on the same transaction within the meaning of G.S. 7A-271(a)(3), and therefore the superior court had jurisdiction of both charges and had the right to proceed to the trial on the misdemeanor charge under the joinder exception of G.S. 7A-271, the "original jurisdiction" of the district court having been lost after nolle prosequi was entered as to the misdemeanor in that court. State v. Karbas, 28 N.C. App. 372, 221 S.E.2d 98, cert. denied, 289 N.C. 618, 223 S.E.2d 394 (1976).

Violation of G.S. 20-7(a). — The district court had jurisdiction to try defendant on a warrant charging operation of an automobile without an operator's license in violation of G.S. 20-7(a). State v. Wall, 271 N.C. 675, 157 S.E.2d 363 (1967).

III. PRELIMINARY EXAMINATIONS.

A preliminary hearing is not a trial, but is simply an inquiry into whether the accused should be discharged or whether, on the other hand, there is probable cause to submit the State's evidence to the grand jury and seek a bill of indictment to the end that the accused may be placed upon trial. State v. Cradle, 281 N.C. 198, 188 S.E.2d 296, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1047, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 2d 499 (1972); State v. Bryant, 283 N.C. 227, 195 S.E.2d 509 (1973).

Preliminary Hearing Not Required. — A preliminary hearing is not a necessary step in the prosecution of a person accused of crime, and an accused person is not entitled to a preliminary hearing as a matter of substantive right. State v. Bryant, 283 N.C. 227, 195 S.E.2d 509 (1973).

A preliminary hearing is not an essential prerequisite to the finding of a bill of indictment and it is proper to try the accused upon a bill of indictment without a preliminary hearing. State v. Bryant, 283 N.C. 227, 195 S.E.2d 509 (1973).

When performing his duties under subsection (b) of this section, the district judge sits only as an examining magistrate in all felony cases, because the trial of felonies is beyond the jurisdiction of the district court. State v. Bass, 280 N.C. 435, 186 S.E.2d 384 (1972); State v. Bryant, 283 N.C. 227, 195 S.E.2d 509 (1973).

In his capacity as examining magistrate, the district judge is concerned only with determining (1) whether a felonious offense has been committed, and (2) whether there is probable cause to charge the prisoner therewith. State v. Bass, 280 N.C. 435, 186 S.E.2d 384 (1972).

The district judge, in his capacity as committing magistrate, passes only on the narrow question of whether probable cause exists and, if so, the fixing of bail if the offense is bailable. State v. Cradle, 281 N.C. 198, 188 S.E.2d 296, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1047, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 2d 499 (1972).

District Judge Does Not Render a Verdict. — The district judge, when sitting as a committing magistrate as authorized by subsection (b) of this section, does not render a verdict; and a discharge of the accused is not an acquittal and does not bar a later indictment. State v. Cradle, 281 N.C. 198, 188 S.E.2d 296, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1047, 93 S. Ct. 537, 34 L. Ed. 2d 499 (1972); State v. Bryant, 283 N.C. 227, 195 S.E.2d 509 (1973).

Or Have Authority to Dismiss First-Degree Murder Charge. — A district judge sitting as a committing magistrate in a preliminary hearing has no authority to dismiss a first-degree murder charge. State v. Bryant, 283 N.C. 227, 195 S.E.2d 509 (1973).

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Jurisdiction over Offense of Failure to List Property for Taxation. — See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Amsey A. Boyd, Tax Supervisor of Richmond County, 40 N.C.A.G. 776 (1969).

§ 7A-273. Powers of magistrates in infractions or criminal actions.

In criminal actions or infractions, any magistrate has power:

(1) In infraction cases in which the maximum penalty that can be imposed is not more than fifty dollars ($50.00), exclusive of costs, or in Class 3 misdemeanors, other than the types of infractions and misdemeanors specified in subdivision (2) of this section, to accept guilty pleas or admissions of responsibility and enter judgment;

(2) In misdemeanor or infraction cases involving alcohol offenses under Chapter 18B of the General Statutes, traffic offenses, hunting, fishing, State park and recreation area rule offenses under Chapter 113 of the General Statutes, boating offenses under Chapter 75A of the General Statutes, and littering offenses under G.S. 14-399(c) and G.S. 14-399(c1), to accept written appearances, waivers of trial or hearing and pleas of guilty or admissions of responsibility, in accordance with the schedule of offenses and fines or penalties promulgated by the Conference of Chief District Judges pursuant to G.S. 7A-148, and in such cases, to enter judgment and collect the fines or penalties and costs;

(2a) In misdemeanor cases involving the violation of a county ordinance authorized by law regulating the use of dune or beach buggies or other power-driven vehicles specified by the governing body of the county on the foreshore, beach strand, or the barrier dune system, to accept written appearances, waivers of trial or hearing, and pleas of guilty or admissions of responsibility, in accordance with the schedule of offenses and fines or penalties promulgated by the Conference of Chief District Court Judges pursuant to G.S. 7A-148, and in such cases, to enter judgment and collect the fines or penalties and costs;

(3) To issue arrest warrants valid throughout the State;

(4) To issue search warrants valid throughout the county;

(5) To grant bail before trial for any noncapital offense;

(6) Notwithstanding the provisions of subdivision (1) of this section, to hear and enter judgment as the chief district judge shall direct in all worthless check cases brought under G.S. 14-107, when the amount of the check is two thousand dollars ($2,000) or less. Provided, however, that under this section magistrates may not impose a prison sentence longer than 30 days;

(7) To conduct an initial appearance as provided in G.S. 15A-511; and

(8) To accept written appearances, waivers of trial and pleas of guilty in violations of G.S. 14-107 when the amount of the check is two thousand dollars ($2,000) or less, restitution, including service charges and processing fees allowed by G.S. 14-107, is made, and the warrant does not charge a fourth or subsequent violation of this statute, and in these cases to enter judgments as the chief district judge directs.

(9) Repealed by Session Laws 1991 (Regular Session, 1992), c. 900, s. 118(d). (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 876, s. 2; c. 1190, s. 25; 1973, c. 6; c. 503, s. 8; c. 1286, s. 7; 1975, c. 626, s. 4; 1977, c. 873, s. 1; 1979, c. 144, s. 3; 1981, c. 555, s. 3; 1983, c. 586, s. 5; 1985, c. 425, s. 4; c. 764, s. 16; 1985 (Reg. CASE NOTES

State Has Burden to Show Jurisdiction. — When jurisdiction is challenged, in a criminal case, the State must carry the burden and show beyond a reasonable doubt that North Carolina has jurisdiction to try the accused. Former cases holding that a challenge to the jurisdiction is an affirmative defense with the burden of persuasion on the accused are no longer authoritative. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

The question of jurisdiction of the court in a criminal case is not an independent, distinct, substantive matter of exemption, immunity or defense and ought not to be regarded as an affirmative defense on which the defendant must bear the burden of proof. Rather, jurisdiction is a matter which, when contested, should be proven by the prosecution as a prerequisite to the authority of the court to enter judgment. State v. Batdorf, 293 N.C. 486, 238 S.E.2d 497 (1977).

Judicial Immunity Granted. — Whether or not a magistrate's alleged comments made in connection with plaintiff's arrest regarding a domestic violence matter were appropriate, they were made in connection with judicial acts within the magistrate's jurisdiction; he was, therefore, entitled to immunity, and his motion to dismiss plaintiff's 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 claim was granted. Cole v. Summey, 329 F. Supp. 2d 591, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15840 (M.D.N.C. 2004).

The power of mayors, law-enforcement officers, and other persons not officers of the General Court of Justice to issue arrest, search, or peace warrants, or to set bail, is terminated in any district court district upon the establishment of a district court therein. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Prohibited Orders.

§ 7A-276.1. Court orders prohibiting publication or broadcast of reports of open court proceedings or reports of public records banned.

No court shall make or issue any rule or order banning, prohibiting, or restricting the publication or broadcast of any report concerning any of the following: any evidence, testimony, argument, ruling, verdict, decision, judgment, or other matter occurring in open court in any hearing, trial, or other proceeding, civil or criminal; and no court shall issue any rule or order sealing, prohibiting, restricting the publication or broadcast of the contents of any public record as defined by any statute of this State, which is required to be open to public inspection under any valid statute, regulation, or rule of common law. If any rule or order is made or issued by any court in violation of the provisions of this statute, it shall be null and void and of no effect, and no person shall be punished for contempt for the violation of any such void rule or order. CASE NOTES

Court May Shield Items Subject to Statutory and Constitutional Limitation. — This statute only prohibits a court from restricting the publication of reports regarding matter presented "in open court"; thus, although court records may generally be public records under G.S. 132-1, a trial court may shield portions of court proceedings and records from public view subject to statutory and constitutional limitation. Jurisdiction and Procedure in Criminal Appeals from District Courts.

§ 7A-290. Appeals from district court in criminal cases; notice; appeal bond.

Any defendant convicted in district court before the magistrate may appeal to the district court for trial de novo before the district court judge. Any defendant convicted in district court before the judge may appeal to the superior court for trial de novo. Notice of appeal may be given orally in open court, or to the clerk in writing within 10 days of entry of judgment. Upon expiration of the 10-day period in which an appeal may be entered, if an appeal has been entered and not withdrawn, the clerk shall transfer the case to the district or superior court docket. The original bail shall stand pending appeal, unless the judge orders bail denied, increased, or reduced. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 601, s. 1; 1969, c. 876, s. 3; c. 911, s. 5; c. 1190, s. 26; 1971, c. 377, s. 16.)

CASE NOTES

I. General Consideration.
II. Appeal to Superior Court.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

This section and G.S. 49-7, when properly construed together, are not inconsistent. State v. Coffey, 3 N.C. App. 133, 164 S.E.2d 39 (1968).

Hence, the proviso in G.S. 49-7 was not repealed either expressly or by implication by enactment of this section. State v. Coffey, 3 N.C. App. 133, 164 S.E.2d 39 (1968).

Purpose of State's de novo procedure is to provide all criminal defendants charged with misdemeanor violations the right to a "speedy trial" in the district court and to offer them an opportunity to learn about the State's case without revealing their own. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Validity of Trial Without Jury in Lower Court. — The fact that a right of appeal was given where the defendant was convicted in the lower court without the intervention of a jury has generally been regarded as a sufficient reason, in support of the validity of such trials without a jury in the inferior tribunal, as by appealing the defendant secures his right to a jury trial in the superior court, and therefore cannot justly complain that he has been deprived of his constitutional right. State v. Spencer, 276 N.C. 535, 173 S.E.2d 765 (1970); State v. Coats, 17 N.C. App. 407, 194 S.E.2d 366 (1973).

Applied in State v. Golden, 40 N.C. App. 37, 251 S.E.2d 875 (1979); State v. Smith, 312 N.C. 361, 323 S.E.2d 316 (1984).

Cited in State v. Thompson, 2 N.C. App. 508, 163 S.E.2d 410 (1968); State v. Speights, 280 N.C. 137, 185 S.E.2d 152 (1971); Perry v. Blackledge, 453 F.2d 856 (4th Cir. 1971); State

v. Brunson, 327 N.C. 244, 393 S.E.2d 860 (1990); State v. Wilkins, 128 N.C. App. 315, 494 S.E.2d 611 (1998); State v. Bissette, 142 N.C. App. 669, 544 S.E.2d 266, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 183 (2001); N.C. Dep't of Env't & Natural Res. v. Carroll, 358 N.C. 649, 599 S.E.2d 888, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 909 (2004).

II. APPEAL TO SUPERIOR COURT.

Trial de novo in the superior court is a new trial from beginning to end, on both law and facts, disregarding completely the plea, trial, verdict and judgment below; and the superior court judgment entered upon conviction there is wholly independent of any judgment which was entered in the inferior court. State v. Spencer, 276 N.C. 535, 173 S.E.2d 765 (1970); State v. Coats, 17 N.C. App. 407, 194 S.E.2d 366 (1973); State v. Williams, 41 N.C. App. 287, 254 S.E.2d 649, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 699, 259 S.E.2d 297 (1979).

And Lower Court Judgment Is Annulled. — When an appeal of right is taken to the superior court, in contemplation of law it is as if the case had been brought there originally and there had been no previous trial. The judgment appealed from is completely annulled and is not thereafter available for any purpose. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 940, 91 S. Ct. 2258, 29 L. Ed. 2d 719 (1971); State v. Bryant, 11 N.C. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 211 (1971); State v. Coats, 17 N.C. App. 407, 194 S.E.2d 366 (1973).

And May Be Ignored Even Where Defendant Was Denied Constitutional Rights. — The superior court division, as the trial court upon appeal and trial de novo, is generally justified in disregarding completely the plea, trial, verdict and judgment below, even in those situations in which the inferior court has not granted the defendant his constitutional rights. State v. Williams, 41 N.C. App. 287, 254 S.E.2d 649, cert. denied, 297 N.C. 699, 259 S.E.2d 297 (1979).

Defendants are entitled to a trial de novo in the superior court even though their trials in the inferior court were free from error. State v. Spencer, 276 N.C. 535, 173 S.E.2d 765 (1970); State v. Coats, 17 N.C. App. 407, 194 S.E.2d 366 (1973).

Even After Guilty Plea. — An appeal from a conviction in an inferior court entitles the defendant to a trial de novo in the superior court as a matter of right, and this is true even when an accused pleads guilty in the inferior court. State v. Bryant, 11 N.C. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 211 (1971).

An accused in a criminal case is entitled to a trial de novo as a matter of right on appeal to the superior court from an inferior court, even when the accused entered a guilty plea in the inferior court. State v. Fox, 34 N.C. App. 576, 239 S.E.2d 471 (1977).

But State Not Bound by Plea Bargain After Defendant Appeals. — Where a defendant originally charged with felonies entered guilty pleas to misdemeanors in the district court pursuant to a plea bargain with the State, but then appealed to the superior court for a trial de novo, the State was not bound by the agreement and could try the defendant upon the felony charges or any lesser included offenses. State v. Fox, 34 N.C. App. 576, 239 S.E.2d 471 (1977).

Waiver of Right of Appeal. — By acquiescing in the terms of the judgment of the district court by paying a fine and costs, defendant waived his statutory right of appeal to the superior court. State v. Vestal, 34 N.C. App. 610, 239 S.E.2d 275 (1977).

Transcript of District Court Proceedings Not Required. — State's de novo procedure has no requirement that a defendant purchase and provide the superior court with a transcript of the district court proceedings in order to secure full appellate review. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

There is no merit in the argument that a transcript of the district court proceedings is needed for an effective appeal for trial de novo in superior court. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Nor Is Indigent Entitled to Free Transcript. — There are no constitutional infirmities in the denial of a free transcript of the district court proceedings to an indigent defendant. State v. Brooks, 287 N.C. 392, 215 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Correction of Clerical Error Is Not New Judgment. — Defendant's purported appeal was untimely because it was not made within 10 days of the original judgment in which the defendant was found guilty of attempted simple assault, simple assault and communicating threats; the district court's intervening correction of various errors on the sentencing form did not constitute a new judgment from which to start counting the ten days. State v. Linemann, 135 N.C. App. 734, 522 S.E.2d 781, 1999 N.C. App. LEXIS 1246 (1999).

Inquiry as to Failure to Testify Below. — In a superior court trial for driving under the influence, the State, by inquiring into defendant's failure to testify in district court, did more than attempt to impeach defendant with his prior silence, considering his allegedly belated attempt to establish a defense, but also adversely implicated defendant's right not to testify in district court. State v. Ferrell, 75 N.C. App. 156, 330 S.E.2d 225, cert. denied and appeal dismissed, 314 N.C. 333, 333 S.E.2d 492 (1985).

Sentence in Superior Court May Be Lighter or Heavier Than That Imposed by

District Court. — Inasmuch as the trial in the superior court is without regard to the proceedings in the district court, the judge of the superior court is necessarily required to enter his own independent judgment. His sentence may be lighter or heavier than that imposed by the inferior court, provided, of course, it does not exceed the maximum punishment which the inferior court could have imposed. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 940, 91 S. Ct. 2258, 29 L. Ed. 2d 719 (1971).

In the sound discretion of the superior court judge, the defendant's sentence may be lighter or heavier than that imposed in the district court provided that it does not exceed the statutory maximum. State v. Spencer, 276 N.C. 535, 173 S.E.2d 765 (1970).

And Heavier Sentence Does Not Violate Constitutional or Statutory Rights. — The fact that a defendant received a greater sentence in the superior court than he received in a recorder's court is no violation of his constitutional or statutory rights. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 940, 91 S. Ct. 2258, 29 L. Ed. 2d 719 (1971); State v. Coats, 17 N.C. App. 407, 194 S.E.2d 366 (1973).

The fact that defendants received a greater sentence in the superior court than they received in the district court is no violation of their constitutional rights. State v. Spencer, 276 N.C. 535, 173 S.E.2d 765 (1970).

But Reasons for Imposing Heavier Sentence Must Affirmatively Appear. — Whenever a judge imposes a more severe sentence upon a defendant after a new trial, the reasons for his doing so must affirmatively appear. Those reasons must be based upon objective information concerning identifiable conduct on the part of the defendant occurring after the time of the original sentencing proceeding. And the factual data upon which the increased sentence is based must be made part of the record, so that the constitutional legitimacy of the increased sentence may be fully reviewed on appeal. State v. Sparrow, 276 N.C. 499, 173 S.E.2d 897 (1970), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 940, 91 S. Ct. 2258, 29 L. Ed. 2d 719 (1971).

Remand to District Court. — Where the appeal has been docketed in the superior court, the judge presiding, at term, has the authority, upon satisfactory cause shown and with the consent of the defendant, to remand the case to the inferior court for clarifying judgment or other proceedings. This would reinstate the case and revest the inferior court with jurisdiction. State v. Bryant, 11 N.C. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 211 (1971).

Same — Cause or Consent of Defendant Required. — Where a defendant has appealed for trial de novo in superior court, a judge of that court has no authority, absent satisfactory cause shown or without the consent of the defendant, to dismiss the appeal and remand the case for compliance with the judgment of the district court. State v. Fox, 34 N.C. App. 576, 239 S.E.2d 471 (1977).

Failure to Appear in Court or Consent to Dismissal. — Where the defendant neither appears in court when his case is called nor consents to dismissal of his appeal, the trial judge is without authority to dismiss the appeal and remand the case to the district court for compliance with the judgment of that court. The defendant is entitled to a trial as if the case originated in the superior court. State v. Bryant, 11 N.C. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 211 (1971).

Trial Court Erred Where Defendant Entitled to Arraignment in Superior Court. — By immediately proceeding to trial without defendant's consent on an appeal de novo from a district court, a superior court violated G.S. 15A-943(b), which defendant adequately invoked; as the superior court was not the court of original jurisdiction, the prosecutor never submitted a bill of indictment for defendant nor was defendant indicted, so there was no 21-day period from which defendant needed to file a written request for an arraignment. A trial de novo in the superior court was a new trial from the beginning to the end, disregarding completely the plea below, and, therefore, since defendant's plea from the district court was completely disregarded, defendant was entitled to an arraignment in superior court. State v. Vereen, 177 N.C. App. 233, 628 S.E.2d 408, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 847 (2006).

This statute was not intended to give a district court judge the power to enter an order ex mero motu when no action is before the court. In re Transp. of Juveniles, 102 N.C. App. 806, 403 S.E.2d 557 (1991).

§ 7A-293. Special authority of a magistrate assigned to a municipality located in more than one county of a district court district.

A magistrate assigned to an incorporated municipality, the boundaries of which lie in more than one county of a district court district, may, in criminal matters, exercise the powers granted by G.S. 7A-273 as if the corporate limits plus the territory embraced within a distance of one mile in all directions therefrom were located wholly within the magistrate's county of residence. Appeals from a magistrate exercising the authority granted by this section shall be taken in the district court in the county in which the offense was committed. A magistrate exercising the special authority granted by this section shall transmit all records, reports, and monies collected to the clerk of the superior court of the county in which the offense was committed. In addition, if a magistrate is assigned to an incorporated municipality, the boundaries of which lie in two district court districts, the magistrate may exercise the powers described in this section as if both counties were in the same district court district, if the clerks of superior court and the chief district court judges serving both districts in which the municipality is located agree in writing that the exercise of this special authority would promote the administration of justice in the municipality and in both districts. (1967, c. 691, s. 26; 1989, c. 795, s. 23(c1).)

CASE NOTES

Application of Subchapter. — In cases which were instituted after the establishment of the district court, the costs, including a "facilities fee," shall be assessed according to G.S. 7A-300 through 7A-317.1. Blackwell v. Montague, 15 N.C. App. 564, 190 S.E.2d 384 (1972).

Facilities for Judicial System. — Our statutes obligate counties and cities to provide physical facilities for the judicial system operating within their boundaries. These facilities must be adequate to serve the functioning of the judiciary within the borders of those political subdivisions. In re Alamance County Ct. § 7A-301. Disbursement of expenses.

The salaries and expenses of all personnel in the Judicial Department and other operating expenses shall be paid out of the State treasury upon warrants duly drawn thereon, except that the Administrative Office of the Courts and the Department of Administration, with the approval of the State Auditor, may establish alternative procedures for the prompt payment of juror fees, witness fees, and other small expense items. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

§ 7A-302. (Effective until July 1, 2008) Counties and municipalities responsible for physical facilities.

In each county in which a district court has been established, courtrooms, office space for juvenile court counselors and support staff as assigned by the Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, and related judicial facilities (including furniture), as defined in this Subchapter, shall be provided by the county, except that courtrooms and related judicial facilities may, with the approval of the administrative Officer of the Courts, after consultation with county and municipal authorities, be provided by a municipality in the county. To assist a county or municipality in meeting the expense of providing courtrooms and related judicial facilities, a part of the costs of court, known as the "facilities fee," collected for the State by the clerk of superior court, shall be remitted to the county or municipality providing the facilities. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1998-202, s. 15; 2000-137, s. 4(a).)

Public Duty Doctrine Not Applicable. — In providing courtrooms, office space, and related judicial facilities, a county is not acting to provide police protection to the general public, and thus, the public duty doctrine is not applicable. Wood v. Guilford County, 143 N.C. App. 507, 546 S.E.2d 641, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 307 (2001).

County Liability for Injuries to State Employees on County Property. — County was not subjected to tort liability for claims arising from third-party criminal conduct when a state employee was sexually assaulted in a county courthouse, particularly since the county undertook security measures to protect the public from harm in the courthouse; further the county did not waive its protection under the public duty doctrine. Wood v. Guilford County, 355 N.C. 161, 558 S.E.2d 490, 2002 N.C. LEXIS 16 (2002).

Order to Inquire into Adequacy of Facilities Held Flawed. — A hearing ordered by a superior court judge to inquire into the adequacy of the Alamance County court facilities probes the scope of the court's inherent power to direct county commissioners to ameliorate such facilities and the proper means of effecting that end. Such power exists, but the order invoking it was procedurally and substantively flawed where the commissioners against whom the order was directed were not made parties to the action, the order was ex parte, and the order intruded on discretion that properly belonged to the commissioners. In re Alamance County Ct. Facilities, 329 N.C. 84, 405 S.E.2d 125 (1991).

In each county in which a district court has been established, courtrooms, office space for juvenile court counselors and support staff as assigned by the Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, and related judicial facilities (including furniture, properly functioning telephones that meet the specifications for Administrative Office of the Court telephones, and the equipment and infrastructure necessary to support those telephones), as defined in this Subchapter, shall be provided by the county, except that courtrooms and related judicial facilities may, with the approval of the Administrative Officer of the Courts, after consultation with county and municipal authorities, be provided by a municipality in the county. To assist a county or municipality in meeting the expense of providing courtrooms and related judicial facilities, a part of the costs of court, known as the "facilities fee," collected for the State by the clerk of superior court, shall be remitted to the county or municipality providing the facilities. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1998-202, s. 15; 2000-137, s. 4(a); 2007-323, s. 14.16(a).)

Section Set Out Twice. — The section above is effective July 1, 2008. For this section as effective until July 1, 2008, see the preceding section, also numbered G.S. 7A-302.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2007-323, s. 1.2, provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations and Capital Improvements Appropriations Act of 2007'."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 32.5 is a severability clause.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2007-323, s. 14.16(a), effective July 1, 2008, added "properly functioning telephones that meet the specifications for Administrative Office of the Court telephones, and the equipment and infrastructure necessary to support those telephones" in the middle of the first sentence.

§ 7A-303. Equipment and supplies in clerk's office.

Upon the establishment of the district court in any county, supplies and all equipment in the office of the clerk of superior court shall become the property of the State. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Article 28.

Uniform Costs and Fees in the Trial Divisions.

§ 7A-304. Costs in criminal actions.

(a) In every criminal case in the superior or district court, wherein the defendant is convicted, or enters a plea of guilty or nolo contendere, or when costs are assessed against the prosecuting witness, the following costs shall be assessed and collected, except that when the judgment imposes an active prison sentence, costs shall be assessed and collected only when the judgment specifically so provides, and that no costs may be assessed when a case is dismissed.

(1) For each arrest or personal service of criminal process, including citations and subpoenas, the sum of five dollars ($5.00), to be remitted to the county wherein the arrest was made or process was served, except that in those cases in which the arrest was made or process served by a law-enforcement officer employed by a municipality, the fee shall be paid to the municipality employing the officer.

(2) For the use of the courtroom and related judicial facilities, the sum of twelve dollars ($12.00) in the district court, including cases before a magistrate, and the sum of thirty dollars ($30.00) in superior court, to be remitted to the county in which the judgment is rendered. In all cases where the judgment is rendered in facilities provided by a municipality, the facilities fee shall be paid to the municipality. Funds derived from the facilities fees shall be used exclusively by the county or municipality for providing, maintaining, and constructing adequate courtroom and related judicial facilities, including: adequate space and furniture for judges, district attorneys, public defenders and other personnel of the Office of Indigent Defense Services, magistrates, juries, and other court related personnel; office space, furniture and vaults for the clerk; jail and juvenile detention facilities; free parking for jurors; and a law library (including books) if one has heretofore been established or if the governing body hereafter decides to establish one. In the event the funds derived from the facilities fees exceed what is needed for these purposes, the county or municipality may, with the approval of the Administrative Officer of the Courts as to the amount, use any or all of the excess to retire outstanding indebtedness incurred in the construction of the facilities, or to reimburse the county or municipality for funds expended in constructing or renovating the facilities (without incurring any indebtedness) within a period of two years before or after the date a district court is established in such county, or to supplement the operations of the General Court of Justice in the county.

(3) For the retirement and insurance benefits of both State and local government law-enforcement officers, the sum of six dollars and twenty-five cents ($6.25), to be remitted to the State Treasurer. Fifty cents (50¢) of this sum shall be administered as is provided in Article 12C of Chapter 143 of the General Statutes. Five dollars and seventy-five cents ($5.75) of this sum shall be administered as is provided in Article 12E of Chapter 143 of the General Statutes, with one dollar and twenty-five cents ($1.25) being administered in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 143-166.50(e).

(3a) For the supplemental pension benefits of sheriffs, the sum of one dollar twenty-five cents ($1.25) to be remitted to the Department of Justice and administered under the provisions of Article 12G of Chapter 143 of the General Statutes.

(4) For support of the General Court of Justice, the sum of ninety-five dollars and fifty cents ($95.50) in the district court, including cases before a magistrate, and the sum of one hundred two dollars and fifty cents ($102.50) in the superior court, to be remitted to the State Treasurer. For a person convicted of a felony in superior court who has made a first appearance in district court, both the district court and superior court fees shall be assessed. The State Treasurer shall remit the sum of two dollars and five cents ($2.05) of each fee collected under this subdivision to the North Carolina State Bar for the provision of services described in G.S. 7A-474.4, and ninety-five cents ($.95) of each fee collected under this subdivision to the North Carolina State Bar for the provision of services described in G.S. 7A-474.19.

(5) For using pretrial release services, the district or superior court judge shall, upon conviction, impose a fee of fifteen dollars ($15.00) to be remitted to the county providing the pretrial release services. This cost shall be assessed and collected only if the defendant had been accepted and released to the supervision of the agency providing the pretrial release services.

(6) For support of the General Court of Justice, the sum of one hundred dollars ($100.00) is payable by a defendant who fails to appear to answer the charge as scheduled, unless within 20 days after the scheduled appearance, the person either appears in court to answer the charge or disposes of the charge pursuant to G.S. 7A-146. Upon a showing to the court that the defendant failed to appear because of an error or omission of a judicial official, a prosecutor, or a law-enforcement officer, the court shall waive this fee. This fee shall be remitted to the State Treasurer.

(7) For the services of the State Bureau of Investigation laboratory facilities, the district or superior court judge shall, upon conviction, order payment of the sum of three hundred dollars ($300.00) to be remitted to the Department of Justice for support of the State Bureau of Investigation. This cost shall be assessed only in cases in which, as part of the investigation leading to the defendant's conviction, the laboratories have performed DNA analysis of the crime, tests of bodily fluids of the defendant for the presence of alcohol or controlled substances, or analysis of any controlled substance possessed by the defendant or the defendant's agent. The court may waive or reduce the amount of the payment required by this subdivision upon a finding of just cause to grant such a waiver or reduction.

(8) For the services of any crime laboratory facility operated by a local government or group of local governments, the district or superior court judge shall, upon conviction, order payment of the sum of three hundred dollars ($300.00) to be remitted to the general fund of the local governmental unit that operates the laboratory to be used for law enforcement purposes. The cost shall be assessed only in cases in which, as part of the investigation leading to the defendant's conviction, the laboratory has performed DNA analysis of the crime, test of bodily fluids of the defendant for the presence of alcohol or controlled substances, or analysis of any controlled substance possessed by the defendant or the defendant's agent. The costs shall be assessed only if the court finds that the work performed at the local government's laboratory is the equivalent of the same kind of work performed by the State Bureau of Investigation under subdivision (7) of this subsection. The court may waive or reduce the amount of the payment required by this subdivision upon a finding of just cause to grant such a waiver or reduction.

(a1) Repealed by Session Laws 1997-475, s. 4.1.

(b) On appeal, costs are cumulative, and costs assessed before a magistrate shall be added to costs assessed in the district court, and costs assessed in the district court shall be added to costs assessed in the superior court, except that the fee for the Law-Enforcement Officers' Benefit and Retirement Fund and the Sheriffs' Supplemental Pension Fund and the fee for pretrial release services shall be assessed only once in each case. No superior court costs shall be assessed against a defendant who gives notice of appeal from the district court but withdraws it prior to the expiration of the 10-day period for entering notice of appeal. When a case is reversed on appeal, the defendant shall not be liable for costs, and the State shall be liable for the cost of printing records and briefs in the Appellate Division.

(c) Witness fees, expenses for blood tests and comparisons incurred by G.S. 8-50.1(a), jail fees and cost of necessary trial transcripts shall be assessed as provided by law in addition to other costs set out in this section. Nothing in this section shall limit the power or discretion of the judge in imposing fines or forfeitures or ordering restitution.

(d)(1) In any criminal case in which the liability for costs, fines, restitution, attorneys' fees, or any other lawful charge has been finally determined, the clerk of superior court shall, unless otherwise ordered by the presiding judge, disburse such funds when paid in accordance with the following priorities:

- a. Sums in restitution to the victim entitled thereto;
- b. Costs due the county;
- c. Costs due the city;
- d. Fines to the county school fund;
- e. Sums in restitution prorated among the persons other than the victim entitled thereto;
- f. Costs due the State;
- g. Attorney's fees, including appointment fees assessed pursuant to G.S. 7A-455.1.

(2) Sums in restitution received by the clerk of superior court shall be disbursed when:

- a. Complete restitution has been received; or
- b. When, in the opinion of the clerk, additional payments in restriction will not be collected; or
- c. Upon the request of the person or persons entitled thereto; and
- d. In any event, at least once each calendar year.

(e) Unless otherwise provided by law, the costs assessed pursuant to this section for criminal actions disposed of in the district court are also applicable to infractions disposed of in the district court. The costs assessed in superior court for criminal actions appealed from district court to superior court are also applicable to infractions appealed to superior court. If an infraction is disposed of in the superior court pursuant to G.S. 7A-271(d), costs applicable to the original charge are applicable to the infraction. CASE NOTES

Appointment Fee Under G.S. 7A-455.1. — G.S. 7A-455.1(b), which required payment of the appointment fee regardless of the outcome of the proceedings was severed in order to allow the State to assess the appointment fee against convicted defendants as constitutionally allowed under N.C. Const. art. I, § 23; G.S. 7A-455.1(a), requiring payment at the time of the appointment was also severed, as it was inconsistent with the ruling that the appointment fee was a cost, and as pursuant to G.S. 7A-304(a), costs, including the pretrial release services fee under § 7A-304(a)(5) and and the North Carolina State Bureau of Investigation laboratory fee under G.S. 7A-304(a)(7), were assessed only after a defendant was convicted or entered a plea of guilty or nolo contendere. State v. Webb, 358 N.C. 92, 591 S.E.2d 505, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 5 (2004).

Portion of the appointment fee provided for by G.S. 7A-455.1(a) allocated to the North Carolina Court Information Technology Fund is effectively indistinguishable from the facilities fee imposed under G.S. 7A-304(a)(2); the appointment fee operates to supplement funds otherwise available to the North Carolina Judicial Department for court information technology and office automation needs, thus defraying expenses incurred by the State in the operation and maintenance of the court system under G.S. 7A-343.2, and it should be assessed in the same manner as the facilities fee and any other cost of prosecution — against convicted defendants only. State v. Webb, 358 N.C. 92, 591 S.E.2d 505, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 5 (2004).

"Facilities Fee". — In cases which were instituted after the establishment of the district court, the costs, including a "facilities fee," shall be assessed according to G.S. 7A-300 through 7A-317.1. The "facilities fee" assessed in this classification of cases shall be disbursed monthly by the clerk of superior court to the county or municipality providing the facilities. Blackwell v. Montague, 15 N.C. App. 564, 190 S.E.2d 384 (1972).

Trial judges are authorized to tax court costs, and if the court misused its authority in taxing costs against pauper plaintiff, that error was waived by her failure to appeal therefrom. Schaffner v. Pantelakos, 98 N.C. App. 399, 391 S.E.2d 41 (1990).

§ 7A-305. Costs in civil actions.

(a) In every civil action in the superior or district court, except for actions brought under Chapter 50B of the General Statutes, the following costs shall be assessed:

(1) For the use of the courtroom and related judicial facilities, the sum of twelve dollars ($12.00) in cases heard before a magistrate, and the sum of sixteen dollars ($16.00) in district and superior court, to be remitted to the county in which the judgment is rendered, except that in all cases in which the judgment is rendered in facilities provided by a municipality, the facilities fee shall be paid to the municipality. Funds derived from the facilities fees shall be used in the same manner, for the same purposes, and subject to the same restrictions, as facilities fees assessed in criminal actions.

(2) For support of the General Court of Justice, the sum of ninety-three dollars ($93.00) in the superior court, except that if a case is assigned to a special superior court judge as a complex business case under G.S. 7A-45.3, an additional two hundred dollars ($200.00) shall be paid upon its assignment, and the sum of seventy-three dollars ($73.00) in the district court except that if the case is assigned to a magistrate the sum shall be sixty-three dollars ($63.00). Sums collected under this subdivision shall be remitted to the State Treasurer. The State Treasurer shall remit the sum of two dollars and five cents ($2.05) of each fee collected under this subdivision to the North Carolina State Bar for the provision of services described in G.S. 7A-474.4, and ninety-five cents ($.95) of each fee collected under this subdivision to the North Carolina State Bar for the provision of services described in G.S. 7A-474.19.

(a1) Costs apply to any and all additional and subsequent actions filed by amendment to the original action brought under Chapter 50B of the General Statutes, unless such additional and subsequent amendment to the action is also brought under Chapter 50B of the General Statutes.

(a2) In every action for absolute divorce filed in the district court, a cost of fifty-five dollars ($55.00) shall be assessed against the person filing the divorce action. Costs collected by the clerk pursuant to this subsection shall be remitted to the State Treasurer for deposit to the North Carolina Fund for Displaced Homemakers established under G.S. 143B-394.10. Costs assessed under this subsection shall be in addition to any other costs assessed under this section.

(a3) An application or a petition for a limited driving privilege under Chapter 20 of the General Statutes is subject to the court costs assessed under subsection (a) of this section plus an additional processing fee of one hundred dollars ($100.00). The additional fee shall be remitted to the State Treasurer and used for support of the General Court of Justice.

(a4) A petition for a limited driving privilege under G.S. 20-20.1 is subject to the court costs assessed under subsection (a) of this section.

(b) On appeal, costs are cumulative, and when cases heard before a magistrate are appealed to the district court, the General Court of Justice fee and the facilities fee applicable in the district court shall be added to the fees assessed before the magistrate. When an order of the clerk of the superior court is appealed to either the district court or the superior court, no additional General Court of Justice fee or facilities fee shall be assessed.

(b1) When a defendant files an answer in an action filed as a small claim which requires the entire case to be withdrawn from a magistrate and transferred to the district court, the difference between the General Court of Justice fee and facilities fee applicable to the district court and the General Court of Justice fee and facilities fee applicable to cases heard by a magistrate shall be assessed. The defendant is responsible for paying the fee.

(c) The clerk of superior court, at the time of the filing of the papers initiating the action or the appeal, shall collect as advance court costs, the facilities fee, General Court of Justice fee, and the divorce fee imposed under subsection (a2) of this section, except in suits by an indigent. The clerk shall also collect the fee for discovery procedures under Rule 27(a) and (b) at the time of the filing of the verified petition.

(d) The following expenses, when incurred, are assessable or recoverable, as the case may be. The expenses set forth in this subsection are complete and exclusive and constitute a limit on the trial court's discretion to tax costs pursuant to G.S. 6-20:

(1) Witness fees, as provided by law.
(2) Jail fees, as provided by law.
(3) Counsel fees, as provided by law.
(4) Expense of service of process by certified mail and by publication.
(5) Costs on appeal to the superior court, or to the appellate division, as the case may be, of the original transcript of testimony, if any, insofar as essential to the appeal.
(6) Fees for personal service and civil process and other sheriff's fees, as provided by law. Fees for personal service by a private process server may be recoverable in an amount equal to the actual cost of such service or fifty dollars ($50.00), whichever is less, unless the court finds that due to difficulty of service a greater amount is appropriate.
(7) Fees of mediators appointed by the court, mediators agreed upon by the parties, guardians ad litem, referees, receivers, commissioners, surveyors, arbitrators, appraisers, and other similar court appointees, as provided by law. The fee of such appointees shall include reasonable reimbursement for stenographic assistance, when necessary.

(8) Fees of interpreters, when authorized and approved by the court.

(9) Premiums for surety bonds for prosecution, as authorized by G.S. 1-109.

(10) Reasonable and necessary expenses for stenographic and videographic assistance directly related to the taking of depositions and for the cost of deposition transcripts.

(11) Reasonable and necessary fees of expert witnesses solely for actual time spent providing testimony at trial, deposition, or other proceedings.

Nothing in this subsection or in G.S. 6-20 shall be construed to limit the trial court's authority to award fees and expenses in connection with pretrial discovery matters as provided in Rule 26(b) or Rule 37 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, and no award of costs made pursuant to this section or pursuant to G.S. 6-20 shall reverse or modify any such orders entered in connection with pretrial discovery.

(e) Nothing in this section shall affect the liability of the respective parties for costs as provided by law. Editor's Note. — Rule 27 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, referred to in subsection (c) of this section, is codified as G.S. 1A-1, Rule 27.

Session Laws 2007-293, s. 2, enacted a subsection (a3), but Session Laws 2007-323, s. 30.11(c) purported to repeal Session Laws 2007-293, s. 2. Session Laws 2007-345, s. 9.1(c), likewise repealed Session Laws 2007-323, s. 30.11(c), and then amended G.S. 7A-305 as enacted by Session Laws 2007-293, s. 2. Subsection (a3) as enacted by Session Laws 2007-293, s. 2, as amended by Session Laws 2007-345, s. 9.1(a), was redesignated subsection (a4) at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes.

Session Laws 2001-424, s. 22.14(i), provides: "The Administrative Office of the Courts shall report by April 15 of each year to the Chairs of the House of Representatives and Senate Appropriations Committees and the Chairs of the House of Representatives and Senate Appropriations Subcommittees on Justice and Public Safety on the amount remitted to the State Bar pursuant to the provisions of G.S. 7A-304(a)(4), G.S. 7A-305(a)(2), G.S. 7A-306(a)(2), and 7A-307(a)(2). Each report shall include the amount remitted year-to-date and the projected amount for the entire fiscal year."

Session Laws 2001-424, s. 1.2, provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations and Capital Improvements Appropriations Act of 2001'."

Session Laws 2001-424, s. 36.5, contains a severability clause.

Session Laws 2001-424, s. 36.3, provides: "Except for statutory changes or other provisions that clearly indicate an intention to have effects beyond the 2001-2003 fiscal biennium, the textual provisions of this act apply only to funds appropriated for, and activities occurring during, the 2001-2003 fiscal biennium."

Session Laws 2002-126, s. 29A.4(c), provides: "Subsection (b) of this section [which amended subdivision (a)(2)] becomes effective October 1, 2002, and applies to all costs assessed or collected on or after that date."

Session Laws 2002-126, s. 31.3, provides: "Except for statutory changes or other provisions that clearly indicate an intention to have effects beyond the 2002-2003 fiscal year, the textual provisions of this act apply only to funds appropriated for, and activities occurring during, the 2002-2003 fiscal year. For example, uncodified provisions of this act relating to the Medicaid program apply only to the 2002-2003 fiscal year."

Session Laws 2002-126, s. 31.6, contains a severability clause.

Session Laws 2006-248, ss. 12.1 through 12.5, provide: "12.1. A House of Representatives Task Force on the Recovery of Costs in Civil Cases is established to review and recommend a resolution to the conflict in North Carolina law regarding the recovery of costs in a civil case. Specifically, the Task Force on the Recovery of Costs in Civil Cases shall study the conflict that exists between G.S. 6-20 and G.S. 7A-305, and the appellate cases interpreting those statutes, and recommend revisions to one or both statutes to resolve that conflict.

"12.2. The Speaker of the House of Representatives shall appoint to serve on the Task Force six members of the House of Representatives and three public members: one member of the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers, one member of the North Carolina Association of Defense Attorneys, and one member of the North Carolina Bar Association. The Speaker shall appoint a chair from the Task Force membership. The Task Force shall meet upon the call of its chair. A quorum of the Committee shall be a majority of its members.

"12.3. Members of the Task Force shall receive per diem, subsistence, and travel allowances in accordance with G.S. 120-3.1, 138-5, or 138-6, as appropriate. Upon the prior approval of the Legislative Services Commission, the Legislative Services Officer shall assign professional and clerical staff to the Task Force to aid in its work. The Task Force may contract for professional, clerical, or consultant services as provided by G.S. 120-32.02. The Task Force may meet at various locations around the State to promote greater public participation in its deliberations. Subject to the approval of the Legislative Services Commission, the Task Force may meet in the Legislative Building or the Legislative Office Building. The Task Force, while in the discharge of its official duties, may exercise all the powers provided under the provisions of G.S. 120-19 and G.S. 120-19.1 through G.S. 120-19.4, including the power to request all officers, agents, agencies, and departments of the State to provide any information, data, or documents within their possession, ascertainable from their records, or otherwise available to them and the power to subpoena witnesses.

"12.5. From funds appropriated to the General Assembly, the Legislative Services Commission shall allocate funds for the purpose of conducting the study provided for in this Part."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 30.11(c), effective December 1, 2007, provides: "If Senate Bill 758, 2007 General Assembly, becomes law, the Section 2 of Senate Bill 758 is repealed."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 1.2, provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations and Capital Improvements Appropriations Act of 2007'."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 32.5 is a severability clause.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2005-425, s. 1.2, effective January 1, 2006, and applicable to fees assessed or collected on or after that date, inserted "except that if a case is assigned to a special superior court judge as a complex business case under G.S. 7A-45.3, an additional two hundred dollars ($200.00) shall be paid upon its assignment" in the first sentence of subdivision (a)(2).

Session Laws 2007-345, s. 9.1(a), effective December 1, 2007, deleted "plus an additional filing fee of one hundred dollars ($100.00). The additional filing fee must be remitted to the State Treasurer and used for support of the General Court of Justice" from subsection (a3).

CASE NOTES

Authority to Tax Costs Under G.S. 6-20. — Under this section, which specifies in subsection (d) the costs recoverable in civil actions, and also provides in subsection (e) that nothing in this section shall affect the liability of the respective parties for costs as provided by law, the authority of trial courts to tax deposition expenses as costs pursuant to G.S. 6-20 remains undisturbed, regardless of the language of G.S. 7A-320. Alsup v. Pitman, 98 N.C. App. 389, 390 S.E.2d 750 (1990).

Since the trial court's costs ruling was governed by G.S. 6-20, and thus could be allowed at the discretion of the court, and the doctors had not alleged, and there appeared to the appellate court to be no abuse of discretion in the denial of their request to be reimbursed for the expert witness fees where the verdict was in their favor, the judgment was affirmed. Smith v. Cregan, 178 N.C. App. 519, 632 S.E.2d 206, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 1568 (2006).

In North Carolina costs are taxed on the basis of statutory authority, etc. Estate of Smith ex rel. Smith v. Underwood, 127 N.C. App. 1, 487 S.E.2d 807 (1997), cert. denied, 347 N.C. 398, 494 S.E.2d 410 (1997).

In a condemnation action, the trial court correctly found that it had no authority to grant a landowner's motion to tax appraisal fees, map costs, and trial exhibit costs against a non-prevailing condemning authority, since under North Carolina Supreme Court precedent, only costs specifically allowed by statute could be taxed against the authority, and G.S. 7A-305(d), which delineated generally recoverable costs, did not mention these costs. DOT v. Charlotte Area Manufactured Hous., Inc., 160 N.C. App. 461, 586 S.E.2d 780, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1822 (2003).

Costs Not Enumerated Were Allowed. — The trial court rightly exercised its discretion and allowed costs for trial exhibits to be taxed to the appellant patient where the appellee doctor did not receive notice of his voluntary dismissal until the day of trial; the costs were reasonable and necessary pursuant to G.S. 6-20 although trial exhibit costs are not enumerated in subsection (d) of this section. Lewis v. Setty, 140 N.C. App. 536, 537 S.E.2d 505, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1216 (2000).

Expenses Not Enumerated or Otherwise Provided by Law. — The expenses incurred in a fraud action for assembling records and court appearances were not assessable costs enumerated under this section or otherwise provided by law. Sara Lee Corp. v. Carter, 129 N.C. App. 464, 500 S.E.2d 732 (1998), rev'd on other grounds, 351 N.C. 27, 519 S.E.2d 308 (1999).

In a condemnation action, the prevailing landowner's map expenses were not taxable as costs against the opposing condemning authority because G.S. 7A-305(d) did not mention maps, and G.S. 6-20 did not, on its face, make map expenses taxable. DOT v. Charlotte Area Manufactured Hous., Inc., 160 N.C. App. 461, 586 S.E.2d 780, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1822 (2003).

Costs recoverable following a voluntary dismissal under G.S. 1A-1, Rule 41, are the costs enumerated in G.S. 7A-305(d); therefore, since a defendant requested costs not enumerated in that statute, a motion for costs following plaintiff's voluntary dismissal was properly denied. Pharmaresearch Corp. v. Mash, 163 N.C. App. 419, 594 S.E.2d 148, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 410 (2004), cert. denied and dismissed, 358 N.C. 733, 601 S.E.2d 858 (2004).

In a negligence case, a trial court improperly awarded the cost of trial exhibits because they were not either set forth in G.S. 7A-305 or recoverable under common law; moreover, the cost of obtaining medical records was not recoverable for the same reason. Morgan v. Steiner, 173 N.C. App. 577, 619 S.E.2d 516, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2105 (2005).

Costs and attorney fees were awarded to a property owner in error as G.S. 7A-305(d)(3) did not specifically grant the courts the authority to award attorney fees. Watts v. N.C. Dep't of Env't & Natural Res., — N.C. App. —, 641 S.E.2d 811, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 595 (2007).

Subsection (c) of this section clearly permits suits in forma pauperis on appeal. To construe the statute otherwise would be constitutionally suspect, thwart the intent of the legislature, and render an injustice to the people of this State, who frequently utilize the services of the district court division for the resolution of disputes. Atlantic Ins. & Realty Co. v. Davidson, 320 N.C. 159, 357 S.E.2d 668 (1987).

A party, plaintiff or defendant, may petition to appear in forma pauperis in trial de novo of cases appealed to the district court judge from judgments of a magistrate in small claims actions. Atlantic Ins. & Realty Co. v. Davidson, 320 N.C. 159, 357 S.E.2d 668 (1987).

It is not required that a litigant deprive himself of the daily necessities of life to qualify to appear in forma pauperis. Atlantic Ins. & Realty Co. v. Davidson, 320 N.C. 159, 357 S.E.2d 668 (1987).

Defendant Entitled to Appear in Forma Pauperis. — Trial judge erred in entering order denying petition to appear in forma pauperis of defendant who owned a home valued at $27,150 and other unencumbered personal property, in view of abundant evidence as to defendant's age, health, income, living expenses, inability to work or borrow, indebtedness, and the unreasonableness of selling her house. Atlantic Ins. & Realty Co. v. Davidson, 320 N.C. 159, 357 S.E.2d 668 (1987).

Appealing Party Not Prejudiced by Failure of Clerk to Collect Costs. — Under the provisions of subsection (c) of this section, it is clear that the duty of collecting the additional costs at the time of the filing of the papers initiating an appeal is imposed upon the clerk. But a failure of the clerk to perform his duty in this respect should not operate to prejudice the appealing party. Porter v. Cahill, 1 N.C. App. 579, 162 S.E.2d 128 (1968).

Unable to Recover Litigation Costs or Attorney's Fees. — Inmate, who had obtained a verdict against a deputy sheriff with regard to an assault and battery suit, was unable to recover litigation costs or attorney's fees, because no statutory authority existed allowing such recovery to a prevailing party in a civil assault case. Cunningham v. Riley, — N.C. App. —, — S.E.2d —, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 511 (Mar. 15, 2005).

Deposition Expenses. — The expenses for taking depositions, traveling for depositions, videotaping depositions, obtaining copies of depositions from a reporting service, and court reporting services for taking depositions are included within the scope of "deposition expenses." Sealey v. Grine, 115 N.C. App. 343, 444 S.E.2d 632 (1994).

Award of costs made to an engineering firm, after a trial court granted the firm a directed verdict, was modified to remove the award of deposition costs because, while G.S. 7A-305 permitted the court to award the firm costs for mediation fees, expert witness fees, and service of process fees for trial subpoenas, it did not grant the court statutory authority to award the deposition costs. Handex of the Carolinas, Inc. v. County of Haywood, 168 N.C. App. 1, 607 S.E.2d 25, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 148 (2005).

In a medical malpractice case, although deposition costs were recoverable under G.S. 7A-305, defendants did not argue in their brief that the trial court abused its discretion in refusing to award this item as costs, nor was there evidence of an abuse of discretion. Miller v. Forsyth Mem'l Hosp., Inc., 173 N.C. App. 385, 618 S.E.2d 838, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2040 (2005).

Expert Witness Fees. — The trial court did not abuse its discretion and violate this section in taxing the expert witness fees to appellant patient pursuant to G.S. 6-20 after he voluntarily dismissed his negligence suit pursuant to G.S. 1A-1, Rule 41 on the day of trial; costs which are to be taxed under Rule 41(d) include those costs enumerated in subsection (d) of this section, and this section does not preclude liability for other costs such as those outlined in G.S. 6-20. Lewis v. Setty, 140 N.C. App. 536, 537 S.E.2d 505, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 1216 (2000).

In a negligence case, the expert witness fees of two witnesses were taxable under G.S. 7A-314, but fees associated with a third witness testifying on the same issue were not recoverable; in addition, the cost of reviewing records and consulting was not recoverable. Morgan v. Steiner, 173 N.C. App. 577, 619 S.E.2d 516, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2105 (2005).

In a medical malpractice case, a trial court did not err by refusing to award expert witness fees because none of the witnesses were under subpoena. Miller v. Forsyth Mem'l Hosp., Inc., 173 N.C. App. 385, 618 S.E.2d 838, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2040 (2005).

Fees of Court-Appointed Mediator Are Assessable Costs. — The fees of court-appointed mediators are an assessable cost under this section. Sara Lee Corp. v. Carter, 129 N.C. App. 464, 500 S.E.2d 732 (1998), rev'd on other grounds, 351 N.C. 27, 519 S.E.2d 308 (1999).

In a negligence case, a trial court improperly awarded the cost of lunch provided during a mediated settlement conference because, although the mediator's fees was covered under G.S. 7A-305, the lunch associated therewith was not. Morgan v. Steiner, 173 N.C. App. 577, 619 S.E.2d 516, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2105 (2005).

Mediation Costs. — In a medical malpractice case, trial court erred in denying motion seeking to recover mediation costs because mediation was ordered in all civil actions, and the cost was recoverable under G. S. 7A-305(d)(7). Miller v. Forsyth Mem'l Hosp., Inc., 173 N.C. App. 385, 618 S.E.2d 838, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2040 (2005).

Arbitration Fee. — Costs were properly allowed to a successful driver even though the driver's insurer paid all of his costs, as: (1) the judgment was entered for the driver and the costs award did not violate G.S. 6-1; (2) the driver incurred the expenses; (3) the award of an arbitration fee was specifically allowed in G.S. 7A-305(d)(7); (4) it was not an abuse of discretion under G.S. 6-20 to award the deposition fee; and (5) the preparation time fees of a driver's reconstruct expert were properly allowed. Hoffman v. Oakley, — N.C. App. —, 647 S.E.2d 117, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1628 (2007).

Cost of an Independent Appraiser's Valuation Report. — The trial court acted within its discretion when it taxed the entire cost of an independent appraiser's valuation report to the defendants/majority stockholders of a closely-held corporation and ignored or effectually amended the court's pre-trial case management order, in which the court stated that appraisal costs would be shared by both parties. Royals v. Piedmont Elec. Repair Co., 137 N.C. App. 700, 529 S.E.2d 515, 2000 N.C. App. LEXIS 497 (2000).

In a condemnation action, there was no statutory authority for taxing a prevailing landowner's appraisal fees as costs against the opposing condemning authority, as G.S. 7A-305(d), which delineated generally recoverable costs, did not mention appraisal fees, and G.S. 136-119, which dealt with highway condemnation costs, did not authorize the taxing of appraisal fees under the facts. DOT v. Charlotte Area Manufactured Hous., Inc., 160 N.C. App. 461, 586 S.E.2d 780, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1822 (2003).

Costs in Personal Injury Action. — Trial court erred in awarding numerous costs not authorized for medical reports, deposition costs, filing fees, travel costs, trial exhibits, color copies, and photocopies; there was statutory authority, however, for the following awards: mediation fees pursuant to G.S. 7A-

305(d)(7); expert witness fees pursuant to G.S. 7A-305(d)(1); and service of process fees pursuant to G.S. 7A-305(d)(6). Oakes v. Wooten, 173 N.C. App. 506, 620 S.E.2d 39, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2100 (2005).

Fees of Guardian Ad Litem. — Having properly appointed guardian ad litem, the trial court was within its discretion to assess as an item of costs the fees of the guardian ad litem and to tax those fees to either party or apportion them between the parties. Van Every v. McGuire, 125 N.C. App. 578, 481 S.E.2d 377 (1997), aff'd, 348 N.C. 58, 497 S.E.2d 689 (1998).

Photographs, Photocopies, Telephone Calls, Trial Diagrams and Exhibits, and Medical Reports and Records. — Although the trial court did not err when it awarded over $32,000 in attorneys' fees to a pedestrian who was awarded $7,000 in damages after he was struck by a truck, it did err when it granted the pedestrian's request for reimbursement of costs he incurred to make photocopies, telephone calls, photographs, trial diagrams and exhibits, and to obtain medical reports and records, because those expenses were not recoverable as costs, pursuant to G.S. 7A-305. Overton v. Purvis, 162 N.C. App. 241, 591 S.E.2d 18, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 120 (2004).

Costs of Exhibits Not Recoverable. — Costs associated with trial exhibits were not recoverable under G.S. 7A-305(d), and the refusal to award such costs in a medical malpractice action did not constitute error. Miller v. Forsyth Mem'l Hosp., Inc., 173 N.C. App. 385, 618 S.E.2d 838, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2040 (2005).

In an action for ejectment, G.S. 6-19 of the General Statutes was applicable, and therefore, the list of costs recoverable by a prevailing party in a civil action under this section was controlling. Minton v. Lowe's Food Stores, 121 N.C. App. 675, 468 S.E.2d 513 (1996).

Where Original Plaintiff Voluntarily Dismisses Action. — Third party defendants were entitled to recover costs against the original plaintiff in a civil suit, who had voluntarily dismissed its action against the original defendant. Lord v. Customized Consulting Specialty, Inc., 164 N.C. App. 730, 596 S.E.2d 891, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 1144 (2004).

When discovery procedures under Rule 27 of the Rules of Civil Procedure are utilized, the sum of twenty dollars ($20.00) shall be assessed and collected by the clerk at the time of the filing of the verified petition. If a civil action is subsequently initiated, the twenty dollars ($20.00) shall be credited against costs in the civil action. (1971, c. 377, s. 22.)

Editor's Note. — Rule 27 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, referred to in this section, is codified as G.S. 1A-1, Rule 27.

§ 7A-306. Costs in special proceedings.

(a) In every special proceeding in the superior court, the following costs shall be assessed:

(1) For the use of the courtroom and related judicial facilities, the sum of ten dollars ($10.00) to be remitted to the county. Funds derived from the facilities fees shall be used in the same manner, for the same purposes, and subject to the same restrictions, as facilities fees assessed in criminal actions.

(2) For support of the General Court of Justice the sum of forty dollars ($40.00). In addition, in proceedings involving land, except boundary disputes, if the fair market value of the land involved is over one hundred dollars ($100.00), there shall be an additional sum of thirty cents (30¢) per one hundred dollars ($100.00) of value, or major fraction thereof, not to exceed a maximum additional sum of two hundred dollars ($200.00). Fair market value is determined by the sale price if there is a sale, the appraiser's valuation if there is no sale, or the appraised value from the property tax records if there is neither a sale nor an appraiser's valuation. Sums collected under this subdivision shall be remitted to the State Treasurer. The State Treasurer shall remit the sum of two dollars and five cents ($2.05) of each forty-dollar ($40.00) General Court of Justice fee collected under this subdivision to the North Carolina State Bar for the provision of services described in G.S. 7A-474.4.

(b) The facilities fee and thirty dollars ($30.00) of the General Court of Justice fee are payable at the time the proceeding is initiated.

(c) The following additional expenses, when incurred, are assessable or recoverable, as the case may be:

(1) Witness fees, as provided by law.

(2) Counsel fees, as provided by law.

(3) Costs on appeal, of the original transcript of testimony, if any, insofar as essential to the appeal.

(5) Fees of guardians ad litem, referees, receivers, commissioners, surveyors, arbitrators, appraisers, and other similar court appointees, as provided by law. The fees of such appointees shall include reasonable reimbursement for stenographic assistance, when necessary.

(d) Costs assessed before the clerk shall be added to costs assessable on appeal to the judge or upon transfer to the civil issue docket.

(e) Nothing in this section shall affect the liability of the respective parties for costs, as provided by law.

(f) This section does not apply to a foreclosure under power of sale in a deed of trust or mortgage. Session Laws 2001-424, s. 36.3, provides: "Except for statutory changes or other provisions that clearly indicate an intention to have effects beyond the 2001-2003 fiscal biennium, the textual provisions of this act apply only to funds appropriated for, and activities occurring during, the 2001-2003 fiscal biennium."

CASE NOTES

Fees of Guardian in Defense of Petition for Advancement. — Where petitioner entered a voluntary dismissal of a special proceeding to obtain an advancement from the estate of her incompetent father, the trial court had no authority to order that legal fees incurred by the incompetent's guardian in defending the petition for advancement be charged as part of the costs of the proceeding to be paid by petitioner. Guardian's Fees Where Clerk Attempted to Remove Administratrix. — Where the clerk, upon his own motion, sought to have administratrix of estate removed, minor heirs clearly had a vested interest and the right of appeal from the clerk's determination. Thus, clerk took the appropriate and proper step of appointing a guardian ad litem to protect their interests, and the clerk could compel the payment of the necessary expenses from the estate to which the heirs would potentially benefit, including the costs of the guardian ad litem's attorneys' fees. § 7A-307. Costs in administration of estates.

(a) In the administration of the estates of decedents, minors, incompetents, of missing persons, and of trusts under wills and under powers of attorney, in trust proceedings under G.S. 36A-23.1, and in collections of personal property by affidavit, the following costs shall be assessed:

(1) For the use of the courtroom and related judicial facilities, the sum of ten dollars ($10.00), to be remitted to the county. Funds derived from the facilities fees shall be used in the same manner, for the same purposes, and subject to the same restrictions, as facilities fees assessed in criminal actions.

(2) For support of the General Court of Justice, the sum of fifty dollars ($50.00), plus an additional forty cents (40¢) per one hundred dollars ($100.00), or major fraction thereof, of the gross estate, not to exceed six thousand dollars ($6,000). Gross estate shall include the fair market value of all personalty when received, and all proceeds from the sale of realty coming into the hands of the fiduciary, but shall not include the value of realty. In collections of personal property by affidavit, the fee based on the gross estate shall be computed from the information in the final affidavit of collection made pursuant to G.S. 28A-25-3 and shall be paid when that affidavit is filed. In all other cases, this fee shall be computed from the information reported in the inventory and shall be paid when the inventory is filed with the clerk. If additional gross estate, including income, comes into the hands of the fiduciary after the filing of the inventory, the fee for such additional value shall be assessed and paid upon the filing of any account or report disclosing such additional value. For each filing the minimum fee shall be fifteen dollars ($15.00). Sums collected under this subdivision shall be remitted to the State Treasurer. The State Treasurer shall remit the sum of two dollars and five cents ($2.05) of each fifty-dollar ($50.00) General Court of Justice fee collected under this subdivision to the North Carolina State Bar for the provision of services described in G.S. 7A-474.4.

(2a) Notwithstanding subdivision (2) of this subsection, the fee of forty cents (40¢) per one hundred dollars ($100.00), or major fraction, of the gross estate, not to exceed six thousand dollars ($6,000), shall not be assessed on personalty received by a trust under a will when the estate of the decedent was administered under Chapters 28 or 28A of the General Statutes. Instead, a fee of twenty dollars ($20.00) shall be assessed on the filing of each annual and final account. However, the fee shall be assessed only on newly contributed or acquired assets, all interest or other income that accrues or is earned on or with respect to any existing or newly contributed or acquired assets, and realized gains on the sale of any and all trust assets. Newly contributed or acquired assets do not include assets acquired by the sale, transfer, exchange, or otherwise of the amount of trust property on which fees were previously assessed.

(2b) Notwithstanding subdivisions (1) and (2) of this subsection, no costs shall be assessed when the estate is administered or settled pursuant to G.S. 28A-25-6.

(2c) Notwithstanding subdivision (2) of this subsection, the fee of forty cents (40¢) per one hundred dollars ($100.00), or major fraction, of the gross estate shall not be assessed on the gross estate of a trust that is the subject of a proceeding under G.S. 36A-23.1 if there is no requirement in the trust that accountings be filed with the clerk.

(3) For probate of a will without qualification of a personal representative, the clerk shall assess a facilities fee as provided in subdivision (1) of this subsection and shall assess for support of the General Court of Justice, the sum of twenty dollars ($20.00).

(b) In collections of personal property by affidavit, the facilities fee and thirty dollars ($30.00) of the General Court of Justice fee shall be paid at the time of filing the qualifying affidavit pursuant to G.S. 28A-25-1. In all other cases, these fees shall be paid at the time of filing of the first inventory. If the sole asset of the estate is a cause of action, these fees shall be paid at the time of the qualification of the fiduciary.

(b1) The clerk shall assess the following miscellaneous fees:

(1) Filing and indexing a will with no probate
— first page	$ 1.00
— each additional page or fraction thereof	.25
(2) Issuing letters to fiduciaries, per letter over five letters issued	1.00
(3) Inventory of safe deposits of a decedent, per box, per day	15.00

— first page	6.00
— each additional page or fraction thereof	.25
(6) Hearing petition for year's allowance to surviving spouse or child, in cases not assigned to a magistrate, and allotting the same	8.00

(c) The following additional expenses, when incurred, are also assessable or recoverable, as the case may be:

(1) Witness fees, as provided by law.
(2) Counsel fees, as provided by law.
(3) Costs on appeal, of the original transcript of testimony, if any, insofar as essential to the appeal.
(4) Fees for personal service of civil process, and other sheriff's fees, as provided by law.

CASE NOTES

Costs in Trust and Estate Proceedings Initiated Prior to August 1, 1983. — The legislature intended that the word "action," in the directive of Session Laws 1983, c. 713, s. 109 stating that the amendment to subdivision (a)(2) of this section "shall become effective August 1, 1983, and shall apply to all actions initiated on and after that date," include estate proceedings in this limited instance. In re King, 79 N.C. App. 139, 339 S.E.2d 87 (1986).

Proceedings regarding estate administration were "initiated" prior to August 1, 1983, where estate was opened for probate on October 23, 1980. In re King, 79 N.C. App. 139, 339 S.E.2d 87 (1986), holding that costs to be assessed against estate were governed by subdivision (a)(2) of this section as it existed prior to amendment by Session Laws 1983, c. 713.

Any action or proceeding relating to trusts was "initiated" prior to August 1, 1983, where letters of trusteeship for each of the trusts were issued on July 23, 1981. In re King, 79 N.C. App. 139, 339 S.E.2d 87 (1986), holding that costs to be assessed against estate and trusts were governed by subdivision (a)(2) of this section as it existed prior to amendment by Session Laws 1983, c. 713.

Proceeds recovered for the wrongful death of a decedent are not subject to the assessment of costs in the administration of estates of decedents provided for under subdivision (a)(2) of this section, since the proceeds recovered under the wrongful death statute are not a part of the decedent's estate. In re Below, 12 N.C. App. 657, 184 S.E.2d 378 (1971).

Guardian's Fees Where Clerk Attempted to Remove Administratrix. — Where clerk, upon his own motion, sought to have administratrix of estate removed, minor heirs clearly had a vested interest and the right of appeal from the clerk's determination. Thus, clerk took the appropriate and proper step of appointing a guardian ad litem to protect their interests, and the clerk could compel the payment of the necessary expenses from the estate to which the heirs would potentially benefit, including the costs of the guardian ad litem's attorneys' fees. In re Estate of Sturman, 93 N.C. App. 473, 378 S.E.2d 204 (1989).

(b) The fees and commissions set forth in this section are not chargeable when the service is performed as a part of the regular disposition of any action or special proceeding or the administration of an estate. When a transaction involves more than one of the services set forth in this section, only the greater service fee shall be charged. The Director of the Administrative Office of the courts shall issue guidelines pursuant to G.S. 7A-343(3) to be followed in administering this subsection.

(b1) The fees set forth in subdivision (12) of subsection (a) of this section are not chargeable when copies are requested by an attorney who has been appointed to represent an indigent person at State expense, if the request is made in connection with the appointed case and during the duration of the appointment.

(c) A person who participates in a program for the collection of worthless checks under G.S. 14-107.2 must pay a fee of sixty dollars ($60.00). The fee collected under this subsection must be remitted to the State by the clerk of the court in the county in which the program is established and credited to the Collection of Worthless Checks Fund. The Collection of Worthless Checks Fund is created as a special revenue fund. Revenue in the Fund does not revert at the end of the fiscal year, and interest and other investment income earned by the Fund accrues to the Fund. The money in the Fund is subject to appropriation by the General Assembly and may be used solely for the expenses of the programs established under G.S. 14-107.2 for the collection of worthless checks, including personnel, equipment, and other costs of district attorneys' offices that are attributable to the provision of these programs. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, ss. 32, 33; 1969, c. 1190, s. 31; 1971, c. 956, s. 2; 1973, c. 503, s. 16; c. 886; 1975, c. 829; 1981, c. 313, s. 1; 1983, c. 713, s. 18; 1985, c. 475, ss. 2, 3; c. 481, ss. 6-8; c. 511, s. 2; 1989, c. 783, ss. 2-4; c. 786, ss. 1, 3; 1997-114, s. 1; 1997-443, s. 18.22(a); 1998-23, s. 11; 1998-212, s. 16.3; 1999-237, s. 17.7; 2000-67, s. 15.3A(a); 2000-109, s. 4(e); 2001-516, s. 2; 2002-126, ss. 29A.7(a), 29A.13.1(a); 2002-135, s. 4; 2003-284, s. 36A.2; 2005-251, s. 1; 2007-323, ss. 30.8(e), (f), 30.10(c).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 1997-443, s. 18.22(a), added subsection (c). Initially, Session Laws 1997-443, s. 18.22(d) provided that s. 18.22(a) would apply to Columbus, Durham and Rockingham Counties only, and s. 18.22(e) provided that the act would become effective October 1, 1997, and would expire June 30, 1998. Session Laws 1998-23, s. 11(a) amended Session Laws 1997-443, s. 18.22(e) to provide that s. 18.22 would expire when the 1998 Appropriations Act became law; however, this provision was repealed by Session Laws 1998-212, s. 16.3(d). Section 16.3(a) of Session Laws 1998-212 provided that Session Laws 1997-443, s. 18.22 would expire June 30, 1999, and s. 16.3(d) of that act added Wake to the list of counties to which Session Laws 1997-443, s. 18.22 was applicable. Session Laws 1999-237, s. 17.7(a) deleted the sunset for Session Laws 1997-443, s. 18.22, as amended, and added Brunswick, Bladen, New Hanover, and Pender to the list of counties. Session Laws 2000-67, s. 15.3A, added Cumberland, Edgecombe, Nash, Onslow, and Wilson to the list of counties. The provisions of Session Laws 1997-443, s. 18.22(a) have been codified as subsection (c) of this section at the direction of the Revisor of Statutes.

Prior to using any funds under this section, the Judicial Department shall report to the Joint Legislative Commission on Governmental Operations and the Chairs of the Senate and House of Representatives Appropriations Subcommittees on Justice and Public Safety on the equipment to be purchased or repaired and the reasons for the purchases.

"The Judicial Department may use up to the sum of five hundred thousand dollars ($500,000) in receipts collected from the Worthless Check Program during the 2004-2005 fiscal year to create up to 10 positions in, and to provide equipment for, district attorney's offices that are establishing or expanding programs for the collection of worthless checks. The Judicial Department shall report by March 1, 2005, to the Chairs of the Senate and House of Representatives Appropriations Subcommittees on Justice and Public Safety on the prosecutorial districts in which expansion has been implemented."

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2007-323, ss. 30.8(e), (f), and 30.10(c), effective August 1, 2007, and applicable to all costs assessed or collected on or after that date, in subdivision (a)(1), substituted "$75.00" for "$60.00" and twice substituted "five hundred dollars ($500.00)" for "three hundred dollars ($300.00)"; inserted "(of each document copied)" in subdivision (a)(12); and substituted "15.00" for "10.00" in subdivision (a)(17).

CASE NOTES

Assessment of Subdivision (a)(1) Tax Held Not to Violate Permanent Injunction Against Collection Against United States or Its Agencies. — Where power of sale clauses enforced were not in deeds of trust of United States or even of its agencies but were in deeds of trust of lending institutions, terms of consent permanent injunction against collection of tax provided in subdivision (1)(a) of this section (entered into in United States of America v. State of North Carolina, No. 83-1576-CIV-5) did not apply. Whitley v. Griffin, 737 F. Supp. 345 (E.D.N.C. 1990).

Where at foreclosure sale the lender was the highest bidder and purchaser; a federal agency was named in the foreclosure deed only through assignment of lender's bid; and trustee was required by G.S. 45-21.31(a) to pay foreclosure tax (which is simply an obligation of trustee that must be paid from proceeds of foreclosure sale), ultimate burden of paying tax did not fall upon United States or its agencies. Thus the tax was collectible. Whitley v. Griffin, 737 F. Supp. 345 (E.D.N.C. 1990).

Assessing Subdivision (a)(1) Tax Held Not to Violate Supremacy Clause of U.S. Constitution. — Foreclosure tax of subdivision (a)(1) of this section is a nondiscriminatory tax; all trustees who sell real property under power of sale provisions of a deed of trust must pay the tax from sale proceeds. The only exception arises from the terms of the Consent Permanent Injunction entered into in United States of America v. State of North Carolina No. 83-1576-CIV-5; the tax is not unconstitutionally imposed upon proceeds of foreclosure sale but is indiscriminately imposed upon every trustee who sells under power of sale provisions of a deed of trust. The fact that lender is entitled to reimbursement from HUD for two-thirds of foreclosure costs does not alter conclusion that ultimate burden of paying tax is not on federal agency; a portion of the tax is not reimbursed and to allow trustee to avoid the tax on entire purchase price simply because federal agency has a contractual obligation to repay tax would deprive state of collecting one-third of revenues. Whitley v. Griffin, 737 F. Supp. 345 (E.D.N.C. 1990).

Since foreclosure tax provided for in subdivision (a)(1) of this section is not imposed upon seller (lender), purchaser (borrower) or purchaser's assignee (federal agency) but is levied upon proceeds held by trustee and must be paid by the trustee the fact that the federal government sets forth many requirements and reimburses lender for part of foreclosure costs does not make the foreclosure sale a governmental activity. Therefore, state is not constitutionally prohibited from collecting the tax. Whitley v. Griffin, 737 F. Supp. 345 (E.D.N.C. 1990).

Commission by clerk of superior court on interest earned by posted cash bond is deductible. Form of order setting bond precludes deduction of commission from principal. See opinion of Attorney General to Honorable Frank W. Snepp, 41 N.C.A.G. 470 (1971).

§ 7A-308.1. Fees on deposits and investments.

On all funds received by the clerk by virtue or color of his office and deposited pursuant to G.S. 7A-112.1 or invested pursuant to G.S. 7A-112, one or both of the fees provided for in this section shall be assessed and collected as follows:

(1) On all funds deposited by the clerk in an interest bearing checking account pursuant to G.S. 7A-112.1, a fee of four percent (4%) of each principal amount so deposited shall be assessed and collected, subject to the following conditions:
  a. The fee shall be collected from interest earnings only and shall not exceed the amount of the interest earnings on any principal amount so deposited, or seven hundred fifty dollars ($750.00), whichever is less;
  b. All fees collected pursuant to this subsection shall be paid to the county as court facilities fees and used as prescribed in G.S. 7A-304(a)(2);
  c. All interest earnings in excess of the prescribed fee shall be remitted to the beneficial owner or owners of any principal amount when that amount is withdrawn and distributed by the clerk; and

d. If any principal amount is withdrawn from the checking account and invested pursuant to G.S. 7A-112, any interest in excess of the prescribed clerk's fee which is invested with the principal amount shall be included in the fund upon which the fee provided for in subdivision (2) is computed.

(2) On all funds to be invested by the clerk pursuant to G.S. 7A-112, a fee equal to five percent (5%) of each fund shall be assessed and collected, subject to the following conditions:
  a. The fee shall be charged and deducted from each fund before the fund is invested, and only the balance shall be invested;
  b. Over the life of an account, the fees charged on the initial funds and all funds subsequently placed with the clerk for that account shall not exceed the investment earnings on the account or one thousand dollars ($1,000), whichever is less;
  c. All fees collected pursuant to this subsection shall be remitted to the State Treasurer for the support of the General Court of Justice; and
  d. Any fees charged in excess of the cumulative investment earnings on an account shall be refunded and all investment earnings in excess of the prescribed fee shall be remitted to the beneficial owner or owners when all funds in that account are finally withdrawn and distributed by the clerk. (1989, c. 783, s. 5.)

§ 7A-309. Magistrate's special fees.

The following special fees shall be collected by the magistrate and remitted to the clerk of superior court for the use of the State in support of the General Court of Justice:

(1) Performing marriage ceremony	$20.00
(2) Hearing petition for year's allowance to surviving spouse or child, issuing notices to commissioners, allotting the same, and making return	8.00
(3) Taking a deposition	10.00
(4) Proof of execution or acknowledgment of any instrument	2.00
(5) Performing any other statutory function not incident to a civil or criminal action	$2.00.

(1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1973, c. 503, s. 17; 1983, c. 713, s. 19; 2002-126, s. 29A.10(a).)

§ 7A-310. Fees of commissioners and assessors appointed by magistrate.

Any person appointed by a magistrate as a commissioner or assessor, and who shall serve, shall be paid the sum of two dollars ($2.00), to be taxed as a part of the bill of costs of the proceeding. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

§ 7A-311. Uniform civil process fees.

(a) In a civil action or special proceeding, except for actions brought under Chapter 50B of the General Statutes, the following fees and commissions shall be assessed, collected, and remitted to the county:

(1)a. For each item of civil process served, including summons, subpoenas, notices, motions, orders, writs and pleadings, the sum of fifteen dollars ($15.00). When two or more items of civil process are served simultaneously on one party, only one fifteen-dollar ($15.00) fee shall be charged.
  b. When an item of civil process is served on two or more persons or organizations, a separate service charge shall be made for each person or organization. The process fee shall be remitted to the county. This subsection shall not apply to service of summons to jurors.

c. At least fifty percent (50%) of the fees collected pursuant to this subdivision shall be used by the county to ensure the timely service of process within the county, which may include the hiring of additional law enforcement personnel upon the recommendation of the sheriff.

(2) For the seizure of personal property and its care after seizure, all necessary expenses, in addition to any fees for service of process.

(3) For all sales by the sheriff of property, either real or personal, or for funds collected by the sheriff under any judgment, five percent (5%) on the first five hundred dollars ($500.00), and two and one-half percent (2 ½%) on all sums over five hundred dollars ($500.00), plus necessary expenses of sale. Whenever an execution is issued to the sheriff, and subsequently while the execution is in force and outstanding, and after the sheriff has served or attempted to serve such execution, the judgment, or any part thereof, is paid directly or indirectly to the judgment creditor, the fee herein is payable to the sheriff on the amount so paid. The judgment creditor shall be responsible for collecting and paying all execution fees on amounts paid directly to the judgment creditor.

(4) For execution of a judgment of ejectment, all necessary expenses, in addition to any fees for service of process.

(5) For necessary transportation of individuals to or from State institutions or another state, the same mileage and subsistence allowances as are provided for State employees.

(b) All fees that are required to be assessed, collected, and remitted under subsection (a) of this section shall be collected in advance (except in suits in forma pauperis) except those contingent on expenses or sales prices. When the fee is not collected in advance or at the time of assessment, a lien shall exist in favor of the county on all property of the party owing the fee. If the fee remains unpaid it shall be entered as a judgment against the debtor and shall be docketed in the judgment docket in the office of the clerk of superior court.

(c) The process fees and commissions set forth in this section are complete and exclusive and in lieu of any and all other process fees and commissions in civil actions and special proceedings. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 34; 1969, c. 1190, s. 31 1/2; 1973, c. 417, ss. 1, 2; c. 503, s. 18; c. 1139; 1979, c. 801, s. 2; 1989 (Reg. Sess., 1990), c. 1044, s. 2; 1998-212, s. 29A.12(e); 2002-126, ss. 29A.6(f), 29A.6(g); 2004-113, s. 1.)

Subdivision (a)(1) of this section requires civil process fees to be assessed, collected and remitted when the law enforcement officer serves or attempts to serve civil process. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. Larry J. McGlothlin, Cumberland County Sheriff's Attorney, 49 N.C.A.G. 47 (1979).

§ 7A-312. Uniform fees for jurors; meals.

(a) A juror in the General Court of Justice including a petit juror, or a coroner's juror, but excluding a grand juror, shall receive twelve dollars ($12.00) for the first day of service and twenty dollars ($20.00) per day afterwards, except that if any person serves as a juror for more than five days in any 24-month period, the juror shall receive forty dollars ($40.00) per day for each day of service in excess of five days. A grand juror shall receive twenty dollars ($20.00) per day. A juror required to remain overnight at the site of the trial shall be furnished adequate accommodations and subsistence. If required by the presiding judge to remain in a body during the trial of a case, meals shall be furnished the jurors during the period of sequestration. Jurors from out of the county summoned to sit on a special venire shall receive mileage at the same rate as State employees.

(b) Notwithstanding subsection (a) of this section, the Administrative Office of the Courts may select a judicial district to operate a pilot program in which a juror may waive payment of the per diem fees provided for in that subsection. A juror waiving the fee may designate that the fee be used for any of the following services, if such services are provided in the district: (i) client treatment and service programs associated with a drug treatment or DWI treatment court program; (ii) courthouse self-help centers; (iii) courthouse child care centers; (iv) legal aid programs operated by a nonprofit corporation operating within the district; and (v) the Crime Victims Compensation Fund. If no such services are provided within the district, then waived fees are transferred to the Crime Victims Compensation Fund. (b) A witness entitled to the fee set forth in subsection (a) of this section, and a law-enforcement officer who qualifies as a witness, shall be entitled to receive reimbursement for travel expenses as follows:

(1) A witness whose residence is outside the county of appearance but within 75 miles of the place of appearance shall be entitled to receive mileage reimbursement at the rate currently authorized for State employees, for each mile necessarily traveled from his place of resident to the place of appearance and return, each day.

(2) A witness whose residence is outside the county of appearance and more than 75 miles from the place of appearance shall be entitled to receive mileage reimbursement at the rate currently authorized State employees for one round-trip from his place of residence to the place of appearance. A witness required to appear more than one day shall be entitled to receive reimbursement for actual expenses incurred for lodging and meals not to exceed the maximum currently authorized for State employees, in lieu of daily mileage.

(c) A witness who resides in a state other than North Carolina and who appears for the purpose of testifying in a criminal action and proves his attendance may be compensated at the rate allowed to State officers and employees by subdivisions (1) and (2) of G.S. 138-6(a) for one round-trip from his place of residence to the place of appearance, and five dollars ($5.00) for each day that he is required to travel and attend as a witness, upon order of the court based upon a finding that the person was a necessary witness. If such a witness is required to appear more than one day, he is also entitled to reimbursement for actual expenses incurred for lodging and meals, not to exceed the maximum currently authorized for State employees.

Compensation of experts provided under G.S. 7A-454 shall be in accordance with rules established by the Office of Indigent Defense Services.

(f) In any case in which the Judicial Department is bearing the costs of representation for a party and that party or a witness for that party does not speak or understand the English language, and the court appoints a foreign language interpreter to assist that party or witness, the reasonable fee for the interpreter's services is payable from funds appropriated to the Administrative Office of the Courts. In order to facilitate the disposition of criminal or Chapter 50B cases, the court may authorize the use of a court interpreter, paid from funds appropriated to the Administrative Office of the Courts, in cases in which an interpreter is necessary to assist the court in the efficient transaction of business. The appointment and payment shall be made in accordance with G.S. 7A-343(9c). CASE NOTES

Subsections (a) and (d) of this section must be considered together. State v. Johnson, 282 N.C. 1, 191 S.E.2d 641 (1972).

As to expert witnesses, subsection (d) modifies subsection (a) by permitting the court, in its discretion, to increase their compensation and allowances, but the modification relates only to the amount of an expert witness's fee; it does not abrogate the requirement that all witnesses must be subpoenaed before they are entitled to compensation. State v. Johnson, 282 N.C. 1, 191 S.E.2d 641 (1972).

Unless an expert witness is subpoenaed, the witness' fees are not generally recognized as costs. Wade v. Wade, 72 N.C. App. 372, 325 S.E.2d 260, cert. denied, 313 N.C. 612, 330 S.E.2d 616 (1985).

Award of Expert Witness Fees Was Proper. — Trial court did not err in awarding expert witness fees to two doctors where both expert witnesses were subpoenaed to testify and provided testimony on the injured person's condition, and where the trial court found that the testimony of both expert witnesses was clear, strong, and convincing and reasonably necessary in the case. Oakes v. Wooten, 173 N.C. App. 506, 620 S.E.2d 39, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2100 (2005).

Experts Must Be Subpoenaed. — Where one expert was not served with a subpoena and another was unsure as to what a subpoena was, the trial court did not have the authority to order defendants to pay expert witness expenses as costs. Rogers v. Sportsworld of Rocky Mount, Inc., 134 N.C. App. 709, 518 S.E.2d 551 (1999).

It is error for a trial court to tax an expert witness fee as part of the costs when the expert has not testified pursuant to a subpoena. Craven v. Chambers, 56 N.C. App. 151, 287 S.E.2d 905 (1982), overruled on other grounds, Johnson v. Ruark Ob. & Gyn. Assocs., 327 N.C. 283, 395 S.E.2d 85 (1990).

Trial court properly allowed expert witness fees under subsection (d) since defendant deposed the experts pursuant to a subpoena. Town of Chapel Hill v. Fox, 120 N.C. App. 630, 463 S.E.2d 421 (1995).

Trial court erred in awarding expert witness fees under G.S. 113A-66(c) of the North Carolina Sedimentation Pollution Control Act of 1973, G.S. 113A-50 et seq., where there was no showing that the expert witnesses appeared under subpoena. Whiteside Estates, Inc. v. Highlands Cove, L.L.C., 146 N.C. App. 449, 553 S.E.2d 431, 2001 N.C. App. LEXIS 970 (2001).

Trial court erred by granting a pedestrian's request for reimbursement of payments he made to expert witnesses without finding that the pedestrian's expert witnesses were subpoenaed. Overton v. Purvis, 162 N.C. App. 241, 591 S.E.2d 18, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 120 (2004).

In a medical malpractice case, a trial court did not err by refusing to award expert witness fees because none of the witnesses were under subpoena. Miller v. Forsyth Mem'l Hosp., Inc., 173 N.C. App. 385, 618 S.E.2d 838, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2040 (2005).

Witness Must Be Subpoenaed. — While the trial court may award or decline to award witness fees as an exercise of discretion, it may not decline to exercise its discretion by making this determination as a matter of law; this rule does not apply where the witness was not subpoenaed. Holtman v. Reese, 119 N.C. App. 747, 460 S.E.2d 338 (1995).

Trial Court's Discretion Supersedes Even the Issuance of Subpoenas. — But trial court's denial of plaintiff's request for expert witness fees, even if subpoenas were issued, was not an abuse of its discretion. Blackmon v. Bumgardner, 135 N.C. App. 125, 519 S.E.2d 335 (1999).

Since the trial court's costs ruling was governed by G.S. 6-20, and thus could be allowed at the discretion of the court, and the doctors had not alleged, and there appeared to the appellate court to be no abuse of discretion in the denial of their request to be reimbursed for the expert witness fees where the verdict was in their favor, the judgment was affirmed. Smith v. Cregan, 178 N.C. App. 519, 632 S.E.2d 206, 2006 N.C. App. LEXIS 1568 (2006).

Where witnesses did not testify in obedience to a subpoena, the trial court was without authority to allow them expert fees or to tax the losing party with the costs of their attendance. State v. Johnson, 282 N.C. 1, 191 S.E.2d 641 (1972); Couch v. Couch, 18 N.C. App. 108, 196 S.E.2d 64 (1973); Brandenburg Land Co. v. Champion Int'l Corp., 107 N.C. App. 102, 418 S.E.2d 526 (1992).

Third witness fees denied. — In a negligence case, the expert witness fees of two witnesses were taxable under G.S. 7A-314, but fees associated with a third witness testifying on the same issue were not recoverable; in addition, the cost of reviewing records and consulting was not recoverable. Morgan v. Steiner, 173 N.C. App. 577, 619 S.E.2d 516, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2105 (2005).

Jurisdiction of Trial Court to Award. — Pursuant to G.S. 1-294, a trial court did not have jurisdiction to decide the issue of attorney fees after a county and its board of commissioners had filed their notice of appeal from the judgment in favor of a chairman of a county airport authority who had been improperly removed from his position; an exception did not apply, as the award of attorney fees under G.S. 6-1, G.S. 6-20, G.S. 6-19.1, G.S. 7A-314, and G.S. 143-318.16B was based upon the chairman being the prevailing party. McClure v. County of Jackson, — N.C. App. —, 648 S.E.2d 546, 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 1814 (2007).

Applied in Wright v. American Gen. Life Ins. Co., 59 N.C. App. 591, 297 S.E.2d 910 (1982); Williams v. Boylan-Pearce, Inc., 69 N.C. App. 315, 317 S.E.2d 17 (1984); Kinlaw v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 98 N.C. App. 13, 389 S.E.2d 840 (1990); Lord v. Customized Consulting Specialty, Inc., 164 N.C. App. 730, 596 S.E.2d 891, 2004 N.C. App. LEXIS 1144 (2004).

§ 7A-314.1. Family court fees.

(a) The Administrative Office of the Courts may charge a uniform fee of not more than thirty dollars ($30.00) per hour to persons receiving the services of a supervised visitation and exchange center through a family court program. The fees collected under this section may be used by the Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts to support the continued operation of supervised visitation and exchange centers which provide services to family court clients regarding domestic violence, substance abuse, mental illness, parental alienation, and other issues.

(b) The Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts may establish a procedure for persons to apply for a reduction in the fee, based upon the person's ability to pay as a result of indigence, status as a victim of domestic violence, or other circumstances. (2004-110, s. 7.1.)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2004-110, s. 7.2, made this section effective July 17, 2004.

Session Laws 2004-110, s. 8.1, provides: "This act does not affect the rights or liabilities of the State, a taxpayer, or another person arising under a statute amended or repealed by this act before the effective date of its amendment or repeal; nor does this act affect the right to any refund or credit of a tax that accrued under the amended or repealed statute before the effective date of its amendment or repeal."

§ 7A-315. Liability of State for witness fees in criminal cases when defendant not liable.

In a criminal action, if no prosecuting witness is designated by the court as liable for the costs, and the defendant is acquitted, or convicted and unable to pay, or a nolle prosequi is entered, or judgment is arrested, or probable cause is not found, or the grand jury fails to return a true bill, the State shall be liable for the witness fees allowed per G.S. 7A-314 and any expenses for blood tests and comparisons incurred per G.S. 8-50.1(a). (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1979, c. 576, s. 4.)

§ 7A-316. Payment of witness fees in criminal actions.

A witness in a criminal action who is entitled to a witness fee and who proves his attendance prior to assessment of the bill of costs shall be paid by the clerk from State funds and the amount disbursed shall be assessed in the bill of costs. When the State is liable for the fee, a witness who proves his attendance not later than the last day of court in the week in which the trial was completed shall be paid by the clerk from State funds. If more than two witnesses shall be subpoenaed, bound over, or recognized, to prove a single material fact, disbursements to such additional witnesses shall be charged against the party issuing or requesting the subpoena. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1971, c. 377, s. 28.)

§ 7A-317. (Effective until July 1, 2008) Counties and municipalities not required to advance certain fees.

Counties and municipalities are not required to advance costs for the facilities fee, the General Court of Justice fee, the miscellaneous fees enumerated in G.S. 7A-308, or the civil process fees enumerated in G.S. 7A-311. (1967, c. 691, s. 35.)

Section Set Out Twice. — The section above is effective until July 1, 2008. For the section as amended effective July 1, 2008, see the following section, also numbered G.S. 7A-317.

Editor's Note. — Former G.S. 7A-317 was renumbered as G.S. 7A-318 by Session Laws 1967, c. 691, s. 35, which added this section.

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

County hospital is within exemption of county from advance costs. See opinion of Attorney General to Mr. William L. Mills, Jr., Attorney for Cabarrus Memorial Hospital, 41 N.C.A.G. 232 (1971).

§ 7A-317. (Effective July 1, 2008) Counties and municipalities not required to advance certain fees.

Counties and municipalities are not required to advance the civil process fees enumerated in G.S. 7A-311. (1967, c. 691, s. 35; 2007-323, s. 30.10(d).)

Section Set Out Twice. — The section above is effective July 1, 2008. For the section as in effect until July 1, 2008, see the preceding section, also numbered G.S. 7A-317.

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2007-323, s. 1.2, provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations and Capital Improvements Appropriations Act of 2007'."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 32.5 is a severability clause.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2007-323, s. 30.10(d), effective July 1, 2008, deleted "costs for the facilities fee, the General Court of Justice fee, the miscellaneous fees enumerated in G.S. 7A-308, or" following "to advance" in the middle of this section.

§ 7A-317.1. Disposition of fees in counties with unincorporated seats of court.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this Article, if a municipality listed in G.S. 7A-133 as an additional seat of district court is not incorporated, the arrest, facilities, and jail fees which would ordinarily accrue thereto, shall instead accrue to the county in which the unincorporated municipality is located. (1969, c. 1190, s. 341/2.)

§ 7A-318. Determination and disbursement of costs on and after date district court established.

(a) On and after the date that the district court is established in a judicial district, costs in every action, proceeding or other matter pending in the General Court of Justice in that district, shall be assessed as provided in this Article, unless costs have been finally assessed according to prior law. In computing costs as provided in this section, the parties shall be given credit for any fees, costs, and commissions paid in the pending action, proceeding or other matter, before the district court was established in the district, except that no refunds are authorized.

(b) In the administration of estates, costs shall be considered finally assessed according to prior law when they have been assessed at the time of the filing of any inventory, account, or other report. Costs at any filing on or after the date the district court is established in a judicial district shall be assessed as provided in this Article.

(c) When the General Court of Justice fee and the facilities fee are assessed as provided in this Article and credit is given for fees, costs, and commissions paid before the district court was established in the district, the actual amount thereafter received by the clerk shall be remitted to the State for the support of the General Court of Justice.

(d) When costs have been finally assessed according to prior law, but come into the hands of the clerk after the district court is established in the district, funds so received shall be disbursed according to prior law.

(e) Cost funds in the hands of the clerk at the time the district court is established shall be disbursed according to prior law. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 35.)

CASE NOTES

Assessment of Costs in Cases Pending When District Court Is Established. — This section clearly provides that in cases pending at the time of the establishment of the district court, in which costs have not been finally assessed according to prior law, the costs shall be assessed as provided in Article 27 of this Chapter. Blackwell v. Montague, 15 N.C. App. 564, 190 S.E.2d 384 (1972).

General Court of Justice Fee and Facilities Fee to Be Remitted to State. — This section clearly provides that the General Court of Justice fee and the "facilities fee" assessed in the class of pending cases shall be remitted to the State for the support of the General Court of Justice. The requirement of the statute is unambiguous and requires no interpretation. Blackwell v. Montague, 15 N.C. App. 564, 190 S.E.2d 384 (1972).

§ 7A-320. Costs are exclusive.

The costs set forth in this Article are complete and exclusive, and in lieu of any other costs and fees. (1983, c. 713, s. 1.)

CASE NOTES

Authority to Tax Costs Under G.S. 6-20. — Under G.S. 7A-305, which specifies in subsection (d) the costs recoverable in civil actions, and also provides in subsection (e) that nothing in this section shall affect the liability of the respective parties for costs as provided by law, the authority of trial courts to tax deposition expenses as costs pursuant to G.S. 6-20 remains undisturbed, regardless of the language of G.S. 7A-320. Alsup v. Pitman, 98 N.C. App. 389, 390 S.E.2d 750 (1990).

Plain meaning of G.S. 7A-320, 6-1, and 6-20, precluded a finding that any reasonable and necessary litigation expenses could be taxed as costs against a non-prevailing opposing party; pursuant to North Carolina Supreme Court precedent, the only expenses which could be taxed as costs were those specifically authorized by statute. DOT v. Charlotte Area Manufactured Hous., Inc., 160 N.C. App. 461, 586 S.E.2d 780, 2003 N.C. App. LEXIS 1822 (2003).

No Statutory Authority to Recover Litigation Costs or Attorney's Fees. — Inmate, who had obtained a verdict against a deputy sheriff with regard to an assault and battery suit, was unable to recover litigation costs or attorney's fees, because no statutory authority existed allowing such recovery to a prevailing party in a civil assault case. Cunningham v. Riley, — N.C. App. —, — S.E.2d —, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 511 (Mar. 15, 2005).

Deposition fees. — In a negligence case, deposition costs were recoverable as trial expenses under G.S. 6-20 because they were established by case law prior to the enactment of G.S. 7A-320 in 1983. Morgan v. Steiner, 173 N.C. App. 577, 619 S.E.2d 516, 2005 N.C. App. LEXIS 2105 (2005).

§ 7A-321. Collection of offender fines and fees assessed by the court.

(a) The Judicial Department may, in lieu of payment by cash or check, accept payment by credit card, charge card, or debit card for the fines, fees, and costs owed to the courts by offenders.

(b) In attempting to collect the fines, fees, and costs owed by offenders not sentenced to supervised probation, the Department may:

(1) Assess a collection assistance fee if an amount due remains unpaid for 30 days after the time period allotted by the court. The amount of the collection assistance fee shall not exceed the average cost of collecting the debt or twenty percent (20%) of the amount past due, whichever is less.

(2) Enter into contracts with a collection agency or agencies to collect unpaid fines, fees, and costs owed by offenders not sentenced to supervised probation.

(3) Intercept tax refund checks under Chapter 105A of the General Statutes, the Setoff Debt Collection Act.

(c) Should the Judicial Department use any method listed in subdivision (b)(1) or (2) of this section to collect fines, fees, and costs owed by offenders not sentenced to supervised probation, the department may not charge any additional cost of collection pursuant to G.S. 115C-437. (2006-187, s. 1(a); 2007-323, s. 30.9(a).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2006-187, s. 13, made this section effective August 3, 2006.

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 1.2, provides: "This act shall be known as the 'Current Operations and Capital Improvements Appropriations Act of 2007'."

Session Laws 2007-323, s. 32.5 is a severability clause.

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2007-323, s. 30.9(a), effective August 1, 2007, and applicable to cases adjudicated on or after that date, designated the existing provisions as subsection (a), and added subsections (b) and (c).

SUBCHAPTER VII. ADMINISTRATIVE MATTERS.

Article 29.

Administrative Office of the Courts.

§ 7A-340. Administrative Office of the Courts; establishment; officers.

There is hereby established a State office to be known as the Administrative Office of the Courts. It shall be supervised by a Director, assisted by an assistant director. (1965, c. 310, s. 1.)

Cross References. — As to reports on vacant positions in the Judicial Department, see G.S. 120-12.1. As to authorization for the Legislative Services Commission and the Administrative Office of the Courts to establish safety and health programs for their employees, see G.S. 143-589.

Mental Health Treatment Courts — Pilot Program. — Session Laws 2004-124, ss. 10.27(a)-(f), provides: "(a) The Administrative Office of the Courts shall establish pilot programs in judicial districts 15B, 26, and 28 that add a mental health treatment component to the existing drug treatment courts in those districts, thereby expanding those courts into therapeutic court programs aimed at providing treatment to repeat adult offenders with needs for either mental health or substance abuse services. The purpose of the mental health treatment component of the pilot programs is to facilitate cooperation between the State mental health system, mental health service providers, and the judicial system in order for the State mental health system to provide repeat adult offenders that need mental health services with treatment and other mental health services aimed at improving their ability to function in the community, thereby reducing recidivism and easing the workload of the courts.

"In expanding the drug treatment courts in these districts into therapeutic courts under this section, the Administrative Office of the Courts and the Department of Health and Human Services, Division of Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities, and Substance Abuse Services, shall collaborate on a plan for the structure of the court process, treatment services provided by area authorities or county programs and other appropriate mental health service providers, and administration of the pilot programs. Treatment services provided under the mental health treatment court component shall use best treatment practices approved by the Division of Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities, and Substance Abuse Services. The collaborative effort required under this section shall also include consideration of the effectiveness and efficiency of the mental health treatment court component to determine feasibility of the statewide expansion of drug treatment courts into therapeutic courts."

"(b) The Administrative Office of the Courts shall report to the Chairs of the Senate and House Appropriations Committees, the Chairs of the Senate and House Appropriations Subcommittees on Justice and Public Safety, and the Chairs of the Senate and House Appropriations Subcommittees on Health and Human Services by March 1, 2005, on the implementation of the therapeutic treatment court pilot programs provided for in this section, including an evaluation of the effectiveness of the new mental health treatment component of those programs and recommendations on the feasibility and desirability of expanding the existing drug treatment court program into a statewide therapeutic court program.

"(c) There is appropriated from the Trust

Fund for Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities, and Substance Abuse Services and Bridge Funding Needs to the Judicial Department the sum of thirty-six thousand one hundred sixty-one dollars ($36,161) for the 2004-2005 fiscal year. These funds shall be used for administrative costs associated with expanding the Drug Treatment Court to serve adult repeat offenders who are within the targeted population for mental health, developmental disabilities, and substance abuse services as defined in G.S. 122C-3(38).

"(d) There is appropriated from the Trust Fund for Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities, and Substance Abuse Services and Bridge Funding Needs to the Department of Health and Human Services, Division of Mental Health, Developmental Disabilities, and Substance Abuse Services, the sum of one hundred thirty-seven thousand nine hundred forty dollars ($137,940) for the 2004-2005 fiscal year. These funds shall be used for mental health treatment services to repeat adult offenders within the targeted population for mental health, developmental disabilities, and substance abuse services as defined in G.S. 122C-3(38).

"(e) Of the funds appropriated in this act to the Judicial Department, the sum of twenty thousand dollars ($20,000) for the 2004-2005 fiscal year shall be used to obtain an independent evaluation of the effectiveness of the pilot programs authorized under this section.

"(f) A county may appropriate county or other non-State funds to expand mental health services to adult repeat offenders served by the pilot programs for mental health treatment established under subsection (a) of this section. No State funds appropriated for this section shall be used to provide mental health services to nontargeted population adult repeat offenders."

The report shall include information on the amount of grant funds received or preapproved for receipt by each department, the use of the funds, the State match expended to receive the funds, and the period to be covered by each grant. If the department intends to continue the program beyond the end of the grant period, the department shall report on the proposed method for continuing the funding of the program at the end of the grant period. CASE NOTES

The holder of office under the authority of this section is an officer of the General Court of Justice assisting the Chief Justice, and serving at his pleasure. He is a servant of the General Court of Justice and the Chief Justice. As such, he acts as an extension of the judicial personality of the Chief Justice. He is considered by North Carolina to be among its judicial personnel and is equivalent to service as a judge of the Superior Court Division of the General Court of Justice in certain instances. His position entitles him to the judicial immunity held by other judicial personnel. Fowler v. Alexander, 340 F. Supp. 168 (M.D.N.C. 1972), aff'd, 478 F.2d 694 (4th Cir. 1973).

§ 7A-341. Appointment and compensation of Director.

The Director shall be appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, to serve at his pleasure. He shall receive the annual salary provided in the Current Operations Appropriations Act, payable monthly, and reimbursement for travel and subsistence expenses at the same rate as State employees generally and longevity pay at the rates and for the service designated in G.S. 7A-44(b) for a judge of the superior court. Service as Director shall be equivalent to service as a superior court judge for the purposes of entitlement to retirement pay or to retirement for disability. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1967, c. 691, s. 36; 1983 (Reg. Sess., 1984), c. 1034, s. 165; 1987 (Reg. Sess., 1988), c. 1100, s. 15(a).)

School-Based Child and Family Team Initiative. — Session Laws 2005-276, s. 6.24, provides for the development and implementation of a School-Based Child and Family Team Initiative. See note at G.S. 115C-105.20.

OPINIONS OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Longevity Pay. — Upon taking office as an Associate Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court, a justice was entitled to have his service as Director and Assistant Director of the Administrative Office of the Courts to be taken into account in calculating his service for longevity purposes, but his service as assistant district attorney could not be taken into account. See opinion of Attorney General to The Honorable Thomas W. Ross, Director, The Administrative Office of the Courts, 1999 N.C. AG LEXIS 28 (9/28/99).

§ 7A-343.2. Court Information Technology Fund.

The Court Information Technology Fund is established within the Judicial Department as a nonreverting, interest-bearing special revenue account. Accordingly, revenue in the Fund at the end of a fiscal year does not revert and interest and other investment income earned by the Fund shall be credited to it. All moneys collected by the Director pursuant to G.S. 7A-109(d) and G.S. 7A-49.5 shall be remitted to the State Treasurer and held in this Fund. Moneys in the Fund shall be used to supplement funds otherwise available to the Judicial Department for court information technology and office automation needs. The Director shall report by August 1 and February 1 of each year to the Joint Legislative Commission on Governmental Operations, the Chairs of the Senate and House Appropriations Committees, and the Chairs of the Senate and House Appropriations Subcommittees on Justice and Public Safety on all moneys collected and deposited in the Fund and on the proposed expenditure of those funds collected during the preceding six months. (1999-237, s. 17.15(b); 2000-67, s. 15.1; 2006-187, s. 2(d).)

Editor's Note. — Session Laws 2006-187, s. 13, provides in part: "Section 2 of this act is effective when it becomes law and applies to all matters filed with the courts on or after the date that the Supreme Court adopts rules for electronic filing as authorized by that section."

Effect of Amendments. — Session Laws 2006-187, s. 2(d), effective August 3, 2006, inserted "and G.S. 7A-49.5" in the third sentence. For applicability provisions, see Editor's note.

CASE NOTES

Portion of the appointment fee provided for by G.S. 7A-455.1(a) allocated to the North Carolina Court Information Technology Fund is effectively indistinguishable from the facilities fee imposed under G.S. 7A-304(a)(2); the appointment fee operates to supplement funds otherwise available to the North Carolina Judicial Department for court information technology and office automation needs, thus defraying expenses incurred by the State in the operation and maintenance of the court system under G.S. 7A-343.2, and it should be assessed in the same manner as the facilities fee and any other cost of prosecution—against convicted defendants only. State v. Webb, 358 N.C. 92, 591 S.E.2d 505, 2004 N.C. LEXIS 5 (2004).

§ 7A-343.3. Appellate Courts Printing and Computer Operations Fund.

The Appellate Courts Printing and Computer Operations Fund is established within the Judicial Department as a nonreverting, interest-bearing special revenue account. Accordingly, interest and other investment income earned by the Fund shall be credited to it. All moneys collected through charges to litigants for the reproduction of appellate records and briefs under G.S. 7A-11 and G.S. 7A-20(b) shall be remitted to the State Treasurer and held in this Fund. Moneys in the Fund shall be used to support the print shop operations of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, including personnel, maintenance, and capital costs. The Judicial Department may create and maintain receipt-supported positions for these purposes but shall report to the Chairs of the Senate and House of Representatives Appropriations Subcommittees on Justice and Public Safety prior to creating such new positions.

The Judicial Department shall report to the Chairs of the Senate and House of Representatives Appropriations Subcommittees on Justice and Public Safety by January 1 of each year on all receipts and expenditures of the Fund. (2002-126, s. 14.12.)

The assistant director is the administrative assistant to the Chief Justice, and his duties include the following:

(1) Assist the Chief Justice in performing his duties relating to the assignment of superior court judges;
(2) Assist the Supreme Court in preparing calendars of superior court trial sessions; and
(3) Performing such additional functions as may be assigned by the Chief Justice or the Director of the Administrative Office. (1965, c. 310, s. 1; 1969, c. 1013, s. 4.)

Editor's Note. — Before the enactment of Session Laws 1969, c. 1013, the above section was numbered G.S. 7A-344. The 1969 act added a new section numbered G.S. 7A-344 and renumbered former G.S. 7A-344 and 7A-345 as 7A-345 and 7A-346.
